Believed That House Will Give Big Majority Against Measure.

No Agitation Out in the State for a Tonnage Tax.

Two Hot Fights Expected in House Early This Week.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The coming week in the legislature is certain to be a lively and an important one.

For one thing, the tonnage tax bill, the thing of most vital interest to Northern Minnesota and to the entire state as well, if it could but realize it, is likely to come to a head this week.

Tomorrow afternoon the house committee on taxes and tax laws will hold an adjourned public hearing on the Bjorge tonnage tax bill when Representative Chester A. Congdon will conclude his masterly arraignment of the measure as a thing of injustice and of sectional discrimination, and as a stumbling block to the development of the manufacturing side of the iron industry. Representative H. O. Bjorge of Becker county, the author of the bill, will doubtless have something

RAINEY IN REITERATION

Says He Is Not Opposing Canal, But After Graft.

Adds That Next Attack Will be Equally Unexpected.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Asserting that his recent speech in the house, relative to the purchase by the United States government of the Panama canal had brought upon himself "villification, misrepresentation and abuse almost without precedent in the history of that body," Representative Rainey of Illinois, today delivered in the house of representatives a long speech in reply to the charges that the information upon which his remarks were based was obtained from "ex-convicts and blackmailers," this accusation having been made openly in the house by Representative Lovering of Massachusetts.

"True loyalty to this great enterprise," Mr. Rainey said, "means that you must expose and denounce all kinds of graft in connection with it in order to avoid the pitfalls in which the French company fell, and I propose to do this whether it meets with the approval of the next president of the United States or not. I want to say to all those who are spending so much time abusing me that I have not

TAFT TALKS AT PENNSY

Relations of the Learned Professions to Political Government.

Washington's Victory Due to High Character as a Man.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 22.—Hon. William H. Taft, president-elect of the United States, today was the principal speaker at the exercises in the University of Pennsylvania commemorative of the birth of Washington.

He chose for the subject of his address the "Present Relations of the Learned Professions to Political Government." He discussed at considerable length the influence which the learned professions, in this day, have upon national and municipal government. He outlined luminously the part each of the important professions plays in a government by the people and compared their influence, one with another. In brief part, he said:

"It is the duty of every citizen to give as much attention as he can to the public weal, and to take as much interest as he can in political matters. Americans generally have recognized these duties, and we find active in political life, men representing all professions, all branches of business and all trades. I propose this morning to invite your attention to the present relation of each of the learned professions to politics and government.

Railroad Employe at Marinette Attempts Suicide in Ticket Office.

Marinette, Wis., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—While the night operator was working with his back turned, Frank Noonan, 19 years old, a freight employe, entered the St. Paul railway ticket office here at 4 o'clock this morning, picked up a loaded revolver, and fired a bullet into his left side. Young Cooper Seems to Enjoy Ordeal in Carmack Case.

Spectators Bring Lunch-boxes to Court to Keep Seats.

Nashville, Feb. 22.—The fact that this is a holiday, together with the knowledge that all the guns of the state's batteries would be brought to bear upon the young man who swears he shot and killed ex-Senator Carmack, combined to draw an immense audience to the Cooper-Sharp trial today. For the first time during the hearing the lunch box was in evidence.

Robin Cooper, with a tiny violet in his buttonhole, seemed to rather welcome the ordeal. His sister too, whose evident pride in the boy was contagious, Saturday, was elated again today.

Before cross examination began, Anderson asked Cooper if he knew Senator Carmack.

"Yes, sir. I knew him and he knew me."

"That's all."

ROOSEVELT HITS BACK

Defends Use of Secret Service as "Spy" System.

Gives It Credit for Conviction of Two Lawmakers.

Washington, Feb. 22.—President Roosevelt has added another stirring chapter to the secret service controversy, in a vigorous reply to the attacks made on this branch of the government in a report made recently by Senator Hemenway of the senate committee on appropriations.

Senator Hemenway, in this report upholding the limitation in the scope of the secret service, asserted that it never had been the intention of congress to build up a "spy" system and with evident reference to this part of the report, the president declares if the limitation of the use of the secret service had been in force when the sensational land frauds were unearthed a few years ago, a senator, a representative and various men of wealth and high political influence, who at that time were convicted, would all have escaped punishment. The president's letter is addressed to Acting Chairman Hale of the senate appropriation committee.

Characterizing as "inaccurate and misleading in various important respects," both Senator Hemenway's report and the debate which it aroused in the senate, the president presents a mass of facts and figures in defense of the secret service during the seven years of his administration.

Some of the president's data is based upon information supplied by Attorney General Bonaparte and Secertary of the Interior Garfield, in support of the efficiency of the secret service in the detection of crime.

MARDI GRAS IS ON IN ORLEANS

Rex Arrives and Annual Carnival Is Begun.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 22.—Today marked the arrival of Rex in New Orleans and the turning over to the monarch of Mardi Gras the keys of the city. Thousands of people began to line Canal street early to await the arrival of the king of the carnival and the long parade of civic and military escorts of the royal visitor, whose final entry was signalized with the usual shriek of whistles of steamboats along the river front.

With a number of military organizations from other states, a big representation of the militia of Louisiana, student cadets, various civic bodies and a score of brass bands in line, the parade was one of the most notable in the history of the city.

Mayor David S. Rose and the famous Rose Democratic Marching Club of Milwaukee have reached New Orleans on a special train over the Louisville & Nashville railroad from Pensacola, Fla., to attend the festival.

President Roosevelt Welcomes Sea Fighters at Hampton Roads.

The Ramparts of Fortress Monroe Are Black With Crowds.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Minneapolis Tribune gave the first news of the arrival of the fleet to Admiral Evans, reading to him the Associated Press dispatches over the telephone. The admiral dictated the following statement, asking that it be telegraphed to President Roosevelt and Rear Admiral Sperry:

"Admiral Evans presents his compliments to Rear Admiral Sperry and congratulates him on the splendid work he has done. He hopes that congress will make him a vice admiral, which he richly deserves. He also extends congratulations to the officers and men of the fleet."

Old Point Comfort, Va., Feb. 22.—Washington's birthday anniversary was celebrated by the American battleship fleet by returning to American shores after its cruise around the world, which began over a year ago. President Roosevelt, addressing the returned sailors and their commanders, declared the ships returned in better shape than they were at the time of their departure.

The boom of the sunrise gun, echoing over the moat of the picturesque old Fortress Monroe, marked the beginning of a day that added another chapter of thrilling beauty and interest to the historic waters of Hampton Roads, first made famous by the battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac. It required a vivid imagination to look back today over a span of forty odd years to picture the fury of that deadly conflict between the two first ironclads of the day, and to compare their tiny strength with a modern battle-

Old Point Comfort, Va., Feb. 22.—Addressing the commanders and part of the men of the American battleship fleet, which today returned from its cruise around the world, President Roosevelt said in part:

"Admiral Sperry, officers and men of the battleship fleet: Over a year has passed since you steamed out of this harbor and over the world's rim, and today the hearts of all who saw you thrilled with pride as the hulls of the mighty warships lifted above the horizon. You have been in Northern and Southern hemispheres; four times you have crossed the line; you have steamed through all the great oceans; you have touched the coast of every continent. Ever your general course has been westward and now you come back to the port from which you set sail. This is the first battle fleet that has ever circumnavigated the globe. Those who perform the feat again can but follow your footsteps.

CONGRESS CROWDS ON STEAM TO WIND UP ALL SESSION'S BUSINESS

Washington, Feb. 22.—Congress began today to crowd on steam for the last spurt of the present congress. After the close of business next Saturday there will remain only three days for legislation and it is realized that it will be necessary to get practically all the appropriation bills through both houses before that time, as most of the remaining days will be necessary for the adjustment of the differences between the two houses.

Consequently, no attention will be paid in either house to any other measures when appropriation bills are in shape for consideration. Both houses will probably hold night sessions.

The house began the week with a discussion of the great sundry civil bill, which not only carries a large appropriation, but covers a multitude of subjects, in which, as usual, there is much new legislation, and it is expected that this bill will consume most of the week. The house will, however, find opportunity to consider reports of conference committee as they are brought in and it is expected that the question of the salary of the secretary of state will again on Tuesday receive attention in connection with the conference report on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill. The conferees have reached an agreement on that subject, but this fact will probably not prevent further reference to it in either the house or the senate when the report is presented. The house will again refuse to yield on the question on the under-

PARKER WOULD RETURN TO THE CONSERVATISM OF WASHINGTON

Charlottesville, Va., Feb. 22.—In an address today before the students of the University of Virginia, Alton B. Parker of New York, arraigned the tendency in our government in recent times, as he said, to get away from the "conservatism" of Washington. He said instead of looking upon some of Washington's policies as "antiquated" they would be peculiarly beneficial and applicable to present conditions. In discussing Washington's farewell address the speaker drew some pertinent comparisons between the now and the then.

Referring to Washington's conception of the scope of the officer of the president of a republic, the speaker said:

"He bids us not be led into political connection with foreign nations through the extension of our commercial relations with the world at large, warns us against our becoming implicated in the vicissitudes of world politics, and recalls our geographical location which permits us this exclusiveness. Looking, as we have seen, to the then future as well as to the then present, he points out that if our union continue we must necessarily become of a strength that will permit us to refuse to participate in foreign controversies; that we shall become, as we have become, too strong for warring nations to dare to give us provocation, and that by the occupancy of a place aloof we shall be in a position where we may consult the dictates of justice to determine our course as events shall arise."

Harry Munro Tells of of Noted Chicago Mission.

...ro spoke for two hours ... Presbyterian church last ... heard with unwearying ... le he told of the modern ... ormed through the work of the Pacific Garden mission in Chicago, which he says is situated in the worst "submerged district" in the United States. The speaker testified with telling effect of the transformations made in the lives of men and women who had drifted into that mission destitute, drunk, discouraged, and down and out, but who by the touch of a loving hand and a warm heart, had hope kindled in them.

"Billy" Sunray, the noted evangelist, was saved to a life of immense influence by Harry Munro in a street meeting in Chicago. "Mell" Trotter of the Grand Rapids city mission is another of his converts.

Mr. Munro says that knowing and seeing the terrible results of liquor he is clear in his own mind what should be done with it. He thinks the "Munro Doctrine" on that point is a winner.

He dwelt at length at the astounding revelations that have been made in Chicago by the investigations of United States District Attorney Sims, showing that in the large cities especially New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis and San Francisco an organized system of furnishing young girls to the brothels has been carrying on a large business.

An article entitled "Hell's Slave Trade" in the issue of Jan. 28, of the National Prohibitionist gives the testimony from behind the bars, of one of the tools of the trade, who in her confession, makes a strong plea to voters to stamp out the saloon without which the white slave traffic cannot thrive.

Mr. Munro also spoke in the afternoon at the men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A

NORTHWEST PROSPEROUS

Winnipeg Man Says Immigration Movement Has Begun Again.

Duluth's Future Closely Linked With That of Western Canada.

George H. Anthony general agent of the Wisconsin Central railroad at Winnipeg, who is in Duluth today, says the immigration movement will be very heavy this year into Saskatchewan and Alberta, and that many of the immigrants who are crossing the Canadian border are Americans.

"Wheat not only exceeded all records for the amount produced last year, but it graded up higher, which has made the farmers of the Canadian Northwest very prosperous," said Mr. Anthony. "Anything that boosts the Canadian Northwest will eventually help this section of the country, for some day you are going to get a lot of traffic from that section of the Canadian Dominion. Winnipeg and Duluth have many things in common, and in the future they will develop even greater common interests. Winnipeg is the gateway to the Canadian Northwest, while Duluth is the great outlet to the lakes.

"The prosperity of the Western Canadian provinces and the territory which contributes to Duluth are linked by a common tie, and should the Canadian tariff be removed the traffic between the two sections of the country will be immense.

"Winnipeg has a population of 152,000. It is beginning to show the immediate effects of greater prosperity. The building permits this year are greater than those of 1908. The Grand Trunk is erecting a million dollar building there, and many other large buildings are going up. People who could not secure the money to build their own homes, owing to the business depression, are now building houses.

"The people in Winnipeg are greatly interested in Duluth, and this applies particularly to the railroad interests of Winnipeg. The Canadian Northern railroad is greatly interested in the future of this city. It is only a question of time before that road will extend its line to this city. That will link Winnipeg and Duluth in closer bonds than they are at the present time.

"There is going to be a great deal of railroad building in the dominion this year. Not only will there be a great deal of railroad construction, but there will also be many improvements. The roads up there are leveling their tracks; the Canadian Pacific is doing a good deal of double-tracking, and all of the roads will do some ballasting this year.

"I am of the opinion that the people of this city will gain an indirect benefit from the increased business of the Canadian roads, for some day much of the Canadian traffic will find an outlet through the port of Duluth."

IN DULUTH CHURCHES

THE LAW OF KARMA.

"We Make Our Own Heaven and Hell," Says Pastor.

"Karma may be defined as the natural law in the spiritual world recognized by the ancient Hindoo and accepted by the modern Theosophist with slight variations," said Rev. George R. Gebauer at the First Unitarian church yesterday. "It is a living, self-acting law, which naturally ignores the conception of an arbitrary God, who moulds the life of His creatures as the potter does his clay. Karma is a Sanscrit word and denotes the law of action, results of deeds previously done and the destiny resulting therefrom. It is thus the ethical law of just retribution. This karma determined our birth, and circumstances into which we enter at birth; it is the cause and effect of all our joy and suffering now and in any life to come. This law is unfailing in its action, no prayer will change its decree. At the same time the man, who realizes the inward truth of this law may use its for his salvation. He may so shape his life into conformity with this law that only happiness and joy will come to him.

"Here certainly, much that passes for Christianity, may learn something. The average Christian believes himself saved either by certain ministrations of the church or by belief in certain doctrines, while at the same time his actions tell us that he is bound by sin. He makes, perhaps, light of the notion of righteousness and glories that he is saved 'by grace alone.' It will seem to me that the teaching of Buddhist and Theosophist is much deeper and more reasonable. They put damnation and salvation in the right place; they eliminate all arbitrariness and make man the arbiter of his destiny. We are saved or we are damned by ourselves alone and not by God.

"We may not accept their teachings in regard to previous existences, which are the foundations of our present lives with their joys and miseries, but we may well believe that in the truest sense we make from day to day our destiny, our joys, and our sorrows. We reap what we have been sowing, if not in any previous life, certainly in this life, and herein Buddha and Paul are at one. Reaping what we are sowing means first of all that we take to ourselves with increase the very things which we scattered as seed. Not merely the outward life must be considered here, but above all the inward life. Not the rags which cover a man are the proof of a sinful wrong past, but rather his tendency to sin is. The unhappiness, restlessness, passion, jealousy which still lurk in the hearts of even the best of us, show us that harvest of sin has been plentiful.

"The art of life is to sow the right kind of seed. For we reap what we sow. There is much misconception in regard to this in the world. Men generally understand that the harvest of sin is poverty, sorrow, pain, disease and finally hell. They believe the sensualsit reaps the fruitage of a diseased body, the thief is sent to the penitentiary, and the murderer is hanged.

"This is true in a good many cases, but it is after all only an incident and is not the necessary consequence of sin. After all many an old continuous sinner is walking serenely to his grave and many a saint suffers severely. At any rate the justice of Karma is a different one. It is deeper We reap what we sow. If it is wheat, then we reap wheat, and if oats then oats and ont broom corn. If we sow sin, we reap sin. We reap and store it in our hearts and we become filled with wrong, corrupt, tendencies, which naturally exclude all true happiness. We become more filled with lust and anger, and jealousy and envy, and have the harvest of hell.

"Heaven and hell are in our keeping and we must learn to sow the right seed."

A GREATER UNIVERSITY

University for All the People, Dr. Phelan's Idea.

Would Make It Ready Reference Authority on Every Subject.

A university that will reach every man, woman and child in the state; a university that will be an authority that can be consulted on any subject, from what to feed a dairy cow or a bacon hog, to the metaphysics of Kant and Locke, a university that will conduct original research along the lines of matters that are of practical importance to the people of the state, and give the people free access to the knowledge drived from this research—this is the idea of Dr. Raymond V. Phelan, of the department of political economy of the University of Minnesota, who was in Duluth last evening, and addressed a meeting of the Young Men's Progressive club in Kalamazoo hall, called to discuss the subject of women's suffrage.

"I believe the great universities of the future will be the state universities, and I believe that their sphere of usefulness will be so enlarged that we will hardly recognize them. The day when the university could be used only by those who could afford to drop all other pursuits and take a full four years' course, is passing, and I believe the future will see a wonderful growth of the university extension idea. President Van Hise of the University of Wisconsin is working out this idea at Madison. His idea is a university for all the people of the state. They are also trying to work out the idea at Minnesota as far as it is possible to do so with the means at their command. Speakers are sent out to all parts of the state whenever they are called for, and the university tries to co-operate with local societies in any community organized for the purpose of studying any problem. The university stands ready and willing to do this work, and I believe there is a very broad field of usefulness here."

CALUMET MEN ARE IN TOWN

Copper Country Brokers Are Bullish, But Not Unreasonably So.

A trio of Calumet brokers arrived in town from the Copper country today. The party includes J. A. Minier, H. A. Goldsmith and W. H. Minear, all of the firm of J. A. Minear & Co., whose headquarters are in Calumet, and who do a great deal of trading among Duluth brokers.

"Thought we would take advantage of a holiday and drop in on some of the Duluth brokers," explained Mr. Goldsmith. "We have talked with most of them over the wires many times, but we thought we'd like to get better acquainted.

"The Copper country is inclined to be bullish on copper stocks, but not aggressively or unreasonably bullish. We can all see that the outlook might be better—but we are optimistic—that's it, optimistic. We don't like the weakness of the metal market very well, but I dare say that will brighten up shortly. The heavy subscription for Chief Consolidated showed that the people have confidence."

Martin Rosendahl and N. S. Mitchell showed the visitors around this morning.

THE DELEGAEES RETURN HOME

The Y. M. C. A. State Convention Was a Very Successful Affair.

The thirty-fifth annual state convention of the Minnesota Young Men's Christian association, which was this year held at Red Wing, closed yesterday and the Duluthians who attended arrived home this morning.

The reports given at the convention were very satisfactory. The association shows a big gain in every department, and new buildings were reported at St. Paul, Winona, Mankato, Rochester and Duluth.

The convention was very successful in every way, and the Duluth men who attended are very much encouraged in their work.

The delegates from Duluth were: Watson S. Moore, A. J. Frey, J. A. McGaughey, Phil Revis, Frank Downing and Norman McLeod. As representatives of the Boys' department, William Ecklund and Archie Glass, accompanied the other delegates.

On their way to the Red Wing convention, the members of the Duluth party spent a day looking over the beautiful new building recently completed by the St. Paul association.

MUTCH ON THE STAND

Accused Man Defends His Action in Civil Suit.

Says He Sold Horses With Authority of His Employer.

With his wife ill and his baby dead, Howard H. Mutch says he sold four horses, four sets of harness and a wagon, of which he had charge for E. L. Seavey, and applied the money to relieve his necessities. He claims his action was authorized some time before by Mr. Seavey, however, and he notified Mr. Seavey of it immediately after the sale had been completed.

Mutch, who was brought back to Duluth from Portland, Or., to answer to an indictment charging grand larceny in the first degree, was on the stand in district court this morning in the case of E. L. Seavey against the Board of Trade Livery company. Seavey is suing the company for $730, which he claims to be the value of the horses sold by Mutch. He claims Mutch had no authority to sell the horses, while the defense claims that Mutch had authority to sell the horses and the price paid, $165 was their full value.

Mutch told an apparently straightforward story of his rather involved dealings with Mr. Seavey. He was employed by Seavey during the logging season last year and at the end of the season took charge of the camp in New Independence. The outfit consisted of eight horses and some harness. He named the different times he had received money from Mr. Seavey, and said when he made an appeal for about $200 last August, Mr. Seaveyl told him to sell the horses for anything they would bring. Mr. Seavey denies giving the authorization and claims that Mutch was than in his debt for about $200. The horses were sold Sept. 23 and shortly after Oct. 1 Mutch went West.

BIG TREE BILL BECOMES A LAW

Robert Whiteside Agreed to Its Provisions Before Passage.

Washington, Feb. 22.—By signing the bill for the creation of the Calaveras national forest, California, President Roosevelt has completed the legislative act which saves for all time the most famous grove of trees in the world. The people of California, particularly the 500 women of the California club, have been working to interest the government in this wonderful grove of big trees for more than nine years, but not until now has it been possible to arrange a plan satisfactory alike to the owner of the land and congress.

Everyone interested in the great natural wonders rejoices that the way has been paved for an exchange of the big tree groves for stumpage of equal value or other forest land owned by the government. Robert B. Whiteside of Duluth is the owner of the big trees. After his agreement to its provisions, which is simply a practical exchange of timber for timber, the entire California delegation gave its solid and enthusiastic support to the bill. No appropriation from the treasury is needed to carry out the provisions of the act.

CASTRO WOULD RETURN HOME

Asks President Gomez to Let Him Be Private Citizen.

Dresden, Feb. 22.—Cipriana Castro, the former president of Venezuela, is planning to return to that country and resume the position of a private citizen.

Some weeks ago he sent a letter to President Gomez setting forth his purpose to return and his willingness to regularize the position of Gomez by himself voluntarily retiring from the presidency, but up to the present time he has received no answer to this communication.

According to his plans Castro will sail from Bordeaux, March 26, on the steamer Guadeloupe for LaGuira. With his wife and four servants, he is living quietly in a hotel, having arrived from Berlin last week. He does not appear to be in any way troubled by losing the presidency or by his indictment on the charge of having attempted to brig about the assassination of Juan Vicente Gomez, now president of Venezuela.

NEW RULE AT THE LAND OFFICE

Office Holders Cannot Leave Their Claims After April 1.

Settlers residing on Minnesota lands under the homestead laws will not in the future be allowed to discontinue living on their claims because they hold public office, as has formerly been the case.

In a ruling received by Receiver Morrison of the local land office this morning, Fred Dennett, commissioner at the general land office, in Washington, sets forth the new rule to take effect on April 1.

The law will not affect those who have already taken claims in this manner, but after the stated time the custom will be discontinued.

Up to this time a homesteader could get out of living on his claim by getting an appointment to some public office.

This has now been changed and only those who are elected to some elective office can, under the law, leave their claims and still have the right to prove up.

KILLS FOUR AND SELF

Wisconsin Farmer Also Puts His Animals to Death.

Hans Hanson Then Fires His House and Barn.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 22.—An Evening Wisconsin special from Mondevi, Wis., says: Hans Hanson, a farmer living near Strun, murdered his four children, a boy and three girls, whose ages ranged from 5 to 15 years, early today. He is supposed to have used a butcher knife, cutting their throats.

He followed this awful quadruple crime by stabbing several horses and cows, fired the barn and house, and then cut his own throat.

The bodies of the children were cremated, but neighbors succeeded in extricating Hanson's body.

Hanson used kerosene to start the fire. He was a widower, with five children, the oldest, a girl of 21, being in Strun at the time. Hanson was 50.

About twelve years ago he was an inmate of an insane asylum, but later was liberated. Of late years he had not shown any signs of insanity, and was considered harmless.

SAYS LAW HITS CONSTITUTION

Lehr Proposes to Take Primary Fight to Highest Court.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 22.—Documents filed with the Wisconsin supreme court in the action brought by State Senator Lehr concerning the legislative investigation into the expenses of the campaign for United States senator in the primary election of last September, discloses that the case is of the importance not only to Wisconsin, but in every state in which the primary election law has been enacted to secure the popular election of a United States senator.

Senator Lehr maintains that the Wisconsin law providing that at the primary election for the nomination of state party tickets, the primary nomination of United States senator shall be made and which shall be of the effect to have the people make the election and reduce the formal election by the legislature to a mere perfunctory ratification of the result of the popular vote, is in contravention of the Federal Constitution, which provides that United States senators shall be elected by the legislature.

Senator Lehr declares that this is coercion of the legislature and is calculated to destroy the freedom of the legislature to elect a United States senator in the manner prescribed by the Federal Constitution.

Senator Lehr says if he loses in the supreme court he will carry the case to the United States supreme court.

NEW HAND AT HELM.

H. C. Aamouth Becomes Cashier of Thief River Falls Bank.

Thief River Falls, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Cashier Prichard, having disposed of a large part of his stock in the First National bank, will be succeeded as cashier by H. C. Aamouth.

The retiring cashier's stock has been purchased not only by H. C Aamouth, but by his father, formerly president of the Citizens' State bank of Twin Valley, by A. L. Thopson, now cashier of the Security State bank of Mahnomen, and the balance by A. C. Baker of Decorah, Iowa, who is already interested in the bank. Mr. Prichard will still hold an interest in the bank and will continue as one of the directors.

The new cashier, Mr. Aamouth, has been in the banking business for the last eight years, having entered as cashier of the First State bank of Ulen in 1900 and later having held the position as cashier of the First State bank of Mahnomen, until just recently, and also having been manager and terasurer of the Mahnomen Land & Implement company.

Sauk Rapids, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The funeral was held here Saturday of Mrs. Ellen Davis, one of the oldest residents of this place who died Thursday afternoon after an illness of several days. Death was caused by complications resulting from old age.

EPIDEMIC OF INSANITY.

Many Getting "Bats in Belfry" in Ward County, N. D.

Minot, N. D., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—A veritable epidemic of insanity seems to be prevalent in Ward county for the past two weeks, and the county court has had an unusual number of these cases.

The latest case to be brought to the attention of the authorities is that of George Huebllen, who was brought from Douglas by the constable of that place. Huebllen, while being demented, seems to be supplied with a goodly portion of this world's goods, for not only did he carry a draft for $1,000 in his pocket when brought to the city, but it is also believed that a further investigation, which is now being made at Douglas, will reveal the fact that he possesses considerable other chattels and property. The case of Huebllen has been postponed.

Mike McGrath, who was taken to the insane hospital last Wednesday, owing to his demented condition, went violently insane on reaching the Jamestown institution, and after being strapped to a board he gradually grew worse and shortly after died.

Saturday Brought More Suits

The present showing is, of course, only a foreshadowing of what the complete collection will be, yet there are many Duluth women who know the joy of capturing the new things as they come. Extreme simplicity characterizes many of the new suits. Lines are straight and long, waistlines are evaded, yet hinted at by the most graceful of curves. Conservative Dressers will be glad to know that practical colors are not to be limited to the few staple shades, but will include a wonderful variety of medium and dark tones which are at once beautiful and practical. For instance, the medium greys, deep amethyst shades; canard, buff, khaki brown, cocoa, banana and greens that verge on the greyish, bluish and brownish tints. Skirts are permitted a little more fullness. Three-piece garments will be accorded great favor—Spring Suits $29.50 to $79.50.

ONE-PIECE DRESSES are more popular than ever—waistlines are slightly above normal; and soft, supple, and satiny materials prevail.

NO HOLIDAY FOR JUDGES

All Three District Court Rooms Are Kept Busy.

Judge McClenahan of Brainerd Will Help Local Judges.

District court is running full blast with three judges sitting today. Before Judge Ensign, the case of E. L. Seavey against the Board of Trade Livery company is being heard Before Judge Dibell, testimony is being taken in the $12,000 personal injury suit of Joe Balego against the Oliver Iron Mining company, and before Judge Cant, arguments are being heard in the motion of the plaintiff for a new trial in the case of the Evener Manufacturing company against Miles T. Frink, and others.

The crush of business and the delays occasioned by Judge Cant being absent in Itasca county during the present term, is responsible for the holding of sessions on a holiday, not an ordinary proceeding. The calendar has been disposed of very slowly and, as the March term opens March 3, it is necessary to dispose of as many cases as posible during the preent week.

Judge McClenahan of Brainerd is expected to arrive in Duluth tomorrow, to assist Judge Ensign and Judge Dibell in disposing of the remainder of the calendar, as Judge Cant must return to Grand Rapids tomorrow to resume the hearing in the Riley-Riddell election contest.

THE FUTURE UNVEILED AT ONLY $10 PER THROW

How Rosy Adams Sold Good Luck to Lumberjacks.

Edward Johnson Was Unwilling Purchaser of $10 Worth.

A few inside facts about the methods employed by gypsy fortune-tellers in fleecing the unwary were brought out in municipal court this morning, in the trial of Rosy Adams, charged with stealing $10 from Edward Johnson, a lumberjack, on the Bowery. Evidence was not positive enough to convict the woman, and Judge Cutting declared her not guilty.

Rosy appeared in all the splendor that usually goes with women of her occupation, but it was a somewhat dirty and tarnished splendor. Her costume, made up of all colors of the rainbow, with red and yellow predominating, looked as if it had been washed several times, the last washing having been performed several months ago.

Cheap jewelry and lead shaped like coins adorned her person and hung from hair and ears. She is very dark as to eyes and complexion, and very black as to hair. She was accompanied this morning by a child, about 2 years of age, whose dress looked as if it had been made from faded bandana handkerchiefs. Johnson's story ran about as follows:

"I went into this woman's room, at Eighth avenue west and Superior street," he said, "and she offered to tell my fortune for a quarter. I gave her the coin, and she held it in her hand a few moments, and then told me that I would have good luck. She said that was all I got for a quarter, and asked me if I had any more money. She said patrons often gave her as high as $2 or $3 for telling them they would have good luck.

"I had $50 in bills in one pocket and several dollars in silver in another, and gave her a silver dollar for telling me I would be lucky. Then I thought she hadn't worked hard enough to earn more than a quarter, and I asked her for the dollar back. She asked me if I would rather have the dollar or the good luck she had given me, and, after thinking the matter over, I told her she might as well keep the dollar, for good luck might be worth more than that to me.

Liked "Feel" of Money.

"She smiled and gave me the dollar back and then said if I would let her hold some paper money in her hand, the feeling of it would inspire her to tell me some more things. She said she didn't want any more money, but merely wanted to feel of it, and asked me how much I had. I told her I had $50 in bills, and let her take it all, so she could hold it in her hands and become properly inspired.

"She took the bills and began rolling them back and forth between the palms of her hands, talking all the while, and telling me about beautiful dark ladies I was going to meet and about a handsome blonde 20 years old, who was crazy about me, and how I would get a good job soon with better wages than I had ever before received. Finally she said the bills had been very inspiring, and handed back my wad, all rolled up together. I stuck it in my pocket and walked out of the place after insisting that she take the dollar back, for if all the things she told me were true, it sure was worth a dollar to know about them.

"An hour later I took out my roll to pay for a pair of rubbers, and found that a $10-bill was missing. I knew then she had taken it while rolling the money in her hands. I told the police, and she was arrested."

Rosie indignantly denied that she had taken Johnson's hard-earned cash, and as there was a possibility of his having lost it after leaving her, there was nothing for the court to do but let her go free. Chief Troyer is not through with her case yet, however, and will endeavor to have the woman's license revoked and have her and her companions run out of town.

She operates with three others under the firm name of Adams & Co.

SAVED ONLY A PIANO.

Frank Murray's Residence Near Proctor Destroyed by Fire.

Proctor, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—A dwelling house in the McManus addition to Proctor, belonging to Frank Murray, was totally destroyed by fire this morning. None of the contents was saved, excepting the piano. The damage is partially covered by insurance.

The fire broke out about 6:20 o'clock, catching from a defective flue while breakfast was being cooked, and although the department responded promptly, little could be done, as the building was beyond the fire limits and water was not available. By the aid of chemicals adjacent houses were prevented from catching.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

In this age of mental unrest when half the world is going about with its fingers on its forehead asking in agitated tones, "What is Truth?" one would almost think that one would encounter truth more often on one's daily rounds. And yet if one takes the trouble to think again, one immediately finds out that one really seldom meets it.

Judging of course from one's self. And then comes the thought,—all these thoughts are induced by the fact that today is the anniversary of Washington's birthday, also by the fact that there is a dearth of other thoughts—as was remarked at the beginning, then comes the thought of how uncomfortable and very interesting it would be to tell the truth for just one day. One might rise in the morning with several friends on earth, and by the time of the going down of the sun one might be friendless and alone, if one were not in the condition whereof the services of an undertaker would be needed.

That awful oath which the courts of law compel one at times to take, to tell the truth, the whole truth, and worst of all, nothing but the truth—makes one shiver for fear the necessity should ever arise. One might tell the truth on occasions of course, and even the whole truth, but to be restricted to telling in one's artless conversation, nothing but the truth—think of the uninteresting episodes one would live through, and call life. The glamour and delight and much of the common courtesy of every day existence would pass away with the fall of what Oscar Wilde calls the "art of lying."

The people who are most adept at it, of course, are always the ones who say, they never indulge, which of course is the biggest whopper they perpetrate.

Now, take the case of George Washington. He was a nice enough man, one would suppose from the active accounts which historians have left; but can you imagine, can any one imagine anything more disagreeable to live with than a man who calmly told the truth, the dispassionate, cold, bloodcongealing truth. Now, take the case of Martha, who, to judge from the portraits that one remembers, should have gone into training to reduce a tendency toward an over plumpness before she sat for her picture, having in them more chins than nature seemed to think essential—now if Martha some day should say: "George, dear, do you think I'm getting too fat?" Knowing perfectly well, of course, in her own mind that she is getting too fat, but anxious to hear the reassuring words that a few extra pounds of avoirdupois on her seems to him like unto the sylph-like slenderness and grace of a young dryad, think how disconcerting, not to say crushingly final and fatal it would be to have his scrutinizing eye rest with firm glance before answeringly truthfully: "Yes, indeed, far too fat. I should think you were running forty to fifty pounds more than you can carry without developing the grace of a meal sack and the waddle of a duck. But I wouldn't worry about it if I were you, because there isn't anything you can do for it. If you are going to be fat, nothing can stop you, and I wouldn't be surprised if you weighed as much as two hundred by spring."

Thank you, no.

Truth in some cases may be all right in Emerson's essays, or places like that, but for everyday life the popular vote will go for lies, dear, kind, courteous, tender, chivalrous, thoughtful, lies. Never to tell one may get you a good place in history, but to tell them fluently will get you a glad welcome in many places on earth.

WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE.

Interesting Speakers Heard by Large Audience.

Under the auspices of the Independent Progressive club of Duluth, the question of women's suffrage was once again brought before a local audience last evening, at the Kalamazoo hall. The speakers were Mrs. Raymond Y. Phelan, Ph.O of the University of Minnesota, and Miss Elsie Ueland, a student in the senior law class of the university. The hall was well filled with the members of the club and their friends, and a few ardent well wishers of the cause. After the addresses of the evening a local branch of the Women's Equal Suffrage Association of America was organized, and the officers named were: Dr. Mary McCoy, temporary chairman; Miss E. C. Turrell, secretary, and S. M. Slonim, treasurer.

A constitution will be framed and a permanent organization accomplished at once.

Miss Ueland, who is a charming young suffragist, was the first speaker and devoted her time to systematic refuting of the reasons brought against the movement by those not in favor of extending the ballot to women. She said that government has passed, in a great part, from the business of the upholding of dynasties and maintaining of domestic peace, to that of promoting the social welfare of the people, and so the reason that women cannot bear arms is no longer a valid argument against the movement. The average intelligence of men and women is, according to pscychologists, about equal, said the speaker, and the general efficiency of the vote would not therefore be lowered. That it would be unwomanly was set aside as a mere conventional prejudice, and what influence would be lost would be more than regained by the effectiveness of her vote. That suffrage will come when the vast majority of women actively demand it, was spoken of as a poor argument against it, for all reforms are accomplished by steady and active fighting every step of the way.

Mrs. Phelan presented an able paper showing that woman has a distinct contribution to make the work of founding a nation of homes. "No one would ever dream of making a home without a woman's help and influence, but in this democracy, the chief business of which is home-making, her voice in all but a very few states, is not considered." The speaker showed at length that women in the capacity of home makers are vitally interested, or should be, in every field of labor which even touches remotely her home. When, as in the present day, a very large part of the labor of the home is done outside it, women should know of the conditions under which labor is performed, and she should have the power to make a protest that will receive consideration if things are not as they should be. The cause needed the support, she said, not only of the women in the industrial and business world, but of those women who are protected from contact with harsh conditions, to bring about the reform that will be a great aid to those who must of necessity face the world as it is.

Prof. Phelan of the university, spoke briefly, dwelling upon the social evil which inevitably results from labor conditions, which might be greatly improved by giving to women the right of suffrage.

What Retail Markets Offer.

Cherries by the bottle.
Boiled ham, 25 cents a pound.
Turkeys, 30 cents a pound.
Pork chops, 15 cents a pound.
Tomatoes, about a dollar a basket.
Head lettuce, 15 to 20 cents a head.
Prunes, 10 to 15 cents a pound.

Prunes are among the most maligned articles of food which come in the category of boarding house standbys. Prunes are good. They are very good. First you take nice, firm, clean, plump ones and you scour them well, and then allow them to soak over night until they have swelled to the size of nice, fat plums, and all the wrinkles are removed from their epidermis, and they are almost bursting out of their smooth, fat sides. Then you cook them gently with just sugar enough, and you have a dish that is simply luscious. The sauce, rich and syrupy, and delicious to taste, is lovely in color, and the prunes themselves, with just bread and butter, or on a lettuce leaf with nice thick mayonnaise dressing, or made into that most deceitable of all things, a prune whip—there really isn't anything nicer than just plain prunes.

DIRECTORY OF AMUSEMENTS

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

LYCEUM—"The Girl Question."
BIJOU—New Vaudeville bill.

"The Alaskan."

It was unfortunate that John Cort's production of "The Alaskan" played but one night in Duluth. The Lyceum was nearly sold out Saturday evening, because Duluth has been without theatrical attractions of any kind for two weeks, but the audience did not quite know what to expect in "The Alaskan." It had never played Duluth before, and was not well known by reputation. It proved to be a most pleasant surprise. "The Alaskan" is just a little above the standard of musical comedy, and proved to be a very pretty and entertaining comic opera, with real music rather than jingling airs, several principals could sing, and some comedians who were not of the usual slap stick type. The first act lags a little at the opening, but the performance seems to grow better as it progresses, and the curtain fell on a genuinely enthusiastic audience.

The scene of the story, Alaska, gives the costumer and the scenic artist plenty of opportunity for original settings, and they apparently took great advantage of it.

The quartet of principals, consisting of Forrest Huff, as Richard Atwater, Edward Martindel as Totem Pole Pete, Lora Lieb as Arlee Easton, and Fritzie Von Busing as Mrs. Good-Better-Best. They appeared in several very attractive numbers, the best of which were "The Song of the Rifles" by Dick, "The Moth and the Bumble Bee" by Arlee, and Dick, "My Totem Pole" by Totem Pole Pete, "Mother Did" by Arlee, "Good-Better-Best" by Mrs. Good-Better-Best, "For I Dream of You" by Pete, and "Arlee" by Dick.

The chief comedian is Dick Fitzgerald as "Smallberry Strander" and he is a welcome variation from the usual run of comedians. He uses but little horse play, and manages to avoid the stereotyped methods of extracting laughs. He is ably assisted by J. Hunter Wilson, as Meadowbrook Blazes, and William Fables as the comic polar bear.

It is difficult to understand why a show of the type of "The Alaskan" did not "catch on" in the East. It has not proved a big money maker, and yet it is immeasurably above the standard of the ordinary musical comedy, viewed from any standpoint. It is not a very good reflection on the taste of the average theatergoer of the East, if the clap-trap musical comedy can succeed and such a production as "The Alaskan" fail. If Mr. Marshall can secure a return booking of "The Alaskan" it should be assured of a warm welcome here.

"The $1,000 Beauty Broilers."

"The Girl Question," the latest Askin-Singer attraction, which opened its engagement at the Lyceum this afternoon and plays tonight and tomorrow night, is by Adams, Hough and Howard, the authors of "The Time, The Place and The Girl," and is now well past its four hundredth performance. The company, which will be seen here will include "The Thousand Dollar Beauty Broilers," as the ten little girls, the smallest of the chorus, are known.

They derive their title from the fact that the Askin-Singer company have a standing offer of $1,000 in gold to be divided among any ten girls who can be assembled either by another theatrical manager or recruited from the ranks of amateurs, who can rival in perfection of figure, beauty of face, quality of voice, and grace and vivacity, these ten little girls. They were selected from over 800 applicants. They do not vary an inch in height or over three pounds in weight, and the contracts they were obliged to sign are probably the most unique and extraordinary ever devised by a theatrical manager. They call for as rigid adherence to discipline off the stage as on.

Always Welcome.

It is announced that "Yon Yonson," the Swedish-American play in which Ben Hendricks is starring this season, will be the attraction at the Lyceum on Thursday and Friday. While "Yon" has been presented here a number of times during previous seasons, it is one of those plays in which the public seemed never to lose interest.

The Stomach of the Child

Is The Organ All Parents Should Protect and Keep Normal.

The stomach of a child is the organ above all others upon which the future of a child depends. Bodily development is fast in children, and the nourishment necessary to meet such development is the one essential demanded from a parent. Most mothers and fathers, jealously guard a child from the formation of bad habits, yet in this age our children early become the victims of wrong food, over eating and irregular meals.

It is most appalling to know the effect of stomach troubles among our children.

Most children who are nervous, irritable and cross, who dream, sleep restlessly, who tire easily and have no desire for child exercise, generally have stomach trouble, indigestion and dyspepsia.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are intended to thoroughly digest food and to place the system in shape to obtain all the nourishment it needs from such food.

These tablets mix with the juices of the system, enriching them and giving to the body the ingredients necessary to build up the rapidly forming brain and body of the young.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should be given to children after each meal and at bed time. They are made from pure vegetable and fruit essences and contain no harmful chemicals whatever. The use of these tablets will give greater vim to a child in its school work or at its play. They will produce appetite and soothe nerves, destroy abnormal cravings and will allay the bad effects of sweets and such improper foods as most children enjoy and will eat no matter what is done to prevent it.

It is due the child that his stomach be protected by the parent, and if Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are given after meals, the habits of the child will not tear down the stomach and destroy the digestive juices nearly so rapidly. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are given to each and every degree of life. Any condition of the stomach welcomes them, from the strongest to the weakest. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents. Send us your name and address today and we will mail you at once a trial package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

MUST WAIT FOR MONEY

Beltrami County Jurors and Witnesses May Not be Paid.

County Behind in Cashing Warrants, Banks Are Holding Back.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The February term of district court for Beltrami county will open here tomorrow, and from present indications the term will be about the longest in the history of the county.

Owing to the fact that the term last fall was continued there was a large number of civil cases on the calendar for trial.

Judge C. W. Stanton, recently appointed third judge for the Fifteenth judicial district will preside.

On the criminal calendar are a number of important matters to be taken into consideration, several parties having been bound over to the district court to await the action of the grand jury.

In all there are 112 civil cases, including a number of justice court appeals and nineteen criminal cases on the calendar, as well as those who have been bound over.

Whether the jurors and witnesses at this term of court will be able to cash their county warrants here is not known yet. County Treasurer French left Saturday for St. Cloud, not intending to return until tonight, and it is not known here whether he will cash the warrants for court expenses or consider them the same as the other county warrants, on most of which the county is from three to five years in arrears.

The officials of the First National and Lumbermen's National banks of this city state that unless the warrants for court expenses are issued with the intention of their being paid immediately after the March settlement they will consider these the same as other county warrants, which they are refusing to cash at the present time.

When Judge Stanton was questioned in regard to the matter he stated that the judges of the district court have conferred and that the hope that some way may be devised by which the jurors and witnesses at this term of court may secure cash for their warrants, but the judges have decided that court must be held here regardless of this proposition.

YOU CAN HAVE A

Healthy Stomach WITH Kodol

In fact, it is easier than having an unhealthy one, without Kodol—for sometimes the stomach will keep healthy, of itself; but it will never be unhealthy—if you take a little Kodol occasionally. And yet Kodol doesn't do anything but digest the food in a natural manner, and effectually assist the tired and overworked stomach to do its work properly. But by doing just this, Kodol at once relieves indigestion and all the aggravating symptoms—and prevents dyspepsia. It accomplishes this just as surely as the law of "cause and effect."

Our Guarantee. Get a dollar bottle of Kodol. If you are not benefited—the druggist will at once return your money. Don't hesitate; any druggist will sell you Kodol on these terms. The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the 50c bottle. Kodol is prepared in the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago

ON THE IRON RANGES

FEARS SON WAS VICTIM

Duluth Woman Worried Over Story of Man Killed by Wolves.

May Have Been Carl Frykdah, Who Left Recently for the Woods.

The dispatch from Baptism River, printed in The Herald last week, about the bones of a man which had been picked by wolves, being found in the wild section between Stony river and Ely, indicating by fresh marks in the snow that the victim had recently been killed by the beasts, has stirred one Duluth home, for fear the hapless being might have been a missing member of their family.

Mrs. Frykdah, living at 3818 Magellan street, called at The Herald office today in search of additional information relative to the grewsome tragedy, as she fears the victim might have been her son, Carl, aged 18, who left home Feb. 9 to work in the woods in that locality. Although he promised his mother to write, nothing has been heard from him since he left. Mrs. Frykdah stated the boy intended to go to work for the Alger-Smith company at Knife River or some other place in that locality.

The story in The Herald stated that nothing was left of the victim of the wild beasts but the feet, which were incased in rubbers and held firmly by clasps. The distracted mother said she felt sure she could identify the socks or the rubbers, and desires anyone having information about the tragedy to notify her. She has written to the postmaster at Baptism River for further particulars.

KNOX MINE WILL BE DEVELOPED

New York Steel Company Orders Resumption at Aurora Property.

Aurora, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The New York Steel company has issued orders to commence work again at the Knox property, which lies on the forty just east of their Adriatic mine, eight miles north of this village.

A number of engineers arrived at the mine Friday to lay out sidetracks. The Knox has been worked before and the shaft has been sunk about 160 feet. It is estimated that within a month after operations begin that ore will be struck.

The company has let the contract to erect fourteen houses for its men, and work will begin at once.

Capt. J. H. Polglase will have charge of the mine.

SECOND PUMPMAN FALLS TO DEATH

Henry Pandle is Killed in Same Manner as John Murphy.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The 180-foot water tower of the village water plant has claimed its second victim.

Two years ago John Murphy, pumpman at the plant, fell from the tower and was instantly killed. Last night his successor, Henry Pandle, met death in the same manner.

Pandle has been a resident of Hibbing several years. He leaves a wife.

For eight years previous to taking up his work as pumpman he was in the employ of the Oliver Iron Mining company.

No one saw the accident which caused Pandle's death. There was apparently no occasion for him to ascend the water tower at the time of the night when the accident occurred. A policeman saw Pandle on his way to the tower shortly before he met his death.

HOUSES NOT WANTED.

Those Purchased by Steel Trust at Sparta on Company's Hands.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sparta will soon be only a name, and then a huge open pit. Most of the property owners have sold their houses and lots to the Steel corporation and are planning to move over to Gilbert, where the prospects are bright.

The Steel corporation has been puzzled what to do with the houses they bought. They intended selling them back to the former owners, who could mave them over to Gilbert. The prices offered for the houses have been so small, that it is understood that the company will move the houses to the Genoa location, where they will be used as barding houses and residences.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—In making a long jump on the ski slide, north of here yesterday afternoon, Stewart McLachlan, aged 21, lost his skis and, falling upon his side, sustained perhaps fatal injuries. He was hurried to a physician, who said perhaps the man was injured internally, in which event his recovery was problematical.

The accident was witnessed by several and created a sensation. If he had not lost his skis he probably would have made a record jump for this slide.

DO AWAY WITH CAUCUS.

Hibbing Candidates Will Try Different Method This Spring.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—The usually followed method of having a preliminary caucus to announce candidates for nomination for the different village offices will not be tried this year in Hibbing if the plans of the leading candidates are followed.

It has been found, in former affairs of the kind, that the large foreign element attending these caucuses did not always understand the exact purport of the meetings, and some times voted a man into the candidacy for an office he did not want, or did not otherwise vote as desired. This year it is expected the candidates will merely announce the office they are after, and be voted for at the regular primary.

Thomas Reddy and B. H. Hayes are said to be candidates for re-election as village trustees. M. Rogalsky and Frank Ansley are also expected to run, which will make three candidates for the offices of three trustees.

Ab Kleffman has come out for the office of village treasurer. Kleffman's announcement brings at least three candidates into the field for the office, Miles Gandsey, the present incumbent, Oscar Widstrand, and possibly a fourth in Roy Bosworth.

HAS VIOLET, TESTIFYING

and turned towards the attorney general.

"You have ready your testimony since Saturday?" was the first question.

"Yes, sir."

"And discussed it with counsel?"

"No, not the testimony. Counsel asked me some questions."

"When were you introduced to Senator Carmack?"

"I do not remember whether I ever was introduced to him. I have known him all my life. Just before the shooting he was frequently in my uncle's office on business connected with the campaign. I spoke to him several times before the shooting."

"The testimony you gave was the first statement you ever made?"

"Yes, sir."

"You heard the testimony in the application for bail?"

"I did."

"Yet you never made a statement?"

"No, sir."

"You are a lawyer?"

"Yes, sir."

"In criminal courts?"

"No, sir—only one case."

"You did a great deal of pardon work?"

"Only one. I got a pardon for Jesse Linder."

"Your service then was principally to see Governor Patterson and the pardon board?"

"I appeared before both."

"What was the charge against Linder?"

"Murder."

"How long did he get and how long did he serve?"

"He got fifteen years and served about two years."

The drift of the questions was evident to show the Cooper's connection with Governor Patterson, how influential they were and thus to strengthen the conspiracy theory.

Attorney General McCarn suddenly switched then to the day of the shooting, taking up the story at the time Robin said he had arrived at the office. Step by step the attorney general made the witness go over the story.

"When did you telephone Mrs. Burch, your sister, to find your father?"

"About 9:30 a. m."

"And you wanted your sister to keep him off the streets?"

"Yes, sir."

"Still your father had only left you a moment before?"

"Yes, sir."

"When did you learn that your father was armed?"

"When he reached my office that morning."

"Did you see the gun?"

"Yes, sir."

"Bring in the revolvers; all of them," said McCarn. "Is either of these your father's revolver?"

"I do not know. The nickelplated one looks like it. I only glanced at it."

The state's object was to identify the gun Col. Cooper carried. Its contention that the gun said to have been found near Carmack's body was in reality Col. Cooper's, substituted for the one Carmack was shot with.

Young Cooper said the automatic revolver he shot Carmack with was the first one of its kind he ever held in his hand.

ROOSEVELT LAUDS NAVY

with you around South America, through the straits of Magellan, to our own Pacific coast. The armored cruiser squadron met you, and left you again, when you were half way around the world. You have falsified every prediction of the prophets of failure. In all your long cruise not an accident worthy of mention has happened to a single battleship, nor yet to the cruisers or torpedo boats. You left this coast in a high state of battle efficiency, and you return with your efficiency increased; better prepared than when you left, not only in personal, but even in material. During your world's cruise you have taken your regular gunnery practice, and skilled though you were before with the guns, you have grown more skilful still, and through practice you have improved in battle tactics, though here and there is more room for improvement than in your gunnery.

"Incidentally, I suppose I hardly need say that one measure of your fitness must be your clear recognition of the need always steadily to strive to render yourselves more fit; if you ever grow to think that you are fit enough, you can make up your mind that from that moment you will begin to go backward.

"As a war machine, the fleet comes back in better shape than it went out. In addition, you, the officers and men of this formidable fighting force, have shown yourselves the best of all possible ambassadors and heralds of policy. Wherever you have landed, you have borne yourselves such as to make us at home proud of being your countrymen. You have shown that the best type of fighting man of the sea knows how to appear to the utmost possible advantage when his business is to behave himself on shore and to make a good impression in a foreign land. We are proud of all the ships and all the men in this fleet, and we welcome you home to the country whose good repute among nations has been raised by what you have done."

SEVEN LIVES LOST IN EARLY MORN COLLISION

hibited at Keith's theater, Philadelphia. She was being taken to Norfolk. The horse was 20 years old, and had been shown all over the world by its owner, W. Harrison Barnes. In Europe it was a favorite with vaudeville audiences.

The Pennsylvania railroad advertised reduced rates on this train on account of the homecoming of the battleship fleet, and the train was crowded with passengers bound for Hampton Roads. Beyond those already mentioned no one was seriously hourt.

The collision occurred at 3 a. m. about 300 yards beyond the station. The two locomotives were standing on the main track. The engineer of the express did not see them until too late and the heavy train crashed into them with terrific force.

The sleeping cars were too far removed from the collision to be injured. Immediately behind the locomotive was the combined baggage and mail car. These stood the brunt of the collision and all the men in them were either killed or injured.

The wreck immediately took fire and it was impossible to rescue those under the wreck.

The local fire company was summoned to the rescue. The fire, however, had gained such headway nothing could be done for the unfortunates under the burning cars. The four mail men were riding in the mail section of the first car while Express Messenger Perry, Baggagemaster McCready and Engineman Davis were in the second baggage car. Davis was "deadheading" from Wilmington to Delmar to take a train north.

The flames burned until 9 o'clock this morning when the first body was taken from the ruins. The bodies were badly charred and the only identified up to 11 a. m. was that of Engineer Davis. He was identified by a finger ring.

The two locomotives which caused the wreck were waiting to take the two sections from the yards at Delmar at the terminus of the Delaware division to Cape Charles over the New York, Philadelphia & Norfolk railroad. Ordinarily, these locomotives would have waited on a side track until the arrival of the Norfolk express and why they should have been standing on the main track is a matter now under investigation.

ministry. Time was when the minister of the community was the highest authority as to what the law should be and how it ought to be enforced; but the spread of education and independent thinking, the wide diffusion of knowledge by the press, the disappearance of the simple village life, have contributed radically to change the position and influence of the ministry in the community.

"During the administration of Mr. Roosevelt, and under the influence of certain revelations of business immorality, the conscience of the whole country was shocked and then nerved to the point of demanding that a better order of affairs be introduced. In this movement, the ministers of the various churches have recognized the call upon them to assist, and they have been heard in accents much more effective than ever before in half a century. The greatest agency today in keeping us advised of the conditions among Oriental races is the establishment of foreign missions. The leaders of these missionary branches of the churches are becoming some of our most learned statesmen in respect of our proper Oriental policies."

Judge Taft, discusing teachers, said that "their relation to politics and government is of the utmost importance, though indirect." He pointed out that the professional teacher "may exercise great indirect political influence by the encouragement that he ought to give to the young man of college age and life in the study and pursuit of politics."

The Newspaper Press.

To the writer, in whatever capacity he may labor, Judge Taft attributed great influence, either for good or for bad. Referring to the newspaper press he said: "Its power of public instruction is very great, but when it panders to the most vulgar taste for sensationalism and becomes entirely irresponsible in its influence for good its pernicious tendency is obviated only by the power of the people to protect themselves against it by a safe discrimination and a healthy skepticism. The close relation between journalism and politics, no one who has been in the slightest degree familiar with the course of a popular government can ignore. The unjust color sometimes given through jaundiced editors and correspondents has an injurious effect, but fortunately such injustice is generally remedied."

Judge Taft paid a high tribute to the profession of medicine, because it has contributed to the preservation of the health of all the people. He pointed out that the profession had been exalted by its great discoveries and by its assistance in the expansion of our government in the tropics and in the construction of the Panama canal.

The Law.

After mentioning the great good in actual results, accomplished by many technical professions, Judge Taft considered in extent the profession of the law, which, he said, "is in a wide sense the profession of government." He said that lawyers were often selected to carry on government work, because the executive faculty was a very marked attribute of the modern lawyer. While he realized that there were defects and weaknesses in the profession of the law, he regarded it as the most important in its relation to political government. In conclusion he said: "National exigency seems to call forth the men peculiarly fitted to meet the requirements of the situation. Such were Lincoln and Grant during the great Civil war. Such was Washington in the Revolution, the anniversary of whose birthday this university appropriately makes its festal day. He was not a lawyer or a doctor or a minister. He was a leader of men. His pure, disinterested patriotism, his freedom from small jealousies, his marvelous common sense, his indomitable perseverance and patience, and his serenity and calm under the most trying circumstances, gave him the victory—a victory which could be traced not to brilliant genius or professional training, but to that which, of all things is the most to be pursued and desired—to his high character as a man."

POLICE CURB ANGRY MOB

elers of the city in raising a purse of $1,200 as a reward for the apprehension and conviction of the criminal. To this there has been added a subscription of $300 to obtain expert detective aid. A mass meeting has been arranged, at which money will be gathered to help in clearing up the mystery surrounding several recent crimes in this city.

Mrs. Johnson, invalid wife of an Ottumwa traveling man was in bed with her 4-year-old child at 3 o'clock Sunday morning when she awoke to find a negro bending over her. Before she could scream for help the black seized her by the throat and began to choke her. Despite her weakness, as the result of a recent operation, Mrs. Johnson fought desperately. She tore lose from the big hands of the negro and cried out. At the same time the child screamed.

Uses Curtain Pole.

The negro became alarmed and decided to put an end to these difficulties in the way of accomplishing his purpose. There was a curtain pole an inch in diameter which was used as a window prop within reach. The negro grabbed this and bent the woman until she became unconscious.

The news spread rapidly and the quiet streets soon sounded to the feet of men running. The police called out the vigilantes and a half hour after the assault was committed, armed posses were on the trail of the fleeing negro.

While the pursuit was going on, the crowd around the city jail began to grow. Threats were made freely against the negro Junkin, suspected of the murder of Clara Rosen, two weeks ago, and the police became alarmed for his safety. Toward night they took him out of the jail by a rear door. He was placed in an automobile and taken to Chillicothe, ten miles west of the city, where he was taken on board a Burlington passenger train and taken to Albia, where he was locked up.

ship of the class of the Connecticut.

In the battleship and cruiser squadrons that approached the Mayflower today and saluted the president's flag at the main mast of the graceful little cruiser yacht, there were represented 429,459 tons of water displacement.

Calumet Baking Powder

Every battleship in commission in the navy had a place in the long line. There were twenty of the heavily belted vessels, fifteen being among the original sixteen that sailed away fourteen months ago. The only vessel missing from the line today was the Alabama. She came home with the Maine last October, and both of these ships had the distinction of going all the way around the world, even if they were excluded from the fleet itself. The Maine served today as flagship of the squadron of vessels sent to meet the incoming fleet, and the wireless dispatches already have told she was greeted at sea with all the enthusiasm of an old friend. The Alabama is in reserve at the New York navy yards. The strangers in the fleet today were the Nebraska, which replaced the Maine, and the Wisconsin, which replaced the Alabama.

Virginia Beach, offering one of the first opportunities for a glimpse of the incoming squadrons, was sought by thousands. At Cape Henry and all along the Lynnhaven and Willoughby shores great throngs were gathered. On this, the opposite shore of the roadstead, the crowds were densest here at Old Point.

The ramparts of Fortress Monroe were black with spectators, and wherever a place could be found along the water front the eager onlookers were gathered. The battleships picked up their regular cruising speed of ten knots an hour early this morning after a night of comparative rest. Brasswork was polished to a degree of unequalled brilliance, and where paint work had been marred on the journey home, fresh coats of buff were applied to sides and superstructure.

The joy of heme-coming was written on the face of every bluejacket and every officer on board the sixteen ships. The long cruise, the visits to many of the most famous ports of the world, the homage that has been paid to the fleet by every nation favored on the calling list, have been sources of intense interest to everyone aboard the famous vessels, but unquestionably there was no scene in all the world to compare in beauty with the familiar landmarks picked up by the battleship fleet as it steamed a triumphant, self-reliant and efficient force through the Virginia capes today and entered the hospitable waters of the Chesapeake bay and Hampton Roads.

Final Accomplishment

There was an atmosphere of final accomplishment about today's events that lent to them a new significance. The American navy had set a new cruising standard for the other navies of the world to strive for. As she led the beautiful column of battleships bidding defiance to the storms or the tortuous channels of the strange waters of the hemispheres out of Hampton roads fourteen months ago, and as she piloted the fleet through all the seas and into all the ports of the long cruise, the flagship Connecticut steamed again today at the head of the returning squadrons. In the wake of the white ships of the home-coming fleet followed a welcoming host in gray—popular government can ignore. The unjust color sometimes given through jaundiced editors and correspondents has an injurious effect, but fortunately such injustice is generally remedied."

four battleships, and five powerful cruisers being in this escorting column sent a thousand miles to sea to convey a preliminary word of welcome to the famous ships.

The gray vessels, if it had not been for the advance of the American flags flying from their mastheads, might easily have been mistaken for foreign ships. It will require a long while for the American people to become accustomed to the new color scheme adopted for the navy, the enlisting white and buff since the days of the wonderful old "white squadron" having distinguished the American navy above all others, transforming to things of beauty engines of destruction which in somber lights of neutral gray appear hostile and grim.

The day of the homecoming dawned with prospects of weather as fair as that lawyers were often selected to carry on government work, because the executive faculty was a very marked attribute of the modern lawyer. While he realized that there were defects and weaknesses in the profession of the law, he regarded it as the most important in its relation to political government. In conclusion he said: "National exigency seems to call forth the men peculiarly fitted to meet the requirements of the situation. Such were Lincoln and Grant during the great Civil war. Such was Washington in the Revolution, the anniversary of whose birthday this university appropriately makes its festal day. He was not a lawyer or a doctor or a minister. He was a leader of men. His pure, disinterested patriotism, his freedom from small jealousies, his marvelous common sense, his indomitable perseverance and patience, and his serenity and calm under the most trying circumstances, gave him the victory—a victory which could be traced not to brilliant genius or professional training, but to that which, of all things is the most to be pursued and desired—to his high character as a man."

Fleet of Welcome.

Foreign naval attaches, large parties of government officials, high officers of the army and navy, were aboard the fleet of welcome which steamed out today to greet the incoming vessels and to witness the review by the president at the tail of the horseshoe. The Mayflower, which came down from Washington last night with a distinguished party on board, cast her anchors in the same waters today, where she took up position at the sailing of the fleet. After the ceremonial greeting of the battleships and their escort, the Mayflower steamed herself at the end of the long column into Hampton Roads, and when the homecoming vessels had anchored she took up a position in the center of the fleet. Admiral Sperry and the other flag officers, with the captains commanding, were received on board and to them President Roosevelt extended the cordial thanks which he afterwards expressed anew to the officers and crews of the four divisional flagships, the Connecticut, Louisiana, Georgia and Wisconsin, which he visited later in the afternoon.

Record of Achievement.

Today, with their splendid record of achievements and victories of peace behind them, the battleships came home to a welcome and to a ceremonious greeting, which could hardly have been more jubilant and sincere if the ships were returning victorious from some famous battle ground. The president addressed not only the officers of the fleet gathered upon the quarter deck of the Mayflower, but he visited as well the four divisional flagships, and there he addressed the crews in terms of enthusiastic compliments. And it was impossible for Mr. Roosevelt to visit each of the sixteen returning vessels, representatives of the men from each ship in the four divisions were gathered upon the flagship and they in turn took the president's greetings to their shipmates.

The Mayflower had not long laid at anchor when the tracings of smoke on the horizon told of the approach of the fleet, and soon the mastheads of the Connecticut could be picked up with glasses through the wide swung capes. Then the white hull of the famous flagship flashed into view. Out of the distance the fleet grew rapidly until at last the end of the white column in front could be distinguished.

The gray clad vessels of the escort grew far above the horizon and served as a splendid demonstration of the value of a neutral color for naval vessels in time of war.

SOLDIERS MISSING; HAVE FIGHT WITH LABORERS.

Hongkong, Feb. 22.—Laborers engaged in constructing the Canton-Hankow railway began rioting today, because the wages of some of the men, who had been absent from work, were withheld. Troops were called out and in a clash which ensued, twenty-five laborers were injured. Three soldiers are missing.

WHAT MAKES A MAN GREAT?

What makes a man great? Is it houses and lands and offices and honors? Many have had all these and more and are forgotten. Is it strength or wit or wisdom? Many have had these, too, and the world has not long remembered them. What it is, then, that makes a man great?

It is not hard to know. One thing and one thing only made a Moses and a David, a Mahomet and a St. Paul, a Socrates and a Caesar, a Cromwell and a Milton, an Abraham Lincoln and a George Washington. Great men there have been and they were only village Hampdens.

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene
The dark unfathom'd caves of ocean bear;
Full many a flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

Men have lived and died and their bones are dust and the great, wide, restless world knew not that they were great men. The hour in which their greatness might be revealed never struck. But no man was every truly great, be he the man whose greatness was unknown, unhonored and unsung, or be he the man before whom all the world has bent the involuntary knee in homage—no man was ever truly great who had not moral greatness.

Time remoselessly denies greatness to those who lack this one thing. Alexander sighed for more worlds to conquer, but he was not a great man; Napoleon was a most amazing genius but no man at all; Voltaire was a great brain but Joan of Arc was more of a man; a thousand kings have flourished and have faded but the Bishop of D was greater than them all; those who have been first in glory, laud and honor have often been last in our love and adoration; there is one greatness of the mind and another of the soul and it is the greatness of the soul that marks every man who has done anything for the world worth while.

This is a thought worth considering on this birthday of George Washington. Washington stands out to us of the present day in this country of which he is lovingly called the father, a colossal figure. He founded a great nation, in war and in peace, and was its first head, but it is not so much his deeds that we think of when we think of Washington as it is his moral greatness. He stands a man, incarnate with our highest aspirations of what a man ought to be, wise in council, strong in action, gifted, brilliant, pre-eminently great—but it is the soul quality of him that makes him beloved and revered of his people, a truly great man.

Doubtless the plaudits of the people, the honors of high office, the having of large powers and the being much in the public eye is very pleasing to us and satisfies many of us in our desires of greatness but the lesson of Lincoln and Washington is that man must have something more than these to be great with a greatness that endures.

ARE WE TO BE BAMBOOZLED AGAIN?

Business in this country is so sensitive to tariff changes that we cannot afford to make changes very often; we had rather bear the ills we have, than invite others by a constant tinkering with the tariff. Tariff laws are therefore comparatively long lived as a rule. The present tariff law has been in operation without change for eleven years, and it is quite likely, if a measure is evolved this summer giving anything like a fair revision and affording sufficient revenue for the expenses of the government, that it will remain unchanged upon the statute books for a decade at least.

Since it is so difficult and so perilous to change the tariff, we ought to be the most careful to secure in the new law those benefits which the whole country is most in need of, and among these there is none more important than the provision to make reciprocity possible. The country was most beautifully bamboozled on this subject twelve years ago; are we going to be fooled again?

The Dingley tariff law provided for reciprocity in that it authorized the president to negotiate reciprocity treaties and provided for reductions in the tariff in the discretion of the president, upon the negotiation of such treaties within the term of two years after the enactment of the act. In accordance with this provision, various treaties advantageous to this country were negotiated with different powers by President McKinley and submitted to the senate for ratification. The senate devoted itself to the considereration of these reciprocity treaties in the most leisurely manner and shortly before the expiration of the two-year limit got around to a vote and rejected every one of them. It was then too late to negotiate other treaties and the result has been that reciprocity which should have been entered into eleven years ago, and which would have enormously benefited this country is not yet accomplished, but is still waiting the enactment of a new tariff law.

The people of the United States were shamefully abused in this matter twelve years ago. Trade and commerce has suffered because of it, while special interests have continued to grow fat on special privileges. The people of the country have heard the cry of the ways and means committee that they be not embarrassed in the drafting of the new law and they have heeded the appeal; they have shown remarkable reserve in voicing suspicions which they cannot fail to have after the abominable way that they have been treated in the past. But they are very insistent to know whether they are to be gold-bricked again in this matter of reciprocity. In fact, the country at large is quite determined to secure a tariff measure that shall afford it some measure of justice in this matter and that will make it possible to secure an active application of the policy of reciprocity. If congress does not heed the demand it is quite possible that the country will prefer continued disturbance in business to submitting to another eleven-year postponement of reciprocity.

HIRING EXPERTS.

While we are demanding more power for the people in the control of their own government, let us remember that there is a point beyond which we cannot go in this agitation, with profit. To have a pure democracy is ideal, but it is not practical; and with so many people to be served by government it is, in some cases, absolutely inefficient. This is only saying again a well worn truth. Everybody knows it. But we often forget it in actual practice. We often find that in our zeal for right for the masses we have passed beyond the line where the principle of democracy can be effective.

We have done this in Minnesota with the result that we have a board of control appointed by one of the offices of government, a state tax commission composed of experts also chosen by appointment, but at the same time we have a state railway and warehouse commission elected by the people and we are now proposing to have a board of mines, timber and lands elected instead of appointed. The ordinary rules of business tell us in what manner a public board should be constituted. If it deals with subjects which call for the knowledge and experience of an expert, the membership of the board must be filled by some one authority delegated by the people to make the selections. The people in the mass are not competent to select expert engineers, physicians, accountants or economists. Without reflecting upon the intelligence or honesty of purpose of any man, everybody admits, everybody knows, that the state tax commission is constituted so as to give the state the maximum of public efficiency, while the state railway and warehouse commission is so constituted as to give the state the minimum of public service. This fact is the simple and direct result of the two different methods by which the members of these two boards are chosen. Both boards call for a membership of experts. We shall never get experts on the state railroad and warehouse commission as long as the positions are elective. So long as the membership of this board, or any other board of similar purposes and powers, is chosen by political methods, it will be made up principally of politicians, and not of experts.

No great business corporation hires its experts by a vote of the stockholders of the corporation. The stockholders entrust that duty to certain officers of the corporation, realizing that such officers are far better fitted to choose competent experts than are the mass of the stockholders. The same principle applies to a state when it undertakes state business.

Says La Follette's Weekly: "No wonder the corporations want the people to hire their experts by popular vote. They know that then their experts will be more than a match for the people's experts. * * * How absurd to make the people go into court against the corporations, when the corporations are represented by experts and the people's case is made up by politicians!"

More power to the people in the choice of men who make and enforce the law, but let us not pursue unbusinesslike methods in the conduct of the state's business.

A MILLION ACRE RESERVE.

President Roosevelt by a proclamation issued last week has created in Minnesota the largest forest reserve east of the Rocky mountains. The new reserve is located in St. Louis, Lake and Cook counties and lies for the most part along the international boundary line. It consists of over 900,000 acres of timbered lands, which are said to be rough and rocky and so unsuited for settlement compared to the hundreds of thousands of fertile acres in this section of the state which are not yet being cultivated, that it is probable that the tract of the new reserve would never become an agricultural country, even should it be thrown open for settlement. The new reserve is quite likely to be a permanent forest reserve, and by reason of its size and location, it will become in time one of the most important in the entire country. A tract of nearly one million acres is a pretty big place. Its reservation is one more step toward the conservation of our natural resources.

The setting aside of this vast tract as a forest reserve is also hailed with satisfaction by all who are interested in the movement to establish an international game preserve in Minnesota and Ontario. A tract equally large will be set aside by the province of Ontario and it now remains only for the legislature of Minnesota to make the new forest reserve a game preserve and we shall have, in a country which is fast coming to be a famous resort, a great preserve of two million acres where wild game may find refuge and increase in peace. The overrun from this preserve will within a very few years attract thousands of sportsmen to Minnesota and the state, with the exercise of simply a little care and restraint and a very modest expense, will have added to its resources something that will be a great advertisement of the state and will also yield a yearly return in money from the hundreds and thousands who will be drawn to the state.

Taft has had his inaugural address T. R'd.

The best way to manage a husband, girls, is to keep him in statu quo as a husband-elect.

Not a single orator of them all on Feb. 12 modeled his eulogy upon the Gettysburg address for length!

The anti anti-trust law advocates do not seem to be making much headway. What we want is constructive legislation, not destructive.

Paper may be flimsy stuff but it has been used to make car wheels of and it has also made a trust that is just as strong as any of them.

If you want to call him Big Bill Taft, make the most of the next few days. There is something about the office of president of the United States that does not lend itself to easy familiarity.

Set it down to begin with that the fewer women in the home, the worse for the home, no matter what the net financial result may be, and then consider that the home is the foundation of society; what hurts the home, strikes at the very base of society.

A. J. Halsted has been owner of the Brainerd Tribune for a quarter of a century and so far as The Herald knows, must be the dean of the country press of Minnesota. The Tribune is 37 years old and is among the very ablest and soundest of the newspapers of a state which ranks high in the character of its public press.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"Graft is a many-sided, complicated, disease of municipal government," said Sherburn M. Becker, the "ex-boy mayor" of Milwaukee, at the Spalding yesterday. "It is much more far-reaching than most of the citizens who read about its existence imagine, and I believe that the honest men of this country are just beginning to realize that business and the business boss lie behind most of the grafting that is due both in municipal and state politics.

"In the case of the state graft, you will invariably find that the railroads, the big corporations, and other big interests are behind some movement to influence legislation in their favor. It is the special interests that seek legislation that will favor them, and they are not always careful about the way they set about to secure this legislation.

"In the case of the city, it is often the street railway, the big franchise seekers, and other interests that are at the bottom of graft. Of course, don't misunderstand me; graft is petty and pleayunish, and in the world of graft you will find that there are petty and small grafters, who are just as criminal as the big grafters, but who are more simple and are therefore more easy to deal with.

"When the graft fighters learn to look back of the grafters, back of the man who is accused of receiving a graft, they frequently find some highly organized system of business grafting, just as has been found in San Francisco and Pittsburg, and in other American cities, where rotten municipal conditions have been exposed. People were astounded by the men who were caught in the investigating dragnet of the San Francisco sleuths and secret service men.

"We have been fighting graft in Milwaukee, and you probably know that we found a great deal of business dishonesty there. I believe that the citizens of Milwaukee have been aroused to a deeper obligation of their duties toward the municipality by the revelations that were made in the anti-graft crusade.

"Grafting and business dishonesty are becoming more scarce. The public is becoming a more exacting employer. This country is passing through an evolution, in which the citizens are investigating, are looking with open eyes at the conditions that have prevailed, and are asking the why and wherefore of them. They are studying the question of graft with a view of correcting it. They have at last begun to look behind the grafter, as he has been known in the past, to the motive of his grafting, to the big grafter, the business grafter, and they are looking at the problem in the correct manner. It is only when we can prevent the big business men of the community or of the country from being dishonest, and in evading the laws in securing privileges that they desire, that we can do away with grafting. The man who receives the graft, whom we have been calling hard names in the past, and despising as the one who corrupts the civic virtue of our cities, could not exist if it were not for the graft higher up.

The man behind is the most corrupting influence of all, and to prevent grafting we must teach the business man who is a grafter, that jails and prisons of this country are no respecter of persons."

"Minnesota has an excellent opportunity to be a leader in framing an employers' liability law that will set an example for other states and will work a great good, not only to the workingmen of this state and other states, but also to business and to the public at large," said Charles A. Bowman of St. Paul, who was at the St. Louis yesterday.

"At the present time the law that covers accidents to laborers, is so antiquated that it is useless to serve the purpose as acting as a medium through which the workingman can secure his just rights in the matter of compensation for injuries received in the interest of industry. At the present time it is the rule that the working man who enters any kind of employment, no matter how dangerous, assumes all the risks that go with the business, and as a result, when men are killed or permanently injured, there is no compensation for the widow or the family of the workmen. As a result of this system, brought about by the antiquated law, society pays the burden that should be to the industry.

"Under the present system of uncertain law, corporations that employ large numbers of men are obliged to employ large and expensive legal staffs to protect their interests. Much of the business of this legal staff is taken up with damage suits. That is the expense to the business side. Now comes the hardship and the injustice of the laborer. The employe is invariably compelled to carry his fight for damages through two or three courts. In some cases he has been compelled to wait nine years before a verdict was reached. In the meantime the injured man's family is generally supported by society.

"Both Governor Johnson and W. E. McEwen have grasped the injustice of the present system of assumed risk by the employe. It is time that a reform was made in this great injustice to both the employer, the employe and to the public. Minnesota should grasp the opportunity."

THE WEATHER.

Mild weather continued last night and today. The air felt almost spring-like at times. In fact, the entire continent is enjoying a respite from extremely cold weather, as the weather map does not show a single below-zero report. Snow is predicted for tonight and Tuesday, and it is expected that the lowest temperature will be 20 degs. above zero. There will be moderate winds, mostly northerly.

The sun rose this morning at 7 o'clock and is scheduled to go down at 5:43. Washington's birthday a year ago was a mild and cloudy day.

Mr. Richardson says of weather conditions:

"A storm of moderate strength is central over Colorado, Western Kansas and Northern Texas. During the last twenty-four hours, disturbances carried rain or snow in the Southwestern and Eastern states. Moderate temperatures for this season are the rule. The barometer is high over the New England and North Pacific states. Indications favor cloudy weather and snow in this locality tonight and Tuesday, and the temperature will not change much in the meantime."

Creeds of Presidents.

Kansas City Journal: President Roosevelt's formal leave-taking of his Washington church, and President-elect Taft's introduction at the great New Orleans banquet by Cardinal Gibbons—together with that distinguished prelate's emphatic endorsement of Mr. Taft—are two current events of a religious significance in keeping with the history of the presidents ever since the days of Washington. Since 1789 the electorate of the United States have paid far less attention to the personal religious convictions of their presidents than to their fitness for the great civil office of the chief magistracy. It was an encouraging omen of tolerance in a time of intellectual stress, one whose prophecy has been fulfilled at frequent intervals, that the second and third presidents of the United States were Unitarians, the creed professed by Mr. Taft. Jefferson was perhaps more radical than the Unitarians of that day—and possibly of this—but John Adams and his gifted son were professed Unitarians, according to the classification of today, though the ecclesiastical division had not then been made. Fillmore was also a Unitarian, making five presidents of that faith, a number not excelled by the representatives of any one denomination, though the Presbyterians, Episcopalians and Methodists may claim five each, either active members or regular attendants.

Earthquakes 30,000 a Year.

Current Literature: Systematic observation of earthquakes is only about a quarter of a century old. For fairly complete records of all the shocks occurring in different parts of the globe we can date only from 1892. Before that date, says Prof. Turner, in the paper published by the London Times, from which we quote, information could only be collected on the spot, and was thus frequently lost. It was realized about fifteen years ago, more or less, that a series of earthquake observations, with delicate instruments, could obtain records of shocks in any quarter of the globe, and identify the spot with certainty, even if there were no witnesses of the actual occurrence. From the records of these observatories it appears that there are every year some 30,000 minor shocks of earthquake in different localities. Of all these, only sixty are 'world-shaking,' and observable from great distance. Such numbers indicate immediately that, from one point of view, the Italian earthquake of last month cannot be regarded as exceptional. It was only one event out of sixty per annum. What rendered it disastrous was the existence of great towns in the shaken locality.

Dr. Fullerton has taken charge of the hospital at Agate Bay.

Some of the sub-contractors on the Duluth & Iron Range road have failed to pay the men, and about 160 have started suits against the railroad company, but Wolf & Co., the contractors, will have to see the men paid.

The last chapter in the Duluth history of H. O. Sproat has been reached. He came here two years ago and met Charlie Miller, who had an idea of going into the china, crockery and glass ware business. Sproat represented that this was his business, and a partnership was formed in June, 1882. Miller put in about $3,000, expecting Sproat to do the same, but the latter said he could not get his money then, and so it was arranged he should run the store on a salary, as Miller could not give it any attention on account of extra work caused by the government land sale. Miller soon found the business was involved, and decided to sell the stock by auction, and when that was concluded, he had to pay out $2,000 more to settle the firm's bills. Miller then attached Sproa's goods and effects in his private rooms, and they were sold at auction by the sheriff this morning. The sale was largely attended. Every person seemed to be anxious to take home something from the sale, and the result was that almost everything put up brought a big price.

Last summer a man named Johnson, living near Spirit Lake, discovered what he believed to be a mineral vein. He had no money with which to work it, so he took into partnership a man named Kline, and they began sinking a shaft. When winter set in the work was stopped, and it is now learned that they have sold the property for $1,200. It is said the purchasers bought the property, not for the silver, but for coal. It is the opinion of some people who have prospected through that region that there is a bed of coal there which will be developed in the near future.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Albert Lea Standard: C. C. Whitney of Marshall, who was first appointed a trustee of the state soldiers' home by Governor Van Sant, although a Republican has been reappointed by Governor Johnson. Mr. Whitney is an old soldier of gallant record, an able official and one of the truest and best citizens and able editors of the state, and Governor Johnson has honored himself and the public service is reappointing him.

Faribault Journal: Speaker Wadsworth of New York, takes up the challenge thrown down by Governor Hughes on the subject of nominations by primaries. The subject is very important, and the discussion on both sides should be led by men of good standing and ability. "Young Jim" is rather "light" and youthful to measure swords with such an intellectual and moral giant as the governor, but in the score of character, he is all that could be desired. We may expect a spirited controversy. Machine politics in New York is both strongly established and scientific, and any proposition to change the old order for a new is resisted with the might and main of the machine of both parties. Governor Hughes has entered on the fight of his life.

La Sueur News: No ban on Dixie Well, we think not. The South is just as much a part of Uncle Sam's realm as is the North and it is daily growing to be a valuable part.

Eveleth News: There seems to be some difference of opinion as to how much the range has gained by the court bill. Of course no one can know definitely until the bill becomes a law but a reading of the bill inclines The News to the opinion that the results will be practically what was asked for.

Sam Langum in the Preston Times: Never before in the history of the United States senate have so many senators asked to speak, as they did at the memorial session to the late Senator Allison. Eighteen of the senators, including some of the strong men in both parties, paid tribute to the late Nestor of the senate. Some of them served a great many years with him in the senate and some in the house of representatives. Senator Cullom, in his remarks, stated that he was the only senator now alive who served with Senator Allison in the Fortieth congress, during the impeachment proceedings of President Johnson.

Fergus Falls Free Press: It is absolutely certain that Halvor Steenerson will not get the Republican nomination for congress by default next year, as has been the case since 1902. There is a feeling that a man who has been repudiated by his own county, where he is best known, and who ran hands down. The election of 1908 sounded the political death-knell of Hon. Halvor Steenerson. Several Republicans have been named as good congressional timber, among them being Senator F. Peterson of Moorhead, Senator Stephens of Crookston, and Representative Bjorge of Lake Park. But in the opinion of the Free Press the best man to nominate is Judge Grindeland of Warren.

What Is a Journalist.

People who read the newspapers, but are not familiar with newspaper work, commonly refer to newspaper men as journalists. Many enterprising young gentlemen, as a rule just out of college, style themselves journalists. Just how it is in other cities I do not know, but I do know that in New York the "journalist" is considered a joke along the Rialto, says a writer in the Editor and Publisher.

People who are connected with the editorial department of newspapers are in journalism, but I never yet heard a man call himself a journalist any more than I have ever heard a skillful doctor called a physician. It seems to be a distinction without a difference, yet there is a difference.

Henry Watterson—"Marse Henry"—once said that he was trying to be a newspaper man and that some time in the future he might become a journalist, but he hoped not.

The following are some original definitions regarding the difference between a newspaper man and a journalist:

Charles D. McCaull of Brady & Griscom: "A journalist writes for the wastebasket. A newspaper man writes copy with a pencil."

Joseph Dillion, with James K. Hackett: "A journalist wears a cane when he goes out on an assignment."

Peter C. Tackney, Bowlers' Journal: "A journalist wears one shirt two weeks. A newspaper man wears two shirts one week."

William L. Sutphin, Real Estate: "When I am interviewed by some one who does not grasp the reality situation after I have told him several times I think he must be a journalist."

Fred W. Shipman, New York World: "A journalist writes pieces for the papers. A newspaper man writes news stories."

Samuel F. Kingston, with Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr.,: "A journalist eats his lunch at a 'beanery.' A newspaper man lunches at a chophouse or a restaurant."

TOO MUCH POLICEMAN.

West Duluth Officers Must be More Sylphlike in Stature.

In time of peace prepare for war, will soon be the motto of the West Duluth police department. Things have been exceedingly dull in a professional way for the West Duluth officers for some time, an dthe quiet is getting on their nerves.

To relieve the strain of inactivity, and to keep themselves in physical condition, they are now planning on installing a gymnasium at the station house. Lieut. Wilcox has ordered some apparatus, among which there is a turning pole, parallel bars, a vaulting horse and a set of boxing gloves. With the help of the rest of the force, he hopes to organize a regular physical culture classes. Justice H. Black has been chosen physical director, and each day will put his classes through reular drills. He hopes by summer to have removed all "bay windows" from the force, and have the men in shape to compete in a field meet with the policemen of the central station. The judge is said to be handy in a fistic way and will devote special attention to classes in the art of self-defense.

STUCK IN THE TAR.

Wild Duck Captured in Odd Manner at Zenith Furnace Plant.

A novel way of capturing wild ducks has been discovered at the Zenith Furnace company.

Saturday the attention of the employes was called to the hot pond by a loud squawking. The producer of the squawks was a full grown female mallard duck, which had alighted in the pond and become stuck in the congealing tar and grease from the coke oven waste. A little stream of waste tar, mingled with warm water, runs into a shallow part of the river. When it comes in contact with the cold river water it hardens into a sticky mass.

Above his unfortunate mate, an unhappy drake circled in the air, setting up a frightful noise. The appearance of the men, however, frightened him away.

James Mason, superintendent of the coke department, captured the fowl by means of a wire loop on the end of a long stick. Mrs. Duck was taken to the laboratory, where, after considerable scrubbing and several applications of chemical solvents, she made quite a respectable appearance. She is now on exhibition at Mr. Mason's home on Sixty-third avenue west and Raleigh street.

Aside from the curious manner in which it was captured, the duck is a curiosity, owing to its unseasonable appearance in this country.

Mrs. Bujold Dies.

Mrs. Susan Bujold, aged 56 years, died yesterday morning at her home, 27 South Sixtieth avenue west, after a long illness of cancer. She is survived by her husband, John Bujold, and three children. The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock from the St. James Catholic church, and the body will be taken to Cloquet for interment. The West Duluth Hive of Maccabees and the Catholic Order of Foresters, of which she was a member, will attend the services in a body.

The object of the league is to discuss and debate political, economic and other topics of the day.

CLOTHES LINE TO END LIFE

Superior Man Hangs Himself in Rear of a Saloon.

The body of Nick Gigge, aged 38 years, was found Saturday afternoon at about 3:45 o'clock hanging by the neck from a three-foot length of clothes line in the rear of the Atlantic saloon, 614 Tower avenue, Superior.

Despondency over internal injuries he received by falling down stairs is believed by the dead man's friends to have been the cause of his suicide.

The method which the men took is a novel one. He went to a little rear room of the saloon and fastened a small screw eye at the top of a door. Through this eye he secured the rope and the other end he tied about his neck. The whole length of the rope was not more than three feet. When he finished this preparation he must have kicked from beneath him the chair on which he was standing, allowing his whole weight to fall on the rope.

The bartender found the body shortly afterwards. Though Gigge had been loafing around the saloon a great deal, he is said not to have been intoxicated when he took his life. He had only lived in Superior a week, and had roomed in the Star lodging house above the saloon, where he ended his life.

He lived formerly in Two Harbors, where he is said to have been well known. He was unmarried, and before he came to Superior had worked for the Lake County Lumber company at Stewart River, Minn.

Sues Railroad.

Albert, Moores, a baker of the East end, has started suit against the Omaha road for $10,000 damages for injuries he alleges he received in a wreck on that company's road Oct. 26 last at Kempton. Mr. Moores claims that he sustained injuries to his spine.

Was on the Republic.

Mrs. James K. Nicholson of Albany, N. Y., who was in Superior yesterday to visit her son, Paul Nicholson, the leading man in the "Girl Question" company, says that she was on board the steamer Republic that was wrecked off the Massachusetts coast a month ago. She was on her way to Italy to spend the remainder of the winter. Rather than risk another sea adventure, she is now on her way to California, where she says she believes the climate will suit her much better than that of Italy.

Burglars Routed.

Alfred Brautin reported at the Superior police station Saturday night that, while passing the Ogden avenue Omaha passenger depot at about 11 o'clock, he saw two men trying to break into the building through a window. They saw him and made their escape before he could get assistance.

New Carrier Service.

For the first time for nearly a year, carried service started today from the Billings Park postoffice, instead of from the main office. There are two carriers on the route.

Must Leave Superior.

Jack Flaherty, charged with perjury, when arraigned in the Superior municipal court yesterday, was paroled for thirty days, with the understanding that he is to get out of town as soon as possible. Flaherty was the star witness in a highwayman case last summer, and gave false testimony, it is claimed. He was arrested on the charge and released on his promise to leave town. He appeared again in Superior last week and was rearrested on the old charge.

NEW LEAGUE A SURE "GO"

It is not absolutely certain that teams will be placed in St. Paul and Minneapolis by the promoters of the new Minnesota-Wisconsin league, according to Al Kuehnow, who returned this morning from the meeting of the men interested in the formation of the new organization.

The directors of the league have a man looking the ground over in St. Paul with the idea of placing a strong team in that city, and if plans materialize there and in Minneapolis, those two cities will be represented in the league.

"There is one hitch over the Minneapolis arrangement," said Mr. Kuehnow. "We hope, however, to place a team in that city.

"The league is a sure go, no matter whether we succeed in getting St. Paul and Minneapolis into the organization or not. The other towns will be represented by good substantial men, who have the interests of the game at heart."

Mr. Kuehnow says that it is not believed by the directors of the new league that any difficulty will be encountered in securing fast players for the various teams. There are any number of young college players who are willing to play independent ball, and it is probable that many of these players will be seen in the Minnesota-Wisconsin league this summer.

New Club Organized.

Curly Ulrich will open his new Athletic club this evening. The newest athletic organization of Duluth is located on Lake avenue. Ulrich is the manager of the new club.

There will be a smoker and a general entertainment given for those who attend the opening this evening.

Turk May Come.

Negotiations are under way to bring Yousiff Mahmout, "The Terrible Turk," to Duluth. If the Turk is brought to this city, Fred Beell will probably be secured as an opponent of the great wrestler, who has thrown every man whom he has met since coming to the United States.

At the present time the Turk is practically matched to meet Champion Frank Gotch, in a match that will be for the world's championship. Beell met the Bulgarian wonder in Chicago, and after a struggle, that was one of the most sensational ever seen in the West, the Turk defeated the great little Wisconsin grappler. Beell has never been satisfied with the outcome of the Chicago match, and would like nothing better than to be rematched with the man who aspired to the title of the world's champion wrestler.

Jack Curley is managing Yousiff Mahmout, and if a date can be secured early in March for Duluth, the man whom many critics of the mat game believe can defeat Goch will be brought heer.

NEW IDEAL OF CITIZENSHIP

Lincoln Gave It to Americans, Says Dr. M. S. Rice.

"The great work of Lincoln was his bringing to the nation the fulfillment of a new ideal of citizenship," said Dr. M. S. Rice, at the First M. E. church, yesterday. "In him were fused the characteristics of the Puritan and Cavalier and in the depths of his soul the faults of both were eliminated. He was an example before the people of the American, the type of citizen that considers the welfare of the whole, whose patriotism is nation-wide and not merely state-wide. American citizenship has meant more since Lincoln lived.

"He was a great man, who did not care what people said, because he was doing right, as he saw it. He feared praise more than blame."

Dr. Rice said that, although Lincoln's great work was accomplished when he was taken away, yet his counsel and leadership during the period of reconstruction would have been invaluable.

"Generally debilitated for years. Had sick headaches, lacked ambition, was worn-out and all run-down. Burdock Blood Bitters made me a well woman." —Mrs. Chas. Freitoy, Moosup, Conn.

BERNT HANSON WILL JUMP HERE

Coleraine Barrel Stave Expert Will Give Exhibition in Duluth.

As an additional attraction for the ski tournament, to be given by the Duluth Ski club, at Chester Hill, on Feb. 28, Bernt Hanson, the young barrel-stave expert from Coleraine, who jumped seventy-five feet on his home-made skis, has been secured to give an exhibition of his skill on the Duluth hill.

Although but 14 years old, this young man is already on the road to success as a ski rider. He made a big hit by his wonderful jumping at Coleraine, the day he made his record jump, and it is expected he will prove a big drawing card in Duluth.

The tournament will be purely a local affair, and all the Duluth riders will take part. The hill is in first-class shape since the recent snow fall and the officers of the club are making great preparations for a successful event.

Marquette, Mich., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Awakening to find the house a roaring mass of flames, Supervisor Richard Harcourt and family of Seney, east of here, barely had time to escape in their night clothing from their burning residence before the roof fell in.

Nothing was saved from the building and before gaining shelter with neighbors the family suffered severely from the cold and snow. The loss is only partially covered by insurance.

CARPENTER SEES MAYOR

Oneota Saloon Keeper Tells His Side of the Story.

Declares Boys Did Not Get Drunk In His Place.

P. F. Carpenter, of the firm of Carpenter Bros., who operate a saloon at Thirty-eighth avenue west and Oneota street, had an interview this morning with Mayor Haven, in which he told the executive his firm's side of the story which was brought to a climax in municipal court last week by a heavy fine and sentence by Judge Cutting, for selling liquor to minors.

Mr. Carpenter declared to the mayor and to a reporter for The Herald that the youths who were witnesses against him in the case, were intoxicated before they ever entered his place of business and that his saloon had nothing to do with their condition.

He declares no defense was put up at the time the case was heard because they were not given a trial by jury and felt that a defense by them would be useless. He intimated, however, that he was going to appear before the council and tell the aldermen his side of the story and endeavor to convince the aldermen that the revocation of the license would be unjust.

"It was 'pay night' in our locality, when the boys claim they got drunk in our place, "said Mr. Carpenter, 'and there was a large crowd in the saloon. I remember seeing one of the lads in there. He was drunk when he came in and I understand he and the others got their liquor outside. I heard they were drinking from bottles and got drunk earlier in the evening.

"One of the boys might have got a glass of beer or two in our place—I don't remember—but it is certainly unjust to us to say that they got drunk there."

Mr. Carpenter said he was going to put every effort to clear the minds of the city fathers as to the situation, and will make sure they hear more than one side of the story.

WASHINGTON AS PROPHET, LAUDED

Governor Hughes Emphasizes Nation-Wide Move for Purer Politics.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Governor Hughes of New York, in a speech delivered in Washington today, paid tribute to the prophetic wisdom of Washington. He said, in part:

"Washington warned against the dangers of faction and against associations for the purpose of directing or controlling the constituted authorities. He had in mind the abuses incident to political combinations.

"Our history has revealed the force and necessity of political parties and it has also shown the evils against which we must constantly guard. But it is interesting to notice how the people, without destruction of the necessary vehicles of political action are intent on securing within the party the proper expression of their will and such modification of party methods as will conform them to the spirit of our institutions. Measures of civil service reform have greatly decreased the evils due to the use of the departments of government as partisan encampments.

"During the last twenty-five years there has been no more notable movement in the country than that for the purification of political methods, for the freeing of our election system from corrupt practices and for the removal of abuses which had seemed inseparable from political campaigns. While those who take a short view may be inclined to be pessimistic, the student of our entire history cannot fail to be impressed with the growing determination to prevent the perversion of political machinery and to rescue government from the domain of selfish interests."

INSANE GIRL TO BE DEPORTED

Will Be Sent Back to Old Home in Austria.

Mary Kongestat, an Austrian girl, who was brought down from Hibbing about two weeks ago, to be examined for insanity, will probably be deported by the immigration authorities. United States Immigration Inspector-in-Chief W. H. Dean has taken charge of her case and the matter has been placed before the authorities at Washington.

The girl is only 23 years old and she has no relatives in this country, as far as known. She was employed as a domestic at Hibbing, when signs of insanity appeared and her employer filed information against her. As she had been in this country less than the required period to be given treatment here, the case was turned over to the immigration authorities.

Mr. Dean had considerable difficulty securing any information from the girl, and the name of her home in Austria is not yet known.

THIEVES STEAL A GOOD "SOUSE"

Break Into West End Saloon and Take Many Beers.

Burglars became so fired by a desire to help make Milwaukee famous that they broke into the West End Beer hall, 1920 West Superior street, last night and stole eighteen bottles of beer.

Nothing else was taken. Either the beer was the sole object of the intrusion, or, by tapping their booty, the burglars became so joyful that they forgot about other valuables.

The unlawful revelers have not been apprehended yet. The police are scouring the West end for cases of headache and bad taste today.

It was expected that the St. Paul curlers would play both morning and afternoon today, but after their night ride on the train, they preferred to play in the afternoon and evening. These games are for the McKenzie cup and will undoubtedly be hard fought.

The entertainment is to be given for the benefit of the hospital fund, which was this year greatly diminished on account of the great amount of illness among the Jews of the city.

The play is in five acts, the scene is laid in Russia, and is said to be very interesting as well as unusual.

CLAIMS FRIEND STOLE HIS CASH

Herman Anderson Arrested Upon Complaint of Frank Hill.

According to Hill's story, he was with Anderson most of the day Sunday. Hill is employed as a section hand on the South Shore road. He appeared to be the only one of the two to have any money, and paid for the meals of both.

Late in the afternoon the men went to Hill's room on St. Croix avenue, and Hill fell asleep there. When he awoke Anderson and Hill's money were missing. The police were notified, and later Anderson was arrested on Lake avenue south. He had $12.75 in his pockets.

Anderson pleaded not guilty in police court this morning, and his hearing was set for tomorrow afternoon.

INDIAN CHIEF WHOOPS, KILLS

Runs Amuck in Cincinnati Depot—Two Fatally Hurt.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 22.—With an ear-splitting war whoop, an unidentified Navaho Indian war chief, ran amuck in the union station, and before he could be overpowered, he had fatally stabbed Mrs. Anna Devord of Huntington, W. Va., and Max Meyers of Cincinnati, and seriously wounded Joseph W. Gordon of Cambridge, Ill.

The Indian, with four Sioux chiefs from Kansas, had alighted from a Chesapeake & Ohio train. As the passengers alighted from the train, the Indian, with a yell, drew a long dagger and started through the crowd slashing right and left.

Mrs. Devord was nearest to the Indian, with a child in her arms. The Indian buried the dagger in her back and then slashed her across the body and arms and then attacked Mr. Meyers. As Meyers fell, the Indian attacked Gordon. Passengers and station attaches then made a concerted rush on the madman. The dagger was knocked from his hand, and he was taken in charge by the police.

Wolf in Rabbit Snare.

Frank Kwapeck of the town of New Independence called at the courthouse Saturday with a wolf pelt, and a story that made the eyes of the clerk, who punched the ears of the defunct roamer, pop out with wonder. Kwapeck says he caught the wolf in a common rabbit snare. Might as well try to tie a lion down with cotton thread, say the skeptics, but Kwapeck refused to be shaken from his story.

Soldier Balks Death Plot.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a Civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." A WINE MERCHANT.

Police Station Entertains Two Guests of Business Standing.

A man giving his name as Henry Throop, who claims to be a California wine merchant, was arrested on the Bowery Saturday night, charged with begging on the street, and placed behind the bars at the city jail.

William Walsh, claiming to be a contractor, staggered into the police station shortly after midnight and asked for a night's lodging. He was unmistakably drunk and was locked up.

Throop pleaded not guilty in police court this morning, and his hearing was set for tomorrow afternoon.

It was brought out that the plaintiff and the defendant had had a wordy contest in which both became very angry. The defendant claimed she used the weapon in self-defense.

New Package Freighter.

The Lake Erie & Western Transportation company, known as the Anchor line, has commissioned the Detroit Drydock company to construct another package freighter, which will be put on the Duluth-Buffalo route about next August. The boat will be similar to the steamer Muncy in size and construction. It will be 372 feet long, 48 feet beam, and will have a carrying capacity of about 5,000 tons. The name has not yet been announced.

N. D. Farmer Bankrupt.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sievert Williamson, a farmer of Otter Creek, Oliver county, has filed with Clerk Montgomery of the United States district court a petition that he be adjudged bankrupt. He places his liabilities at $2,642.65 and his assets at $1,430, of which he claims $225 to be exempt.

TO ILLUMINATE FIRST STREET

Ornamental Lamps May be Used for the Purpose.

As a means to the development of First street as a business thoroughfare, interested property owners are promoting a plan of street lighting, something on the plan of the lighting used on Sixth street in St. Paul.

The plan suggested is the erection of ornamental standards at intervals of fifty feet along several blocks on West First street. The standards would be surmounted by five 100-watt Tungsten lamps, and the result would tend to make the street almost as light at night as in the daytime.

The cost would be considerable. The foundry cost of each standard would be about $85 and the maintenance cost about $90 a year, but those interested believe that the result would justify the expenditure. First street is believed to be the coming business street of the city, and the lighting project, it is claimed, would attract the attention of business interests to the possibilities of the street.

FIVE STORIES TO WOLVIN BUILDING

Additional Office Space for the Steel Corporation.

The rumors which have been rife for some time regarding an addition to the Wolvin building, have taken form, and plans are now being made for a a five-story addition to the big home of the United States Steel corporation on the corner of Third avenue west and First street.

The State Life Insurance company of Worcester, Mass, is the owner of the building and W. M. Prindle & Co. are the local agents. W. A. Hunt is preparing the plans for the addition, and work will be begun as soon as they are perfected and accepted.

The Wolvin building has been badly crowded for some time and the advent of the steel plant will create a necessity for greatly enlarged office space to accommodate that branch of the Steel corporation's operations. It is expected the five additional stories will provide all the space necessary. The Wolvin building now has seven stories above the street, and the addition will make it the highest building in the city, with the possible exception of the Torrey building, which is also twelve stories.

TRIED TO ROB PROSECUTOR

Nervy Burglars Visit the Home of Assistant County Attorney.

Nervy burglars forced the lock on the front door of the residence of Assistant County Attorney Warren E. Greene of 1620 Jefferson street, during the family's absence, early last evening, but were frightened away by the barking of a pet dog before they had a chance to take anything of much value. Some of the lace curtains had been removed from the windows, but it appears that that is as far as the burglars got in their work.

secretary of state, which will also be discussed in the report.

Chairman Tawney, Minnesota, of the house committee on appropriations, is exerting his best endeavors to prevent general debate on the sundry civil bill, and so far with fair prospect of success. Representative Rainey of Illinois is anxious to find opportunity to make reply to the critics of his Panama canal speech, and is pleading for recognition, while the sundry bill is under consideration. Indicatons are that he will speak tomorrow.

Differences of Opinion.

Whether any debate on general subjects is allowed on the sundry civil bill it will, in itself, be made the subject of much discussion, as there are many provisions in it on which there are sharp differences of opinion, including those relating to the secret service, Panama canal and immigration. It is expected that the general deficiency bill will be ready for consideration by the house when the sundry civil bill is disposed of.

Undoubtedly the house will be able, before the close of the session, to dispose of all the appropriation bills. During the last week the senate put behind the postoffice, the naval, the pension, the army and the Indian bills, and it will be prepared to go on this week with the diplomatic and consular, the agricultural and other appropriation bills, as they may be reported from the committees, so that unless there should be unusual obstructions, that body will also be able to conclude this important portion of its business before the fourth of March.

Apparently the prospect of obstruction is not so great as it was, for Mr. La Follette and his insurgent following have shown little or no disposition during the last few days to stand in the way of the progress of these measures. Indeed, it is generally understood that some of the senators that have stood with Mr. La Follette, have fallen away from him and he himself has manifested less belligerency since his encounter with Senator Penrose on the postoffice appropriation bill.

If this attitude is maintained, there is little doubt that all of the supply measures, with the possible exception of the river and harbor bill, which is already through the house, will be passed long enough before March 4 to permit a final agreement on all of them before the close of the session. There is a probability that the rivers and habros bill may meet the sad fate of being talked to death.

Negro Issue Again.

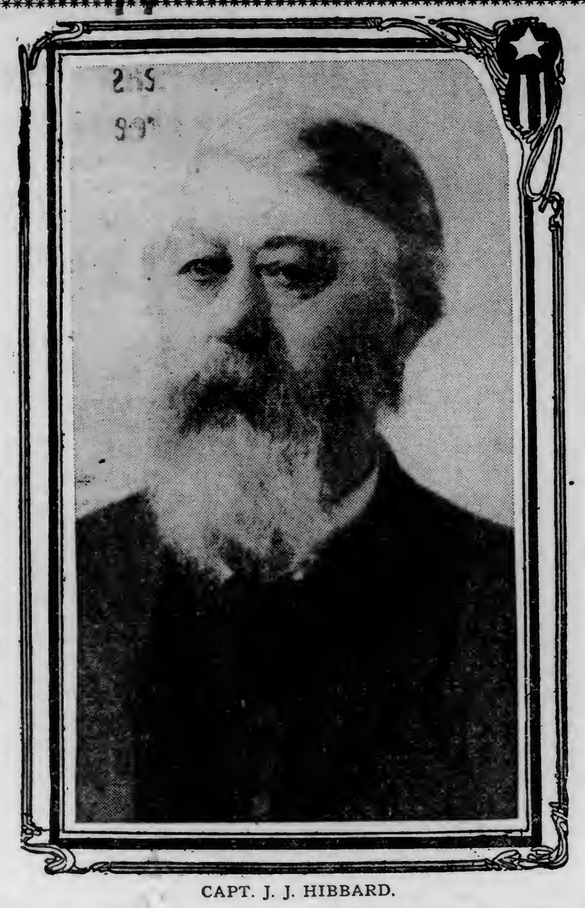

In addition to the appropriation bills, the senate will tomorrow consider and vote on the bill providing for the reenlistment of the negro soldiers who were discharged on account of the Brownsville riot, and Saturday will be given up entirely to eulogies to members of congress who have recently died. The entire day tomorrow will be given to the Brownsville bill.

There will be a strong effort to get the Arizona and New Mexico statehood bill out of the committee, with the hope of passing it during the last days of the session, but the present outlook is not promising.

Senators William Boyd Allison of Iowa and Asbury Churchill Latimer of South Carolina and Representative Ariosto Wiley were eulogized in a special session of the house of representatives yesterday. There were thirty-three speakers. The most interesting of the eulogies were those on Senator Allison.

Speaker Cannon, who does not usually appear in the house when eulogies are delivered, spoke on the deceased senator from Iowa, saying that he did not want to let the opportunity pass to say a word about him.

CAPT J. J. HIBBARD, PIONEER CITIZEN, PASSES AWAY

CAPT. J. J. HIBBARD.

Capt. J. J. Hibbard, for fifty years a resident at the Head of the Lakes, died yesterday at the age of 78 years, at his home, 418 Second avenue east, of Bright's disease. He is survived by a widow and two children, Edward J. Hibbard of Duluth, and Mrs. Inez Sisler of Seattle, Wash., who was at her father's bedside when he died, having been apprised of his critical illness in time to reach the city before the end came. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from the residence, and interment will be at Superior.

When he first came to this region, Capt. Hibbard took up his residence in Superior, later removing to Duluth. In the early days he was engaged in the cattle business, driving cattle from the Twin Cities to Duluth, for that was before the building of connecting railroads, and travel between the two points was by stage. After he came to Duluth he engaged at different times in boat construction, saw mill business and different lines of industry. He owned quite a lot of Duluth real estate, which has greatly increased in value since he purchased it. The captain's health had been failing for the past two months, and hope of recovery was given up a week ago. The deceased was born in New York.

to say in the way of rebuttal, and it is expected that Former State Auditor Robert C. Dunn of Princeton, an old-time and consistent opponent of the tonnage tax system, will appear in opposition to the Bjorge bill.

This will probably conclude the hearings on the bill, and soon after the scene of conflict will be transferred to the floor of the house. The committee is likely to take action on the bill this week, and in that event the measure will probably be made a special order in the house for some day in the near future.

Predictions of legislative action, like predictions of jury decisions, are always risky, but there is every reason to believe that the bill will be voted down in the house, and that by a decisive majority. There has been nowhere near so much agitation for a tonnage tax bill as there was two years ago, and there is reason enough for the change. Then, obviously, the mines were not paying enough taxes. Now their taxes have been trebled, and it is very evident that, the way to do it having been discovered, if they are not paying enough taxes yet, the amount of their contribution to the expenses of governing the state can be increased in the same manner in which the tax commission raised the state tax upon the iron mines from $212,000 in 1906 to $650,000 in 1907.

Besides, there was two years ago, not only throughout the state, but in Duluth, a feeling that justice was not being done so long as the greater part of the iron ore mined in Minnesota was being shipped out of the state to be worked up into manufactured products in other states. Now the United States Steel corporation has agreed to build an immense manufacturing plant at Duluth, its plans are well advanced, and there is every assurance that by the time the market is ready to absorb the product of a steel plant at Duluth, there will be at Duluth a splendid, modern steel plant employing thousands of men and adding many thousands of consumers to the population of Minnesota.

The increase of the taxes upon the iron mines, coupled with the knowledge that if they are not now high enough they can easily be increased in the same way, and the promise of a steel plant at Duluth, coupled with the knowledge that this one great plant will be followed by others, as the case has been in every other instance of the sort, have taken the foundations out from under the tonnage tax agitation.

There are a few members of the house who, admitting that the tonnage tax is wrong economically, unjust to a section of the state that needs help instead of discouragement, and dangerous because of the uncertainty of its legality and the unreliability of the revenue it will produce, say that they must vote for the bill because they believe the people in their districts demand it. As to this, it is inconceivable that the people of this state, or of any part of this state, demand anything that is wrong and unjust. As a matter of fact, there is absolutely no agitation out in the state for a tonnage tax. It did not been for the wifely vim of Joel P. Heatwole, who through his Northfield News has kept up a constant hullaballoo about the tonnage tax, the phrase would almost be forgotten. However, Heatwole's motives are so notoriously selfish, and his present political activities so evidently off the same roll of cloth as his own political history, that his utterances are largely discounted, and their effect almost entirely negligible.

It may be remembered that after the defeat of the tonnage tax bill two years ago, Mr. Heatwole's newspaper predicted defeat for everybody who voted against it. As a matter of fact, there were quite as many of the champions of the bill who were defeated as there were of its opponents, and the list of defeated members included R. H. Jefferson of Bingham Lake, the original tonnage tax champion.

It is a matter of common knowledge that the tonnage tax cut absolutely no figure in the last legislative election, one way or another. This question was raised in the lobby of the Merchants hotel the other evening, when a number of defeated members of the last house were present, and it was generally agreed that the vote on the tonnage tax bill had nothing to do with the result. John T. Lewis and Ezra Gates of Blue Earth county, who were defeated in the last campaign, the former for re-election and the latter for renomination, both stated that they did not hear the matter mentioned during the campaign, and that it had nothing whatever to do with their failure to get back, nor with the defeat of any other members so far as they were aware. Both of them voted against the tonnage tax bill two years ago.

It is worthy of note that not a single petition asking for the passage of the tonnage tax bill has been received by the legislature, and that not a single person has appeared before the tax committee asking for the bill, except its author, Representative Bjorge.

On the other hand, St. Louis county's representatives, headed by Chester A. Congdon, have met argument with argument; have returned three reasons why the tonnage tax plan is bad for every reason offered in its behalf, and by first making it clear that neither they nor anybody else in St. Louis county opposes fair taxation of the iron mines, following this up with lucid proof that the tonnage tax system will do no good, and will certainly accomplish vast harm, have waged a clean, honest, open and effective fight against the proposed tax system, whose shadow has overhung Duluth and Northeastern Minnesota for two years.

This will be a busy week for the house committee on taxes and tax laws. Its chairman, John Dalzell of Morton is urging speedy action on all the revenue measures before the committee, and there will be meetings almost daily until the board is cleared.

Wednesday evening there will be a hearing on the Thayer bill, taxing grain transfers for state purposes, the Mineapolis chamber of commerce having asked the privilege of being heard in opposition to the measure.

Later in the week action will be taken on the Spooner bill, increasing the railroad gross earnings tax from 4 per cent to 6 per cent. The committee has practically determined to reject the two other railroad tax bills, both of which involve the assessment feature. The bill by Donald Robertson of Argyle increases the tax to 5 per cent, and makes the railroads pay special assessments for local improvements, and the bill by Representative Nimocks of Minneapolis leaves the tax where it is, but makes the railroads pay assessments.

There will be at least two hot fights in the house early in the week, both upon committee reports.

One will be upon the report of the tax committee, favoring the Stuart bill to abolish the tax on mortgages and other credits. With eight members of the committee absent, the bill was recommended for passage, 9 to 8. There will be a minority report when the bill comes in tomorrow, championed by W. A. Nolan of Mower county, and others, recommending the indefinite postponement of the bill. The house is divided on the subject, and it is impossible to predict which report will be adopted. If the minority report prevails, and the bill is killed, the tax committee will take up some of the other pending measures, proposing changes in the mortgage registry tax law that will, their author's hope, make the lender pay the tax, which he refuses to do now.

The other fight will be on the report of the house judiciary committee killing the J. N. Johnson bill providing for the initiative and the referendum. There will be a minority report in favor of the bill, and the house will be called upon to choose between the two. Representative Johnson will make an earnest fight to save his bill, and he will have some support. The probabilities are, however, that the majority report will be adopted, and the bill indefinitely postponed.

Then there will be another merry row on Thursday afternoon, when the house committee on public health will have a public hearing on the St. Paul bill, barring the proposed Armour packing plant from New Brighton. Both cities will be out in force, Minneapolis for the plant and St. Paul against it.

Wednesday the pending automobile bill will be a special order in the house, but they are not likely to arouse much interest. The principal ones before the house are the production of the automobile owners, and the speed regulations they propose are in such vague terms as that no automobiles shall be run at more than a "reasonable" rate of speed, leaving the question of what is a reasonable rate of speed to the drivers, or, perhaps, to the courts.

While the bill asserting the state's right to the minerals underlying the waters of meandered lakes has passed both houses, it is said that tomorrow an attempt will be made in the senate to reconsider the vote by which it was passed, and its opponents assert that they will beat it this time. Its advocates, however, being forewarned, say that they were forearmed and that the original action of the senate will stand. The margin by which the bill was passed was close, and it would not be necessary to change many votes in order to beat the bill.

W. Bills of Park Rapids, one of the most active and influential members of the last house, is in St. Paul renewing his friendships of two years ago. Mr. Bills pulled out of the legislative game in order to attend to his duties as postmaster of Park Rapids, but he has not lost his interest in proceedings, and he is spending a few days looking on at the work of the session. During his legislative experience Mr. Bills was always an earnest and effective champion of Northern Minnesota.

Representative John McGrath of Barnesville will tomorrow offer in the house a bill taxing banks 4 per cent of their gross earnings, in lieu of all other personal property taxes. The banks tax on real estate owned by the banks will remain as it is at present if the bill becomes law. The measure is supported by Senator A. D. Stephens of Crookston, but under the constitution it must originate in the house.

The senate committee on elections has decided to favor the Canfield bill, which abolishes the primary election system and substitutes a convention system with delegates elected at primary elections regulated about as the direct nomination promaries are now. The house committee has taken no action, but has a sub-committee consisting of Representatives Wells, Holten and Dorsey, who are inclined to favor a provision requiring parties to cast at their primary elections 30 per cent of their vote for governor in order to get their candidates on the ticket.

The house tax committee Saturday afternoon briefly considered the Wells bill providing a state tax upon water powers, amounting to 25 cents annually per horsepower. This applies only to developed horsepower, and not to potential horsepower. A water power that has developed 30,000 horsepower would pay $7,500 a year to the state. The bill was referred to a subcommittee consisting of Representatives Wells, Nolan, L. H. Johnson, Wallace and Borgen.

Representative Selb of St. Paul will tomorrow move to reconsider the vote by which the Holten bill, relating to parks, passed the house Saturday. The bill is desired by several communities in Mr. Holten's district, and it passed without opposition before it was discovered that it applies to all cities, including those having park systems already. Under the bill city council can create park boards which have almost unlimited power. They can condemn land for parks, levy special assessments and issue bonds up to 2 per cent of the assessed valuation of the city.

Even if the bill should pass, however, it will be preceded by a bill offered by Representative Congdon of Duluth, which provides that measures affecting cities, shall not apply to cities with home rule charters, unless the bills specifically include such cities. This measure, which will pass, would prevent the Holten bill from applying to Duluth.

yet commenced this fight. I have only trained my guns on some of the least objectionable features in connection with the Panama matters."

Attacks Only Graft.

Rainey declared that he did not attack the canal, but simply attacked the graft connected with the enterprise. He asserted that Representative Lovering had not attempted to deny a single fact he had stated, but after making his charges, proceeded to eulogize William Nelson Cromwell. "I never heard until he made his speech, that any persons were trying to get Mr. Cromwell to purchase any alleged evidence of the guilt of Mr. Cromwell," he said. "I knew nothing of any attempts to sell any story to the Democratic national committee until the gentleman made his speech on this floor."

Rainey further stated that the evidence he produced in support of his charge of graft in connection with the buying of the canal, nearly all was obtained in Panama.

"The attack I made was entirely unexpected, and the next attack I make upon these gentlemen will be just as entirely unexpected by them when it comes. Mr. Cromwell, in the speech made by him through Mr. Olcott, has seen fit to discuss his present efforts to conclude a treaty between Colombia and Panama, in which he refers to the necessity for some contribution from Panama to Colombia as her proportion to the public debt of Colombia."

"Proposed Treaties."

Referring to these as the "proposed Cromwell treaties," Rainey asserted that Cromwell proposes to so change the Hay-Bunau-Parilla treaty as to impose upon this country an additional burden of $1,250,000, "and he proposes this sum shall be taken from the treasury and paid, not to Panama, but to Colombia. In addition to that, he proposes that for five years after 1913 the $250,000 we agreed to pay Panama shall be paid to Colombia direct.

"In other words, by the treaties of which he is so proud, Panama deprives herself for five years of her fixed course of revenue and consents that it be paid to Colombia, and the United States contributes from its treasury $1,250,000 and pays it to the treasury of Colombia. I know of no precedent for Cromwell's treaties. No people in the world, after having successfully conquered a revolution, have been called upon to pay any portion of the debt, foreign or domestic, of the country from which they separated.

"The situation Mr. Cromwell is endeavoring to force by the treaties is that the United States is to be required to increase its treasury deficit and to pay Colombia $1,250,000; Panama impoverishing herself by giving up the said $1,250,000 clearly belonging to her and gives up for five years, after 1913, the revenue we propose to pay her. In return for this Panama are to be admitted to there lucrative positions on the canal zone in our service and, ultimately, in order to permit Panama to recoup losses on account of the Cromwell treaties, she is to be permitted to levy taxes upon the army of Americans and the other employes who have been sent to the isthmus for the purpose of building the canal."

"These treaties," continued Mr. Rainey, "have already been approved by the administration in this country. It remains to be seen whether they will be ratified by the general assembly of Panama and by the senate of the United States.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

THE LEAGUE IS FORMED

Minneapolis and St. Paul Not Yet Included, However.

John A. Elliott of La Crosse Chosen President, Kuehnow Vice President.

St. Paul, Minn., Fev. 22.—The Minnesota-Wisconsin Baseball league is now an established fact. It was organized yesterday at a meeting of representatives of the six cities which will have clubs in the league, held at the Ryan hotel. Officers were elected, and the general laws for the league for the season arranged.

Whether St. Paul and Minneapolis will ultimately be represented in the league is still uncertain, although all hope of effecting such an arrangement has not been given up. If satisfactory arrangements can be made for securing clubs in those two cities, the membership will be increased to eight teams.

As organized yesterday, the league will consist of teams in La Crosse, Eau Claire, Wausau and Superior, in Wisconsin, and Duluth, and Winona, in Minnesota. La Crosse, Wausau and Eau Claire had teams in the Wisconsin-Illinois league last year. With these towns represented in the league, its success, the promoters believe, is assured, although they still have hopes of strengthening it by adding the Twin Cities to the list.

The efforts of those behind the movement to secure the consent of the other leagues in organized baseball to allow the new league to enter the field of the American association in the Twin Cities having failed, the league will have to be independent of the general organization if the Twin Cities are added. If this is done, the management expects to be able to effect agreements with the other leagues, so that all trouble will be avoided, and the new league will not really be in the outlaw class.

The salary limit, exclusive of managers, was fixed at $1,300. The season will open on May 13 and close about Sept. 7, allowing for 110 games.

The following officers were elected: President and secretary, John A. Elliott, La Crosse; vice president, A. W. Kuehnow, Duluth; treasurer, John A. Borth, Winona; executive committee, E. M. Fish, Eau Claire; W. R. Bryan, Wausau, and Fred Russell, Superior.

President Elliott left last night for Superior, where he will look after the interests of the new league at the Head of the Lakes cities, returning to St. Paul Tuesday, when he probably will continue negotiations for locating teams in the Twin Cities.

BURNAM WINS IN HIS BUICK

Also Breaks Hundred-Mile Record on a Circular Track.

New Orleans, Fla., Feb. 22.—Robert Burnam, in his Buick car yesterday, broke the world's record for 100 miles on a circular track, in the feature event of the second day of the Mardi Gras speed carnival. Burnam made the distance in 1:42:39 2-5, this being over eleven minutes faster than the previous record made by Clemens in Indianapolis in 1905.

There were six other races, all of which were for short distances.

The weather was cloudy, but the track was in almost perfect condition. Fully 10,000 people were in attendance.

In the first race, Jimmy Ryall, in his Matheson car, made too wide a turn at the beginning of the stretch and, losing control of his car, it ran into the fence. The machine was demolished beyond repair. Ryall escaped, which was remarkable, as he was traveling a mile a minute at the time. The world's woman's record for one mile, on a circular track, was broken by two and one-fifth seconds, in the sixth race, by Mrs. Joan Cunoe, her time being 1:00 1-5.

Mrs. Cunoe drove a remarkable race in this event, her driving around curves causing great excitement.

AFTER PRIZE MONEY

THE CENTRAL BOWLING TEAM.
Which Will Go to the State Tournament in St. Paul.

WILL PLAY THREE HOCKEY GAMES

Directors Decide to Have Only Two Teams in Finals.

At the meeting of the directors of the Amateur Hockey league, held at the store of the Northern Hardware company Sunday, it was decided to play a series of three games before the series of the three contests for the possession of the pennant is played.

Tuesday evening the Bryants will meet the Lester Park team, Friday the Lester Park team will meet the Northerns, and the following Tuesday the Bryants and the Northerns will come together.

After these games are played off, the two teams having the highest average will play a series of three games for the championship. If the weather is too warm by the tme for play, the team with the highest average will be declared the winner.

The three teams are now tied for first place in the league, and there is much interest as to the outcome. The teams seem to be very evenly matched.

Bonnesita and the Kid Are Winners in Two Events.

Bonnesita, driven by W. G. Shive, took first in the free-or-all class Saturday afternoon. The Kid, owned by C. R. Rust, took first place in the green class.

The matinee was the most successful pulled off this year by Duluth horsemen and quite a crowd of enthusiasts witnessed some exciting brushes. The ice was in perfect shape, the day ideal for the sport, and all the owners who had horses entered showed up.

The last heat in the free-for-all was the feature of the afternoon's entertainment. Tomango, who captured secon place, led all the way to withiin fifty feet of the finish, when Bonnesita came swiftly up from behind and nosed out a win by a few feet.

Bumble Bee, owned by Totman and driven by Phillips, started in the first heat, but met with an accident and did not enter again.

The 2:20 event would have been started had there been time. This event will be run off next Saturday.

The summary of the races follows:

The game was the best witnessed this year and required only thirteen innings. Both men had high runs, and the large crowd present showed their appreciation.

Canfield will accompany the bowlers to St. Paul and will play a number of games with pool experts of that city while there.

CLARK TO START POWDER CONCERN

Will Operate in California With Capital of $3,000,000.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 22.—Backed by the interests headed by Senator William A. Clark of Montana, a powder manufacturing company, beginning operations with a capital of $3,000,000, will shortly erect a plant in one of the bay counties and engage in active competition with the powder trust, according to a statement made in this city. Associated in the enterprise, it is said, will be John Birmingham, formerly general manager of the Du Pont-Nemoours Powder company; J. A. Folger, head of a local mercantile concern, and Former State Senator Charles M. Belshaw. The plant, it is believed, will be located in the vicinity of Antioch.

The powder trust operates numerous factories in this state and several of these are located on the shores of San Francisco Bay. It is stated that although the government is a large manufacturer of powder for its own use, it purchases 95 per cent of its explosives from the trust. It is the plan of the Clark company to compete for this business and to erect other plants as the business requires.

The operations of the company will be under the personal direction of Mr. Birmingham.

ORATORY FLOWS.

The Japanese Immigration Problem Thoroughly Discussed by Club.

Sixteen eloquent members of the Question club discussed the Japanese immigration question in the municipal courtroom yesterday afternoon, and after every member present had given his views on the question, no decision was reached. There was oratory strewn around sufficient to settle four or five questions, though, and everybody was satisfied. The club will meet at the co-operative store, 2423 West Superior street, next Sunday afternoon, and on the following Sunday, "Is Government by Commission Advisable," will be the subject for discussion at a meeting to be held in the municipal court room.

RICH GOLD DISCOVERY IN THE RAINY LAKE COUNTRY

Dike At Least 150 Feet Wide That Pans Free Gold Clear Across.

Mine Center, Ont., Feb. 22.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the richest gold discoveries ever known in Canada has just been made at Glenorchy station, east of here, by "Australia" Stone. With his son he has located a dike at least 150 feet wide than pans free gold clear across. One find assays $247 per ton and another $136 per ton. Ground is being staked for miles, gold seekers are rushing in and great excitement prevails.

"Australia" Stone has mined and prospected in Australia, South Africa and Alaska and Canada. He came to the Rainy River district of Ontario a dozen years ago. After the decline in mining in this district in 1900, he went to Alaska, but came back here last season. Concerning this rich discovery, he expressed himself as follows to The Herald's correspondent:

"This is the greatest strike I ever made. I have seen very few made by any one that would beat it. No country can surpass some of the free gold specimens I am finding. The gold values are in a dike, which we traced for over a mile. Across the gold-bearing formation for a distance of 150 feet I made forty-seven pannings and every one showed free gold. Some of the gold was very coarse and the quantity in some of the pannings was amazing, even to an old prospector. In places you can see nuggets of gold sticking out of the rock when you strip off the frozen moss. On my best claim I secured $247 from an assay of an average sample. My son took an average sample on his ground and secured an assay of $136 per ton in gold. We have sent some samples East for further assay and, when the snow leaves, we propose to ship a carload to the States for treatment. We do not yet know just how wide the dike is and will be unable to tell until we strip off more moss, dirt and timber. We do know that it is 150 feet wide.

"I never have lost faith in the 'Rainy Lake country,'" continued Mr. Stone, "and this rich find is my reward for my confidence. I believe that this region offers surer, safer and quicker returns for mining capital than most of the new silver districts from Sudbury to Cobalt. Experienced mining capitalists in New York, whom I represented in Alaska, advise me that they will furnish all the capital I need, and heavy development work will be started in the spring."

Glenorchy station is a few miles east of Mine Center station, on the Canadian Northern railway. The discovery was made near Little Turtle river, and has been traced southward across the railway track. The country is being staked on the snow for miles. This discovery is not so very far from the Alice A., Emma Abbott, Goldbug, Pittsburg Girl, "Goldbug Jimmy's" Little Turtle Home and other mines that were prominent, popular and more or less developed in the activity ten years ago.

Among those who have staked valuable claims are the following: Maj. W. A. Preston, M.P.P.; Don Mackenzie, Thomas Wilson and Capt. Crusoe of Fort Francis; Dr. Bethune of Emo, Capt. Tom Prideaux, Dan Sinclair, James Cormack, Louis Hamel and Capt. McBeth of Mine Center.

Don Mackenzie and associates of Fort Frances, have staked a townsite at Glenorchy, and ordered an official survey. They soon will have town lots on the market. A hotel is projected for the first improvement. The promoters of this enterprise declare that, within a year Glenorchy will have more population than any town between Port Arthur and Winnipeg.

The local belief is that this rich discovery will do much to encourage a revival of mining in the "Rainy Lake country," and that with improved facilities accompanying the railroad, new men of experience, with ample capital, some great successes can be made.

CHINESE IN SEALED BOX CAR, GAIN ENTRANCE TO THE UNITED STATES

San Luis Obispo, Cal., Feb. 22.—A plan to smuggle aliens into this country has been unearthed by the discovery of twenty-two Chinese in a box car in this city. The most peculiar feature of the discovery was that the Celestials were in a bonded car, sealed with the government stamp. The car was billed from Algiers, a town near New Orleans, where it left Feb. 10, and was billed to San Francisco. Owing to numerous landslides and washouts, the car was delayed on the coast division of the Southern Pacific.

While passing the car conductors heard voices in it. In response to a question, who was in the car, he received an offer of $2 for a bucket of water, in the pigeon English of the Chinese. The sheriff's officer was notified, the seals broken, and twenty-two half starved Chinese taken out. All had large canteens, which during the long journey had been drained of every drop of water. One of them stated that they had crossed the Mexican border, at El Paso, but refused to give any further information. They were placed in jail, and are held awaiting the arrival of immigration inspectors from San Francisco.

AUTO ROAD TO BAYFIELD

Commercial Club of That City Is Behind the Plan.

Claimed That Road Could be Built at Small Expense.

An automobile road along the south shore of Lake Superior, from the Head of the Lakes to Bayfield, Wis., is a possibility.

The Bayfield Commercial club is trying to interest Duluth and Superior enthusiasts in the project, and claims the plan is looked upon with favor. The arugment is also set forth in Superior, that the road would open up a route for farmers along the shore who wish to dispose of their produce in that city.

It is said this also applies to Duluth, although to a more limited extent, and because Duluth is not so greatly intersted in the Northern Wisconsin farmer as Superior, the only argument thus far advanced on this side of the bay has been presented to automobilists.

Duluth autoists have been handicapped thus far by a lack of suitable country roads, and therefore are displaying an interest in the new scheme, for if ever pushed through, the proposed road would offer one of the finest automobile driveways in the Middle West. It is contended that the expense would be comparatively light, for the road would closely follow the lake shore almost the entire distance, and little clearing of trees and stumps would be necessary.

Unlike the north side of Lake Superior, the south shore is low and flat, although not swampy in character, and it is said that for a considerable portion of the distance the road could run along within a few yards of the water, on a strip of land already adapted to traffic. The Bayfield Commercial club has taken the trouble to have a committee traverse the route with a team, and according to the report of this committee, there are several roads which could be utilized in connection with the new route, and these, with the strips of beach adapted to teams and automobiles, would hold the cost of the improvement to a minimum.

From Duluth to Bayfield is about ninety miles, and with a good road the trip would be a very pleasant one for automobiles. Scenically the ride would beat anything offered in the state, aside from short drives, like Duluth's boulevard. Already a number of Duluthians either own their own camps in the Apostle islands, just off the mainland from Bayfield, or else they are patrons of some of the popular summer resorts there, and these resorts would furnish an objective point for the autoists. If the road could be brought to a proper state of perfection, it might develop into one of the most famous speedways in the West.

The project has reached no very advanced stage as yet, but the Bayfield Commercial club is doing all it can to arouse the necessary interest in the plan, and hope to secure Wisconsin state aid, in addition to any assistance that may be rendered by Duluth and Superior. Of course, Duluth can not be expected to bear any considerable portion of the expense. It would be stood for the most part by that section of Northern Wisconsin which would be directly benefited by the improvement, but backers of the scheme, working on the theory that every little bit helps, feel that by getting Duluth automoblie owners interested, they wil stand just that much better chance of carrying the plan through.

F. N. Lang, a Bayfield real estate man, representing the Commercial club of the Wisconsin town, was in the city last week, and interviewed local automobile owners in regard to the plan. They were agreed that a road of the kind projected would be largely used by Duluth auto men, and expressed a willingness to do what they could to help the scheme along.

RAIL PRICE TO BE LET ALONE

Report Says It Will Not be Reduced at Present.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 22.—The decision of the United States Steel corporation to maintain an open market will have no effect on the price of steel rails, it is said here. The assertion is made that the United States Steel corporation, the Pennsylvania Steel company, the Cambria Steel company, the Bethlehem Steel company and the Lackawanna Steel company have entered into an agreement not to cut prices on steel rails and with this understanding there will be no cut by other manufactures.

That the United States Steel corporation is seeking eagerly for other business is shown by the instructions said to have been sent to all its sales agents throughout the country, telling them to get orders. The whole country will be scoured, it is said, and every effort made to capture business. The orders booked by the Carnegie Steel company, a branch of the United States Steel corporation, are said to have almost equalled those for the entire year of 1908.

Included in these orders was one said to have been from St. Louis for 10,000 tons of merchant bars at $24 a ton, or a cut of $4 a ton from prices previously prevailing. Another big order came from Buffalo and several from the West at prices not given out.

The plans adopted by the Steel corporation in going after business are the same adopted by Andrew Carnegie in 1897, and the independents, seeing this, are said to be much alarmed, not having forgotten the outcome of Carnegie's policy at that time.

NORWAY ARRANGES FOR SPITZBERGEN CONFERENCE TO BE HELD THURSDAY

London, Feb. 22.—The conference of the powers in reference to the control of Spitzbergen has now been definitely fixed to meet in Christiana Thursday. Delegates will attend from America, Great Britain, Germany, France, Russia, Sweden and Norway.

The Russian government, which has taken the initiative in the present conferences, desires to safeguard by international agreement the rights of the Norwegian fishermen in Spitzbergen. Norwegian fishermen and huntsmen for a long time enjoyed unlimited freedom in following their occupation there, but recently two mining companies, one financed by British and Norwegians and one by American and Norwegian capital, began operations in Advent Bay. Both annexed extensive areas of land and have prohibited Norwegian fishermen and huntsmen from trespassing on this territory. A Norwegian company has annexed a large area of land near Green Harbor, upon which are coal fields and further annexations by private syndicates are planned for the immediate future.

In view of annexation of large tracts of lands by private syndicates, it is considered necessary to decide to whom the country really belongs and how the rights of the subjects of other nations shall be safeguarded. If Norway lays claim to the possession of Spitzbergen by virtue of prior rights of the Norwegian fishermen and huntsmen, it is practically certain that Sweden will raise a counter claim on the ground that Swedish scientific expeditions have been mainly instrumental in opening Spitzbergen to the outside world.

LAWMAKERS URGE MOB

South Omahans Seek Vengeance Upon Greeks for Murder.

Thirty Buildings Destroyed and Score of Persons Injured.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 22.—Following a harangue at a mass meeting at the city hall in South Omaha, in which two members of the state legislature and an attorney were the principal speakers, a wild mob of 800 to 1,000 men started for the Greek quarter to avenge the death of Patrolman Edward Lowry, who was shot and killed Friday night by a Greek, whom he had placed under arrest.

From mid-afternoon yesterday until far into the night, South Omaha was the scene of rioting, assault and pillage. More than thirty buildings were destroyed, burned or badly damaged and nearly a score of persons injured, half that number seriously. By heroic work, the police have prevented actual loss of life, and at midnight it was the general opinion that the worst of the affair was over.

Saturday, a petition was circulated in South Omaha, and signed by hundreds of citizens, setting forth that a large number of Greek residents of the place were of the undesirable class and calling a mass meeting at the city holl for Sunday afternoon, to discuss methods of ridding the city of them.

More than 1,000 attended the meeting, which was addressed by men of prominence, including two members of the state legislature. Some of the speeches were heated, and when the meeting ended, a large portion of the crowd started out with the intention of carrying out the suggestion of the speakers in the most summary manner.

The South Omaha police force, though small, responded valiantly to the demands upon its resources. Sheriff Bralley of Douglas county was called upon and went to the scene with a number of deputies, but their combined efforts were insufficient for many hours to prevent the destruction of the property of the Greeks and assaults upon the owners. In few instances was there any show of resistance.

Early in the evening, a call was made upon the police of Omaha for aid, but after consideration, the department decided not to send policemen to the scene of the trouble. Governor Shellenberger was consulted and expresed a willingness to call out the troops if necessary.

WOMAN SLAIN; FIRE PLANNED

Arrival of Neighbor Who Discovers Body Prevents Blaze.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 22.—Mrs. F. Richard, aged 68, of 525 Alexandrine avenue east, was found murdered in her home yesterday. Near the body where it lay on the floor, with a large blood-covered butcher knife beneath it, was a lighted lamp, with a piece of paper over the chimney, so arranged that it would take fire and ignite the bed clothing. The timely visit of a neighbor, who discovered the crime, prevented a blaze.

Frank Bialk, aged 22, is locked up charged with the murder, and another youth, who is said to have been with Bialk at the woman's house, is also held.

THE RECORD AUTO RUN.

Fastest Time Ever Made Across Continent Was Fifteen Days.

To the Editor of The Herald:

In Thursday evening's Herald I noticed an article in which you commented on the fact that there was to be an automobile race "from coast to coast" next spring.

If I remember correctly the article stated that all motorists and intending buyers of cars were greatly interested in knowing whether a car could travel the 4,000 miles across country under all conditions of roads and weather—and do it successfully.

I wish to call your attention to the fact that in August, 1905, a six cylinder Franklin motor car made the trip from San Francisco to New York in fifteen days, two hours and twelve minutes; making a new record across the continent.

Previous to this time only seven other cars ever crossed the American continent on their wheels. Of the six who tried for a speed record one crossed in sixty-three days; another in sixty-one; another crossed in seventy-two days, and twice again in forty-four days and forty-eight days; the four cylinder Franklin in thirty-three days, and the six cylinder Franklin in fifteen days. This last record has never since been beaten.

S.S.S. DRIVES OUT RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is in reality an internal inflammation—a diseased condition of the blood cells which supply the nourishment and strength necessary to sustain our bodies. Uric acid, an irritating, inflammatory accumulation, gets into the circulation because of physical irregularities, and then instead of nourishing and invigorating the body, the blood irritates and inflames the different nerves, tissues, muscles and joints, because of its impure, acrid condition. The pains and aches and other disagreeable and dangerous symptoms of Rheumatism can never be permanently cured until every particle of the cause is driven from the blood. S. S. S. does this because it is a perfect blood purifier. It goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, purifies and cleanses the circulation, invigorates the blood, and completely drives Rheumatism from the system. Plasters, liniments, soothing lotions, etc., may be used for the temporary relief and comfort they bring, but a cure cannot be effected until S. S. S. has removed the cause. It frees the blood of every impurity and makes it a rich, health sustaining fluid, to bring permanent relief and comfort to those who suffer with Rheumatism. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice free to all who write.

MAY FLAX A CLIMBER

Bulges 45 5-8 Cents in Little More Than Four Months.

Patten Is Pained That His Operations Are Called "Cornering."

Since Oct. 16 last the price of May flax in the Duluth market—incidentally, the biggest flax market in the world—has advanced just exactly 45⅝ cents.

On Oct. 16, May flax sold at $1.23¾, the lowest price for this crop, and a short time before the closing gong terminated the Saturday session in the Duluth pit, the same option was traded in here at $1.69⅜. This price is the highest yet for this crop and one of the higest levels flax has seen anywhere in several years.

The sentiment toward flax has been distinctly bullish for months. The trade was told before navigation had really closed that supplies of the seed still in the hands of farmers and country elevators were small.

There is no longer any doubt of that, and traders insist that every rise in flax has been justified by legitimate conditions. Flax is a strange-acting commodity at times, however, and those in the market are forever on the qui vive against a 5 or 6 point reaction in fewer minutes. Flax does such things at times.

Crushing interests, the biggest buyers of the seed, are said to be very long on flax and if they should decide suddenly to sell and the market was a bit unprepared, there might be something doing.

"Jim" Patten, the big Chicago bull, who is said to be long 15,000,000 bushels of wheat, and whose activity has been largely responsible for the sensational rise in Chicago May wheat, is plained that his attitude in the market now should be compared with the efforts of Leiter and some of those who, in the past, have tried to "corner" wheat.

Mr. Patten is out with a statement saying that he is not trying to force wheat higher than its legitimate value, and that he bought so much wheat because he thought it would be worth more money on the legitimate supply and demand basis.

"If wheat is not worth the money it is selling for, I do not want to hold it up," he says in a statement given to a Minneapolis paper.

"I was offered 2,000,000 bushels of wheat that was in elevators in North Dakota in the Soo Line territory," says he, "and was told that it was the only big lot left there. I did not buy it. Leiter made that mistake and lost. I am not going to do it. They say that if I do not buy that wheat they will ship it to Chicago. I am not going to buy any wheat to keep it from coming to Minneapolis or Chicago. Let them ship it."

Mr. Patten describes his operations not as a speculation, but as a mathematical calculation, based upon how much wheat the country raised last year, how much is left, what will be needed for consumption before another crop is raised and what he estimates European requirements will be.

In the past, the cornering of the wheat market has been a nerve-racking, strenuous pastime indulged in by few millionaires and never with successful results.

Perhaps the attempt of Joseph Leiter to garner the country's crop was the most spectacular. It took place in 1898 and at times gave promise of being a most successful affair. But when Leiter thought he had success and all of the wheat in this broad land in his grasp, the deluge came. It knocked his "corner" sky high and left him broke.

The Gates corner lacked some of the melodramatic color furnished by the Leiter production, but it was in the spotlight for a time. It was the year after the "rust" played havoc with the crop, 1905. It was also unsuccessful.

The unsuccessful attempt of Leiter to corner wheat is said to have given the late Frank Norris his inspiration for the novel, "The Pit," which was widely read and successfully staged some years ago.

PRESIDENT COMPLETES PLANS FOR TRIP ABROAD

Two Years' Journey, Half of Which Will be Spent in Africa.

Washington, Feb. 22.—All the details have been arranged for the two years' trip abroad of President Roosevelt, half of which will be spent in Africa under the British flag as a fanual naturalist, and the other half in Europe, visiting at least three of the big capitals. At the head of a scientific expedition outfitted by the Smithsonian institution of Washington, he will, with his son, Kermit, and three American naturalists of note—Maj. Edgar A. Mearns, J. Loring Alden and Edmund Heller—make a collection of mammals, birds, reptiles, insects and botanical specimens of Central Africa, which will be deposited in the United States National museum at Washington.

The party leave New York city about the middle of March, going by the Mediterranean route to Gibraltar and Naples. At Naples the members of the expedition will board a steamer of the German East African line for Kilindani harbor, Mombasa Island. They will arrive at the East African port toward the end of April, proceed by the Uganda railway to Nairobi, spend six months there, then continue by rail to Port Florence, Lake Victoria Nyanza, making a total distance of 584 miles by rail. The expedition will cross Uganda by caravan, and, finally pass down the whole length of the Nile, reaching Khartoum about April, 1910. Much of the hunting and specimen collecting will be done in British East Africa, where the Uganda railway will be used as a means of ready transportation from Nairobi, which will be the base of supplies.

At Khartoum, it is expected the president and his son will be joined by Mrs. Roosevelt, who will accompany them on their trip to Europe. The naturalists of the party will proceed direct to the United States from Egypt. Mr. Roosevelt probably will remain in Continental Europt and Great Britain about one year, having accepted invitations to deliver the Romanes lecture at Oxford university, an address at the Sorbonne in Paris, and a lecture before the students of the University of Berlin.

To Be General Manager.

To complete the personnel of the expedition R. J. Cunninghame, an Englishman, was chosen. He is a noted field naturalist and big game hunter and had guided numerous hunting parties in Africa. It was he who was chief hunter and guide of the Field Columbian Museum expedition in Central Africa. Mr. Cuninghame for some months has been employed in assembling the materials for Mr. Roosevelt's use. He will act as general manager of the expedition, guiding the party and taking charge of the native porters. Mr. Cunninghame is an experienced collector of natural specimens and has made collections for the British Museum in Norway and Africa. No better manager for the trip could have been selected because Mr. Cunninghame is thoroughly familiar with every nook and corner of Central Africa and its natives. He spent some time in London purchasing the outfit for the expedition and shipping it to Mombasa. After that had been completed he proceded to British Africa and has been engaged in selecting the natives and animals necessary for the expedition. He will meet the party at Mombasa.

Headquarters at Nairobi.

Upon reaching Kilindini April 21, the party will spend a short time in Mombasa and then proceed by train on the Uganda railway to Nairobi, the capital of Ukamba province and headquarters of the administration of British East Africa Protectorate, a city of 13,514 inhabitants, of whom 579 are Europeans. Nairobi will be used as the headquarters and base of supplies and from there trips will be made into the country thereabouts, which abounds with animals of all kinds. It is in this section that Mr. Roosevelt hopes to do most of his hunting and collecting. Trips, ending from a week to a month in length, will be made in all directions. Supplies and camping outfit will be carried by natives and camps established at various points on the trips. It has been decided that snowcapped Mount Kenia, 18,000 feet high, an extinct volcano near Ndoro, to north of Nairobi, will be the objective point of one of these trips. On Mount Kenia, at a point part way up, one of the field naturalists probably will be stationed for some time in order to collect specimens of all kinds there. The smaller mammals will be caught in traps, an elaborate outfit of which is being taken by the expedition. In fact, these form the heaviest part of the equipment. The supplies of the party are packed in tin-lined boxes. These boxes when they have been emptied will be used as packing cases for the various specimens. Many valuable natural history specimens have been spoiled by ants and other insects, it has been found from experience on other expeditions, and it is to guard against this that the tin-lined boxes are being taken along. When the specimens have been prepared they will be forwarded to the United States. One of the taxidermist will always be with Mr. Roosevelt, and as soon as any big game is shot by him it will be skinned and prepared on the spot.

The Rhinoceros.

Mr. Roosevelt will be greatly disappointed if he fails to kill several specimens of the white rhinoceros. This is the same as the square-mouthed rhinoceros and is the nearest living ally to the type of the extinct tichorine or woolly rhinoceros which lived in England at the close of the glacial period.

No definite arrangements have been made for the six months the party will spend in the territory about Nairobi except that short trips in search of specimens is to be made from there. The president's expedition will not visit Mount Kilimanjaro, on the border between British East Africa and German East Africa. The reason for this is that the National Museum has been receiving a splendid collection of specimens from that locality from Dr. Abbott of Philadelphia, who has been there for some time.

In October the expedition will pack its outfit at Nairobi and continue its journey inland over the Uganda railway to Port Florence on Lake Victoria Nyanza. At that place a short stop will be made and probably a trip will be made to Mount Elgon, seventy-five miles north from there. Mount Elgon is over 14,000 feet in height. When the party again returns to Port Florence it will board a steamer of the railway service which plies about the lake and proceed to Entebbe, 150 fifty miles away. It is expected that Entebbe will be reached early in December. At that point a small caravan will be made up from animals and natives which Mr. Cuninghame has specially engaged for the trip across Uganda to the Nile. The first stop after leaving Entebbe will be at Mengo. Then by short stages it will proceed until reaching Kibira on Lake Albert Nyanza. The journey across Uganda is expected to take not more than a month and the expedition should strike the White Nile about the first of the year 1910.

The Battery of Guns.

Of the greatest importance is the battery of guns which Mr. Roosevelt will carry along with him. Since it became known that he intended to make a hunting expedition into Africa, many of his friends have presented him with guns. But he did not select any of these to take with him on his trip. Instead, he had made specially for him by one of the best American gun manufacturers four different types of rifles, each having a special use. The first of these is a powerful rifle of .405 caliber, carrying a 300-grain bullet, and is intended for the very largest type of African game, such as the rhinoceros, hippopotamus and elephant. Smokeless powder is used, and its power can be measured by the fact that the bullet at the time of impact has an energy of 3,500-foot pounds. The second rifle is known as the new 30 United States government rimless cartridge type, carrying a 200-grain bullet, and is fitted to kill very large game at a range of from 500 to 1,000 yards. This will be the lion gun. The third rifle is an extra light weapon, carrying a 45.70 cartridge, with its most effective range at five yards. It is of .405 caliber. This is the weapon Mr. Roosevelt used considerably in his excursions for big game in western Union States. The fourth rifle is a .400 gun for moderate sized game, carrying a smokeless powder cartridge with a bullet of 170 grains. It also is of a very high power type and has been used by the president on some of his trips. The other members of the party also will be armed with similar guns and will carry revolvers. The principal weapon which will be carried by the naturalists will be a 12-bore gun.

One of the objects of Mr. Roosevelt in making this trip is for the purpose of collecting material for writing several books regarding his experiences.

One point of particular interest in London which, no doubt, Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt will visit, is St. George's church, where they were married in 1886. It is likely that they will be in London on the twenty-fourth anniversary of their wedding.

NEW BUILDING FOR THE BETHEL

Plans are being made by Radcliff & Price, architects, for a new Bethel building, which will be built on lower Lake avenue.

The new building, according to the specifications, will cost approximately $200,000.

A new building, up-to-date in every respect, has long been agitated in Duluth. The old building is disgracefully shabby and out of date, besides being poorly equipped, and the Bethel society's work has broadened and grown so rapidly that it has felt the need of a new home very keenly laately.

The Bird-Eating Spider.

There lives in South America a bird-eating spider which earns its name by occasionally including in its menu some of the brilliantly hued humming birds which frequent the banana and chocolate plantations. Different animals eat strange things, but the human race agrees that for a beverage there is nothing that equals golden grain belt beer in delicacy of flavor and value as a food-tonic. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Duluth branch, Minneapolis Brewing company.

KANSAS TORNADO ENDS SEVEN HUMAN LIVES.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 22.—It is reported that a tornado has partially destroyed the town of Reece, Greenwood county, Kansas, and seven persons are said to have been killed.

Wires are down and details are lacking.

Reece is on the Missouri Pacific, forty miles east of Witchita.

COOKING STEAK.

Chicago News: "It's funny that I never can get a steak cooked at home the way it ought to be cooked," grumbled the married man.

"How ought it to be cooked?" asked his wife. "Perhaps if you would tell me I could see that you had it the way you wanted it."

"Oh, no, you couldn't," said the man. "Not on your life. In the first place, you wouldn't get the steak. You let that butcher send you any old thing that he wants to and then charge you what he likes. A steak ought to be cooked so that a man can get his teeth into it to begin with. The steaks I get you can't saw the knife through the gravy."

"I think you are exaggerating a little, my dear," said the man's wife. "I think we get pretty good steak—considering."

"Considering that it's cut from between the horns," said the married man. "I suppose it is—considering that can tell you the way steak should't be cooked if you want to know. It shouldn't be fried until it's as tough as leather and as dry as dog biscuit and it shouldn't be charred to a cinder on the outside and have a violet streak running through the middle."

"No?" said his wife.

"No," replied the man. "There's no reason why it should be cut as thin as a sheet of wrapping paper, either. Have you told the man you'd like something eatable?"

"No, and I haven't flung it in his face, either," said the man's wife. "It's as good steak as any one could expect for the money. If I remember, it was you who objected to paying more than 30 cents for steak enough for four persons and I've been trying to please you by keeping it down to that. Just look over the bills."

"I don't think I ever made any complaint of the price."

"But you wouldn't be sure, would you? I don't think—I know."

"You always do," said the married man.

"Weren't you going to call up the butcher yourself and tell him that he needn't expect any more orders after such robbery, and didn't I talk and talk to you before I could make you understand that I was attending to that department?"

"I've no doubt you talked," said the married man. "Anyway, it isn't so much the meat as it is the way it's cooked. That's what I was talking about, if you will exercise that phenomenal memory of yours. You can buy the best meat in the world—or any other food—and pay the best prices and then spoil it by not cooking it properly. You know that just as well as I do. A steak ought to be about an inch and a quarter thick and then it ought to be broiled. You spoil a steak when you fry it to begin with."

"I don't," said the lady. "I always have our steak broiled. We never fry it."

"I thought you wanted me to tell you how I liked my steak done. If you don't, of course, I'm wasting time trying to tell you. You want to broil it until it is just cooked through and and a nice rich brown on top. Then you can put a lump of butter on it and season it and—"

"Who was it complained of the amount of butter we used?"

"I suppose I did. I suppose I grudged the pepper and salt, too. I'll take you to a restaurant downtown where they can cook a steak, where it will be brought on juicy and tender and with the flavor in it. It will be an object lesson for you."

"Will it cost 30 cents?" asked the man's wife.

The married man looked at her in disgust. "Oh, you women are logical creatures, aren't you?" he said. "Can't you keep it in your head for five minutes that I was talking about the cooking?"

HAD ITS ADVANTAGES.

Jefferson D. Thompson, the chairman of the Vanderbilt cup commission, was criticising at a dinner in New York a new motor car of rather dubious type.

"Even the advantageous claimed for this car," said Mr. Thompson, "appear dubious to me. Take that vaunted feature, for instance, of excessive lightness."

Mr. Thompson smiled.

"A young lady," he said, "once showed me proudly a very cheap, very light car that she had just bought.

"'Awfully light, isn't it?' said I.

"'Yes,' said she. 'Isn't it splendid! Whenever it breaks down we can always push it home.'"

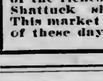

The man who does not advertise because it costs money, should quit paying rent for the same reason.

FEBRUARY 22, 1909.

Saturday night I read the Mining Stock News with a good deal of interest, especially the advertisement on the last page, and also all about the Butte-Balaklava mine. I notice the brokerage firm tells us that you could not buy one claim of the North Butte, which, I suppose, is meant for the Speculator, and consists of only four acres, for $30,000,000, and they then tell us the stock is selling for $75 a share. Why not buy the whole North Butte mine, which consists of probably much over two hundred acres, for you would get it at the same price, figuring $75 a share and then have enough acreage to make 50 mines, for the North Butte claims are all full of vein matter. It is all right to get away up in the air over certain mines, but do not get up on the roof without a ladder to get down on. We also read that the owners of the Flat Iron property refused $1,250,000 cash for their little four hundred and fifty feet of vein matter, and boys, this is surely going some. If this is true, the North Butte mine at this rate would be worth in the neighborhood of $300,000,000, enough money to run the government of the United States for a long time. If these mines are worth so much money, what are the Butte-Montana's mines worth? This company owns twenty-five acres of ground on Butte Hill. These same people who tell of the wealth of Butte Hill try at the same time to make people believe the ground and vein matter only represents value where they wish to say. The Alex Scott has 2,000 feet of vein matter and adjoins the Colusa, the great mine of the Amalgamated, and the drifts are connected, and the Butte-Montana company is now taking ore out from under the Colusa engine-houses, and the next thing, the Alex Scott has more real ore shown up than the Balaklava or the Tuolumne, and if the rich ground of the Alex Scott is not worth more than the shares represent today, then you had better sell every share of stock in Butte companies. The new Alex Scott stock, figuring Butte-Montana at 40 cents, only represents about $2.75 for one share, while Balaklava represents over $20. The Balaklava company has issued at least 225,000 shares, while the Alex Scott will have only 100,000 shares issued.

One thing is absolutely certain; either the Butte-Balaklava is the best sale on the board, or Alex Scott stock is one of the best in the country. There is no choicer piece of ground in Butte than the Butte-Montana's. Ask anyone from that city. These people that try to wreck other properties to build up their own do not gain so much in the wind-up, and this you will find out later on. When the new organization takes hold why should not the Alex Scott stock sell much higher than the Balaklava's? You have less than half as much stock, and just as big a mine, and a title that has been proven perfect, and you should have them go through their records so that you are absolutely safe all around. This one-sided fight is not fair. Many people who bought Butte-Montana did it on my say so, and not one of you can show me where I have made a misstatement. In six months I believe Alex Scott stock will sell at better than $25 a share.

If I have told you the truth about the mine, do you not then think as I do, either the other Butte stocks are selling away too high or Butte-Alex Scott is the best buy on Butte Hill? This mine is much bigger than the East Butte now selling at $2,600,000. My friends who now have sense enough to stick by me are going to make the real big money for the Butte-Alex Scott mine will add about $2,000,000 more to the worth of our city before next Christmas. Remember I do not say that Balaklava is not worth the money, but I do say this, that I will gladly pay the fare of any ten men to Butte, and while there will prove to them that it is impossible for the Balaklava to be much bigger and will also prove to them that the mines with ten shafts such as the Butte-Montana's would be about ten times as big, and when some of these brokers try to make you believe that the Balaklava should sell for ten times its money, that they are simply out of their heads. When they tell you to pay $3,500,000 for a management, and only $400,000 for the mine, Ten Scott mines would reach 5,000 feet and would give you 20,000 feet of vein matter which you could follow even to the Canadian border. To my best friends I say, buy and keep on buying, for one thing is sure, if you do not make big money, then the other fellow will have to lose almost everything he has.

Calumet & Sonora should do better. Mr. Norton is back and says shipments will start in April. The stock is worth more money than it is now selling for.

Copper Queen is doing nicely and closed at $1.62 bid.

Corbin-Hidden Treasure is strong at $2.25 bid. Here is a stock that is tipped for $10. They own 130 acres of the richest ground on Corbin Hill. Shattuck should also be bought. This market will have a big turn one of these days.

THE EVENING STORY

MLLE. ZOE'S LAST CIRCUS TOUR

By Will W. Whalen.

(Copyrighted. All rights reserved.)

Mlle. Zoe had a new lover, the snake-charmer noticed; but what of that? Mlle. Zoe had a lover in every town that the circus reached. It was but natural that men should run after Mlle. Zoe, for wasn't she so radiantly beautiful that she could shine without much polish of cosmetics? The fact of Mlle. Zoe's having the lover was no surprise to the snake-charmer, but the fact of her encouraging him. Other men less susceptible than Ralph Patterson lost their hearts at sight fo Mlle. Zoe.

Now the circus was at Montgomery, but Ralph Patterson, being no laggard in love, had followed Mlle. Zoe there. He sat uow in her dressing apartment, his eyes on her mobile face.

"You ask me to marry me," she said, sweeping her golden pompadour from her white forehead. "Do you realize what that means? There is little virtue on the stage, there is less in the circus. Innocent eyes cannot endure the glare of the footlights from behind! Innocent heads cannot dwell under the circus canvas. And beauty, bah! Soil a dove's wings and I prefer a crow to her."

"You are young to talk that way," he argued.

"Yes, I am young." There was a touch of bitterness in her rich voice. "But despite my years, a man had as well marry my pet tigress, Lady Belle, as me."

"You can leave the circus."

"I had intended to do so before I saw you. This is my last season as lion-tamer; I intend to go on the stage."

"Why not leave both and be my wife? I am not rich, but I can offer you a man's strong love. I will work for you."

"Is a man's love strong? I doubt it." Her dark eyes were cold as she looked into his soft blue eyes. "Perhaps you have said to other women what you are saying to be."

"Marry me, and let me prove my love." His handsome face looked innocent as a boy's.

"You must wait for your answer." She glanced at her watch and arose as a sign of dismisal. "I must perform."

"Is there in this world today a man whom I could love—a man worthy of a woman's love?"

Mlle. Zoe moaned these words piteously into the ear of her pet tigress. Fierce Lady Belle quailed before the fierce fire in the eyes of her mistress.

"Mlle. Zoe must be going to introduce a new act," commented the snake-charmer, laying some blood on her cheeks with her own cunning hand. "I saw her teaching Lady Belle to tear a stuffed figure to pieces—a man's figure with a straw hat on the head; it made my flesh creep all over. I don't see how any man can love a lion-timer."

The circus had remained three days at Montgomery; now it was to leave. Ralph Patterson was again in Mlle. Zoe's dressing apartment, pleading his love, and devouring her beauty with his liquid blue eyes.

"You complain that I keep you in suspense," she said, waving away his caress with the gesture of a queen. "You shall have my answer directly. I ask more from my husband than I can give him. He must be a man to whom I can look up, a man without a past. I am young enough to begin all over again, if the right man helps me. Do you meet my demand?"

The question was abrupt; but Patterson looked as innocent, as boyish as ever, although a man of 30. His face seemed an open book—"conscious of no wrong doing, no crime to pale as rememb

Members of West End Club Fix a Temporary Slide.

Members of the newly organized Zenith Ski club, composed of enthusiasts living in the West end, made jumps of fifty feet and better on an improvised jump prepared yesterday in a natural amphitheater just above the boulevard, near Lincoln park.

A MOZART PROGRAM.

Music of Great Composer Featured at Masonic Free Concert.

A large and very appreciative audience enjoyed the program of the seventeenth free concert given at the Masonic temple yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Scottish Rite of Freemasonry.

Although the instrumental selections were all from one composer, Mozart, his versatility permitted a varied arrangement and the interest was held till the last number. The vocal portion was well represented by the selections of A. R. Bjorkquist, whose pleasing tenor voice and distinct enunciation in connection with an intelligent appreciation of his numbers brought encores to each. The first was Cantor's "O Sweet, O Fair and Holy," which displayed to good advantage the timber and wide range of his voice, and he gave as the encore the beautiful old English song, "Drink To Me Only with Thine Eyes." His second effort was Malloy's favorite love song, "Love's Old Sweet Song," in which an opportunity was given for showing the singer's control of the notes in the middle and upper register. For the second encore, "Dawn," by D'Hardelot, a dainty composition, all too short, was given.

The first organ number was from the "Twelfth Mass," by Mozart, the "Sanctus and Benedictus;" the first section solemn and dignified, expressing worship in its deepest forms; the "Benedictus" soft and sweet, with a tinge of mystery, heralding the climax of the mass with tender melody, ending with a fine "Hosanna." The "Jupiter," is Mozart's most magnificent symphony, embracing massive climaxes and grand movements. The two portions of number three were from "Don Giovanni," the overture being the marvelous product of a single night's work, embracing contrasts of piano and forte, of delicate wood, wind and violin and majestic bass, while in the selections were the celebrated "Minuet" and the duet, "La Ci Darem."

The fifth number consisted of the overture and selections from the "Marriage of Figaro;" the selections embracing much of the music expressive of fun, humor, and intrigue which characterizes this popular opera and overture, full of life, delicate phrasing and vim, brought to a conclusion an exceedingly fine concert. The music of Schubert and Schuman will form the feature of next Sunday's concert.

CHILD DIES OF EXPOSURE

Child Mother Tramped Streets Looking for Home for It.

Did Not Know How to Care for Her Offspring.

The 7-day old son of Miss Mary Eigel, Virginia, Minn., died yesterday in a Mesaba avenue infants' home, as the result of exposure while being carried in the arms of its 20-year-old mother about the streets of Duluth. The girl did not know how to care for her illegitimate child, and it was not properly clothed, while she was trying to find it a home in Duluth.

Miss Eigel arrived in the city Saturday, intending to place her son in the children's home. She did not know what else to do with it. She inquired the way to the institution, and walked several blocks before the car overtook her. When she arrived at the home it was only to learn that children of that age were not accepted until examined by a physician and the officers of the home had had an opportunity to investigate the case.

The girl returned to the car line, and there was no car in sight. Again she walked for several blocks before one overtook her. All the time the infant was crying pitifully. In her inexperienced way she did all she could to comfort it, but her attempts were unsuccessful. When the car came she boarded it and rode down town. There she walked about for some time. She was a stranger in a strange land, and did not know where to go.

She persistently made inquiries, and finally was directed to the Mesaba avenue refuge. She walked to the place, and made arrangements for leaving the child there. Then she went away. Yesterday the child died. "Death due to exposure, while in the care of an inexperienced mother," read the report turned into the health office.

Coroner McCuen investigated the case. There appeared to be no lawful reason for holding the heart-broken mother, and she was allowed to go free. The girl had some money, and arranged with Durkan & Crawford to have the funeral properly conducted, paying them for their services. The name of the father is known.

HOLIDAY IS OBSERVED

Anniverity of Birth of George Washinton Commemorated.

Banks, Board of Trade and Many Offices Are Closed.

Today is the birthday anniversary of George Washington, nrst president of the United States.

The day is being observed in Duluth by the closing of many places of business and the adherence to holiday rules in the postoffice and other government departments.

The public schools are closed, and the pupils are enjoying the day on their ski slides and skating rinks. Washington was recalled at patriotic exercises held in many of the buildings held Friday afternoon.

The banks are all closed, and so are many of the federal, county and city offices. There was no session of the Duluth board of trade and the grain, stock and provision exchanges throughout the country remained closed all day.

The railroads took cognizance of the holiday by closing their local freight and passenger offices. Travelers bought their tickets at the depot offices.

In some offices the workers enjoyed a complete holiday, and in stores work ceased at lunch time.

This afternoon the Lyceum was well filled by an audience which witnessed "The Girl Question," and the Bijou introduced a new program to a large crowd. Both theaters expect to have large audiences this evening, and the skating rinks and other places of amusement anticipate large holiday crowds.

The weather was admirably mild and pleasant, and many people took advantage of the opportunity to enjoy it.

WHEELER EXPLAINS.

Civic Leagne President Says Slam Not Intended at Police.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Considerable comment, favorable and otherwise, has followed the action of hiring outside detectives to get evidence against lawbreakers in Duluth. Let me state that the primary object was to make an investigation, to learn the facts, to know the exact conditions. There was no plan to discredit the police department, nor to throw any blame on the executive department, for every one knows that a man in uniform cannot get access to illicit liquor selling.

As a matter of fact the investigation shows that the saloons have been fairly well closed, that gambling has been kept under cover, especially since the action of the January grand jury in indicting and the subsequent plea of guilty of the man who was running a poker game. There has been some gambling in pool halls and bowling alleys, but since the investigation this has partially ceased and minors are being kept out more rigidly. If money is passed now it is done quietly. There is one itinerant poker game, the play never being held at the same place two nights in succession. The promoters of this game are known and may be reached later.

The failure of the cases against the hotels is somewhat serious. It must lead to an attempt to keep bars out of all hotels. The fact that liquor was sold in at least six hotels on Sunday, contrary to the law was not denied. The question became one of responsibility in the St. Louis hotel case. No one was responsible for the acts of his employees, why should the saloon keeper be held for the acts of the bartender? The decision means that any hotel can do as it pleases so long as the manager does not know anything about it. In order to compel the hotels to obey the law the police department will be forced to use the search and seizure law, for it is not fair to close the saloons and allow the hotels to run, or the council should refuse licenses to all hotels in the city.

In closing, it is only fair to say that the mayor and the city attorney acted promptly on the evidence presented to them by our men and that this city is as well governed (outside of the hotels) as any city of its size in the United States. BERT N. WHEELER.

DESCRIBES ITALIAN HORROR.

Sherburn M. Becker, "Boy Mayor," Delivers Lecture at Lyceum.

Sherburn M. Becker, ex-mayor of Milwaukee, who was one of the youngest city executives in the history of American municipal politics, delivered his lecture yesterday afternoon and last evening at the Lyceum theater upon the horrors of the recent Italian earthquake.

For two hours Mr. Becker gave an entertaining description of the country visited by the terrible catastrophe, and then dwelt upon the effects of the earthquake. His eloquent description was aided by a number of excellent moving picture films, which showed the country before and after the visitation of the earthquake.

Although Mr. Becker has not visited the scene of the earthquake, he resided in the district for a number of years while abroad, and is thoroughly familiar with the district and the people.

EARTHQUAKE CAUSES PANIC IN CHURCH

Alicante, Spain, Feb. 22.—Severe earth shocks were experienced throughout the whole district of Elche yesterday. The most serious disturbance, which came while the people were assembled at mass in the village church, caused a panic among the congregation, who rushed to the doors, throwing down and trampling under foot a score or more of women and children. The furniture in the houses was overturned and crockery and window panes broken.

At Crevillente, a town of 10,000 inhabitants, eighteen miles from here, there were two severe shocks. Houses rocked and swayd at an alarming angle and people ran to the countryside in dire terror. They are now camping in the open fields.

INCOME TAX IS PROPOSED BY BILL INTRODUCED IN THE STATE LEGISLATURE

Would Apply to All Incomes Exceeding $1,000 a Year.

St. Paul Member Wants to Let Saloons Run Until Midnight.

Armour Packing Plant Causes Bitter Talk in the Senate.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—An income tax, applying to all incomes of more than $1,000 a year, and to the excess only, is provided in a bill introduced in the house this morning by Representative Stuart of Windom. The rate of tax is graduated according to the income, those receiving $1,000 to $1,500 being required to pay 1 per cent on all over 1,000; those getting between $1,500 and $2,500 being assessed 2 per cent, and those earning over $2,500 to pay 3 per cent.

Representative O'Brien of St. Paul proposed in a bill this morning to let the saloons in Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis remain open until midnight instead of 11 o'clock as the present law requires in all parts of the state. It provided, however, that the city council may reduce the open hours, but cannot increase them.

Much asperity, not to speak of acidity, marked the debate in the senate this morning over Senator Hack-

Emil Prada of Blackwell, Mich., Victim of Horrible Accident.

Menominee, Mich., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—With a dozen employes working a few feet away, Emil Prada, 20 years old, had his left arm torn off in the Flanner-Stager mill at Blackwell yesterday afternoon.

His sleeve was caught in the gearing and his arm was ripped away in a twinkling. The victim was brought to the Menominee River hospital today in a critical condition.

LARGE SUMS ARE ASKED

Two Personal Injury Suits Aggregate More Than $60,000.

Crippled Miner Wants $50,000—$10,000 for a Broken Leg.

Two cases, involving personal injury damage claims of more than $60,000, have been remanded from the United States circuit court back to the district court, and the transcripts of the files were filed with the clerk of the district court this morning.

One of the cases was brought by John Ruohonen against the Republic Iron & Steel company and Edgar Callister, and he seeks to recover $10,357.50 for injuries sustained at the Mariska mine at Sparta July 9, 1908. He sustained a compound fracture of the right leg in two places between the knee and the ankle by a fall of ore.

The other case was brought by George Bjelos against the Cleveland-Cliffs Iron company and John Reigart. Bjelos sues for $50,000 for injuries sustained at the Crosby mine at Nashwauk May 29, 1908.

Bjelos was working in a chute, and two pieces of ore fell on his right leg, breaking it. It is claimed that he will be crippled for the remainder of his life.

DOCTOR GIVES BOY NEW LIP.

Charlotteville, Va., Feb. 23.—A remarkable double operation of skin grafting, which moved the cuticle by easy stages up his body, sent William Jones, 10 years old, home from the University of Virginia hospital with a new lip. Last September his lower lip was shot away by the accidental discharge of a gun. Dr. Watts of the hospital staff first transplanted a flap of skin from the addominal wall of the patient to the forearm. After growing to the forearm it was brought up and attached to the face, and after remaining there about two weeks to secure a blood supply, was cut off from the arm and molded into position, forming the new lip.

NEARING END OF SESSION

Only Eleven Days More for the North Dakota Legislature.

The Appropriation Budget Carries $1,400,000 for the Biennial Period.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Eleventh legislative assembly reconvened this afternoon at 2 o'clock after a recess of three days, and is now on the last stretch, with the day of adjournment, March 5, only eleven days off. There is an immense amount of work to be disposed of in the time fixed, and morning, afternoon and evening sessions will be the program for the remaining few days. Practically every member was at his seat this afternoon when the two houses were called to order.

The appropriation budget has been prepared. It carries a total of $1,400,000 for the biennial period, and the report of the senate appropriation committee.

NEW ORLEANS GAY IN REVELRY

Mardi Gras Being Celebrated With the Usual Merriment.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 23.—The Mardi Gras is being celebrated with typical gaiety and revelry. A legal holiday today is characterized by the practical suspension of business and a surrender to mimicry and fun. The maskers are out in full force, many seeking to capture the various prizes for the most artistic garb. The Rex parade, with its magnificent floats and richly attired participants, was watched by thousands.

BLAINE IN A DEMUR

Wisconsin Senator Objects to Primary Probe Testimony Now.

Wordy Row Over Alleged Legislative Duty Non-Performance.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 23.—Senator John J. Blaine of Boscobo, who preferred a long list of specific charges of corruption against United States Senator Stephenson, in connection with the recent primary, today appeared before the legislative committee which is investigating the senatorial primary.

Before taking the oath, Blaine said a majority of the committee had called him so as to aid the defense of Isaac Stephenson. He was willing to testify when the senate was not in session, but said he owed it to his constituents to watch matters in the senate and before the committees. A wordy row followed, during which Assemblyman Hambrecht said the members of the committee were leaving their legislative duties and letting their personal bills go by default to appear here, and that if Senator Blaine insists on his legislative privilege, "Let him go if he wants to."

Assemblyman Bray said the assembly committee had been "insulted" by Blaine and moved a reconsideration of the committee's action in calling Blaine as the "next witness." The motion did not receive a second. When asked if he cared to be sworn in Senator Blaine said his duty to the senate was paramount over "all this 'tommy-rot.'"

"Talk about me and my wishes, I am nothing," he declared. "Isaac Stephenson is nothing. You are nothing, but the honor of the state of Wisconsin is everything."

Mr. Hambrecht protested against

FRANCE MOVES TO INSURE PEACE

Asks Germany's Aid in the Servian-Austrian Situation.

Berlin, Feb. 23.—The menacing attitude of Servia and the military dispositions taken by Austria-Hungary in connection therewith have caused the French government to undertake mediatory representations in the interest of peace, and Germany has been asked to join France in this endeavor. The German foreign office replied that it was in full sympathy with the object of these representations, but it did not consider it desirable to participate in suggestions to Austria-Hungary; it was quite willing, however, to assist in pressure upon Servia to keep the peace.

It is understood in Berlin that France took this step after reaching an agreement with Russia.

SHOWS HOW SHOT WENT

Robin Cooper Puts on Collar Pierced by Bullet.

His Father Follows in the Carmack Case Hearing.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 23.—At 9:45 this morning Col. D. B. Cooper took the stand in the Cooper trial. The attendance was much smaller than that of yesterday. The colonel's testimony followed that of ex-Sheriff Sharpe and of Cooper's son, Robin, which was dramatic in the extreme. The closing colloquy between young Cooper and the attorney general was:

"Where did your first bullet hit Senator Carmack?"

"I don't know."

"There had been no unpleasantness, and you did not draw your revolver until you were shot?"

"I did not. I was shot before I opened fire."

The attorney general then had the witness remove his coat, put on the collar pierced by the bullet and follow the bullet's course with a pencil.

"Now, Mr. Cooper, if the bullet went in at this hole and pierced the tie, wouldn't the hole in the tie be at the knot, and isn't the hole in this tie much below the knot?"

"No," was the reply after a glance.

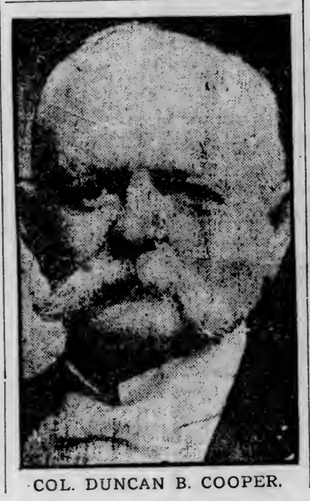

"Have you the tie on tighter than you usually wear it?"

"I have not."

The witness admitted that the range of the bullet was upward and was permitted to don his clothing.

One of the bullet wounds, a necessarily fatal one, pierced the senator's neck within one-sixteenth of an inch of the spinal cord and came out under the tongue. Sharpe swore that Carmack was facing young Cooper, aiming a re-

STEEL HAS DOWN TURN

Wall Street Has Attack of Weakness, Following London.

Evidence of Support Is Furnished by Railway Group.

New York, Feb. 23.—Following London's lead, the local stock market displayed marked weakness at the opening today. The brunt of the attack was borne by the United States Steel issues and other metal stocks. United States Steel common sold off 1⅞ on heavy trading at the outset, later adding to its decline.

United States Steel preferred was also heavily traded in and sold off almost two points in the initial trading.

There were heavy losses in Republic Iron & Steel, common and preferred, Colorado Fuel & Iron, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, Amalgamated Copper, American Smelting, National Lead, American Locomotive and Consolidated Gas. In the railroad list the losses were less severe, although extending to a point in Erie, Chesapeake & Ohio, and Reading.

The list showed further weakness later, but with evidence of support in the railway group.

TROOPS RESTORE ORDER IN OMAHA

Anti-Greek Agitation Subsides With Exodus of Foreigners.

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 23.—All is quiet today in the anti-Greek agitation. Although a portion of the local militia was held in readiness last night, the precaution was apparently unnecessary. The Greeks themselves had left the city before nightfall and were quartered in nearby towns.

Only a small portion of the Greeks have families in the country. Their expulsion from South Omaha will not work much of a hardship. There are a few, however, who are in business and own property. These will, they say, look to the city to make good their losses, not only in property, but in the suspension of business.

STANDARD OIL TRUST REBATING CASE GOES TO TRIAL ONCE MORE

MINISTER ATTACKS LAWYER FOR THAW

DELPHIN M. DELMAS.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 23.—Rev. Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, formerly of Toledo, Ohio, at a banquet of the Sons of the Revolution, delivered a scathing denunciation of the "unwritten law" and named Delphin M. Delmas, Harry K. Thaw's famous counsel, who delivered the Washington birthday oration to the Kansas City Bar association, as "the $100,000 counsel for degenerate aristocracy, who uttered insults to God and humanity." Dr. Brady said:

"There is no unwritten law in this country. It was only because of the unwritten law of taxation without representation, that the great war of the revolution was fought."

Second Hearing in the $29,240,000 Fine Case Begins.

It Will Take Two Days to Fill the Jury Box.

Judge Anderson of Indianapolis Takes Place of Judge Landis.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—The second trial of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana on the charge of rebating in connection with shipments of oil from Whiting, Ind., to East St. Louis opened this morning before Judge A. B. Anderson of Indianapolis. Judge Anderson was imported to hear the historic case after Judge K. M. Landis and Judge Sol H. Bethea had refused to have anything to do with it. This is the case in which Judge Landis imposed a fine of $29,000,000 on the first conviction. The fine was reversed by the court of appeals and the case remanded for a new trial.

The courtroom held a fair sized crowd anxious to see the wheels of the great trial set in motion and attorneys, who hoped to profit by the maneuvering of the lawyers in the case. It was seen at once from the early questioning of the jurors that it would take at least two days to fill the box. The men called were mostly farmers from Northern Illinois, men of the same type that found a verdict of guilty in the first trial.

ARE SPLIT ON TARIFF

The Democratic Senators Agreed Only on "For Revenue Only."

Judge Purdy Affected By Action Regarding Bench Appointments.

Washington, Feb. 23.—The Democratic senators are going to be divided when the tariff bill reaches them at the next session, although they are a unit on the general principle that the tariff should be based on the demands of the government for revenue rather than protection and, apparently, if the Democrats themselves were in the majority and were framing a bill it would be upon this basis.

Some of them believe in proceeding upon this theory even though the Republicans frame the bill. Others, coming from states in which there are large industries, which have heretofore been the subject of protection, take the view that as the bill, under any circumstances, be a protective measure, it is in the line of their duty to constituents to exert themselves to

FORCE IS ON GUARD

Race War Outbreak Momentarily Expected at Pensacola.

Marines Are Ordered Into Action By the Governor.

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 23.—In constant expectation of a violent race war, marines are today guarding Pensacola, having been ordered into action by the governor, upon application of Sheriff van Pelt.

Ernest Martin, 15 years old, was struck by a rock and instantly killed by Eastman Spears, colored. White and colored boys were fighting near Halifax, and the negro Spears picked up a rock and hurled it, striking Martin, who was standing on Palafox wharf, awaiting the return of a parade.

Officers captured Spears and took him to the jail. The police dispersed a small mob, and it was thought there would be no further trouble. Later, however, crowds began gathering again and it was feared an attempt to get Spears might be made, at any moment.

Later it was decided to take the prisoner to the navy yard. On the march to the wharf, the crowd of nearly 1,000 sullenly followed. They made a rush toward the prisoner, but a dozen marines faced about and held the crowd in check, while the remainder hurled the negro to the boat.

COMPANIES UP A TREE

Don't See How They Can Comply With Council's Order.

Underground Conduits Are Not Allowed on Superior Street.

The street railway company and telephone and telegraph companies are wondering how they are going to comply with the council's order of a week ago, directing that their wires on East Superior street, between Eighth and Twenty-fourth avenues east, be placed in underground conduits.

Manager Warren of the traction company, was in consultation with Mayor Haven and City Engineer McGilvray this morning. He said he would be glad to carry out the instructions, and would have done the work before this, without instructions, if there was any place to put the wires. There is an ordinance prohibiting the placing of underground conduits in Superior street, lengthwise of the street, and this appears to be the only available place for a considerable distance in the disgrict in question.

Between Thirteenth and Twentieth avenues east there are no alleys, all of them having been vacated at the request of property owners, and when they were vacated, nothing was said about running underground conduits through the lots. The city reserved the right to construct sewers along the routes formerly followed by the alleys, but that was all. No agreement was made as to wires.

The city engineer and the mayor could offer no solution of the question. It looks as if the instructions could not be followed out, until the aldermen provide some means. The question will be brought before the council again. The strongest petitions favoring a removal of the wires from Superior street came from along the street between Thirteenth and Twentieth avenues, where there are no alleys, and no other place for the wires. It may be up to the objecting property owners to provide a place for the conduits.

If nothing else can be done, it may be necessary to run all the wires two or three blocks up the hill from Superior street, and then run them along in some of the hillside alleys.

CHARTER IS ATTACKED

Traction Company Files Answer in Suit Brought by City.

Claims Section Demanding Annual Reports is Unconstitutional.

The Interstate Traction company this morning filed an answer to the complaint filed by the city some time ago, in its suit against the traction company for the alleged disregarding of the city charter in the matter of filing with the comptroller the year's statement of expenses and earnings. The company filed a demurrer some time ago, and it now asks that this demurrer be withdrawn. The demurrer was one that the complaint did not constitute a cause of action.

In their answer the traction company says that section 463 of the city charter is unconstitutional and void: that even though such was not the case, it has complied with every order contained therein. It claims that at the time, no objection was made on the part of the city to the delay in filing, and that no objection was made by the city that the statement was faulty in any way. It denies all other things set forth in the complaint filed by the city, says there is no cause for action, and asks that the cause be dismissed.

The complaint was filed some time ago. The city claims that the traction company did not file its statement until long after the time set forth in the charter and that when it did file it, the statement was in no way satisfactory. The city is now trying to make the street car company pay a forfeit of $100 a day for every day that has elapsed since the time the statement should have been filed on Feb. 1 of last year.

DORANDO IS MAN KILLER

Wears Out Nine Men In St. Paul Marathon Race.

Runs Twin City Sprinters Off Their Feet—Finishes Fresh.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 23.—Dorando, the Italian hreo of the recent London Marathon, easily defeated the Twin City relay team at the Auditorium last night, covering the fifteen miles in the fast time of 1 hour 26 minutes and 45 seconds.

Not only did the little Italian defeat the original four runners who were pitted against him, but out ran five men who were put on at frequent intervals after being refreshed.

Four thousand people witnessed the wonderful exhibition of endurance.

From the very start Dorando took the lead and outran Lightfoot, the Sioux Indian, with ease. At the finish of the first mile, which he made in 4:55, he led by a lap and a half, and again topped the Indian before another half mile had been run.

Griffin, the St. Thomas boy, started after the eleventh lap of the second mile, and for two miles and five laps he put up a good race, but the Italian kept up his man-killing pace, and at the start of the fourth mile Dorando was three laps to the good.

Karlsen started in the second lap of the fourth mile, and for a time it looked as if he would make up some of the lost ground, but he lasted less than a mile and a half, when Hicks was sent on. He plugged away for over two miles, and Griffin was again called upon, running but twelve laps.

Then Jobst, a fresh man, was started, and he started to pick up the lost distance. He ran one mile and four laps, then Karlsen went nine laps, Hicks fifteen laps, Karlsen five laps, and by this time the terms were even, with Dorando a few feet in the lead. At the start of the thirteenth mile Hicks again went on and strove to keep up with the little wonder, but he was "all in," and when the gun was fired to announce the start of the last mile, Dorando, who had been running like clockwork, quickened his pace and covered the last mile in 6 minutes and 14 seconds, finishing the last two laps as if he were in a 100-yard dash, apparently as fresh as at the start, with Hicks plodding along over half a lap in the rear.

MEETING OF BALL CLUB

Fans Will Gather at Commercial Club to Discuss Plans.

Superior Does Not Favor the Six Club League.

Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, those who are interested in the Duluth baseball team will meet at the Commercial club to talk over plans for the coming season. Every detail pertaining to the team will be thoroughly gone into and the officers of the Duluth club elected.

Superior is the town that is now worrying all the league officials, and it may be that the town across the bay will, after all, hold up the entire league proposition.

Superior instructed its representative, who attended the meeting held in St. Paul Sunday, to take no part in the arrangements being made for the league, unless St. Paul and Minneapolis were sure of coming in.

John A. Elliott of LaCrosse, the president of the league, has been in Superior two days, trying to persuade the natives that a baseball team representing Superior is needed. They have at last said that if the money can be raised they will enter. The business men will have another meeting soon, and at that time they hope to raise the $4,000 necessary to start the team.

It now looks as though everything depends on whether or not the Superior men enter. The league could not run with five teams and four would be out of the question.

Worth Knowing.

That open-air exercise, preferably some definite work or play, is an excellent beautifier, and that exercise in a room is better than none at all. TWO STATES WIN SUITS

Federal Supreme Court Upholds Anti-Trust Law of Arkansas.

Hammond Packing Co. Must Pay $10,000—Louisiana Victor.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Deciding the case of the Hammond Packing Company of Chicago vs. The State of Arkansas favorably to the state, the supreme court of the United States today upheld the constitutionality of the anti-trust law of Arkansas.

The company was fined $10,000 in the Arkansas state courts for failure to obey the law.

The supreme court also decided the case of the Cumberland Telephone Company vs. The Railroad Commission of Louisiana, involving the right of the commission to reduce the company's long-distance rates, favorably to the state. Decision was by Justice Peckham.

FARMER DRUNK; WIFE IS ILL

Police Take Man to Jail, and Wife to a Doctor.

Mrs. John Hedstrom of Foxboro, Wis., accompanied by her husband, came to Duluth this morning to secure medical treatment for herself. An hour after she arrived her husband was drunk, and before noon had landed in the police station.

Foxboro is a station on the Great Northern road, twenty miles south of Duluth. Hedstrom is a farmer there. His wife has been ill for several days, and finally her condition became so serious that it was thought best for her to come to Duluth. The man came along, but began drinking immediately after his arrival here. His wife was so weak she could barely walk, when the farmer was arrested. The police saw that she received the attention of a physician immediately.

COOK STILL RETICENT

Refuses to Talk on Rainy Lake Road's Extension.

Has Been in East Conferring With Canadian Northern Directors.

Wirt H. Cook, president of the Duluth, Rainy Lake & Winnipeg railroad, returned this morning from a business trip to Toronto and Chicago. The purpose of Mr. Cook's trip to Toronto was to confer with the controlling interests of the Canadian Northern railroad, which controls the Rainy Lake road. Whatever was accomplished at this meeting, or whether any progress was achieved in the matter of the extension of the Rainy Lake road from Virginia to Duluth, Mr. Cook declined to state.

"I have nothing to say at this time," was President Cook's answer to all queries as to the outcome of the Toronto trip.

It has been stated here that changes may occur in the directorate of the Rainy Lake road in the near future. It is claimed in some railroad circles that the Canadian Northern interests will be better represented on the board of directors, the Canadian Northern corporation being the controlling interest in the affairs of the Duluth road.

However, nothing that would confirm these stories was gained from the head of the Rainy Lake road.

A Common Cold.

We claim that if catching cold could be avoided some of the most dangerous and fatal diseases would never be heard of. A cold often forms a culture bed for germs of infectious diseases. Consumption, pneumonia, diphtheria and scarlet fever, four of the most dangerous and fatal diseases, are of this class. The culture bed formed by the cold favors the development of the germs of these diseases, that would not otherwise find lodgment. There is little danger, however, of any of these diseases being contracted when a good expectorant cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It cleans out these culture beds that favor the development of the germs of these diseases. That is why this remedy has proved so universally successful in preventing pneumonia. It not only cures your cold quickly but minimizes the risk of contracting these dangerous diseases. For sale by all druggists.

MAY RESULT IN TIE VOTE

Jeffrey Gains on Merritt in Seventh Ward Recount.

Two Disreputed Ballots Will be Passed on by Court.

The commission appointed to attend to the recounting of votes in the election contest brought by William Jeffrey of the Seventh ward against Lucian Merritt, who won out in the recent aldermanic race by a lead of four votes, finished its work this morning.

If the court sustains the claims of Mr. Jeffrey's attorneys, the election in the Seventh ward, so far as alderman is concerned, will be declared a tie, it is understood, but if the claims of Mr. Merritt's attorney are sustained, the latter will still have a lead of two votes.

The official count of the election judges gave Mr. Jeffrey 499 votes and Mr. Merritt 503 votes. In the recount by the commission appointed in district court, Jeffrey made a gain of one straight vote which had not been counted at all by the election judges. This gain of one did not detract from Mr. Merritt's total of 503, so he was still three votes to the good. One defective ballot counted for Mr. Merritt by the election judges, and believed to be intended for him, was found, and was thrown out altogether, by consent of both attorneys, because of the defect. This left Mr. Merritt only two votes ahead.

Two other ballots were found, which Mr. Jeffrey's attorney claimed should also be thrown out altogether, but the recount commission could not see it that way, and it will be up to the court to decide whether they shall count for Mr. Merritt, or shall be thrown out. If they are not counted for Mr. Merritt, neither will they be counted for Mr. Jeffrey; they will be thrown out entirely. Should the court decide to make this disposition, Mr. Merritt would lose the present lead of two votes, and the election would be declared a tie. It would then be up to the two candidates to setle the affair by tossing up a coin, or by any other system that would be agreeable to both.

The recount in the Second ward has not yet begun.

CONSIDERING THE PROTESTS

Board of Public Works Takes Up Property Owners' Petitions.

A protest by interested property owners against the construction of the Oregon creek bridge, on Third street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third avenues east, is being considered by the board of public works this afternoon. The signers of the petition are against building the bridge, as has been explained in The Herald before.

Another protest has been received from the Hillside Improvement club, against paving Sixth street this year from Cascade to Woodland avenues. The club suggests that the street be only graded this season, giving as a reason the fact that several dirt fills are to be made. The fear is expressed that these dirt fills will settle for some time after they are made, and therefore laying paving material over them should be postponed a year, says the club.

SUPERIOR NEWS

BOY LOST IN THE WOODS

Several Searching Parties Spent Night Looking for Him.

Lad Finally Telephoned From South Range That He Was Safe.

The woods for miles about South Superior were searched nearly all last night by parties of men looking for Burr Wilcox, the 15-year-old son of Postmaster Wilcox, who left home early in the morning to go hunting.

At a little after midnight the boy telephoned home from South Range on the Omaha road, telling his family that he was safe, though he had been lost all day, and had just got into South Range a few minutes before.

When the boy did not return for supper his family became worried, and fears that some accident might have befallen him drove them almost frantic. The neighbors were called upon to organize searching parties. When at last word was received from the boy, other parties went out to inform those already engaged in searching. Some of the men did not get in until late this morning.

COMMISSION CRITICISED

Chisholm Paper Claims Requests for Relief Were Refused.

Mayor Haven Explains Why Lump Sums Were Not Paid.

The cunrrent issue of the Chisholm Herald severely criticises the Chisholm fire relief commission, appointed by Governor Johnson, for not sending forward more money for the relief of needy residents, and sets forth the claim that actual suffering exists among some of the fire sufferers because of the refusal of the commission to give any more money from the relief fund at its disposal.

Mayor Haven, chairman of the commission, who probably has given greater time and more careful attention to the relief work than any other one man, says the Chisholm Herald's statements are entirely misleading; that the commission is ready now, as it has been all winter, to furnish more money from the fund if the Chisholm local committee will specify for what the cash is needed, and that request for more money has been received from Chisholm, by the commission, aside from one request for a lump sum of $5,000 cash, to be used at the discretion of the local committee.

"We replied to that request," said Mayor Haven today, "by saying that it was beyond the power of the commission to furnish any money except for specified items of relief work, and told the committee that if they would send us a list, setting out in detail just what the money was to be used for, it would be forthcoming. We have never received an answer to that communication.

Must Have System.

"In a matter of this kind it is absolutely essential to follow out some system of carrying on the work. We adopted a system at the very beginning which has worked out very satisfactorily. For every penny that has been expended we can show a receipt, and can account for the exact manner in which it was spent. If we had deviated from this policy of carefully keeping track of where every dollar went, and had handed out lump sums, as requested by Chisholm's local committee, you can easily see where we would be at. All would be chaos; we would be unable to give a detailed account of expenditures, and right away there would be cries of graft from all over the state, and we would be painted as the robbers of widows and orphans, and would have been in for a more severe roasting than some of the Chisholm people received during the big fire.

"Earlier in the winter indefinite reports reached the commission of suffering at Chisholm, in two or three individual cases. We told the local committee that if they found any cases of suffering, resulting from the fire, there was still plenty of money in the fund for alleviating it, and informed them that if they would let us know of the specific instances where assistance was needed, the cash would be immediately forthcoming. The committee has not done this. If there is any suffering among the Chisholm people who were burned out by the fire, it is entirely the fault of the local committee, and not the fault of the central commission, for, aside from the request for a lump sum of $5,000, which we could not grant, there has been no call for assistance from them.

Ready to Help.

"Attorney Martin Hughes of Hibbing, a member of the commission, was in to see me a week ago last Saturday, and I told him at that time if the chairman of the local committee would either calf upon me with a list of the sufferers and their needs, or would mail such list to me, the commission would see to it that all their wants were supplied without delay. I have heard nothing from either Chisholm or Hibbing since then.

"There was considerable soreness among some of the Chisholm business men because the commission refused to expend the whole relief fund, using what did not actually go to alleviate suffering to establish them in business again. They asked us to use the surplus in building them new buildings, and in the purchase of new stock for them. Those who contributed to the fund did so with the understanding that their money would go to the purchase of food and clothing for the sufferers, and did not intend that it should go to establish burned-out merchants, many of whom had insurance, in business again. St. Paul and Minneapolis, and other parts of the state, set up a howl at the very suggestion of our lending any such assistance. We simply could not do it, and there is no reason why Chisholm business men should become angry because their request was turned down.

Receipts for Every Dollar.

"We have been trying all the month to hold a meeting of the commission and close up its affairs, but owing to the absence of several members, have been unable to do so. The meeting will be held at the earliest possible date and a careful accounting of every cent contributed to the relief fund will be made. We have receipts, bills and signed cards showing what disposition was made of every dollar spent.

"The charge in the Chisholm Herald that we have neglected to attend to our duty is unjust. It is because we did attend to our duty, and refused to hand out lump cash sums, without a careful accounting of what was to be done with them, that the Chisholm people are angry at us. Any unprejudiced person can see our position in the matter, and easily understand why we insisted on a detailed account of expenditures. We have at all times been ready to render assistance to Chisholm sufferers, and still stand ready, but have insisted, and still insist, upon following out the system of keeping accounts that was adopted at the very beginning of the relief work. It is to protect ourselves, the fire sufferers, and those who donated to the relief fund, that we do this."

"This is a delicate subject to handle and we have been putting it off from time to time thinking that the state committee would surely come around and do the right and proper thing, but it has failed to do so, we can wait no longer, and it is clearly our duty to make this matter public. Understand, though, we are not charging the committee with any wrongdoing; it is composed of gentlemen of honesty and integrity, well known in this part of the state, but the trouble is they have given over the matter to one or two of the committee and have simply neglected to attend their duty, all being busy men.

"There was subscribed for the relief of the Chisholm fire sufferers about $125,000, and that amount could and should have been collected and applied to the use the donors intended, but the state committee in its wisdom thought otherwise and after about one-third of the amount had been gathered in said that we had enough, and no more was necessary. As for this assertion, we, who are on the ground, deny it and say that the full amount could and should have been used. Of this amount, $125,000, about two-thirds was collected and paid in to the committee and one-third only have thus far been paid over to the local committee and used. The state committee, then, has at the present time one-third of this amount, or nearly $40,000, which they refuse to use for the benefit of the people intended. There is suffering here which the committee refuses to alleviate.

"In the forepart of December last the local committee informed the state committee that it should have at least $10,000 to relieve the suffering for the winter, and the latter seemed to agree, but the money was not sent in, and nothing was heard from the committee, although demands were made by our committee. About the first of the year the committee wrote down that they must have $5,000 at once if the suffering was to be relieved, but not a dollar has been received. It looks as if the committee refuses to aid us with $40,000 in its hands that rightly belongs to us

"The relief committee at Hibbing hearing that there was suffering here and money needed, and having about $1,000 belonging to the fund which had not yet been turned over, promptly turned it over to the local committee. It is a shame that Hibbing which gave $13,001.40, more than any other town in proportion to population, should hand over everything when the big cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul refuse to do so and there are nearly $40,000 held by the state committee which it refuses to turn over or any part of it.

"We now and herein in the name of the people of Chisholm call upon the state committee, of which Mayor Haven is chairman, to attend to this matter at once and meet the wishes of the local committee. It is purely neglect, of course, carelessness, if you will, but this has gone far enough and the committee cannot afford to longer ignore these demands."

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE MAY COME TO AMERICA.

Berlin, Feb. 23.—Frederick William, the crown prince of Germany, has been contemplating the possibility of visiting the United States when the Sonder class yachts go over for the races, next summer, but up to the present time no definite plan for this visit has been decided upon. Emperor William approves fully of this projected visit because of its educational advantages. The crown prince often has expressed regret that he has not yet been able to see "that wonderful country," the United States, and the American people of whom Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia and many other Germans have told him much. If the crown prince does go to America it will be strictly as a private person.

PROFITS GO TO THE CREDITORS

Wholesale Company Purchased Bankrupt Stock and Resold It.

In a decision handed down by Judge Page Morris of the Federal court yesterday, the Gowan-Peyton-Twohy company was instructed to turn over to the assignee for J. Wilson & Co. bankrupts, the sum of $600, representing the profits on the sale of the stock.

The stock was bought by the wholesale company from the receiver W. R. Peyton, for a cash consideration of $1,600. Forty-eight hours later, it was sold at a profit of $600, by the wholesale company. The other creditors, chief among whom was the Knudson-Ferguson company at once made known their dissatisfaction, through their attorney, W. J. Stevenson.

The case ws before the referee in bankruptcy cases, W. O. Pealer, and he upheld the action of the receiver. Mr. Stevenson then appealed to the courts, and the decision of the referee was reversed.

The receiver claims the sale was an open one and that the wholesale company was the highest bidder.

Lent Opens With Ash Wednesday Services at All Churches.

All during Lent, there will be special religious revival services at Trinity Pro-Cathedral, with daily service at 4:30 p. m. and other special services during each week. The series will be opened with a special Ash Wednesday service at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The daily service at 4:30 will be given over to a study of the Gospel of St. John. Each Wednesday, there will be a men's service at 8 o'clock in the evennig and each Friday evening at 7:30, there will be a special service, followed by a meeting of the Sunday school teachers.

The Sunday morning sermons by Rev. A. H. Wurtele will be in a series on the "Trial of Jesus," in its different aspects. The Vesper service each Sunday evening at 5 o'clock, will be especially for the children, with illustrated sermons on Christ's parables. The subject next Sunday will be: "The Good Samaritan."

A neat Lenten calendar has been prepared by the families of the Pro-Cathedral. It contains a text for each day, contributed by some family of the parish, and the text is a motto for the day. The calendars will be distributed at the Ash Wednesday service, tomorrow.

There will be Ash Wednesday services at St. Paul's Episcopal church tomorrow morning at 10:30, and in the evening at 7:30 p. m. There will be special services during the Lenten period.

At Holy Apostles Episcopal church at West Duluth the Ash Wednesday service tomorrow will be at 10:30 in the morning, with holy communion. There will be evening prayer and sermon at St. Luke's church in the West end tomorrow evening at 7:45. Rev. R. J. Mooney is pastor of both Holy Apostles and St. Luke's churches, and he will conduct the services.

Receiver Appointed.

Under an order issued by Judge Cant, K. M. Hoff will have charge of the affairs of the Duluth Employment company until the differences between W. H. Alexander and Albert Boline are adjusted by the court.

Mr. Alexander has brought suit in district court to have the partnership existing between himself and Mr. Boline dissolved, and the assets of the company divided. Pending the hearing and result of the case, Mr. Hoff has been appointed receiver to conduct the affairs of the firm. The appointment was made on petition of Mr. Alexander.

MARCH CALENDAR WILL BE HEAVY

Many Cases Will Go Over From January List.

Tomorrow is the last day for filing notes of issue to go on the March calendar in district court, and attorneys are rushing today to get their cases on file. Cases not on file tomorrow will not go on the calendar for the March term and will be carried over until April.

The March calendar is expected to be exceedingly heavy, due to the length of the continued list. The fact that only two judges have been on the bench here during the January term has delayed the disposition of the January calendar, so that the normal progress has not been made.

Judge McClenahan of Brainerd is expected to arrive tomorrow to relieve Judge Ensign and Judge Dibell. The three judges will be on the bench until the hearing of the Riley-Riddel election contest, which is being conducted by Judge Cant at Grand Rapids, is completed, when Judge McClenahan will return to his own district.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

An item of much interest to Duluth society is the announcement by Mrs. Frederick Willard Partridge of Oak Park, Chicago, of the engagement of her daughter, Eleanor Orr Partridge, to Arthur James Harris of Chicago. Miss Partridge is widely known in Duluth, where the family lived for many years. During the last several years they have lived in Chicago, and the news of the announcement is of much interest to many here.

COTILLION CLUB.

Pre-Lenten Affair is Danced at Country Club.

The members of the Cotillion club danced the third in the series last evening at the Country club. The dancing hall was decorated on American flags and the figures danced were suggestive of the famous incidents in the life of Washington, the anniversary of whose birth was celebrated yesterday. Paul Welch led the figures, assisted by Miss Jessica Marshall. At the favor table Mrs. A. M. Marshall and Mrs. C. A Luster presided and the guests were:

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hubbell.
Misses—
Congdon, Hartley, Irma Hartley, Hubbell, Richardson, St. Clair, Millar, Jessica Marshall, Swift, Patrick, Schmeid, Griffin, Leslie Bradshaw of Superior, Thomas of Superior, Hunter.
Messrs.—
Whyte, Jamar, Seth Marshall, McBride, Sinclair, Hale, Brewer, Welch, Peyton, Congdon, Robert Marshall, William White, Jr., Spencer, Beckwith, Howard Simonds.

ELKS' BALL.

Annual Affair is Danced at the Spalding.

The annual ball of the Elks was one of the most delightful of the affairs of Washington's birthday, and was held last evening, and several hundred guests danced at the Spalding at the ninth annual affair, at which the local members of the order were hosts. The Elks' Charity ball is always planned late in the season, and the funds which are secured do much to alleviate the suffering incident to the last few weeks of the cold weather. The charities of this organization are accomplished in so quiet and helpful a manner that few realize the great amount of loving help which is extended each year.

The ball is the one public appeal made each year, and the response is always so hearty and spontaneous that both a brilliant social and financial success is assured. The effective colors of the lodge, purple and white, were used in decoration last evening. From the sides of the hall and over the balcony, and about the musicians' stand, the royal colors were hung. American flags and small pasteboard hatchets suggested the anniversary of the birth of Washington.

La Brosse's orchestra played a stirring program of dance music, and several hundred guests were present. The committees in charge of the affair were:

Reception—Cook Lily, John J. Cox, W. S. McCormick, R. M. Edwards, W. H. Alexander, J. L. Fuller, J. T. Armstead, H. W. Andridge, Rev. R. J. Mooney, J. L. Crawford and J. G. Harris; floor—Fred W. Anderson, J. W. Kreitter, W. H. Wilson, L. L. Culbertson, W. A. Eden, Emil Tessman, Fred H. Merritt; decoration—C. E. Day, W. W. Seekins, Robert L. Carley, W. T. Smith, Walter Ashley.

CROSS-COUNTRY WALKS

Many Such Affairs Enjoyed on Holiday.

A large number of outing parties were enjoyed yesterday and in almost every part of the city snow shoes, and skis, were in evidence. Just plain cross-country walking was also a popular holiday pastime.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Stocking entertained at a snow-shoe tramp back of Woodland, and entertained their guests at supper at their home at Glen Avon.

A large number of the boat club members went up to the Spirit Lake branch of the club to spend the day, or for the tramp home in the evening. Nearly fifty were registered at the branch during the day.

TYLER RECITAL.

Annual Affair to Be Given at Lyceum.

The vocal pupils of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Tyler will appear in a musicale Sunday afternoon at the Lyceum, at 2:45 o'clock. The special features of the recital will be the first appearance of the Temple Male Quartette, which consists of Messrs. Cole, Koneczny, Suffel and Dworshak, a singing of a trio from the Verdi opera, "Atilla," by Mrs. Homer Collins and Messrs. Koneczny and Suffel, and the grand duet from "Carmen," to be sung by Miss Reynolds and Mr. Koneczny. There will be solos by the pupils from Mr. and Mrs. Tyler's classes and Miss Elizabeth Morton will be the accompanist. The program will begin promptly at the hour set.

Supper and Bridge.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Paine were hosts last evening at a supper party, followed by an evening at bridge. The affair was most beautiful in all of the appointments. The decorations and place and score cards were suggestive of the anniversary of Washington's birth, and covers were laid for thirty-six. The favors were won by Mrs. J. N. McKindley nd Mrs. Cuyler Adms, nd the men's favors went to C. E. De Witt and E. P. Towne.

Bridge Party.

Mrs. O. H. Clarke, Mrs. H. Wade Clark and Mrs. H. Simmons were hostesses at cards yesterday at their home, 1005 London road. The rooms were patriotically decorated in red, white and blue bunting and flags, and bridge was played at eleven tables. The favors were won by S. R. Holden, Mrs. Henry Smith and Mrs. T. T. Hudson.

The hostesses entertained at twelve tables of bridge again this afternoon.

Art Lecture.

"The Relation of Italian to Modern Art" will be subject of a lecture to be presented tomorrow morning at the club room of the library, by Col. Freeman Thorp, a portrait painter of note, who is in the city. The lecture will be given under the auspices of the art history class of the Twentieth Century club, and any one interested, whether a member of the club or not, is invited to attend.

Dancing Party.

The reorganized club of the Bachelor Maids entertained at a dancing party last evening at the Maccabee hall. The hall was prettily decorated in college pennants and palms and Di Marco's orchestra played the program of dancing music. The chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Dunahow, Mr. and Mrs. F. O. Flaherty and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Anderson. The committee in charge of the affair was composed of Misses Alice Burns, Mary Garvey and Eva McNamara. Sixty of the members and their guests enjoyed the affair.

Children's Party.

Mrs. A. L. McDermid entertained the members of her Sunday school class at a Washington's birthday party at her home at Lakeside. The hostess was assisted by Misses Marion Gorton, Ada Stalker and Margaret McDermid. The little guests were:

Misses—
Margaret Robertson, Gladys Ryter, Theresa Siren, Otty Coleman, Vera Smith, Dorothy Fifield, Allan Blair.
Masters—
George Rush, Richard Olsen.

Fifty guests were present and many of them were gowned in colonial costumes. A short program was given and the singing of patriotic songs was a feature of the evening. Flags and bunting were used in the decorations about the rooms, and in the dining room a real cherry tree was the centerpiece on the table. The affair was a delightful one.

MANNERS AT BRIDGE.

Women Liable to Devlop Tantrums at Game.

If there is one time above all others when women develop tantrums, even in the best society, it is at bridge when for some cause or other things do not go their way. One such disturbance will naturally cause the hostess great distress, and often result in the breaking up of a lifelong friendship, says an exchange.

On no other occasion do guests dare take such liberties with their hostess as at bridge parties, beginning with the minor, but upsetting one of a late arrival, and ending with that grave offense of playing for stakes, when they know her scruples against gambling.

When they offend in the latter case they are likely to be impertinent if interefered with. This is not displayed at the time, perhaps, though many do convey a subtle insolence in their reply to her quest that it shall not be done, but in their attitude toward her and the guest who by refusing to play for money has brought about the situation.

The woman that is continually whining over being tired and wishing openly for the time to go home is another tax on all at a bridge table, and so is the one that talks incessantly throuhout the game.

Then, too, how often one sees some woman rise from the table when the game is finished, cross to another table and sink into a seat with the audible remark of: "For heaven's sake, let me stay hero and get rid of that man." Her behavior is blandly smiled upon and the man's discomfiture giggled over by all when he returns with the champagne she sent him for, to find her place vacant and her back squarely turned upon him.

THE MIDDLE AGES

To Furnish Motif of the Spring Styles.

The early spring styles promise to slip back six or seven hundred years to the Middle Ages, says the Paris correspondent of The Delineator. The Florentine neck opening and sleeve, the closely fitted medieval gown, the almost barbaric use of cloth of silver and gold, tinsel laces and semi-precious stones remind one of old pictures in an illuminated missal of the twelfth century.

By far the most interesting thing that is occupying the attention of the feminine world in Paris today is a new version of the one-piece princess dress. It is not the close-fitting gown that we have been infintely more graceful and unique. "Semi-fitting" describes it better than anything perhaps, for it follows the lines of the figure perfectly without being fitted in closely to it. It is just easy enough between the bust and hips to follow every motion of the body with that perfect suppleness that is so very attractive. The new princess is going to be immensely popular fo rexactly the same reasons that the semi-fitted coat and the high waistline skirt are popular. It is pretty and becoming; it makes the stout woman look slender and the thin woman sylph-like.

I saw it recently in a soft, moss-colored green cashmere, with wide flat panels at the front and back that sloped in from the shoulders to the waistline to the hem. It had a demure little round chemisetts of green net, but, aside from that, the only trimmings were jade matrix buttons that trimmed the sleeves from the elbow to the wrist and appeared again defining the waistline at the front and back.

I saw it later in a capital little trotting frock of smoky-gray broadcloth, cut in unbroken lines from throat to hem. A black satin sash was passed under the front and back gores at the high waistline, giving the gown the deceptively pretty effect of an Empire semi-princess dress. The sleeves were particularly good in this instance, for they were in three pieces. Besides the familiar seams in the under part of the sleeve, there was another that let the front section lap and button over the back along the outside of the arm.

EAT APPLES.

They Are Fruit and Medicine Combined.

Doctors and fruiterers advocate apples this season as light medicine. This is not a fad, but a truth.

In other days children were made to eat apples every day, and even those of moderate means insisted upon this one fruit, not only as nourishment, but as medicine.

It is again claimed that if this fruit is put on the daily bill of fare the liver will be kept in good working order, the skin will be clearer, and the circulation less sluggish.

An apple eaten in the afternoon between the usual hurried luncheon and the heavy dinner gives the stomach just enough to do and does good work with the blood.

Another one should be eaten just before going to bed at night. Even stomachs that cannot digest a glass of rich milk at night take kindly to an apple. It has no ill effects.

The mealy, soft apple should be kept for cooking. It is not the kind to eat. One wants the hard, firm, juicy winter apple, which feels as though it had been chilled.

This is the kind that is palatable and does the most good. Fastidious persons peel it, but it is claimed that to do its best work it should be eaten entire.

THE EVENING STORY.

A TRIUMPH'S EVIDENCE

By Harriet M. Abbott.

"And you still deny that the god of luck is today the greatest power in the business world, Cartell?" I'm amazed at you."

"Look over this great city. You see at every hand, men whose prosperity depends on the merest turn of the wheel. No, I'm not claiming that brains and moral force are no longer of account, but I insist that they rarely get the showing they demand."

"Yet, there's everything in the point of view, Jennings, and we have the law of compensation," was the reply, with a slow, whimsical smile. "Thus, if the lucky dogs are too busy in resting still other bones from the less fortunate, to settle down and enjoy the sweets of conquest, of what advantage is their conquest? Now, success in life means something far deeper than that which is brought about merely by luck. Luck may be but a chance shot with fortunate results; but behind success there is usually a good aim and a steady hand."

"Granted, but—suppose we take, as example, a man who has, to all appearances, never known defeat. What of our old classmate, Wenwright? Wenwright, the lucky, as we used to call him, even in college."

Ah, had Jennings never forgiven Wenwright for winning Edith Silsbee? He glanced thoughtfully from the window; then answered with seeming irrelevance: "How I wish you had been in town when Wenwright made his famous speech last month! But, by love, he doesn't pose as a chance darling of fortune, let me tell you! His two terms in congress have developed all his latent power as a speaker, and in various, polished sentences, he gave, that night, so vivid a picture of his early days, that you could fairly see the chrysalis of the awkward Vermont lad, from which emerged our present Napoleon of finance. That's a hackneyed expression, btu it's Jim Wenwright to the life."

"Indeed!" Jennings drew in his breath sharply. "And if he is Napoleon, what, then, of Josephine?"

"You mean Mrs. Wenwright?"

His companion hesitated. "Unlike her husband, she is not in the public eye; or, at least, not more so than is unavoidable. She is no social devotee, but her name is often connected with philanthropic movements. On the rare occasion when I have seen her, I have thought her as unassuming as in the days, when, the good old professor's daughter, she dispensed her hospitality in the white house behind the elms."

A vision rose before them, of that fair young girl, and Jennings impulsively exclaimed: "To think of the inspiration she might have been, to almost any man! Yet, such is the irony of Fate, that she is doomed to wholly merge her identity."

"Who knows?" was the sober question. "'Tis a ticklish thing to circumscribe. You never saw Wenwright in just the light I did, Jennings. There is a very defiance of daring in the man, that appeals to me, and at the same time he has a curious responsiveness. How can you tell what the fine alchemy of his wife's nature may do, even for the strong mind of a Napoleon? But hark! the newsboys are calling 'extra' on the street below. Suppose we stroll along and discover the cause of the excitement.

It was but a few hours later, when, not three miles away, Hon. James Wenwright hurriedly fitted his latch-key in the door and entered his home on the avenue.

The cool spacious library with its soft light, had an air of peaceful seclusion. A faint breeze gently stirred the curtains, and the heat and bustle of the city seemed remote and forgotten, yet the burden of the hour was not one to be readily cast aside, and as the man's gaze roved over the quiet room, he shuddered at the mirrored reflection of his haggard face.

Could that set, gray countenance, with dull and nervous lips, be indeed his own?

As if to ward off a blow, he threw out a hand, and recoiled instinctively, as his fingers touched an icy, polished surface. What was that? Ah, the statute! the Winged Victory, poised on its pedestal, in all the white arrogance of beauty and pride. What place had a Winged Victory here, within his walls?

The muscles around Wenwright's mouth twitched in an ironical semblance of humor, and with the sardonic smile that was, in truth, but an inarticulate moan, he murmured: "Confronted by Victory, and tonight! The world has a grim fancy for contrast."

Had his dauntless ambition leading him to risk more and more, in order to quaff deeper draughts from the golden cup, lured him to destruction? He had never, "set sail to fear," had believed in victory, never in defeat; but growing bolder, intoxicated with success, he, too, had been, at last outwitted, and tonight he beheld himself—a ruined man.

Who could have foretold that sudden drop in B. & R.? Not he! But it came—too late to close out, and now—the end. How the hours dragged! Tomorrow, all his little world would know that he, Wenwright, the lucky, had forfeited his claim to the title, and gone down like many another.

But, a look like that of a dreamer rudely awakened, swept over the man's face, as, raising his head, he exclaimed, in an awe stricken whisper: "My God, Edith, my wife! And I had not even thought of her."

How would Edith take this change of fortune? Edith? their lives had drifted so widely apart during the past ten years, that he scarcely knew, or understood her. She had cared little for luxury or social distinction, yet how changed was the fair, self-poised woman who bore his name, from that young girl who had strolled with him on moonlight evenings, beneath the old elms, so long ago.

Ah, well! She had still her small inheritance, for he had squandered nothing which was not his own. He had fully intended to run down to Harport last week and see how she was getting on, but it seemed impossible then, and now.

There was a rustle in the doorway, and against the dark portiere a woman's slender figure was outlined, in bold relief. The sensitive profile quivered, and a low voice, vibrant with feeling, murmured: "James, James, I simply had to come, and so took the evening train. I am glad, oh, so glad to find you here. How white and worn you look, though!

"But this has been such a sad—a dreadful day."

The man winced as at a touch upon a wound, but the low voice continued: "Let me tell you. This morning there was a terrible accident. I was at the beach when a young doctor, who had been stopping at the next cottage, was drowned before my very eyes. He was on his wedding trip, and the little bride, poor girl! is frantic. But, James, the shock and pity of it all made me see even more clearly than ever before, how little the world has to give us but these three things, life and love and death."

Her voice trembled, but with a gesture both winning and tender, she held out her hands. "Is it too late for us, even now, dear? You are an ambitious man, but have you not yet satisfied your pride? I'm not a sentimentalist, but aren't we losing something that is the best and sweetest part of existence? Nothing counts, you see, but these three facts, life, love and death."

And 'Death is swallowed up in victory,'" repeated the man, in a hushed monotone.

But the heart of the woman still sought expression. "I have been lonely, so lonely, James. If I had had a child—" She turned her head to hide the tears.

The man caught her in his arms. "But, Edith, listen!" he spoke with apparent effort, after a long silence; "I am a ruined man. You have not heard, but everything I own is swept away."

"A ruined man?" she echoed, in perplexity. "There can be no ruin save in dishonor, and you are not dishonored." Proudly she raised her head, and like a beacon to a shipwrecked mariner the light of her trust flashed its message of hope to the spirit of the man before her.

"No," rang his answer, thrilling with the inspiring power of reawakened courage. "Defeated, but not dishonored."

A look of almost maternal joy and yearning was on the woman's face, as she softly rejoined: "Then nothing seems lost. All that is best remains, and at last, oh, my dear! we know how much we need each other. Failure means so little, when it can bring even greater joy than success."

The hearer's glance kindled in response to her own. "Edith, how often have I heard your father quote the lines: 'What is our failure here but a triumph's evidence!' Never have I realized before how truly you are his daughter in spirit, as in flesh."

They stepped to a window, and raising the curtain, looked out. "See," she cried, in joyous evultation, "a new day is dawning. The night is gone, and the east is full of promise."

But the man looked not toward the east, but into the clear eyes of the woman, for in their light he saw not only the evidence, but the way.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Great indignation has been aroused here by the death of five dogs this morning from strychnine poisoning. Mayor McPhee's spaniel is among the poisoned animals, the others being valuable bird dogs.

Four other dogs were poisoned, but veterinarians saved them.

"THE GIRL QUESTION."

A Musical Comedy With a Plot, at the Lyceum.

A musical comedy with a plot. There you have "The Girl Question."

Without being in any sense an imitation, for the authors of the show, Hugh, Adams and Howard, have never been accused of lack of originality, the opera is something upon the new order of musical comedy, set by versatile and clever George Cohan. It combines nonsense, brightness, cleverness and an underlying plot.

Two large audiences witnessed the production yesterday afternoon and evening. It is safe to say that the audiences were not in the last disappointed in the production. In spite of the fact that "The Girl Question" has been before the public for some two or three seasons, the present production is resplendent in costume and scenic effects, and the members of the company act with that pleasing freshness of spirit and vivacity of action that one might expect from a new production of a musical piece.

Led by clever Paul Nicholson, who since the days of the Hoyt farces and his association with Alice Nelisen in the "Singing Girl," has shown steady improvement as an actor of light opera parts, the company was uniformly good. The company was especially fortunate in possessing good singers, and an excellent male chorus. In fact, the male chorus is one of the very best things in the show.

The action concerns the troubles of Con Ryan, uneducated, but none the less sound of head and good at heart, to solve that perplexing problem, the girl question. Con, like many another, "falls for the skirt game" and loses "the doll" he believes he loves. The girl he really loves in the sub-basement of his heart of hearts, is one of the constant kind. She hangs around, helps Con over the rough places, and it all turns out right in the end. Con marries the girl and gets a bunch of "pocket pads" in the bargain.

Paul Nicholson as Con Ryan, cafe manager, is very good, indeed. In fact, Mr. Nicholson is one of the best light opera comedians that has visited Duluth this season. There is nothing forced about his work. He doesn't have to strain to get a laugh. Mr. Nicholson is funny and entertaining without seeming to be trying to accomplish these effects.

Due credit should be given Carl George for his portrayal of the German baron. With his comedy work, Mr. George combined a gift for serious effect, that once in the last act, lifted his acting out of the vein of light musical comedy and marked him as an actor with a gift for more serious work.

George W. W. Barber, as the man with a talent for money making and a lack of fascination for woman, was good, as also was Miss Nina Collins as the wife of the flighty disposition. In addition to her gifts as a clever comedienne, Miss Collins possesses a very good voice, above the ordinary heard in light opera.

Miss Elsie Scott as the head waitress, the girl who waits upon Con's customers and upon Con's devotion, is fully equal to the requirements of the part—a part that requires some serious touches.

The chorus is good to look at, is well drilled and can sing. The Eddie Foy imitation stunt was clever. The ensemble effects were good, the stage effects above the ordinary, and the songs well chosen. The college songs deserved all of the applause they received.

The "Girl Question" will be repeated tonight.

"BRINDAMOUR."

Jail Breaker Feature of Good Bijou Bill This Week.

Three big holiday audiences witnessed an excellent bill of vaudeville at the Bijou yesterday.

"The Great Brindamour," advertised as the only original jail breaker, is the feature of the bill. The man performed some marvelous feats, freeing himself from tangles of handcuffs, and breaking out of an iron-barred cell with ease. He is said to be the only man who ever broke out of Sing Sing after being imprisoned, with hands locked, behind the bars of a cell.

The Meek international trio of strong men and gymnasts give a remarkable exhibition of strength, and Miss Bonnie Gaylord, a clever little comedienne, made a distinct hit in her original character, "The Girl From Posey County."

A highly entertaining act is given by Lewis and Young, singers, dancers and comedians. The Moneta Five, in the musical oddity, "An Evening at Home," pleased the audience greatly. There are three women and two men in the act, all of whom have good singing voices.

Isadore Silver with an illustrated song, and some excellent moving picture films complete the bill.

NEW BUILDINGS BEING PLANNED

Indications Point to Activity in That Line in Gilbert.

Gilbert, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—That there will considerable building at Gilbert this season by the number of liquor licenses askedfor. Among the Sparta saloonkeepers, who are going to open up here are: L. Rubenstein, Pat Murray, Joe Nostin, John Mustar, Anton Erchul, Frank Indihar, Anton Indihar and I. Bolick.

Nathanson Bros. of Eveleth and Virginia are planning to put up a two-story steam heated building for a hotel next to the saloon occupied by Paul & Mitchell. The building will be started as soon as the frost is out of the ground. John Mitchell, formerly proprietor of the Eveleth hotel, will run the Gilbert hotel. S. Sax of Eveleth has let the contract for a two-story frame building to Andrew Grande. Saari, Campbell & Kraker of Sparta have asked for bids on the lumber and supplies to be used for their building to be constructed here.

Karl Frederickson of Sparta is intending to put up a two-story building for a tailor shop and residence and has already let the contract. Contractor Grande of Virginia has been interviewing the Eveleth and Sparta people owning lots at Gilbert to see about building as has also Gust Anderson, formerly of Eveleth, but now of Chisholm.

Eveleth owners of Gilbert property will almost all of them put up some buildings at Gilbert as soon as the snow is all off the ground, so that the carpenters will certainly be busy.

WIN PLAUDITS BY PRODUCTION

Eveleth Seniors Produce "She Stoops to Conquer" Very Creditably.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—"She Stoops to Conquer" was presented last night by the senior class of the high school, before an audience that completely filled Vail hall.

The play was put on in creditable style and the parts were well taken, especially the Sir Marlowe of Harry Rabinowitz, which was like a professional's. He was at home on the stage and with Richard Floyd, in the funny role of Tony Lumpkin and Louis Andrews as the old and staid Mr. Hardcastle, carried off the honors in the male roles.

Esther Rabinowitz as the heroine, Miss Hardcastle, took her part in a very pleasing manner, and as the barmaid impersonating herself to deceive her contracted lover Sir Marlowe, acted well the part. Lillie Nieminen as the old Mrs. Hardcastle, invested her role with the proper spirit of old age given to garrulousness. Dale Cerveny as Hastings, Anthony Pryor as Stinge, Harry Anderson as the old servant Diggory, and Harvey Vandell as Sir O. Marlowe, all sustained their parts well. Elmer Hill, Axel Turnquist, Walter Corbin, Gordon Trengove and Percy Pryor appeared to advantage in minor roles. Irene Davey as Miss Neville, the sweetheart of Hastings, looked and acted her part well. Maidie Juntilla and Emma Engstrom appeared in minor roles.

As a whole the production was well given, and reflects credit on Misses Kendall and Denfeld, who have been drilling and coaching the participants in their parts for the past two months. A substantial sum was realized by the two performances yesterday, so that a very handsome memorial will be left by the class at the time of their graduation in June.

The high school orchestra made its first public appearance, and did very well, playing the overtures and between the acts. During the first intermission, Wallace Hall, leader of the orchestra, but the youngest one in it, played two violin solos that were greatly enjoyed by the audience, who demanded encores.

ICE RACES FRIDAY.

Events Scheduled for Monday on Ely Lake Put Over.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—A large number of devotees of horse racing drove out to the Shea homestead, along Ely lake, yesterday afternoon, where they expected to see a long card of races. On account of the recent snowstorm only a small part of the course was partially cleared off, the races scheduled for yesterday and today will be run Friday.

In place of the regular races, a few brushes were put on, mostly between horses belonfing to Mayor Smith, who was driving his fast mare. McGraw, trainer for Mayor Smith's horses, was driving, first behind one and then the other of Mayor Smith's colts, and was usually the opponent. The mare always beat her young ones who nearly always broke into a run whey they began to forge ahead. Horses belonging to Messrs. Eddy and Douglas were also out on the race course. The course is half a mile straightaway, and will be all cleared off for the long program of races Friday. Prizes will be hung up for the different events and a large crowd is expected from Eveleth and the surrounding towns.

Epidemic of Diphtheria in Settlement Near Hibbing.

Hibbing, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—A regular epidemic of diphtheria is said to be raging in the small settlement of Mitchell, about one mile east of here, where it is stated there is sickness in almost every one of the dozen or so families in the settlement.

Several people have been taken to Duluth the last week as there are no hospital accommodations in Mitchell.

The epidemic is said to have been caused by the drinking of impure water. The families have been using the water from a stream flowing through the Columbia and Nashua locations, into which, it is said, sewerage from the mines flows. The Missabe railroad is shipping water for the people from Hibbing daily and conditions are improving.

SHINGLE MILL AGAIN RUNNING

Lake County Lumber Company Starts Plant With Full Force.

Two Harbors, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Lake County Lumber company started their shingle mill yesterday with a full force, and a good summer's work in prospect.

The concern has recently purchased about 3,000,000 feet of cedar timber from J. Wheeler, to be shipped to them from Mile 60 and about 750,000 feet from other parties, to be shipped from Bassett lake. Besides they have cut a large amount for themselves east of York station and near Silver creek.

They have recently added a two-block shingle sawing machine to their equipment, which will about double their output.

The Woodford & Munford local sawmill men have about finished their cut of logs near town, and this week commenced hauling to their mill on Seventh avenue for summer sawing. They have also cut a large amount of cordwood for supplying their customers.

Owing to the incerasing business and switching at the log spurs, between here and Allen Junction, two crews have been put in the Mile 60 log run and the crews will lay at Biwabik over night, instead of returning here the same day.

would be caused by the government in presenting its case. Assistant District Attorney James H. Wilkerson took charge of the preliminary work. The bulk of witnesses and the documentary evidence will be the same as was presented in the other trial. Nearly all of the witnesses have been subpoenaed and 150 veniremen have been summoned. The defense is represented by Attorneys John S. Miller, Alfred D. Eddy, Moritz Rosenthal and Chauncey Martyn. It is expected Mr. Wilkerson will make his opening statement of the government's case Thursday. Mr. Sims refused to disclose the intended procedure of the government in the technical points involved.

Difference Between Hearings.

The new hearing will differ from the old in one respect only—the government will not contend that each lot constituted a violation of the law. The appellate court's decision precludes this. The government legal batteries will be trained in an endeavor to convince the judge and jury that each shipment, perhaps a car lot, perhaps a train load, was an offense. If successful in this line of argument, the judgment may be a fine of a maximum of $10,000,000 or a minimum of $5,000,000. The defense, on the other hand, it is said, claims that the settlements of freight charges constitute the alleged offenses. Of those the government alleges there were thirty-six, on which fines of from $36,000 to $720,000 may be inflicted. Even the maximum fine on this basis, the government declares, would render the law ineffective, as the maximum figure would be trivial compared with the supposed earnings of the defendant company. A no less vital question to which careful attention will be given, is what constitutes proof of rebating. On this point the appellate court found fault with Judge Landis in the original case.

A bitter skirmish signalized the opening of the retrial. Judge Anderson had been on the bench but a few moments when John S. Miller, of the defense, electrified those present by filed a motion to quash the venire of 150 men on the ground that it had been improperly drawn. Sixty per cent of the venire are farmers; only three are residents of Chicago, and but sixteen live in Cook county, which contains two-thirds of the population within the court's jurisdiction.

Surprise was visible on the face of District Attorney Sims when Mr. Miller called attention to the personnel of the venire. He promptly recovered, however, and sharply opposed the motion.

Blaine's language. Finally Mr. Blaine said he was speaking individually, "of course." "The obtuseness of some people is hardly worthy of admiration," said Mr. Blaine.

A recess was taken for half an hour.

After the recess a futile effort was made to have Mr. Blaine retract his opinion of the proceeding. He finally was sworn. Mr. Blaine admitted having prepared the charges against Senator Stephenson, even to typewriting them himself. As to the first charge that Stephenson had spent $106,500 before the expense account was filed, Mr. Blaine said his informant was E. A. Edmonds, one of Stephenson's managers.

When asked as to the $250,000 alleged to have been spent by Stephenson, Blaine began to say something about a "great deal of talk concerning what Stephenson had spent on the Free Press," when he was interrupted by E. M. Hyzer, attorney for Stephenson, who made a long argument against hearsay testimony being received. The attorney was overruled. Mr. Blaine then said that taking the statement made by the Free Press, Stephenson's organ, as to the cost of booming Stephenson, he figured it up to $250,000 or over. He considered the circulation of Stephenson's newspaper containing attacks on Former Assemblyman Ekern in Ekern's district, as improper use of money.

volver at him. On cross-examination Sharpe said, however, that Carmack turned his head just as the second shot was fired.

Daughters Listen Intently.

Col. Cooper is short, heavy set and very florid. He is somewhat bald, but what hair he has, like his mustache, is very white. His eyes are clear and hard and his face is free from wrinkles. As he began to talk, his two daughters leaned forward in their seats and drank in every word. The colonel said he was 64 years old, and that he has four sons and two daughters. Gen. Washington had the witness give his war record with Forrest. The state finally objected after some recital, and was sustained.

"I met Senator Carmack years ago at Columbia when he was quite young. I brought him to Nashville as editor of the American, and he remained with me until 1892, when he went to Memphis."

"Were your relations friendly?"

"More than friendly—they were cordial and close until his race with Senator Taylor four years ago. Then we disagreed."

"Did Carmack ever give expression to sentiments of gratitude to you?"

"Yes. When he went to Memphis in 1892, he wrote an editorial thanking me."

The defense offered the editorial and Judge Hart asked to see it. He marked part of it, and said he would permit that portion to go to the jury.

Carmack's Farewell.

It was signed by E. W. Carmack. The state next examined it and agreed to let the entire editorial in. The court also agreed. It was in the paper of Feb. 12, 1892, and was Carmack's farewell, in which he expressed regret at leaving the American, and gratitude to the paper and his friends.

"Did you, after he left, maintain friendly relations?"

"Absolutely so. We corresponded and the last very friendly letter I had from him was in December, 1904. Our relations were pleasant after that, however. At that time he was in the senate."

"Have you that letter?"

"I have," and witness produced it.

Gen. Washington took the letter and described its appearance for identification. Then it was passed to the state's attorneys. They objected to its introduction in full, but consented to the reading of the first paragraph. The court sustained the state's contention. The paragraph admitted read:

"Dear Colonel: I have tried to get Senator Mitchell of Oregon to locate some good place for Van, in connection with the Panama canal, as he is doing something for some one else. I am inclined to think the best thing Van can do is to tackle the president himself, and tell him what he wants. However, I will do anything I can."

The letter was signed, "Sincerely your friend."

Gen. Washington attempted to get in the rest of the letter, but failed. The Van referred to is a friend of Col. Cooper.

"I notice you are referred to as Col. Cooper. How did you earn it?"

"In the army, if I ever earned. I was commissioned as a colonel to go into the Federal lines and raise a Confederate battalion. Since then I have been called colonel."

"What was the first note of discord between you and Senator Carmack?"

"The relations were not cordial during the Carmack-Taylor senatorial contest. The first offensive note appeared in the Memphis News Scimitar in 1908."

Supported Taylor.

"Who started the changed relations?"

"Why I supported Taylor in that contest and he took offense. I regretted it very much."

"Who did you support for governor?"

"Governor Patterson."

"After that did you notice any further change in Senator Carmack's manner?"

"Yes sir. He ceased speaking to me."

"Had you done him any wrong?"

"I had not."

"What other indication of hostility did you observe in Carmack's attitude toward you?"

"Well there were articles in the paper. That Scimitar article—"

The state objected and demanded that the article be identified.

A wrangle followed which was ended by the court ordering that the examination proceed. The News Scimitar of March 15, 1908, was identified.

"Was that editorial written by Senator Carmack?"

"I was so informed."

"If you do not know that Carmack wrote the editorial, it is not competent," said the court.

FLED FROM HOMESTEAD

Wife of Settler Claims His Cruelty Was Unbearable.

Walked Twelve Miles Through Snow to Get Groceries.

Alleging that she was unable to endure the cruelty to which she was subjected by her husband and fled, with her youngest child, from his homestead, twelve miles west of Gheen, Mrs. Emma Fischer has brought suit in district court for divorce from her husband, Henry Fischer.

Mrs. Fischer's claim for a divorce is based on alleged cruelty. She is 28 years old, her husband is 42, and they were married at Fergus Falls, Minn., Feb. 11, 1896. There are three children, aged 8, 7 and 4 years. Mrs. Fischer claims that immediately after the birth of her first child, her husband began a course of cruelty, which continued until the time she left him.

She charges that he did not provide her and the children with the necessities of life and refused to work, though strong and able bodied. At times, she claimed, she was forced to walk twelve miles through the snow to Gheen to secure groceries, and in winter she and the children suffered on account of lack of clothing. She was forced to make clothing for the children out of anything that might come to hand, she claims.

The two older boys have been on the homestead with their father since Mrs. Fischer left and she has charge of the younger child. She lives at Virginia. She asks divorce and custody of the three children.

ney's resolution to refer the Armour Packing plant site controvery to a joint committee. The debate took up the entire morning session, and was continued over with the other business to a session this afternoon.

Senator Hackney of St. Paul explained his resolution, which provides for referring the fight to a committee, consisting of six members of each house, two from each of the interest cities and two from the country, to act with such committee as the mayors of St. Paul and Minneapolis choose to appoint.

Minneapolis, speaking through Senator Wilson, opposed the resolution as foolish and ineffectual. He said that Minnesota is offering every encouragement to new industries, and two years ago it refrained from adopting certain legislation to encourage the construction at Duluth of a great steel plant, and very properly. He thought this industry should be encouraged, too, and he charged that St. Paul's opposition to it is due solely to jealousy of Minneapolis, because after the plant was located St. Paul tried to get it for South St. Paul. He also charged that the present fight is backed by the Great Western railroad and the Swift Packing company of South St. Paul. If St. Paul is so terribly sensitive, why doesn't it abolish the cheap restaurants where liver and cabbage, limberger cheese and German fried potatoes emit odors?

Senator Durment of St. Paul retaliated by saying that the moneyed men of Minneapolis would sacrifice the state university or any other institution for the sake of money.

Senator Fosseen will introduce this afternoon a bill correcting the law relating to school text books in order to make certain the right of Minneapolis and Duluth to give free text books. A doubt of their right to do this under the present law has been raised by the Minneapolis city attorney.

The house this morning, in committee of the whole, advanced to the calendar the Nimocks bill, moderating the anti-pass law, so as to exlude from its provisions policemen, firemen, mail carriers and railroad employes, holding non-salaried public positions.

The bill by Representative Congdon of Duluth, providing that bills affecting cities shall not apply to cities having home rule charters, was advanced to the calendar in the house.

The Kneeland bill, providing for a constitutional convention, was, on motion of Wells, made a special order for March 3.

The house judiciary committee voted this morning to recommend for passage the bill giving St. Louis county an additional judge.

The following bills came into the house: Nolan, broadening police powers of state board of health; White, prohibiting false certificates of measures and weights; Conroy, prohibiting theaters from privately selling choice seats before the date of the published seat sales; Ferguson, allowing townships to vote money for docks and breakwaters; Hinds, appropriating $10,000 for state road through Itasca park; McGrath, providing a 4 per cent gross earnings tax on banks; Opsahl and Sultrud, five bills adding agricultural education to the public school courses.

CENTURY TRUST WILL ATTACKED

Heirs of D. C. Stover, Illinois Millionaire, Charge Gross Frauds.

Freeport, Ill., Feb. 23.—Litigation has again been started to invalidate the hundred-year-old trust will of the late Daniel Carroll Stover, millionaire manufacturer of windmills in this city. Charging Judge H. Stearns, Harry H. Antrim, cashier of the State bank, and J. Fred Smith of the Stover Manufacturing company with gross fraud, Porter Stover of Freeport and Mrs. Mae Winger of Ravenswood have filed an amended declaration in the Stephenson county circuit court demanding that the will be set aside and that the property be awarded to them.

Mr. Stover died a year ago and left a will tying up his estate for practically a hundred years. Stearns, Antrim and Smith were named as trustees at a munificent salary, while his two children were cut off with annuities of a couple of thousands dollars.

Mr. Stover, at the time of the making of this will, had become possessed of a mania for the accumulation of money and its preservation intact, according to the document of his children, who alege tha' the present trustees, by representing tha' 'ne manufacturer's name would be kn wn to posterity as a great benefa'tor, induced him to sign this so-called unjust document.

TANGLE OVER "$50,000 RUG."

Persian Vice Consul Says $400 Probably Would Cover Value.

Washington, Feb. 23.—That "most beautiful imperial rug that has ever been seen in this or any other country," presented to President Roosevelt for the White House by H. Topakyan of New York, seems to have involved Persian diplomacy in a tangle.

H. G. Kelekian, Persian vice consul in New York, has called the attention of Gen. Morteza Khan, Persian minister at Washington, to the title of "imperial Persian commissioner," which in news stories was accorded to "Mr. Topakyan."

Another point upon which the vice consul and the donor of the rug differ is its value. Mr. Kelekian suggested that $400 probably will cover its value, while Mr. Topkyan thought a valuation of $50,000 more adequate.

IRELAND SEES POPE AGAIN.

Archbishop Received for Fourth and Last Audience by Pontiff.

Rome, Feb. 23.—Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul has been received for the fourth and last time during his present visit by Pope Pius X. The last audience was marked by the greatest cordiality.

The pope said he was very anxious to interest all archbishops, bishops and the clergy generally in the United States in the great work of the revision of the text of Vulgate, declaring that he regarded it as most important at the present hour.

Archbishop Ireland promised his hearty support and made some suggestions as to the best way of promoting it in America.

obtain the best protection possible in the new measure.

Senator Simons of North Caroline is among the Southern Democrats who take the position that Southern products should be properly taken care of in a protective bill, and he will devote special attention to the lumber schedule, which he apprehends will be vigorously attacked.

Andersonville Prison Land.

If congress finally passes the bill now before it authorizing the acceptance of the land around the old Andersonville prison, as it is in a fair way to do, the government will find itself in possession of a fairly well established park, which it is hoped will remain forever a memorial of experiences in the most notable Southern prison of the Civil war. The property consists of eighty-seven acres, purchased from the original owner by the Grand Army of Georgia. Not being prepared to improve the park, as was considered desirable, the Grand Army turned it over to the Woman's Relief corps, which is an auxiliary of the National Grand Army. This corps has improved the ground, building a residence upon it, constructing fences, etc. The states of Massachusetts, Ohio, Michigan, Rhode Island and Wisconsin have also erected monuments. Movement to have the government accept the property, and make a park of it is one in which the entire Grand Army has taken an interest.

Burton Backs Up.

In reply in the house of representatives to Mr. Rainey's speech of yesterday regarding the Panama canal, Representative Burton said he objected to conjuring up wrongs and buttressing them with slander and falsehood.

On demand by Rainey that the words be taken down, Burton withdrew the statement, but declared it had been uttered under great provocation.

Burton said Rainey had abandoned for the most part his accusations made in prior speeches, "and goes afield and brings in a new lot of accusations relating for the most part to a treaty now pending between Panama and the United States, and involving Columbia as well. He declared that it would have been more edifying to the house and more instructive to the country if Mr. Rainey had proven the accusations he made.

"It is impossible," he exclaimed, "that there should be such childlike, such careless abandonment of the rights of this country as to lead to the results which the gentleman had portrayed." As regarded the timber contract, he said that that was an old scandal.

Wants Full Justice.

Burton declared full justice should be given the men engaged in the work of building the canal. "We should uphold their hands," he exclaimed, "and protect them against false accusations." Men, he said, who would attack those engaged in that work had found it necessry to go down into the miasmic swamps and polluted pools of Panama itself.

Burton declared Rainey should retract his remarks against President-elect Taft. Rainey's remarks, Burton said, had been on the level of the scurvy politician. There were far weightier matters that the house could consider. Rainey, Burton declared, had taken up the cudgels of a disappointed side, "and taken up their material without analyzing it."

Brito palo tribune to Cromwell, President Obaldia and others mentioned by Rainey. He spoke of his senatorial contest with C. P. Taft and said he never heard a word against Taft that reflected on his honesty as a man, or connected him with any plans of exploitation. "Are we not stepping below the level on which we stand," he inquirde, "when we bring in private citizens here and openly accuse them of that which brings contumely and corruption?"

He challenged Rainey to make his statements out in the open. "Will he," he asked, "when he is outside the protection afforded by the constitution and rules of this house, will be, out in the open, make the statements that he has been making here on the floor ow this house? Will he make so free with reputations as he has in addressing us?"

The Agricultural Bill.

The agricultural appropriation bill carrying $13,773,276, an increase of $889,450 over the bill as passed by the house, was reported to the senate. The forest service secured an increase of $500,000 for fire protection. An increase of $156,690 is made for the bureau of plant industry, of which $40,000 is to promulgate standards of cotton; $22,500 to determine the grades and conditions of grain offered for sale by producers and $103,530 to fight the cotton boll weevil. For additional animal industry quarantine and inspection works $55,000 is added. The bureau of experiment stations is instructed to report upon the best methods for preparation of human food. Provision has been made to enable the secretary of agriculture to inspect and control the importation of biological products to prevent further outbreak of foot and mouth disease.

When La Follette Was Absent.

Senator Aldrich today interrupted the routine proceedings long enough to submit a privileged resolution and have it agreed to, continuing the present committees of the senate until their successors are named at the next regular session. On account of Senator La Follett's recent attitude towards committee assignments the resolution attracted more than usual attention. The Wisconsin senator was not in the chamber when the resolution was agreed to.

"Canned Music" Bill.

The senate and house committees on patents have agreed on the "canned music" section of the copyright bill along the lines of the Currier bill, which has passed the house. Senator Smoot has introduced the bill in the senate and will make an effort to have it passed so the measure may become a law at the present session. The provision for the protection of the composers of music is that they shall receive a royalty of 2 cents upon each disc or roll manufactured for reproduction of the music on a technical device. The building up of a monopoly is prevented by a clause providing that if reproduction is permitted by the composer any concern may have the right to reproduce the music upon payment of the royalty.

Judge Purdy Affected.

By reason of an agreement of the senate committee on judiciary not to report to the senate any more nomination at the present session, several federal judgeship appointments will fail of confirmation at the present session, and unless the nominations are made by Mr. Taft the incumbents of the offices will receive no pay for the time they have served.

Among the judgeships that have failed are Milton D. Purdy of the District of Minnesota; John F. Sater, Southern district of Ohio; Oscar R. Hundley, Northern district of Alabama; Royal A. Gunnison, district of Alaska, and Herbert F. Seawell, Eastern district of North Carolina.

Substitute Postal Bank Bill.

Senator Carter has presented a substitute for the original postal savings bank bill. The substitute creates a board of five trustees which is to exercise entire supervision of the postal savings bank system. This board is to consist of the postmaster general, the attorney general, the secretary of the treasury and two civilians to be appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, the civilians to receive $10,000 a year each. The board of trustees is empowered to determine in what banks shall be deposited the funds entrusted to the postal bank, and will have the discretion of selecting either national or state banks, or both. It is empowered also to determine the class of securities which may be required from banks receiving the deposits and the manner in which such deposits shall be invested.

It is required, however, that these investments shall be made in accordance with the laws of the state where the investments are made, which will permit state banks to loan money on farm lands in such states where such loans are authorized. The new bill makes no change in the interest rates.

Calls for Information.

Representatives Gaines of Tennessee has introduced a resolution directing the United States district attorney for the Southern district of New York to submit to the grand jury all the information and evidence obtainable which tends to show probable cause to believe that the merger made by the United States Steel corporation and the Tennessee Coal & Iron company was a violation of the anti-trust law.

The resolution also requests the United States district judge for the Southern district of New York to charge the grand jury to investigate the merger.

Brainerd, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Proprietor P. M. Johnson of the National hotel is to answer in municipal court tomorrow to the charge of beating Henry Hurley, night captain of police, Saturday night during a dispute over closing the bar at the National hotel. Johnson, is is eclaimed, would not close the bar promptly at 11 o'clock and the officer upbraided him for non-observance of the law. An altercation resulted. Officer Hurley secured help and took Mr. Johnson to the county jail, where he remained until Monday morning, and the officer continued his duties that night, but was unable to be on duty Sunday night. He is under the care of Dr. C. A. Reimstad, who states that he is badly bruised, having been kicked about the head, but that he does not consider his injuries dangerous.

OFFER CONOLY HELP.

Stillwater Suspect Receives Message of Encouragement.

Stillwater, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Conoly, who has a long string of other names, and who is held on a charge of attempting to pass a forged check at the First National bank, Monday received his first communication from a friend. It was a telegram from New York and signed, "Nemo."

It stated that articles had been seen in newspapers indicating that he was in trouble, and asked what he had done. It also stated that money would be sent if needed. The telegram was handed to Conoly in the county jail by Sheriff Oscar Ostrom. The fact that the telegram was signed by a fictitious name indicates that the sender was not willing to disclose his ideitity here.

Chief Roland F. Barnes has lately been receiving letters that show that Conoly or some one else had been working the raised check scheme in various cities during the early days in February, starting at Bath, Me., and making a trip along fast railroad lines westward.

SHIED AT OPERATION.

So Soldier Gets Reprimand in Court-Martial Proceedings.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Because he refused to submit to a surgical operation to his knee which would have cured him from a disability which prevented him from walking, Private Richard Benson of Troop E, Fourth cavalry, was sentenced by a recent court-martial findings, "to be reprimanded by the reviewing authority." The reviewing authority, however, has disapproved of the sentence, regarding it as totally inadequate punishment for the offense.

According to the post hospital authorities. Benson's injury was the result of a sprained knee. The operation was to have been performed, but Benson was afraid to be cut, and refused to submit to it.

HENS LAY IN SNOW.

Miller, S. D., Feb. 23.—As boys were sliding down a huge snowbank on the Briggs & Roberts ranch, west of town, they sank into the drift as though falling into a cave. In the bottom of the drift were some hens that had been covered up by the snow. Strange to say, the chickens were doing well enough in their snowbound quarters, one of the hens having gone right on laying eggs while thus buried.

SIBLEY COUNTY FARMER HANGS SELF IN BARN.

Gibbon, Minn., Feb. 23.—Fred J. Glassbrenner, a farmer who lived about two miles southwest of this place, was found by his hired man, Nels Trueson, hanging from a rafter in the barn. There was still a little life in the body when the hired man cut it down, but death came before medical aid could be summoned.

The cause for his action is not exactly known, but it is thought his land was heavily encumbered, and that he could not face the end. Two letters bidding farewell, and containing a few last requests, were found beneath the body. He was 60 years old, and leaves a wife and nine grown children. The remains were taken to Minneapolis for burial.

EXPECT LIVELY SESSION.

Something Doing When Crookston Council Meets Tuesday Night.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—A fight is expected to be launched at the city council meeting tonight, when the ordinance prohibiting all manner of card games, or games of chance of any kind, in poolrooms, and which also aims to close them at 11 o'clock at night and all day Sunday, comes up. The poolroom men claim the ordinance was incited by saloonkeepers, and it is very doubtful if the measure will pass, unless it is made to apply to saloons and confectionery and cigar stores. The election of a successor to B. F. Zerracher as alderman from the Second ward, who has resigned, is also tangled up in the fight, and a merry time is predicted.

FAIR PLAY VETOES IT.

That a tonnage tax upon iron ore is illogical, uneconomic and unjust and that it is inspired for the most part by the alluring prospect of getting something for nothing, has been proved so many times that even those who have been most insistent for the tax are looking at it with doubt if not with positive disfavor.

The difficulties into which the state would get itself by committing itself to such a form of taxation are strikingly set forth by the brief submitted to the house committee on taxes by the St. Louis county delegation, wherein, in particular, it is pointed out that a tonnage tax is a tax which would be levied upon one section of the state alone, Northeastern Minnesota. This very fact makes the tonnage tax full of dangers to the state, even were the tax to be justified upon every other ground. Honest men will hesitate to enrich themselves by a method which invites piracy, and a method of taxation which compels one comparatively small section to supply all the public funds and allows all the rest of the state to go scott free from taxation for state purposes, certainly invites to piracy. Suppose a tonnage tax levied and producing a revenue, as now claimed by its advocates, sufficient to meet all state expenses, it would be impossible for the members of the legislature from the other eighty-four counties of the state, when debating a proposed appropriation of public funds, to be entirely free from a feeling of indifference to the size or the purpose of the appropriation. They and their constituents would not be called upon to furnish the funds; St. Louis county would furnish them. The object of the appropriation might be desirable or undesirable, but there would be absolutely no sense of personal financial responsibility to restrain the overwhelming majority of representatives from eighty-four of the eighty-five counties of the state. To quote the language of the brief: "Not only does the balance of the state not contribute to the tax, but the greater this tax is, the less it is for all the balance of the state. A more ingenious scheme to create a continuous pressure for the increase of the taxes for this portion of the state could not be conceived."

Granting for the purpose of the argument that every other consideration favors the imposition of a tonnage tax, the fact that the tax is to be levied in but one portion of the state, that the proceeds of the tax are to go to the state, and that such proceeds will be sufficient to meet all state taxes, proves beyond the possibility of successful contradiction that the theory of the tonnage tax upon iron ore is economically unsound. If the whole state begins fattening itself at the expense of a minor fraction of the state, where will the thing stop? When will the greed of the state in its overwhelming power be satisfied? What new iniquity will tempt it next with a promise of rich returns?

Such a system of taxation is not a square deal at all. It is not fair play. Moreover, it involves grave dangers to the state. The spirit of fair play and the sound wisdom of common sense which puts a ban upon unrestrained license, both forbid it.

WHAT WE HAVE BEEN LOOKING FOR.

If he is a benefactor of the human race who can make two blades of grass grow where but one grew before, what shall we say of the man who can make the desert to blossom and bear fruit?

Here is this subject of dry farming again. It will not down. How can it when it is working miracles? If a county, apparently a desert, with less than half the rainfall usually regarded as necessary to good farming, and without irrigation, can be made to produce large crops of hay, grain and fruit each year, isn't it high time for the farmers of some rich agricultural sections as Minnesota and the Dakotas, of Illinois and Iowa and the middle West to consider why their own methods do not yield larger returns?

Dry farming has been carried on in the county of Lincoln, Colorado, in the heart of the 'Great American Desert" for twenty years. The annual rainfall in this county in the past ten years has been less than seventeen inches, which is less than one-half of the annual rainfall of Minnesota. Last year the precipitation in Lincoln county was 4.75 inches (Sept. 1, 1907, to Sept. 1, 1908.) The farms of the county are not irrigated. The major portion of the precipitation occurs in the months of March, April and July. Yet in the face of this famine of water, there have been produced in Lincoln county the following crops: oats averaging from 25 to 60 bushels per acre, wheat yielding 12 to 35 bushels per acre, sugar beets running from 10 to 15 tons per acre, corn from 15 to 45 bushels per acre, fodder grasses 1 to 2½ tons per acre, turnips 10 to 20 tons per acre, potatoes 3 to 8 tons, alfalfa, cut three times a year, from 4 to 4½ tons per acre for the season. Apple and other fruit trees have been bearing profitably in the country for several years.

How do they do it in Lincoln county, Colorado? By conserving the moisture in the soil, and these are some of the means of conserving it: plowing the land only when it is moist, plowing deep, harrowing the same day that the land is plowed, harrowing especially after rainfalls and when weeds appear, discing the stubble immediately after the harvesting, cropping the ground in alternate years and allowing it to lie fallow the intervening years.

If such methods will produce good crops in a desert, what will they produce if applied to the fertile prairies of the Northwest? Necessity is the mother of invention and the dry farmer has been obliged to find out methods of conserving the moisture and other resources of the soil. In so doing he has rendered a valuable service to every farmer; and those of us in the rich agricultural sections of the Middle West and the Northwest, who are beginning to take thought to the matter of economical farming, have had already tested for us the very methods for which we have been seeking.

The third trans-Missouri Dry Farming congress opens today at Cheyenne, Wyo., for a three day's session. Its deliberations will be of interest to every farmer in the country and to every man who is interested in the agricultural development and productiveness of the whole country.

EDUCATION BROUGHT TO US.

The original conception of a university was a place to which one might go to learn; the modern idea is that it is a means by which education may be brought to every individual.

This is the idea that gave birth to the university extension movement. From coming to be a feature of university work, the university extension scheme is fast coming to be the thing which characterizes the university beyond all others. That day is long past when the university is simply a place where Latin and Greek and mathematics and history might be learned by those who had the time and the money to go there and study such things. The university is now becoming an institution of original research and a means by which the latest conclusions of thought upon all matters which interest man may be disseminated to all men. We have not yet reached the time when the university has become universally useful, but the time is fast approaching. We are drawing nearer to it every day. The university now teaches not only academics and law and medicine but farming, and dairying and life insurance, and railway traffic and municipal government and accounting and stock raising and many other things, and in a very few years it will be teaching a great many more things that man in his struggle with life is intensely interested in. Not only will it teach these things but it will not be content, it is not now content, with teaching them in the buildings on the university campus, but it is bringing, and will increasingly continue to bring, its knowledge to the very threshhold of every man's home.

Does this sound Utopian? On the contrary it is the very essence of practicability. If you have not thought much about the matter, perhaps you have considered university extension as simply a matter of university professors journeying here and there, when well paid for it, and giving lectures on academic or scientific subjects, lectures which you grant might be improving to the mind, but which between your necessary work and your needed play, you feel that it is impossible to avail yourself of. But here is something that may interest you. Here is the University of Minnesota offering five lectures on business subjects, namely: "The Fundamental Theory of Life Insurance," "Investments," "Individual Fortunes and How They are Acquired," "Railway Traffic Control," and 'The Work of Wall Street." Any city or town can secure these lectures, given by men who are specialists, at a cost which puts them within the reach of all. Here is something that is extremely practical for every business man.

This is only a suggestion of what the university is attempting to do and what it is planning to do. The university has been sending out lecturers to talk to the farmers for several years and that without any cost whatever to the farmers except the common burden of taxation. It will within a few years be extending the same work to practically every trade and profession. In other words, the aim of the modern university is to be universally useful within the radius of its territory of action.

The time is passing when the university can be called the "seat of learning." If the people will not come to it, it will go to them.

COURSE OF BUSINESS.

Duluth and the Iron Range country in particular are naturally much interested in the announcement that the United States Steel corporation is to maintain an open market and there is much speculation as to what will be the effect of the company's determination to wage an active campaign for business.

If the company succeeds in booking big orders a revival of business is surely indicated, a revival in which the whole country is interested. If the reduction in prices gives an impetus to building operations, all classes of the steel trade will feel the effect and orders will pour in upon the independents as well as upon the Steel corporation. The immediate effect in St. Louis county will be a shipping season from which more is to be expected than from the season of 1907.

According to Pittsburg dispatches to The Herald, published last evening, the orders booked by the Carnegie Steel company, a subsidiary company of the Steel corporation, during the past few days are almost equal to the total orders booked during 1908. If orders keep coming in at this rate a very large amount of ore will be mined in the Minnesota district during the coming season. The situation is a most hopeful one.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Charles Trettenla of Eveleth stated at the St. Louis yesetrday that the pay roll of the Eveleth mines at the present time was normal. This is despite the fact that mining upon the range is very quiet right at the present time. Mr. Trettenla says that they are doing a very large amount of stripping at the Eveleth mines, that a large number of men have been employed there all winter, and that the indications are that an increase will soon be made.

"Eveleth is the busiest town upon the range today," said Mr. Trettenla. "We have not felt the dullness in business up there, and most of the mines have been doing a lot of stripping this winter. With a good many men steadily employed through the winter, the business of the town has been very good. The people of Eveleth have no complaint to make about business. We have received our share of it this winter. Eveleth is growing faster than any of the range towns, and, remember what I say, it is going to be the biggest town upon the range."

John Healy of Hibbing was a guest of the St. Louis yesterday. Mr. Healy, who has been very much interested in securing first-class baseball for the fans of the iron range country, and who was the donor of the Healy cup, which the Virginia team, contrary to all expectations, and showing an utter lack of feeling for Mr. Healy and the members of the Hibbing team, won, believes that the coming season will be one of the most prosperous that the teams of the range have ever enjoyed. He says that baseball fans on the range are already beginning to sit up and babble baseball; that the men interested in baseball at Hibbing and Virginia have begun to look around for material that will enable them to put the best teams in the field, and that every indication points to an article of first class baseball upon the range this year.

Mr. Healy stated that he did not know whether Coleraine and Eveleth would be represented this year. Baseball was more or less of an experiment at Coleraine last year, and some people have reason to doubt whether S. H. Plummer cares to act in the role of experimenter again.

However, Mr. Healy is of the opinion that even if Eveleth and Coleraine have teams that are in the class of the fast ones of Hibbing and Virginia, they will have baseball at those towns, and good baseball at that.

John R. Phillips, department manager for one of the big packing houses of Chicago, Schwarzschild & Sulzberger, stated at the Lenox yesterday that through the co-operation of the agricultural colleges and the buyers of some of the biggest packing houses in the country, the grade of cattle raised in this country for the market has been greatly improved. Mr. Phillips says the agricultural colleges have pointed the way and the more enterprising of the packers have seen the wisdom of the college instructors and have proceeded to carry out their advice.

This has resulted, Mr. Phillips says, in greatly improving the line of cattle that comes to the Chicago markets. It has resulted in many cases in entirely doing away with the rangy steer, that ran the plains like a thoroughbred horse, and has, through the proper breeding methods, introduced the blocky, compact, steer to the markets of this country.

"College professors have told the farmers and breeders of the country to have a great bull, one with great class and character in him, at the head of their herds," said Mr. Phillips. "When the packers of the country saw what a beneficial effect this was having upon improving the general appearance of calves of only fair cows, they immediately began to urge the big cattle breeders of the country to place the best type of beef bull among their range cattle. The result is that today the Americn cattle market is receiving the best cattle in the history of this country.

"We are receiving the blocky, broad-backed and deep chested beef type. The packers have encouraged the breeding of the best class of beef cattle by paying the best price for the higher class of animal. A cattle breeder that comes to Chicago with a bunch of indifferent stuff will find that he has to wait until about all the better animals are sold before his cattle will be looked at. Then he has to be satisfied with about the bottom market price. Cattle breeders have found that it pays them to buy the best sires they can secure, many of the cattle breeders in the Western states importing the best bulls.

"I am willing to give the men interested in the improvement of cattle, the instructors of the agricultural colleges of the country, full credit for the part they have taken in the improvement of the beef animal of this country. But I think, with all due modesty, that the more enterprising packers of the country should also receive some of the credit. Of course, the improvement of the general run of the cattle of this country is more or less of a selfish motive with the packers. However, they have seen the great need of cattle breeders of this country, and they have assisted in supplying that need, no matter what the ulterior motive was."

THE WEATHER.

And still the mild weather continues. The weatherman looks for a little colder weather tonight, with the lowest temperatures from 5 to 10 degs. above zero. The snow flurries will also continue. Such weather as this is ideal for outdoor tramps, and many enjoyed cross country walks in Duluth yesterday. There is hardly enough snow for snow shoes in the district about the city, but if the promised snow materializes, conditions will be just about right.

A year ago today the weather was almost the same as it is today.

The sun rose this morning at 6:59 and will set this afternoon at 5:44 o'clock, making ten hours and forty-five minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"A storm of moderate intensity is central this morning over Missouri. It has caused widespread rain or snow throughout the central valleys, lake region and South Atlantic states during the past twenty-four hours, as well as warmer weather to the eastward of the Mississippi river. The barometer is rising and the temperature is falling over the Rocky mountain region and Western Canada, with highest pressures centered over Southern Idaho and Sashkatchewan. Zero temperature prevailed in Saskatchewan. The easterly movement of the Missouri storm will cause snow at the Head of the Lakes tonight, while the Saskatchewan high pressure, in its movement to the southward, will cause much lower temperature here by Wednesday morning."

Hard Luck.

He drew to a flush
And was much afraid
That the flush he wanted
Would not be made,
But it was! He ducked,
And skew-geed his head
And looked at the corner—
The card was red!
Then he pushed a stack
And admired his luck,
And he hoped some other
Poor man had struck
The card he wanted;
And someone had!
A little "filly"
Put him in bad,
You can't tell a tale
Like that unless
There's a moral to it.
And you can guess
What the moral is
To this tale quick;
If you fail to fill
In a draw don't kick;
Sometimes a "filly"
Will knock you cold;
There are other cards
Than the ones you hold.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Where a girl is smart is to be so pretty nothing else counts.

A man can get used to anything in the world except being a husband.

All the things that come to a man who waits are not the things he has been waiting for.

A great comfort to a woman about her children is all the comfort they are going to be to her some day.

A nice thing about having lots of money seems to be to those who have it that maybe they can get more.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Chicago News: One smile is worth a dozen frowns.

A blind horse is satisfied if he can feel his oats.

A deep-dyed villain is not necessarily a colored man.

Eating lobsters does not always make a man crabbed.

It is difficult to do much good without doing some harm.

Some men know more, some less, and some not even that much.

It's easier to get well on in years than it is to get well off in cash.

Lots of men would like to meet women who could drive them to drink.

Too many men talk an hour when they could say all they have to say in a minute.

You have no one but yourself to blame if you are deceived twice by the same person.

The early-to-rise part of the motto is all right for those who want to get up in the world.

It isn't being kissed that a girl objects to so much as the thought of his thinking she wouldn't resent it.

Some stingy people always manage to get to church about thirty seconds after the collection plate has been passed.

The woman who thinks it pleases her husband to accompany her on a visit to her relatives is entitled to another think.

Henry Watterson's Sorrow.

Springfield Republican: Col. Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, who will soon reach his sixty-ninth birthday, is at his winter home at Naples, near Fort Meyer, Fla. He was asked to speak at the recent Tampa banquet in honor of William Jennings Bryan, and sent a letter of declination in which appeared this pathetic passage: "The death of a dearly loved daughter, followed by the appalling tragedy which took from me a son who was the apple of my eye, leaves me stranded and helpless and wholly unequal to any kind of a publicity. Before I left home I canceled all my speaking dates and resolved never to again appear before any audience." The sympathy with Col. Watterson will be as wide as the country, and so is the hope that life for him is not so far exhausted as he fears.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Hibbing Tribune: If you never realized what a rich man you are, add yourself up by the Durment bill now before the legislature. Two hundred and fifty dollars for each big toe, and $100 a piece for the other toes. Two eyes, $20,000, hand and foot, $10,000, to say nothing of the appendix, etc., which ought to top you off to a million.

Waverly Star: The action of the house in passing a measure making the open season for hunting prairie chickens, quail, snipe, etc., shorter than heretofore, meets with the approval of many sportsmen, who believe that if the slaughter of the birds continues in future, as it has in the past, it will be only a short while when they will be a scarce article in these parts. A true sportsman always wishes to see the game protected at the proper seasons. The open season will commence in future on Sept. 15.

Mankato Free Press: One farmers' union, the Shenandoah, of Virginia, has decred a 15 per cent dividend, the result of a very prosperous year.

Fertile Journal: A picture of Grover Cleveland is to appear on a new series of $10 gold certificates. We do not suppose there is a sixteen-to-one man left in the country, however, who would shy at one of them because of that.

Red Wing Daily Republican: It has been wisely suggested that the congressional record should add a yellow supplement for its sporting department, which is outgrowing the rest of the publication.

Thief River Press: Electing a man to office is as sure a way of disvovering his faults as marrying him.

Appleton Press: If the sovereign people of Minnesota would promise never to elect Governor Johnson senator, the majority party might pass the McColl bill. Petty politics may keep Johnson out of the United States senate, but the Republicans have as yet found no way to keep him out of the governor's chair.

Wheelock's Weekly: The state paragraphers have begun booming Senator Ole O. Sageng for governor next year by asserting that he is not addicted to dress suits. If necessary he will head off the nomination by getting one. The Ninth congressional district is not yet through with Mr. Sageng.

Little Falls Herald: Thomas Lowry was the greatest optimist in Minnesota. And that's saying a good deal.

Zumbrota News: The Lincoln 2-cent postage stamp now out seems to reverse the verdict of history that Old Abe was one who never got licked.

Exit, Geronimo.

Kansas City Times: Old Geronimo, the head of the Apaches, is dead—peace to his ashes. As we are informed, upon scriptural authority, that "there is no work, or devise or knowledge in the grave," there need be no further fear from the machinations of the blood-thirsty old savage who was the terror of Western settlers for so many years.

Geronimo was certainly a picturesque figure, but he was none the less a very bad lot. He may have had "rights" upon which the "pale faces" encroached, but among these was not the right to slay, ravage and burn. People there are who will find it easy to weave a web of romance around the old Apache who passed his last years as a prisoner of war; but this job should be undertaken by persons who know only the story book Indian and who live "way off" from the habitat of the real thing.

"It is appointed once unto every man to die" and why not unto Geronimo? He "came to his grave in a full age, like as a shock of corn cometh in his season." With a temperament for mischief that was unsurpassed, his opportunities for harm were abundant, and he diligently improved them.

Geronimo is gone. The places that knew him shall know him no more forever. It is the way of the world. "The Lord gave and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

A "Free" Press.

Chicago Post: Indicted for libeling the president of the United States and the coming president, together with others either related to them by closetles of blood or holding high office in the government, the New York World once more raises its impudent cry in defense of "a free press."

This time it speaks not in behalf of itself but of the other newspapers of the country. As one included in this vicarious defense, the Evening Post can say that it neither desires nor needs the World's championship, and close perusal of the journalism of the country makes us believe that this is the general attitude. A "free press" the American newspaper wants and will fight for. But a licentious, vituperative press that prints as an attack upon the two men who stand highest among us a blackguardly yarn that has been commonly hawked about during a political campaign—for that kind of press our newspapers have no use and no regard.

We do not believe that the World's melodramatic appeal will bring that self-labeled "institution" any comfort. It is part of the responsibility of the fourth estate to fight for freedom. But it is as important a duty to fight for decency. As a whole our journalism will welcome rather than deprecate the effort to make the World obey the ordinary laws of human conduct as expressed in the law of the land.

A World's Shrine.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: When Lincoln was born no one could guess that a future president was in the log cabin and that, a hundred years later, another president would be on the spot to offer his share of the nation's tribute. The little backwoods farm will be one of the world's shrines.

A Daily Thought.

Elbert Hubbard: We are not punished for our sins, but by them.

MEANT TO BE FUNNY.

New York Sun: Commissioner—How do you desire to be uplifted?

Farmer Hayrick—Wal, ye might start in by growin' a better class of city boarders.

Cleveland Leader: "Old Cash landed in this country in his bare feet, ten years ago. Now he's got millions."

"You don't say!"

"Why, he's got a centipede skinned to death, hasn't he?"

Louisville Courier-Journal: "Ever been in jail?"

"Countless times. But that's no detriment to a man in my business."

"And what is your business?"

"I'm a chauffeur."

Cleveland Leader: "What would you do if you had a son like mine?"

"I'd work hard to get to be a millionaire."

"What—so that you could indulge his tastes?"

"No—so that he'd feel it when I disinherited him."

Life: "But why didn't you consult your father and me before you were married?"

"Because, mamma, I was afraid you might prejudice me against him."

Cleveland Leader: Him—How does she manage to keep her looks?

Her—Keep her looks? Why, she can't get rid of them, or she would, I suppose.

New York Sun: The Venus of Milo explained. "Pulled 'em off hanging on car straps," she said briefly. Thus we learn beauty does not always obtain a seat.

Louisville Courier-Journal: "Your story has considerable nerve, rattle, dash and go, yet it breaks down in spots."

"Well, what do you want in an auto story?"

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Are you interested in Prof. Wright's comments about glacial men?"

"Not particularly. I was in Boston not long ago and met several glacial women."

Philadelphia Record: "He who hesitates is lost," quoted the Wise Guy.

"Oh, I don't know," said the Simple Mug. "At any auction sale he who hesitates may save his money."

A Suggestion.

Kansas City Star: At the big Gypsy Smith meeting at Convention hall last evening things first began to move when the choir sang up strong and clear:

Arise, my soul, arise,
Shake off thy guilty fears;
A bleeding sacrifice
In thy behalf appears.

There had been before this some vocal exercises, including such examples as "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder," "Never Give Up," "Draw Me Nearer," "No, Not One," etc., but without any evidences of what you would call a "lodgment."

For people who really need "reviving" there are no touching memories or associations connected with the gospel hymns. They are too new and superficial to go to the heart and to arouse the soul.

But the old, sanctified hymns, of which "Arise, My Soul, Arise," is an example, carry with them an awakening power. They are replete with spiritual fervor. They enkindle memories of a time when religion was a verity and when people felt an unwavering faith in the manifestations of the Spirit.

Gypsy Smith comes from the land of John and Charles Wesley. He ought to have within him the grace and the unction of the fathers of evangelism. Let us hope that he will not get too far away from the old lines.

What miracle of grace might not be wrought in Kansas City if Convention hall could once more to swell and resound with that old and hallowed invitation to penitents:

Come ye sinners, poor and needy
Weak and wounded, sick and sore;
Jesus ready stands to save you,
Full of pity, grace and power.

Effort.

Sing some old song as you plod along,
Tho' briars wound thy feet,
Perchance the ear of some one near
May, listening, think it sweet;
Fond memories of the days gone by,
Your effort may recall,
The dearest thing of which we dream
Is childhood, after all.

Speak kindly cheer, for some may hear,
Altho' thy heart is sore,
And love imbued, with hope renewed,
Begin the fight once more;
Still bravely try with the tear-dimmed eye
Your feelings to repress,
For kindly speech imparts to each
Sweet comfort in distress.

And try to smile, tho' all the while
Deep sorrow mar thy brow,
For hear in mind that being kind
Shall help thee even now;
A sort of bliss accompanies this,
When tempted to do wrong,
That foils the plan of sinful man
And conquers, being strong.

EVILS OF INTERMARRIAGE.

Duluth Rabbi Waras Audience in Fargo Against Practice.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 23.—That every intermarriage between a Jew and a Gentile results in a loss to the former race was the keynote of a masterly address on Intermarriage, delivered by Rabbi M. Lefkovitz of Duluth, Minn., Sunday night, at Union hall. The speaker appeared under the auspices of the John Hay chapter of the Independent Order of B'nai Brith, and was greeted by a large and appreciative audience.

Intermarriage, said the rabbi, is inadvisable for many reasons. He would oppose it for the sake of the parties to the contract and the unhappiness that it brings to them. How, asked Rabbi Lefkovitz, can a Christian wife be happy when she thinks her husband is damned, and supposing a Jewish father is willing to allow his child to be brought up in the Christian faith, what can the child believe but that he and his mother will go to heaven and his father will not.

"I am proud of the man who founded Christianity," said Rabbi Lefkovitz. "He was born a Jew, He lived a Jew, and He died a Jew. But we cannot recognize Him as a divinity."

Spooner Woman Entertained International Falls Bridge Club.

Spooner, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. B. P. Eagan was hostess Friday evening at a bridge party, when she entertained the International Bridge club and their male friends. The rooms were tastefully decorated in the club colors, green and white. The game was played at four tables.

Terrible Red Patches on Face and Arms Made Victim Ashamed to be Seen—Suffered Intensely for Ten Months—Expert Treatment Gave No Relief—Two Sets of the

CUTICURA REMEDIES ENTIRELY CURED HER

"About two years ago I contracted eczema and suffered intensely for about ten months. At times I thought I would scratch myself to pieces. My face and arms were covered with large red patches, so that I was ashamed to go out. I was advised to go to a doctor who was a specialist in skin diseases, but I received very little relief. I tried every known remedy, with the same results. I thought I would never get better until a friend of mine told me to try the Cuticura Remedies. So I tried them as the last resource, and I am very glad that I did, for after four or five applications of Cuticura Ointment I was relieved of my unbearable itching. I used two sets of the Cuticura Remedies (Soap, Ointment and Pills), and I am completely cured. I always recommend Cuticura to any one that is suffering and in every case it seems to cure. PECULIAR POSITION

In Which Railroads Are Placed in Adjustment of Claims.

Find It Difficult to Avoid Charges of Discrimination.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Washington, Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—"Between the rate bill and the interstate commerce law as amended by that act the railroads are in a very peculiar position in the matter of the adjustment of claims," said a railroad official this morning. "It is an exceedingly difficult matter to settle a claim, whether for an overcharge of freight for damages to freight shipment or for anything that arises out of the passenger service without subjecting ourselves to a charge of discrimination.

"It has frequently happened since the enactment of the so-called rate law that absolutely just claims so recognized by railroads themselves, have remained unadjusted because of the fear that the charge might be made that the anti-rebate law has been evaded.

There is pending in one of the biggest railroad offices in this country before its claim department a demand for redress which the traffic manager insists should be adjusted immediately. The claim agent of the railroad appealed for advice to the general counsel who leaned back in his chair and quietly puffed his cigar remarked, "Young man if you pay that claim you will sure go to the penitentiary." The claim agent is between the devil and the deep sea and the fact that the United States legal authorities are at present prosecuting one of the big packers in Chicago because it is alleged that he is guilty of receiving rebates in the form of claims has complicated the situation still further and no one need be surprised if the railroads in self protection decide to settle no claims whatever until directed to do so by a court of competent jurisdiction.

F. K. Rhines of Youngstown, Ohio, who is connected with a big steel corporation in that city, while here the other day, in conversation with a number of gentlemen at one of the hotels, remarked upon the wonderful change in the fitting up of offices, which has been going on in the last few years. "Up to about ten years ago," said Mr. Rhines, "steel was unknown in the manufacture of furniture. One seldom saw in any office, whether it was a bank, a court or a government building anything other than wood made up into desks, filing devices and shelving, but about ten or twelve years ago there was a fire in the storage vaults of the United States supreme court. That fire destroyed many valuable papers which never can be replaced. The explosion, which accompanied the fire, did terrific damage and when it came to rebuilding the rooms the architect of the capitol, the late Mr. Clark, decided to install fireproof material in place of wooden shelving, cupboards, etc. Since that time manufacturers have made wonderful strides in the construction of steel furnishings, and today they are turning out beautiful work, which in artistic treatment equals that of the finest product of the cabinet makers and furniture manufacturers. Desks, tables, library stocks, filing devices, doors, window frames, wainscoting and partitions of all kinds are now made in steel, so finished as to imitate any species of wood, with the result that the government has practically adopted steel in place of wood for the postoffice fittings, storage vaults and other work of this kind. The army has within the past three years purchased 2,000 steel lockers for the storage of the men's clothing in the various forts and military posts and the marine corps is following suit. Steel counters have replaced the old wooden ones in the restaurants connected with the United States capitol, and thousands upon thousands of running feet of steel shelving have been substituted for the former unsightly wooden affairs upon which are stored documents and books by the millions in the various store rooms of the capitol.

"This is indeed the steel age," continued Mr. Rhines, "and whether or not congress decides to maintain the present duties on manufacturers of steel it is certain that the product of the manufactories of these office devices in steel will continue to grow in adverse proportion to disappearance of furniture wood from the forests of this country."

The committee on agriculture of the house has reported a bill which provides for the inspection of nursery stock. This was brought about first by the enormous ravages of the gypsy moth and the brown-tail moth, which insects have within the past three years practically defoliated nearly all the trees of New England. These insects were undoubtedly imported from Europe, but unfortunately the parasites who prey upon them did not immigrate with them, and consequently they have grown and multiplied, especially in Massachusetts, until they have become a menace to vegetation.

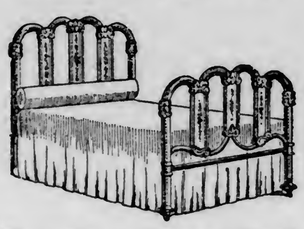

Until very recently the ravages of these moths have been confined to the states in which they first found lodgment, but lately nests have been discovered in Ohio and Virginia, and especially in New York, and this accounts for the activity on the part of the committee on agriculture in the present instance.

The damage which threatens orchardists unless some such plan as that proposed by the committee on agriculture is promptly adopted is shown in a letter received by Dr. L. O. Howard of the department of agriculture, signed by George G. Atwood, chief of the bureau of horticulture of the state of New York, in which Mr. Atwood says:

"We have found to date something over 1,500 nests of brown-tail moths in shipments from abroad. All infested stock so far comes from France, and the most of it from Angiers. The principal part seems to be in stock shipped by Albert Fermaud, Angiers, France. He is the agent for the Franco-American Seedling company, which embraces one-half dozen firms in the United States principally at Rochester, and Geneva. In one lot we find that P. Letouche was the grower of quinces that were infested with brown-tails and that Vigan Baudoin was a grower of apples that were infested. I believe that all of the Franco-American seedlings came by steamer, Texas, Mc Hutchinson & Co., importers, 17 Murray street, New York city, have distributed considerable infested stock. I think that McHutchinson & Co. received their stock by steamship Adriatic, and shipments were made over the Erie railroad to Dansville. We have a report of a shipment made to Brighton N. Y., by Barbier & Co., who are French nurserymen, but I do not know the postoffice address. The New York Central Railroad company, transported a good deal of Franco-American stuff from New York in bond to Rochester. Stock imported by Jackson & Perkins company, Newark, N. Y., from Charles Detrich, Sr., Angiers, France, was found infested. Stock received by Edward Bacon, Dansville, N. Y., through C. C. Abele, agents for Siebrie, France, whom I think is a custom house broker in New York city, was found infested. Edward Bacon, Dansville, N. Y., received infested stock from abroad through Roelker & Sons, agents, New York city. The Franco-American company, also shipped stock to the C. W. Stuart company, Newark, N. Y., received via steamship Caroline, shipped by New York Central Railroad company, in bond, to Syracuse. Vincent Lebrethon, Angiers, France, shipped forty-five boxes to Dansville. I do not know whether this lot was infested or not, as it has but recently arrived. Stock from Andre Leroy, whom I believe is located in Angiers, France. The above is rather scrappy information, but is the best that I can give you at the present time, or until our reports are all received."

which has practically been agreed to by the house committee, will be made to the upper branch of the assembly Wednesday afternoon. Two of the larger appropriations will be for the state university and agricultural college, each of which will receive in the neighborhood of $180,000. The Valley City normal bill has been cut from $200,000 to $130,000, the cuts all along the line being about in this proportion.

Governor Burke, it is expected, will submit a list of appointments to the senate the latter part of this week. As yet only a few nominations have been presented to the senate, and these have been acted upon. The nominations made include trustees for the school for deaf, school for blind and the institute for feeble-minded. There is considerable interest in the probable appointee to the position of state oil inspector. The present incumbent, F. A. Wilson, is a candidate for reappointment, and several others are in the field. It has been charged against the present inspector, who is a Democrat, that because of his friendliness to Judson LaMoure, state senator from the First district, and whom Mr. Wilson is said to have supported in the recent election, he is to suffer the loss of his position. Friends of Wilson assert, however, that he did not support LaMoure in his candidacy, and that the governor will reappoint him. The chief executive has made no statement in regard to it.

The game wardenships are also very interesting, and with two bills now in the assembly, both of them doing away with the present system, the question takes on added importance. W. N. Smith of Grafton, game warden for the First district, is a candidate for his old position, and is opposed by John Valelly of Grand Forks and several others. In the Second district the fight does not seem as warm.

The primary election fight is due for an early settlement. The struggle promises to be a very warm one, as during the recess the anti-White bill men have done some hard work in lining up their forces to secure the defeat of the measure that has been recommended for passage by the elections committee. The Cashel bill in the senate was given a hearing by the committee of that branch, but it will undoubtedly never be heard from again. The Skulason and Davidson primary bills in the house have also been relegated to the rear.

It is understood that the bill introduced by Representative Duncan, which provided for the abolishment of the Mayville normal school, will not be pushed. The Mayville and Traill county delegations that have visited the capitol since the bill was introduced, it is stated, have reached an agreement with those who were favorable to the bill, and the result will be that the message will die a natural committee room death.

The judiciary committee yesterday afternoon reported favorably on the bill introduced by Representative Kneeland of Stutsman county, providing for the regulation of the practice of attorneys in county courts of increased jurisdiction. The bill has been amended in a number of particulars.

Both the house and the senate investigating committees have started their work. The senate committee has had an accountant at work for several days in the office of Superintendent of Schools Stockwell, which is the only office that will be investigated by the committee of that branch of the assembly. The house committee has held several meetings, and will this afternoon present a resolution asking that it be given a month's additional time in which to make the investigation of the state offices as called for by the original resolution. The penitentiary investigating committee is also hard at work and it is not definitely certain whether a report will be forthcoming before the assembly adjourns.

FINDS BICYCLE.

Norman Hancock Identifies One Stolen More Than a Week Ago.

Norman Hancock, who lives at the Exchange hotel, called at the police station yesterday, and identified a bicycle there as belonging to him. The wheel was secured through the arrest a week ago, by Detective Perry, of a man giving his name as Leon Maletz. The detective saw Maletz and a companion in the Northern Pacific yards last week, and they looked like suspicious characters to him. He called to them to halt, and when they failed to stop he gave chase, and caught Maletz, who was later given five days in jail on a vagrancy charge. The man's companion also had a bicycle, and Andrew Manning, also of the Exchange hotel, said a bicycle had been stolen from him. Maletz will be taken to municipal court tomorrow on a petty larceny charge.

WILD GOOSE IS CAUGHT IN CITY

Bird Found on Superior Street, Too Cold to Fly.

"The early bird catches the worm," so the adage runs, but in the case of the wild goose, which early this morning came fluttering down in front of the Lowell block, the conditions were just reversed, for it was caught instead by Ernest Johnson, a bartender at the Sterling wine house.

Johnson was passing the Lowell block at about 6:30 o'clock this morning, when he was astonished, to say the least, to see a full grown wild goose, come fluttering down, and drop, almost at his feet. The bird was somewhat stunned, and seemed to be numb with the cold. It fluttered helplessly about, with Johnson in hot pursuit. The pursuit ended in Johnson finally landing on the goose and making it his captive.

The goose was an early bird in every sense of the word, for it is a very unusual sight to see one in this north land so early as the last of February. Something must be wrong with the calendars of the water fowls this year, for it was only last week that a wild mallard duck was captured in the city. They seem to have started their flight North too early.

The goose caught this morning apparently came in from the lake.

BROKEN MAIN FLOODS STREET

A break in the water main at Fifth avenue east and Superior street about 5:30 o'clock last night cut off the water in many homes, and made the operation of preparing dinner exceedingly difficult, and turned Superior street into a torrent.

A few minutes after the break occurred, Superior street was a river. Cars and vehicles splashed through six or eight inches of rushing water and people crossing the street and going out to board cars prayed for rowboats or bridges. There was discomfort and inconvenience for about an hour, after which matters resumed their normal state. The water supply was rather murky all evening in some sections of the city, but it cleared and the break was not attended by serious results.

BEAR RAID ON COPPERS

North Butte and Other Leaders Have Heavy Declines.

Local Curb Issues Feel Effect of Slump in Boston.

North Butte declined five points during a heavy selling session of the copper stock market today and other leading issues were driven downward about as heavily.

From the opening the attacks of the bears showed no let-up and prices continued to fall until the close of the session stopped it for the day. North Butte, Amalgamated, Calumet & Arizona and other issues which Duluthians follow closely, were the weakest.

The general depression of the metal market evidently caused the slump. The bears seemed confident, and the bulls discouraged, and there was scarcely a rally to stem the decline.

North Butte opened at $71.50 and declined to $66.50, closing at $66.25 bid and $66.50 asked.

Amalgamated opened at $71, advanced to $71.62½, declined to $68.50 and closed at $68 bid and $68.50 asked. Anaconda opened at $42.75, declined to $41, rallied to $40.50 and closed at $40.12½ bid.

Greene-Cananea went off from $10.25 to $10, but rallied to $10.25, closing at $9.87½ bid and $10 asked. Butte Coalition opened at $22.50, advanced to $22.50, declined to $22.75 and closed at $22 bid and $22.50 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $100, advanced to $101, declined to $98.25 and closed at $98 bid and $99 asked.

Superior & Boston sold at $15 and closed at $14.50 bid and $15 asked. Giroux sold at $6.75 and closed at $6.25 bid and $6.75 asked.

Superior-Pittsburg went off from $15 to $14.75, and closed at $14.75 bid. National was traded in at 60 cents and closed at 60 cents bid and 65 cents asked. Cactus was firm, selling at $1.50 and closing at $1.37½ bid and $1.50 asked. Butte-Montana sold at 41 and 42 cents and closed at 38 cents bid and 43 cents asked. Chief Consolidated sold at $1.25 and closed $1.25 bid.

Globe was inactive and closed at $5.75 bid and $6 asked. Denn-Arizona at $3.25 bid and $3.50 asked. Calumet & Sonora at $14 asked. Butte & Superior at $1 bid and $1.12½ asked. Red Warrior at $2.25 bid and $2.50 asked. Mowitza at $1.87½ bid and $1.50 asked. Carman at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked. Savanna at $2.25 bid and $2.50 asked. Butte-Ballaklava at $18 bid and $18.50 asked. Cliff at $1.75 bid and $1.87½ asked, and Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.62½ bid and $1.87½ asked.

Black Mountain sold at $2.37½.

INQUIRY INTO PENITENTIARY

Subject of Report to the North Dakota Legislature.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The penitentiary investigating committee made a report to the legislative assembly this afternoon, showing its progress up to date, and telling what can be accomplished before the session adjourns. The committee has worked on various rumors relating to penitentiary operations in the past years, bearing especially on twine manufacture, brick sales and coal purchases, also on the charges of cruelty to prisoners.

The report shows that it will be impossible to get any line on the twine plants work, in which department it was charged the greatest discrepancies had occurred. With reference to the treatment of prisoners, coal purchases and brick sales, the committee expects to be able to make a complete report next week.

Since its introduction into the English protectorate of Uganda, in 1907, the sleeping sickness has killed no fewer than 200,000 out of a total population of 300,000.

VICTIM OF HOODLUMS

Lonely Old Woman Is Persecuted by Gangs of Boys.

Two Fined for Entering Home and Locking Her Up.

Eugene Mork, age 19, and Paul Strom, age 21, pleaded guilty this morning in the West Duluth justice court to the charge of assaulting Mrs. Adla Nelson, an old woman residing alone at 618 South Sixty-third avenue west. They were released upon paying the costs of the trial and fines of $5 and $10, respectively, but not before Judge Flack had given them both a severe lecture, warning them against the road of crime they had just entered on, and advising them to turn back before it led them into more serious trouble.

The fathers of the boys were at the trial and backed the judge up in side lectures of their own, but on receiving the boys' promises to mend their ways, paid their fines.

According to Strom's confession at the trial, he and Mork went to the woman's lonely cottage Saturday night. Mrs. Nelson has been frequently annoyed by gangs of boys, who have pounded on her doors and even smashed one one night to get her up to let them in, so that they could have free run of the house.

Mork and Strom, when there Saturday night, aroused the woman and forced her to give them the keys to the rooms in the house. Then they pushed her into a room, where they locked her up. They went upstairs then, where they went through the drawers of the dresser. There they found a watch, a ring and some money. They took the watch and ring, but left the money. On going downstairs they found that Mrs. Nelson had fled to a neighbor's home, through a window. They tried to find her to lock her up again, but failed. They then became frightened at what they had done, so returned to the house and left the things they had stolen and the keys.

Judge Flack told the boys that they had been arrested on the lightest charge that could be placed against them in the case. They had committed an offense for which they could be placed in the penitentiary, but as it was their first, and they had never before fallen into the hands of the law, he would be lenient with them. He fined Strom $10, because it was he who proposed the expedition.

From the evidence it was learned that Mrs. Nelson has been for some time the victim of a gang of boys, who have committed all sorts of rowdyism in her home, and even taken money from her, trusting that she would not inform the police, because of her frailty.

WILL REPAIR FURNACE.

New Fire Bricks Must be Placed in Zenith Furnace Plant.

No pig iron will be turned out at the Zenith Furnace company for the next month, while the blast furnace undergoes repairs.

It has been discovered that a hole has been burned in the fire brick lining of the furnace about twenty-five feet above the melting line. This is an unusual place for the brick to burn out. It usually occurs below the melting line. This hole will necessitate the blowing out of the furnace, which will be done next Friday and Saturday, so that the burned fire bricks may be replaced. When the lining is repaired, steel bands will be placed around the furnace to limit the expansion.

At present it is not known what the repairs will cost, and it will not be known until the workmen can make a thorough examination of what damage has been done.

The coke ovens will be operated while the furnace is out of commission, and their output added to the stock pile.

CLUB AFTER 200 NEW MEMBERS

Commercial Club Will Begin Active Campaign at Once.

A crusade for new members will be inaugurated by the Duluth Commercial club.

It is expected that more than 200 new members will be secured before the annual dues are raised to $25 yearly. At the present time the club has between 900 and 1,000 members. It is expected before April 15, when the increase in the dues goes into effect, this number will be increased to over 1,100 members.

With the increase in the growth of the club has come an increase in its activities. Various ambitious plans are on foot for the present year, and it is the plan of the directors of the club to increase the size of the membership to include practically all of the thoroughly representative business men of Duluth.

One of the pet projects of the club will be the agricultural development of St. Louis county. This development of the county is expected to receive new impetus under the influence of the St. Louis Country club, an organization which the Duluth Commercial club was largely instrumental in forming. The good roads project is another movement that will receive the attention of the club. There are several other movements, which have to do with the development of St. Louis county, that are mapped out by the club directors, and it is desired to secure the co-operation of the representative citizens of Duluth.

Suit was filed this afternoon by Walter W. French against the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad and Robert Alexander for damages of $25,700.

The plaintiff claims that while alighting from an Omaha passenger train from St. Paul on Oct. 21, 1908, at the Duluth depot, he slipped on the stool placed below the car steps by an employe of the road, and fell, striking his back and sustaining injuries which have resulted in partial paralysis. He also alleges that the depot was but poorly lighted and it was hard for him to see where he was stepping.

VICTORY IN CIVIL SUIT

Mutch Wins Out in Dispute Over Horse Deal.

Grand Larceny Indictment Covering Same Case, Still Pending.

The jury in the case of E. L. Seavey against the Board of Trade Livery company to recover four horses, four sets of harness and a wagon sold to the company by Howard H. Mutch, or their value retired, shortly before noon today and this afternoon brought in a verdict for the defendant.

"Did E. L. Seavey give Mutch authority to sell the horses and did he sell them acting on that authority?"

"Did Mutch write a letter dated Oct. 1, 1908, and signed with his name, received by Mr. Seavey at Pine City, Minn.?"

"Were the horses sold to the Board of Trade Livery worth $165, which was paid Mutch for them, or $730, which Mr. Seavey claimed to be their value?"

These were the questions put up to the jury by the testimony and the arguments of the attorneys. Seavey claimed Mutch never had authority to sell any of the horses, which he had in his charge as custodian. He exhibited a letter, claimed to have been written by Mutch, by which it was claimed Mutch notified Mr. Seavey of the sale of the horses and told him that he had done it because he owned $400 and the sheriff had threatened to put him in jail unless he paid something on the bill. The letter also purported to be a promise to reimburse Mr. Seavey for his loss. The plaintiff also claimed that the horses were worth $730.

Mutch claimed that he received express authority from Mr. Seavey to sell the horses, and he denied emphatically the authorship of the letter produced by Mr. Seavey. He denied the signature as his, said he had never written a word that was in the letter, and stuck by his story under grilling cross-examination.

The case involved several fine points hinging mostly on the truth of the stories told by the different witnesses. Mutch, who was in charge of a logging outfit owned by Mr. Seavey at New Independence, sold the four horses, four sets of harness and a wagon to the Board of Trade Livery company, Sept. 23 of last year, for $165. He claimed that he had money coming from Mr. Seavey, and Mr. Seavey told him to sell the horses to settle the account. On the other hand, Mr. Seavey claims that Mutch now owes him about $182.

The case was given added interest on account of the fact that Mutch is now being held in the county jail awaiting trial on an indictment charging him with grand larceny in the first degree in the sale of the horses. Mutch's defense to the criminal charge is the same as the defense to the civil action, which was given to the jury today.

MISS GREEN IS MARRIED

Daughter of the World's Richest Woman Weds in Simple Brown.

Groom is Great Grandson of John Jacob Astor.

Morristown, N. J., Feb. 23.—Miss Sylvia Green, daughter of Mrs. Hetty Green of New York, the wealthiest woman in the world, was married at noon today to Matthew Astor Wilks.

Mr. Wilks, who is about 65 years old, is a great grandson of John Jacob Astor. Mrs. Green and her daughter have been living in a modest apartment in Hoboken, but this morning came to this city with a wedding party of about thirty in a special car.

Arriving somewhat in advance of the hour of the wedding, the party went to the Morristown inn and remained there until shortly before noon, when the party proceeded to St. Peters' Episcopal church, where the marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Philamon Sturges, the rector. Owing to the recent death of a cousin of the bride, the wedding party was small.

Miss Green wore a simple brown traveling dress while Mrs. Green wore her customary black satin. The bride was given away by Howland Pell and Woodbury Langdon of New York was the best man.

Following the wedding the party returned to the inn, where a reception was tendered to the guests. Mr. and Mrs. Wilks will start on a wedding trip tonight and it is understood will visit Galt, Ont.

They then called him, and on receiving no answer, broke in the door and found him dead in his bed. TO GROW THIN.
The Housekeeper: Oranges will lend pleasant aid to the woman who wants to grow thinner. She must take the juice of at least two at every meal and these must not be sweet ones. She must also give up oil with her salad and substitute lemon juice for vinegar.

She cannot have cream or sugar in her coffee, and the coffee itself save at breakfast must give place to sugarless and milkless weak tea. She can have all the acid fruits she wants, but if it be stewed no sugar must be added.

Grapes, peaches, melons, prunes and bananas are taboo as they are flesh producers. No cereals for her, no hot bread save dry toast, no pork in any form, no veal and no water with her meals and just as little away from them as she can endure, mineral water being taken by preference.

Dr. Weir Mitchell advocates copious draughts of skim milk for the safe reduction of flesh. He states if it be taken plentifully at and between meals it will positively cause a patient to lose half a pound of flesh a day. Baths must be taken in cold water and a hard fresh brush must be plied vigorously.

BANDS AND PENCILS.

The Pathfinder: "There's only one infallible way to tell a government clerk," remarked a philosophising department official in Washington the other day. "And how's that?" we asked. "Why, it's this way," he went on: "If a man has his vest pockets full of rubber bands you may know he works for Uncle Sam. Rubber bands are as free as the air you breathe in the government departments (and much freer than some of the air). Requisitions for them by the ton are sent in to headquarters and the clerk never stops to think (even if he knows the fact) that they cost a dollar a pound or more for Uncle Sam and not he has to foot the bills.

"Why, have you any idea how many rubber bands are used, or rather, wasted, by the government every year? It runs into big money, I can assure you, for I am in a position where I have inside information about it. The pension office simply eats up rubber bands faster than a Western threshing machine gets away with grain. Great big bands are needed to hold the papers in the thousands of cases together, and they cost a cent apiece. A cent's nothing to worry over, you'll say, but when the thing goes on at the rate it does, it makes an item in the course of the year that would wreck any private business.

"You've no idea how careless and extravagant people get when they know that it's going to come out of the government. Every fellow seems to be bent on seeing who can run through with the most, and the rubber band graft is the most striking illustration of this I know of. I've called attention to this leak over and over, but the powers that be always reply that such things as rubber bands are too small potatoes to sit up nights over. I don't dare say how much Uncle Sam's total annual bill for rubber bands is, but it's up in the millions, judging from my data.

"Then there's the lead pencil graft, too. Why, President Roosevelt's commission that he appointed to look into the departmental leaks actually found that the government buys enough lead pencils to give every clerk a new pencil every single working day of the year. Now any sensible man knows that those clerks can't use up that many pencils. When a man pays his own hard earned money for a pencil he can keep it for weeks, but when the government supplies him it's different.

"The postoffice department, which comes the closest of any of the departments to being run on a business basis, years ago discovered that it couldn't stand for the promiscuous use of rubber bands. So the postal clerks have to use common string to tie up their bundles of letters. Exhaustive efforts have been made to discover some methods of bunching them that would be still cheaper, for even the string item accounts for a considerable part of the postal deficit. You can't expect great statesmen to get down to figuring on these little items, for that would be 'cheese-paring,' and so the waste goes merrily on. By the way, here's a dandy pencil—take it along—new kind they're furnishing our office—much better than the old cheap kind—and here's a bunch of rubber bands—they'll come in handy—anyway the children can make some rubber balls out of them—you're welcome—Uncle Sam foots the bill, you know. Come back when you've used those up. Good-by."

AN ARTIST'S HUMILIATION.

Pittsburg Chronicle: Several good stories are related by Sigismund Goetz. He once painted his own portrait. "I designed it as a birthday surprise for my mother, but one day left it exposed in the studio, instead of, as usual, covered up. Of course my mother choose that very afternoon to call, and equally, of course, she 'spotted' the portrait.

"'Who is that?' she said.

"'Oh, a man I've been painting,' I replied, instantly feeling several sizes smaller, a shrinkage which continued almost to vanishing point when my mother, after another look at the picture, said severely, 'Why do you waste your time on such uninteresting people?'"

WHY RUPTURE IS CURABLE

Seeley, the Recognized Truss Expert, Now at the Spalding Hotel.

"Rupture is not a tear or breach in the abdominal wall, as commonly supposed, but is the stretching or dilation of a natural opening," said F. H. Seely, the Chicago expert, now stopping at the Spalding hotel.

"With the 'spermatic shield' truss we retain any case of hernia at once, and close the opening in a few days on the average case."

This instrument received the highest award at the International Medical congress in London, Eng. Now used and approved by the U. S. Govt.

Mr. Seeley will remain in this city this Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and says if any interested persons call during his stay he will be glad to show same without charge or fit them, if desired.

Telephone Talks

Believing That Exact Knowledge Promotes Co-operation, The Duluth Telephone Company is Publishing a Series of Brief Expositions of some Phases of Telephony for the Benefit of Itself and, as it Hopes, for the Benefit of Subscribers and Patrons.

The Art of Telephoning

Every day some subscriber asks The Duluth company what he can do personally to get more satisfactory results from the telephone. The answer, put briefly, is this: Look up numbers before calling "Central," be prompt about answering your own telephone bell when it rings; take pains in speaking.

The necessity for looking up telephone numbers is obvious. With the rapidly increasing list of subscribers connected with each exchange it would be impossible for operators to identify everybody's lines from his name. Giving "Central" the number you wish correctly and distinctly to start with saves time and errors.

The desirability of answering promptly is also evident. If the operator receives no response after ringing at regular intervals during a minute and a half or two minutes, she reports, "They don't answer." Even at a little inconvenience it is better to respond to the first call of the bell than to run the risk of losing what may be an important communication and causing the person who rings you up, as well as yourself, distress or annoyance.

Conversing well by telephone is something of an art, but it is one clearly acquired. To be able to talk clearly and agreeably over the wire is as positive an asset in business and as valuable an accomplishment in social life as is good personal appearance in a face-to-face interview. Being invisible to the person with whom you are speaking the impression you make depends very largely on the quality of your voice when it reaches the other end of the line.

In telephoning to a person in your own town you will get the clearest transmission if you speak in an ordinary conversational tone. In fact, the tone should be a shade lower rather than higher than you use in ordinary conversation. For long distance talking, the voice should be a little louder than it is when you speak to some one in the same room with you, but it should never even approach shouting, which causes the diaphragm in the transmitter to vibrate so fast that your words are likely to be jumbled when they are reproduced in the listener's receiver. If you cannot make yourself heard without too great an effort, signal your operator and she will do anything she can to remedy the difficulty.

Pronounce your words distinctly and not too rapidly. A telephone conversation generally lacks the pauses of face-to-face talk, so it should be slower to give a chance to catch the full meaning of each sentence. Above all, speak directly into the transmitter, with your lips close to the mouthpiece and "throw" your voice, that is to say, do not talk from the "chest," which smothers your words, but force your breath from the mouth as you speak.

The telephone instrument is designed to be used this way in order that it may be made to exclude, so far as possible, the miscellaneous noises within a building or from the street. If your voice does not go directly into the transmitter it will not be reproduced with full distinctness.

"Desk sets" are something unconsciously misused in ways that affect their efficiency. They are likely not to "talk up" properly if they are turned almost upside down, in order that the speaker may lie back in his chair while he converses, for instance. The angle at which the instrument works best is fixed by the thumb screw at the top of the stand which allows some vibration. Furthermore, the instrument is made to stand on a desk, table, shelf, or some such hollow framework, when it is in use, and will gain resonance if it is so placed.

SPOKANE SHIPPERS PLAN GIGANTIC BOYCOTT AGAINST THE HILL-HARRIMAN ROADS

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 23.—Spokane shippers are preparing a gigantic boycott against the Hill and Harriman railroads. The report that the Spokane rate case will be decided adversely to Spokane, has caused the merchants to plan an organization, and all the shippers will unite in having one routing agent, who will route all the goods sent out from Spokane over the Canadian Pacific, in the hope of bringing the desired concessions from the other roads, which will, as a result, lose the Spokane business. The organization will be effected as soon as it is learned that the Spokane rate case has been lost.

WORLD-PEACE TO BE PROMOTED AT NORWAY-SWEDEN-DENMARK MUSIC FESTIVAL IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Chicago consuls for Norway, Sweden and Denmark have made preliminary plans for holding a grand musical festival here in June, in which representatives of the Scandinavian countries will discuss measures for future peace. The consuls expressed the opinion that the time was ripe for the promulgation of peace ideas and that the world tour of the battleship fleet was a splendid stroke toward the securing of international harmony.

"If we Scandinavians effect an understanding it will be an example for the whole world to follow," said Herman G. Ade, consul for Norway. "Our harmony meeting in June will be on the common ground of art and culture. We will endeavor to start a feeling of friendship which may have results in the future history of our countries and incidentally of the world."

New York, Feb. 23.—E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, when asked for confirmation or denial of an announcement that there will be a reduction in the wages of steel and iron workmen before May 1, said:

"The statements are inaccurate. The United States Steel corporation has never considered such a thing."

Gould Interests to Spend.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 23.—It is stated on authority that the Gould interests are to spend $33,000,000 in improving and bettering their lines between Kansas City and Great Salt Lake. Fifteen million dollars is to be expended in rebuilding the Missouri Pacific line, between Kansas City and Pueblo, where connection is made with the Denver & Rio Grande lines.

"The Rio Grande lines are to be reballasted and 90-pound rails put in. The physical condition of the Missouri Pacific line in Kansas and Colorado is such that it will be necessary to practically rebuild the road west of Kansas City.

PEEKHOLES BORED THROUGH THE DOORS ARE TOLD ABOUT IN GRAFT INVESTIGATION

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 23.—Telling of the payment of five $100 bills each to Councilmen John F. Klein and President William Brand of Common council, and of seeing and hearing through holes bored in a door all the negotiations for putting through a decoy ordinance for a cash consideration, Detective Robert Wilson of Scranton, Pa., was the principal witness in the graft trials. Former Bank Cashier A. A. Vilsack, who had admitted on the stand his part in negotiating with the councilman Klein to have his bank made a city depository in consideration of $17,500, on which charge Klein and W. W. Ramsey, former president of the bank, have already been convicted, was placed on trial. He now refuses to make any defense and it is stated will throw himself on the mercy of the court.

Immediately the case of W. W. Ramsey, former bank president; William Brand, president of common council, and Councilmen Klein and J. C. Wasson, charged jointly with conspiracy, was taken up. Detective Wilson told of the decoy ordinance he got up for the paving of certain streets with wood blocks and his offers to pay a consideration for its passage. The negotiations, he said, were carried on by his assistants in certain hotel rooms, while he remained in adjoining rooms with holes bored through the door and heard all and saw all that transpired.

Mr. Ramsey's connection with the alleged conspiracy is said to be through his acceptance of the account of the decoy company and his knowledge of what was being done to insure the passage of the ordinance.

BLINDFOLDED, PILOTS BOAT

Submarine Bell Signal Takes the Place of Sight.

New York, Feb. 23.—A man stood in the pilothouse of the tug Eugene F. Moran last night with a towel bound across his eyes and held two rubber discs, with wires attached to them, against his ears. The tug was three miles out on the ocean beyond the Ambrose channel lightship, headed harborward, and the blindfolded man was steering for the lightship.

"Switch," he said, and one who stood near him moved a little lever across the face of a copper dial screwed against the wall of the pilothouse. "Switch," came the order again, and the lever moved back. The blindfolded one then paused a second and called the skipper.

"Port about two points. Lightship lies just a shade to port."

For three miles the man who could not see gave orders to the skipper at the wheel, which was not turned a fraction without orders. At the end the tug brought up close under the stern of the lightship.

What the man with the discs at his ears heard was what guided the tug. Through the rubber diaphragm in each of the receivers there flowed a confused roaring like buzzing telephone wires in a gale, but at regularly recurrent intervals this roaring was broken—sharply—by another sound:

"Ding, ding, ding, ding."

The sound of the submarine bell of the lightship, carrying three miles under the waves, was registered against receiver tanks on the tug, to be transmitted through microphones floating each of these tanks up over telephone wires to the receiving discs that were held by W. J. Fay, the blindfolded man.

Fay is a nautical expert and was guiding the tugboat under simulated fog conditions. The reiterated taps of the bell that were heard spelled the code number of the lightship, No. 22.

Had the tug been lost in one of those heavy blankets of mist that settle down outside the narrows instead of loafing about in bright sunlight, Fay, it is alleged, could have taken the craft to the lightship and could have determined within a quarter of a mile how close to the lightship his boat was.

The test was a severe one because of the light draft of the tug. The company's officials pointed out it is only with deeper draft vessels the bell signal works at its best.

Ocean steamers, it is said, can pick up the lightship bell at five miles.

CREDIT GIVEN

To Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for a Thorough Cure in a Stubborn Case of Sciatica.

A really remarkable cure of sciatica by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is that of Mr. William H. Shine, of No. 2111 22nd avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn. Mr. Shine is employed by the Flour City Ornamental Iron Works and is a member and Chief Forester of Camp 4784, Modern Woodmen of America. During the Sioux campaign in which Sitting Bull was killed, Mr. Shine was a member of Troop K, Sixth U. S. Cavalry. Mr. Shine has lived in Minneapolis for twenty-five years. In telling recently of his cure by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, he says:

"About five years ago I was engaged in work which required heavy lifting and I think this may possibly have been the cause of the sciatica in my case. For three months I was confined to bed and was sick altogether for about two years and a half. I was on crutches for about seven months. There were sharp, cutting pains from my back down to my heel. It was very painful for me to get up after I had been sitting down for a while. The cords of my foot and heel seemed to draw together. The muscles of my legs had to be rubbed before I could sleep. My feet were swollen so that I had to wear shoes much too large for me and I could hardly hobble along.

"I was treated by two doctors and each pronounced my case sciatica. Neither doctor helped me much. The last doctor gave me electric treatments three times a week for at least three months. After finding that this did not help me to any extent, I took vapor baths for about the same length of time. I followed this with sulphur baths for five weeks but nothing seemed to help me. I then began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as a friend said they had helped him. When I began taking the pills I was unable to work and was walking with a cane. After a fair treatment I began to feel results from the pills. I continued using the pills until they effected a complete cure. I wish by this statement to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills credit for my cure."

Sciatica is neuralgia of the sciatic nerve and this remedy has cured stubborn cases of neuralgia in many forms.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schonectady, N. Y.

LARGEST Y. M. C. A. HOME IN WORLD

New Building at Detroit Most Palatial Yet Erected.

Yesterday the Young Men's Christian association of Detroit threw open to the young men of the city its new building, which provides the largest amount of space for its purposes of any similar building yet erected, according to reports received by the local association. It is a nine-story structure with high basement, built of steel and concrete, and entirely fireproof, covering a ground space of 120x210 feet. This building was secured by one of the rapid campaigns such as the Y. M. C. A. has conducted in recent years. In twenty-three days $423,000 was raised. Over 4,000 people contributed to the found. The chairman of the citizens' committee, J. L. Hudson, headed the subscription list with $60,000. During the entire canvass he left his big business to his subordinates and devoted all his time to solicitation of funds. Another trustee of the building and a large giver was Truman H. Newberry, secretary of the navy. The outgrown building, which the association erected in 1885 at a cost of $96,000, was sold for $235,000.

A boys' building, four stories high, joins the central structure. This has connection with the gymnasium and swimming pool and will provide for a thousand boys.

A feature never attempted in any other association is to provide two floors of dormitories for boys who are dependent upon their own resources, orphans, or away from home. To increase its services to the boys of Detroit, the association has been assured that when this building has been filled and its value demonstrated, that a fund of $200,000 may be placed at its disposal for extension to other parts of the city.

INTERNATIONAL GAME PRESERVE

W. A. Preston, M. P. P., Talks of the Movement's Progress.

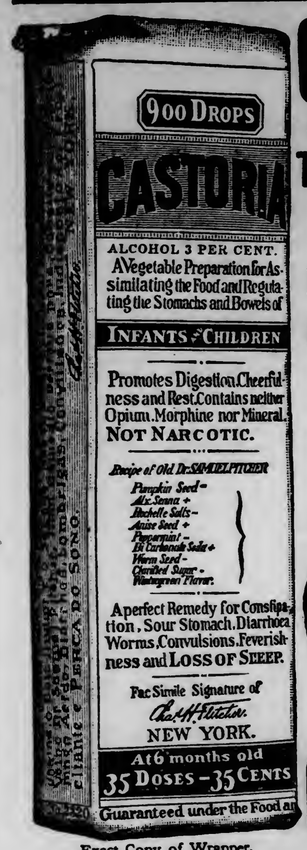

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 23.—W. A. Preston, M.P.P., of Fort Frances, seen today in reference to what is being done by him and Arthur Hawkes, who together were appointed the committee to confer with the state of Minnesota as to the better preservation of game in those portions of the state and province which lies adjacent, stated that the government of Minnesota has reserved a preserve south of Hunters' Island, on the international boundary at that place, and the Ontario government will be asked to form a reserve of similar frontage, at least, north of the boundary. If this can be accomplished, it will give a considerable tract of country where moose and deer will be preserved at all seasons, and from which the overflow will pass into the surrounding country. This is especially true of moose, as the moose is a great traveler. In time these animals will observe the protection afforded during the spring months, as this section will afford protection to their young. This instinct for protected "nurseries" is highly developed in the females of the various deer tribes. They frequently raise their young for a few months on islands, where they have immunity from the attacks of wolves and other destructive animals, who, while good swimmers, do not willingly take to the water.

"We are also trying," said Mr. Preston, "to induce action in the increase of the bounty on wolves, as the wolf is the only destroyer of our game. In all the western parts of Ontario the snowfall is very heavy, and the hot sun in March puts a crust on the snow, which leaves the deer absolutely at the mercy of the wolf. The wolf must be exterminated, or we can never have what that country is eminently suited for—a great game preserve. In Minnesota the state pays a bounty of $7.50 on wolves, and this is supplemented by a similar bounty in many of the counties. We are trying to get the state to guarantee the full bounty, and to raise it to $20, which, we think, they will do, provided the provincial government co-operate."

Mr. Preston further stated that the movement is closely associated with the preservation of forests, which is attracting so much attention just now. Any steps taken to preesrve our game will be an additional source of protection to our forests, as we propose that all game wardens shall be fire-rangers, ex officio, as not only is fire a great destroyer of our forests, but it is one of the chief causes of the destruction of game.

BELLHOP GETS BIG TIP.

Left $32,000 by Man for Whom He Rode Ponies.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 23.—"Any mail for me?" asked Jack Douglas, a bell hop at the Manx hotel, of the mail clerk yesterday.

"Here's only one from New York," replied the clerk.

He passed out a letter to the "buttons" who surveyed the envelope. "From Willis & Jacobs, lawyers," he mused. "I wonder who those guys are. Here goes anyway."

The boy opened the letter. "Great jumping kangaroos!" he yelled. "somebody fan me. The letter says that I'm left $32,000 by the will of old Col. G. H. Warfield, an old man I used to ride polo ponies for. How's that for class?

"Several years ago I took up polo riding in the East. I was an expert polo player and was very successful. I rode for Col. G. H. Warfield, who had a stable at Sheepshead Bay. While riding for the colonel I won the polo pony Derby at Washington Park, and that put me in favor with the colonel. It was also while riding with his stable that I met the girl, who later became my wife. She was Helen Sutherland, a prima donna, who sang with Ellen Beach Yaw and who had been in Melba's company. My folks disapproved of the marriage, and my father disinherited me on account of it."

JOKE MAKES HIM CRAZY

Cass Lake Man, Jokingly Accused of Starting Fires, Loses Mind.

He is Finally Taken to Brainerd Hospital Where He Dies.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank J. Dagg, one of the oldest residents of this place, died yesterday at Brainerd, after being demented for several days.

Sveral days ago some of his friends were playfully joking with him, and in the course of their remarks they stated that he set a recent fire which occurred here, when three buildings were burned. Dagg seemed to take it sriously, as it weighed on his mind. A day or two after some farmer came to town and reported that Frank Dagg passed him on the railroad track about eight miles south of here and that he acted very queerly. Some of Dagg's friends at once secured a handcar and started after him. They traveled down the track ten miles, when they saw footprints leading off into the woods. The handcar was laid aside and the men followed the footprints. After traveling about a mile they came to a little shack, and upon entering found the unfortunate man sitting on a box, with his clothes almost all removed. As soon as the men appeared in the door, Dagg jumped up and, raising his hands above his head, shouted: "I swear by God above that I did not set that fire."

The men took Dagg to the Wilkinson station not far away and brought him home on the passenger train which was due shortly after they arrived there. He was in a very demented condition when he was found, but appeared to be recovering rapidly as soon as he got in a warm place. His partner, Juel Jamieson, who lives at Brainerd came here and took him to Brainerd, where he was placed in the hospital. He was thought to be getting along nicely when a telegram received here yesterday afternoon announced his death. His body will be taken care of by the local council of the Eagles as he was a member of that order.

SAYS POSTER DAMAGED HIM

Defeated Minneapolis Aldermanac Candidate Is Seeking Money Balm.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—George W. Olson, defeated candidate in the Seventh ward, who accredits his defeat to the circulation of a poster charging him with being the representative of the Milwaukee railroad, has begun a $8,80) damage suit against Edward L. Mooney and the National District Telegraph company. Mr. Mooney was a supporter of Stewart Ballentine, one of Mr. Olson's unsuccessful opponents at the primaries, and Mr. Olson seeks to hold Mr. Mooney responsible for the issuance of the objectionable poster, and the American District Telegraph company responsible for its distribution.

Mr. Olson was the nominee of the Republicans. He won from Mr. Ballentine and other candidates at the primary election of Sept. 15, but he was defeated by George B. Esterman, the Democratic candidate, at the general election.

In his complaint Mr. Olson says that a poster bearing the following words was issued at Mr. Mooney's instigation and distributed by the National District Telegraph company prior to the primary election:

"Look out for the cars! Voters of the Seventh ward! Don't vote for G. W. Olson for alderman to represent the Milwaukee road in the council, as beyond any question this man was brought out by the corporations which hope to catch the votes in one of the deepest-laid plots ever enacted. Think it over! Don't be trapped!"

LOOKS OVER CANAL ROUTE.

Maj. Shunk Visits Scene of Big Aitkin County Undertaking.

Aitkin, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Maj. Shunk of St. Paul, the engineer in charge of the government reservoirs at the headwaters of the Mississippi river, was here recently to look over the route of the proposed cut-off canal, and to familiarize himself with the main features of the proposition.

He declined to be interviewed on the subject, pleading that he had as yet only a superficial knowledge of its history. Asked as to the feasibility of streightening the river by cutting the bends, as has been proposed, he replied that it would have to be shown that it is in the interests of navigation, but that it could do no harm for those interested to show the extent of benefit accruing to lands affected by the annual overflow of the river.

LAKE LINDEN DRAMATIC CLUB PRESENTS A PLAY.

POSTOFFICE IS BURNED.

Along With Home of Postmaster in Cass County.

Pillager, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The postoffice at Home Brook, Cass county, about ten miles north of here, and the home of C. O. Runyon, the postmaster, was burned a few days ago.

The postoffice, like nearly all rural offices, was kept in the family residence, and was destroyed in the fire, which destroyed the home. Mr. Runyon, who is a man 72 years of age, was at work in a swamp at some distance from the house when the fire broke out. Only Mrs. Runyon, who is herself well along in years, and an invalid daughter, were at home. They succeeded in getting a few things out of a window, but the heat drove them away so that they were not able to remove the things to a place of safety and they were also burned.

The family lost all their household belonging, including considerable furniture, carpets, etc., which the brought from Iowa seven years ago and had never used since, having been awaiting the erection of a new house.

HE RAN SLOT MACHINE.

Washington County Man Is Doing Time for Breaking Law.

Stillwater, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—H. C. Meyer of Afton surrendered to the sheriff and is confined in the county jail under a straight sentence of sixty days for maintaining a slot machine. He was given a sentence by C. Christiansen, a justice of the peace, without the option of paying a fine.

Upon appeal to the district court the sentence was affirmed. Meyer then surrendered to comply with the law. An application is to be made to the state board of pardons to release him from jail and remit the sentence.

DRILLING ON NELSON FARM.

Exploration Work Begins on North Shore of Cedar Lake.

Aitkin, Minn., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ever since the beginning of the iron mining activity in this section it has been the conviction of mining men that a large body of iron ore exists in the vicinity of Cedar lake, and extends from there in a northeasterly direction. Although there has been some drilling done on the east shore of the lake, it has been generally understood that the results were negative, although the indications weer unmistakable.

Mr. McGiffin, who repersents the Hill interests of Saginaw, Mich., has just placed a drill on the Chris Nelson place, on the north shore of the lake, and will thoroughly exulore that locality.

DIES ON FAST TRAIN.

Milwaukee Theatrical Manager Expires on Twentieth Century Limited.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 23.—Leon Wachsner, for twenty-five years manager of the German Stock company of Milwaukee, died on the Twentieth Century limited train just east of Buffalo, N. Y., Saturday night.

Death was presumably due to heart failure. It was preceded by a wild race for a Buffalo hospital, in which the limited was sent at full speed through the city to the central station. Mr. Wachsner was taken ill near Batavia, N. Y. He was accompanied at the time of his death by Isaac D. Adler, president of the David Adler & Sons' Clothing company. The train was held forty minutes in Buffalo, while medical authorities conducted an examination. Only one or two passengers were aware of the death.

MILLER IS CANDIDATE.

President of Houghton Village Is Anxious to Run Again.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—The annual village caucus will be held next Monday night for the purpose of nominating candidates for village officers.

The offices to be filled are president, clerk, treasurer, assessor and three members of the village council. There is no special reason for believing that any of the present holders of the offices will not run again, unless indeed Trustee F. W. Stoyle adheres to his announced purpose to retire, and it is probable that his friends could make him retract.

President Miller when asked if there was anything doing in village politics and if he was going to run agan, replied:

"Sure, I'm going to run. Everybody seems to think I should, and if the caucus nominates me next Monday night, I'll run, of course."

CAN LOCATE ANDY JONES.

Believed Absconding Banker Can be Traced by Wife's Movements.

Minot, N. D., Feb. 23.—George W. Swords, who is staying at Rugby most of the time straightening up the affairs of Andy Jones' defunct bank, states that he has the work well under way, but he really cannot tell at this time how the affairs will turn out. He says that Jones is still missing, though Mrs. Jones is in Rugby, but preparing to leave, presumably to join her husband. It is believed that Jones can be located whenever he is wanted, perhaps by means of tracing Mrs. Jones, who undoubtedly will soon join Mr. Jones.

GIRL WIFE IS SUICIDE.

Prefers Death to Living With Husband She Did Not Like.

Sidnaw, Mich., Feb. 23.—Only 17 years of age, but having endured six months of married life against her will, Mrs. Luther Jaro, living nine miles north of here, committed suicide by shooting. She had set her table for dinner and made all preparations for the noonday meal before committing the act.

The story of the girl-wife is a sad one. She was married about half a year ago to Luther Jaro, aged between 35 and 40 years, a section foreman for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road here and lived with him because her parents wished her to do so. Her husband was not a bad sort of husband, but the girl seemed discontented but continued living with him. The crisis came Saturday and taking a 44-caliber revolver she shot herself in the temple and was found in her kitchen when her husband came home for dinner. Before her marriage she was Miss Etta Davis of this city.

ECZEMA CURED IN SIMPLE WAY

No More Dosing the Stomach—Cure the Skin Through the Skin.

When you have a scratch on your hand you wash it out and cleanse it and then the skin cures itself.

The best skin specialists today are agreed that the only way to cure the skin is through the skin. For statistics show that nearly all eczema sufferers are perfectly healthy in all other ways except as to their skin. And if the eczema patients were really suffering from an internal malady, the entire body and not only the skin would be diseased.

You can prove immediately the relief of a true skin cure by using oil of wintergreen as compounded in D. D. D. Prescription. This liquid kills the disease germs, while toning up the healthy part of the skin.

We have now handled this meritorious and thoroughly scientific remedy for so long and have seen its reliable results so many times that we freely express our confidence.

FREAK OF SOO WRECK.

One of Locomotive Wheels Rolled Away Like a Hoop.

Hermansville, Mich., Feb. 23.—(Special to The Herald.)—A curious fact is noted in connection with the recent wreck near Pembina on the Soo line, in which an engineer lost his life. When the locomotive was derailed, one of the wheels of the pony trucks was torn from the axle and continued on its way. It rolled on its rim over the frozen ground, much like a hoop, and finally plunged into a swamp, being found nearly a thousand feet from the engine.

The baby was rescued from the burning building, but had been frightfully burned, and since has died of its injuries, after having suffered terribly for a period of about five days. This is unusual as for many years the village has been compelled at this time of the year to borrow money for current expenses.

A CORROBORATION

Of Interest to Duluth Readers.

For months Duluth citizens have seen in these columns enthusiastic praise of Doan's Kidney Pills by Duluth residents. Would these prominent people recommend a remedy that had not proven reliable? Would they confirm their statements after years had elapsed if personal experience had not shown the remedy to be worthy of endorsement? No stronger proof of merit can be had than cures that have stood the test of time. The following statement should carry conviction to the mind of every Duluth reader.

H. G. Hibke, 1123 Woodland Avenue, Duluth, Minn., says: "I suffered for a long time from kidney trouble which I believe was brought on by constant driving and exposure to all kinds of weather. Severe pains in the small of my back made stooping or lifting difficult and every cold I caught settled in my kidneys, aggravating the complaint. I was subject to headaches and the kidney secretions often became highly colored and irregular in passage. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and today not a symptom of my trouble remains."

The above statement was given on Oct. 20th, 1904, and on Nov. 20th, 1908, Mr. Hibke, added: "Since using Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago, I have had no need of a kidney remedy. I willingly confirm all I have previously said about this preparation as I know it is very effective in cases of kidney complaint."

Duluth Curlers Defeat St. Paul Men by Twenty-Three Points.

Superior Scots Take the Anderson Trophy Across the Bay.

Duluth curlers won and lost yesterday in their games with St. Paul for the McKenzie cup, and with Superior for the Anderson trophy.

On their own ice, the Duluth men had a fairly easy time with St. Paul, but in Superior, where the ice was covered with water, they were not so fortunate, being badly beaten.

The St. Paul curlers won out in the evening contests by a margin of seven points, but the lead attained by the Duluth men in the afternoon was too much to be overcome, and the final score was 99 to 76.

The ice was not in the best of condition for curling, but notwithstanding this fact some of the games were very close and interesting.

The day was a great one at the rink. There were large crowds on hand, both morning and afternoon to watch the play, and the skating ice was in demand all day.

During the evening Jimmie Myron got a party of Scots together in the center of the ice and they made melody out of a number of Scotch songs.

The scores in the Anderson event follow:

Another Record Broken.

Troy, N. Y., Feb. 23.—George Bonhag of the Irish-American Athletic club broke the world's record of the five-mile run here last night, at the State Armory Athletic meet, held under the Y. M. C. A. auspices. He made the distance in 24 minutes, 58 1-5 seconds. The previous record was held by Tom Collins, 25 minutes, 19 2-5 seconds.

GUNTHER WILL MEET TREMBLE

Colored Fighter Loses No Time in Signing Up Matches.

George Gunther, the negro pug who lately blew into Duluth looking for a match with Whitehead, has been matched, according to his manager, Curley Ulrich, with Ben Tremble for a 15-round go to take place March 1. Ulrich announced that the fighters would meet at catch weights, that each man had posted $100 to appear, and that the bout would take place somewhere in the Northwest, the exact spot having not yet been determined.

The Australian fighter is doing pretty well in getting matches lined up, in and about Duluth, and from present indications he will be kept busy until Walter Whitehead is at leisure.

The two fights which Gunther has on will give the fight fans an opportunity to see just what he has.

Tremble some time ago, fought a draw with Whitehead. This was before Whitehead had attained the science and speed he now possesses. Nevertheless the bout between Gunther and Tremble will give the fans a good idea how Whitehead and Gunther will stack up.

Tremble has fought Mike Shrieck twice. Tremble was knocked out both times.

Then there is Gunther's fight with "Barrel" Smith. Smith is a fairly clever little boxer, and he promises to work his colored brother out, showing the fans just what the boy from the other side possesses. This fight is to be but ten rounds, and although "Barrel" has not met many men who were hailed as being as good as Gunther, he is confident he can stay the limit.

Gunther and his manager have opened a gymnasium in the building formerly occupied by the Maine hotel on lower Lake avenue. Ulrich and Gunther work out together every day, and although he always keeps himself in good condition, Gunther expects in a short time, to be ready for any of them.

WINS MARATHON IN GREAT TIME

Otto Boedikker, a Plumber, Takes Big San Francisco Race.

San Francisco, Feb 13.—Cheered on by the wild shouts of the great crowd which thronged Golden Gate Park stadium, and the discordant hooting of countless automobile horns, Otto Boedikker of the Olympic club, ran the last 800 yards of the long Marathon course yesterday, winning his race in the remakable time of 2 hours, 40 minutes, 31 3-5 seconds, nearly fifteeen minutes faster than the time made over the class course by Johnny Hayes, the Marathon winner at the Olympic games at London last year. Boedikker's time is but a shade more than four minutes over the fastest time ever recorded for the race.

The race was run under the auspices of the Olympic club and forty-seven starters entered for the full 26 miles, 385 yards. The course was laid out ove rthe smooth roads of Golden Gate park an dthe stretch and finish were within the satdium.

DE PALMA WINS IN HIS FIAT CAR

Noted Driver Takes Two Exciting Races on Last Day.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 23.—The last day of the Mardi Gras automobile races at the fair grounds furnished some live and exciting sport. The features were the ten-mile handicap and the fifty-mile free-for-all, both of which were won by Ralph De Palma in his Fiat Cyclone car.

The fifty-mile race was changed from a stock car event to a free-for-all in order that De Palma might enter with his Fiat.

The best sport was furnished by the ten-mile handicap, free-for-all. There were five entries. De Palma was started at scratch. Robertson was given 45 seconds, and Mrs. Cueno, Burman and Strang each given 50 seconds. De Palma finished about an eighth of a mile in front of Mrs. Cuneo.

SUMMERS GETS THE DECISION

English Pug Has Best of Jimmy Britt in London.

London, Feb. 23.—Johnny Summers, the English pugilist, last night received the decision over Jimmy Britt of California, in a 20-round bout. The fight was held before the National Sporting club, and a big crowd was present, there being great interest in the bout on account of the lively fight these two men put up last November. On that occasion the go was a 10-round affair, and Britt was the victor. Last night Summers got the decision on points.

Both Summers and Britt had trained hard and were in far better condition than when they met before. During the early stages Britt did most of the leading, apparently starting out with a view of securing a knockout. He made the mistake, however, of holding in clinches more than is usual in England, and came in for much adverse criticism and several warnings from Eugene Corry, the officer. Britt, also, had the misfortune to slip twice to the floor when engaged in lively mix-ups, and the falls were almost as effective in taking the speed out of him as though they had resulted from a right or left swing.

Up to the sixth or eighth round Britt had the better of the bout, but from that on Summers improved and honors were even at the close of the tenth. After that, although Britt was always strong, the Englishman had somewhat the best of him, and the decision in Summers' favor was a popular one. Before leaving the ring, Britt said that he accepted the award of the referee, and that he had no complaint to make, but he still thought he was the better man.

FAVORITE WINS SOUTHERN DERBY

High Private, Forsythe Horse, Takes California Races With Ease.

Oakland, Cal., Feb. 23.—High Private, one of the stars of the Forsythe stables, won the California Derby in clever style at Emeryville yesterday. Joe Madden, carrying the colors of Sam Hildreth, was second, with Tom Hayward, owned by Thomas H. Williams, third. The event, which was at a mile and a quarter, was witnessed by the largest crowd of the season, about 15,000 people being in attendance. Ideal weather prevailed, but the track was dead. Lawton Wiggins and Fanatic were withdrawn, and Madman added, leaving even to go to the post. High Private was a pronounced favorite and justified the confidence shown in him by drawing away after the half mile pole was reached and maintained his lead from there to the finish. The race was worth $5,360 to the winner. Bubbling Water, a California Oaks candidate, scored an impressive victory in the seven furlongs race.

AMBULANCE WAS IN MUCH DEMAND

Many Would-be Marathoners Collapse on New York Track.

New York, Feb. 23.—Edwin H. White of the Holy Cross Lyceum, Brooklyn, yesterday won the Fourteenth Regiment Marathon race over the course from the armory in Brooklyn to Seagate, Coney Island and return. His time for twenty-six miles and 385 yards was 2:53 4-5.

James Clark of the Xavier Athletic association of this city, who won the Thirteen Regiment race, led for the greater part of the contest, but weakened in the twenty-third mile. His clubmate, Albert Paines, finished second, more than half a mile behind the winner, with Clark about 400 yards back in third position. Harry Jensen of the Pastime Athletic club, who finished third to Clark ten days ago was the winner of the fourth prize.

There were 110 starters, but not half of them finished. Ambulance calls were frequently sent in and many of the men returned to the armory in bad shape, although none of them was seriously affected.

MAROONS TO HAVE HARD SCHEDULE

Coach Stagg Out to Win Western Championship Again.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Director Stagg of the Maroons announced yesterday he would communicate with Northwestern, Indiana and Purdue for the purpose of completing his football schedule for 1909. Before the end of the week the complete list for next fall will be announced.

Northwestern and Indiana probably will be assigned places early in the season, while Purdue may be taken on later than usual if Stagg's plans are fulfilled. Oct. 2 is the date on which the maroon and purple gridiron representatives will clash, unless the Northwestern authorities are averse to playing so early in the fall. It is likely the Indiana eleven will come to Marshal field a week later.

Two Saturdays—Oct. 23 and Nov. 6—Stagg has vacant. On Oct. 30 the Maroons journey to Minneapolis to meet the Gophers. Two weeks later they will make the trip to Ithaca for their game with Cornell. Stagg is not sure whether he will schedule a contest for the Saturday preceding or following the Gopher struggle. With the Midway students Stagg believes the winning of the Western championship would be more satisfactory than defeating the Cornellians, and it is likely he will give Nov. 6 to the boilermakers, thus allowing a two weeks' rest before the trip to Minneapolis.

COMISKEY SAYS JONES IS JOKING

White Sox Owner Thinks His Manager Will be on Hand.

Chicago, Feb. 23. — "Old Roman" Comiskey won't give up hoping that Fielder Jones will return to manage the White Sox another year. The farewells uttered by Jones to Chicago fans from Portland, Or., Saturday, didn't sink into Commy's mind at all, for he insists that Jones will be back to lead his ball team in another championship race.

"My position in regard to Jones," said Mr. Comiskey, last night, "is no different than it was last October before the season was over. He was my manager then, and he is yet, and will be until I hear something from him to the contrary. He never has told me that he wasn't going to play any more, and until he does I look upon him as manager of the White Sox. I wrote him a letter the other day and I expect an answer about Tuesday.

"I am not willing Jones to play ball for me. It he doesn't want to play, that is all right, no matter what his reasons are. But I expect him to play the same as the rest of my team. I feel quite sure that he will return, as it is almost too late for him to say that he is through. If he didn't intend to come back he would have told me so before this."

The master of the White Sox would not discuss the possibility of any of his other players being elevated to the position of manager.

IN BUSINESS NOW.

Tad Jones Therefore Has Not Time to Coach Yale.

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 23.—Tad Jones, the Yale athlete recently appointed football coach, has written that he will not take the position. He says he has gone into business at Excelle, Ohio, and will remain there till the football season begins, when he will coach Syracuse.

The fifteen games of the second round of the match will be played in Cleveland.

High Mark Established.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 23.—As a result of the all-day bowling, one new high mark was established at the international bowling tournament, James Dolan of Minneapolis rolling a total of 636 in the singles, replacing Hell Hake of St. Paul, whose score was 612. There were no new marks set in the five-men or two-men events.

OFF FOR ST. PAUL TOURNAMENT

Duluth Bowlers Expect to Bring Back a Few Prizes.

With high hopes of winning some of the prize money at the St. Paul bowling tournament, a number of the Duluth men boarded the train last night for the Saintly City. The rest of the men will go down today, and they will meet on the alleys Wednesday and Thursday, when they expect to roll the scores necessary to lay claim to a part of the prize money.

The Columbias, Fitwells and Centrals are entered, and enthusiasm runs high. All the men have been practicing hard. They are in good shape to win, and as nothing very big has been done as yet by the other teams at the tournament, the Duluth men cannot help but believe it will be rather easy picking.

While some of the bowlers were unable at the last moment to get away, a majority of the best bowlers in the city will attend.

DULUTH PLAYERS CASTING ABOUT

Young Players Will Break Into Faster Ball This Year.

With the gathering of the ball players at Hot Springs, the big league meetings over, and the talk of the Wisconsin-Minnesota league floating through the air, Duluth ball players are beginning to get the fever and many of them are casting around for berths during the coming season.

Many of the younger players of the city have been offered good baseball jobs, but the majority of them will wait around a bit until they see what is doing in and around Duluth. Mack Cook received an offer from Hurley yesterday, but as he expects to enter Dartmouth next fall, it is not likely that he will commit athletic suicide. Frank Schaefer has a number of offers as has Frank McGraw, "Scottoe" MacAuley, Roy Deetz and a number of the other younger players of the city.

Newt Randall is owned by the Milwaukee club of the American association and he will report for duty when that team starts on its spring training trip.

George Krick is dickering with a number of clubs and it is said that he intends to sign up with a team in the Michigan State league within a few days if a better opportunity does not present itself.

Frank Summers and Artie O'Dea, it said, have signed up with the Seattle team of the Pacific Coast league. Sam Menefee has been sold to the Grand Rapids club.

LARSON WINS AT ISHPEMING

Minneapolis Man Takes First Place at Michigan Ski Jump.

Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 23.—Before a crowd of 7,000 people the annual Ishpeming ski tournament, of which Ole Larson of Minneapolis was the winner, was pulled off here yesterday. The weather was most unfavorable to the riders and no records were broken. The slide was sticky and a number of performers suffered bad falls.

The prize winners in the first even follow: First, Ole Larson, Minneapolis; second, Oscar Gunderson, Chippewa Falls; third, John Mangseth, Duluth; fourth, August Nordby, Superior; fifth, Martin Ivenson, Red Wing; sixth, Andrew, Haugen, Chippewa Falls; seventh, Albert Gundahl, Red Wing; eighth, Thorlief Holter, Munising; tenth, Olaf Larson, Duluth.

Barney Riley of Coleraine was the winner in the amateur class. He jumped 100 feet and 99 feet, both without falling.

The longest standing jump of the day was 119 feet, made by Oscar Gunderson; Larson, the winner of the tournament, cleared 118, 116 and 113 feet, each time without falling. Haugen jumped 124 feet, the greatest leap of the afternoon, but fell. Some of the falls were of a sensational character and more skils were broken than in any previous tournament. Carl Eck of Red Wing was badly shaken up in his first jump and was unable to continue. John Evenson of Duluth fell in both of the regular runs, after covering 116 and 117 feet. Ole Fiering retired after his first jump, when he fell, after making 123 feet.

WILL HAVE FAST BASEBALL.

Michigan Ball Fans Plan Both Independent and League Teams.

Marquette, Mich., Feb. 23.—Besides the independent ball to be played by many of the teams of the region, it is expected that three, and probably four, baseball leagues will flourish in the upper peninsula the coming season. One of these will consist of Marquette and Alger county teams, including Marquette, Ishpeming, Negaunee and Munising. Another will include Ironwood and Bessemer, along with Wisconsin clubs. The third is a projected Copper country organization, and the fourth one is proposed on the Menominee iron range, the suggested circuit comprising Iron Mountain, Niagara, Florence, Crystal Falls, Iron River and Stambaugh. Escanaba and Menominee, the fastest semi-professional teams in the region; Houghton-Hurontown excepted, will play independent ball, as will the Soo, Newberry, Rapid River and other of the more prominent nines. It is expected the season will be the most successful in many years.

Chess Player Dies.

WHEAT HAS AN ADVANCE

Duluth Market Is Bullish and Closing Prices Are Higher.

Flax Hits a New High Level for the Crop.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 23.—Influences were bullish in the American markets, after the Washington's birthday holiday, today. The Northwestern situation was stronger and the Duluth closing prices show a good fractional gain over Saturday, despite a decline from the day's high level during the last hour of the session.

The Duluth car inspection today showed only 31 cars, all durum wheat, which was a bullish factor in this market.

Chicago May wheat sold at $1.16⅞ during the day, but with the easiness during the latter part of the day, fell off nearly to Saturday's closing price.

The visible supply of wheat decreased 1,504,000 bus, and is now 39,968,000 bus., against 41,472,000 bus last week and 35,905,000 bus a year ago.

Cables were strong. Liverpool closed 1d to 1⅝d higher, Antwerp 1¼c higher, Berlin 2¾c higher.

The May option closed ½c higher than Saturday in Duluth, a shade higher in Chicago and St. Louis, ⅝c higher in Minneapolis, ⅛c higher in New York and 1⅜c higher in Winnipeg.

The closing prices were not received from Kansas City. The July option closed ⅝c higher in Duluth and New York, ⅜@⅝c higher in Chicago, ¼c higher in Minneapolis, ½c higher in St. Louis and 1¼c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅛@¼c higher than Saturday in Chicago and ¼d to ½d lower in Liverpool. May oats closed ⅛c lower in Chicago.

World's shipments of wheat and corn last week, the week previous and the corresponding week a year ago, are shown as follows:

	WHEAT. Last Week.	Previous Week.	Last Year.

	CORN.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"Wheat—There was a strong opening in wheat today, following an advance on Monday, and values were 1¾d to 2d higher than Saturday. The strength was the result of a good demand for both cargoes and parcels and a large business done yesterday, which prompted heavy coverings of shorts. Indian news continues of an alarming character and this, together with the unfavorable political situation, caused an additional advance of ½d to ⅝d. Advices from Argentina state that shipments will shortly show a sharp falling off, and the market there is strong, with offerings light. Toward mid-day there was a slight recession on disappointing spot demand and the liberal increase on passage, and a belief that urgent shorts had sufficiently covered. At mid-day the market was still nervous, with a strong undertone, and values 1⅛d to 2d higher than Saturday.

"Corn was quiet and ¼d lower. Later the distant month declined an additional ⅛d. Large La Plata offerings and a poor demand for spot caused the pressure."

Car receipts at Duluth were 31, Minneapolis 714 (three days.)

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,437,000 bu, last year 346,000 bu. Shipments 469,000 bu, last year 132,000 bu. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 297,000 bu.

Primary receipts of corn were 1,941,000 bu, last year 743,000 bu. Shipments, 997,000 bu, last year, 139,000 bu. Clearances of corn were 176,000 bu.

Wheat was active in Duluth. May wheat opened ⅜c higher at $1.12, and ranged between that and $1.12⅝ until the last hour, when it then eased off to $1.12⅛ and closed there, a gain of ½c over Saturday. July wheat was inactive and closed ⅜c higher than Saturday at 51.12¾. Durum wheat closed ½c higher and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of ½c over May for No. 1 northern.

May flax advanced from $1.69 to $1.70¼ in Duluth, a new high mark for this crop. It closed at $1.69¾, a gain of 1½c over Saturday. July flax closed 1½c higher at $1.68. October flax sold at $1.40½ and closed unchanged from Saturday at $1.40.

Oats closed ⅛c lower and barley 1c to 1½c higher.

Following were the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Conditions Bordering on Panic, Prevail Duriag Early Trading.

Chicago, Feb. 23.—Conditions bordering on panic prevailed today in the wheat pit during the first few minutes of the session, and prices fluctuated nervously over a wide range, incidentally touching a new high record mark for the season for the May delivery. On initial transactions the May delivery sold at $1.16½, which is ¼c above the former top mark recorded on the previous session. An advance of 1⅛d to 2d in the price of wheat at Liverpool inspired active buying here at the opening, which caused advances of ½@⅝c to ⅞@1c. First sales on May were at $1.16¼ to $1.16½. Several leading commission houses were free sellers on the bulge and this caused a quick decline, May dropping to $1.15⅜. Support by the leading bull, however, caused a recovery to $1.16, and for a time the market held comparatively steady with May selling around that figure.

Later in the day the market made another spurt upward, May advancing to $1.16⅞. During the final half hour a heavy tone again developed on further profit taking. The close was about steady with May a shade higher at $1.15¾.

The bulge in wheat caused a firm opening in the corn market, but an easier tone soon developed on liberal sales by cash interests. The selling was mainly based on reports of greatly increased offerings of corn in the country. At the start prices were a shade to ⅛@¼c higher, May opening at 65⅝c to 65¾c. Later the price dropped to 65⅛c.

The market rallied later in the session, May advancing to 66⅛c, but weakened again on selling brought out by an estimate of more than 1,000 cars as the receipts here tomorrow. May declined to 65⅛c. The close was weak with May off ⅛@¼c at 65¼@⅜c.

Oats were inclined to be weak, owing to selling by cash houses, inspired by more liberal receipts. Trade was quiet. May opened ⅛c to ¼c higher, at 54⅞c to 55c, and sold off to 54¾c.

Trade in provisions was dull and the market was steady. Prices at the opening were unchanged to 5@7½¢ higher.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Strong Cables Impart General Strength to the Wheat Market.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 23.—Barley: Receipts today, 132 cars, against 15 cars a year ago; shipments, 41. The market was steady to 1½c lower. Feeding interests were the principal buyers. Demand was strong. Close: 59½@61c. Flax: Receipts today 36 cars, against 37 a year ago; shipments, 15. Demand was strong, but few cars were offered for sale. Prices were quoted at 1c over Duluth May. Close, $1.69½.

Strong cables tended to make the wheat receipts strong today. May opened ¾@½c higher. Heavy receipts reacted and made the market fairly steady. Minneapolis elevator stocks decreased 100,000 bushels for three days. The close showed only a gain of ¼c over Saturday's closing. Poor wire service tended to make the market quiet. Minneapolis today received 714 cars for three days, against 168; Duluth, 31, against 73; Winnipeg 330, against 221, boht for three days. May opened at $1.11⅞@¾; high, $1.12⅛; low, $1.11⅜@½; close, $1.11⅜@½; July opened at $1.12¼; high, $1.12¾@⅞; low, $1.12⅛; close, $1.12⅛@¼. Cash wheat was in fair demand. Local and country millers were principal buyers.

Receipts were heavy. No. 1 northern sold from ¾ to 2c over May and No. 2 for ¼c under to the full May price. No. 1 northern closed $1.13@1.13¼; to arrive, $1.13@1.13¼; No. 2 northern closed $1.11@1.11¼; to arrive $1.11@1.11¼; No. 3 wheat $1.07¼@1.09¼; No. 3 yellow corn, 60¼@60¾c; No. 3 white oats, 51⅛@51⅞c; No. 2 rye, 72¼@73¼c.

Bran in bulk, $23.00@23.50.

Flour was in strong domestic demand. Local millers reported that export demand for patents was very light. Prices held firm and shipments for three days were light. Shipments, 73,420 barrels. First patents, $5.55@5.65; second patents, $5.40@5.50; first clears, $4.10@4.20; second clears, $3.05@3.10.

EGG MARKET HAS A BREAK

Prices Go Off to the Lowest Level in Several Months.

The egg market has undergone another break and prices are now more suited to the popular purse. Fresh eggs are quoted, wholesale, in Michigan street today, at 25 to 27 cents, which is the lowest they have been in several months.

These prices represent a break of about ten points from last week's level.

Storage eggs are not quoted at all. They are out of the market entirely.

WEAKNESS IN STOCKS

Decline in Prices at London Brought About Heavy Liquidation.

Metal Industrials the Leaders in the Slump That Followed.

New York, Feb. 23.—The market opened in an excited condition, owing to the heavy declines in the prices of Americans in the London market during yesterday's holiday in New York. The metal industrials were most affected, as a result of steel trade conditions. As compared with 46 for United States Steel on Saturday, at the close, there were sales of 12,000 shares at the opening at 44¾ and 44½, and the price subsequently touched 44⅛. Colorado Fuel broke 2½, Sloss-Sheffield Steel 2, Republic Steel preferred 1½, Amalgamated Copper 1⅝, United States Steel preferred 1⅞, and American Smelting 1⅛. In the general list Reading, Wabash preferred, Erie, Chesapeake & Ohio, Consolidated Gas and Tennessee Copper were down a point, and the majority of the most active stocks showed large fractional losses.

Liquidation was unrestrained in the United States Steel stocks, large offerings forcing their prices down steadily, until the common sold 2⅞ and the preferred 2⅜ below Saturday's closing. Other metal stocks also weakened in a sensational manner, but the railroad list aside from the Gould stocks and a few others, was much less affected. Federal Mining dropped 10½, Republic Steel 6, Central Railroad of New Jersey 5, National Lead 3, Third Avenue 2½, American Car preferred 2¾, Texas & Pacific, Deleware & Hudson, Great Northern ore certificates, Utah Copper and Amalgamated Copper 2, Chesapeake & Ohio, Missouri Pacific and St. Louis Southwestern preferred 1¾, Kansas City Southern preferred 1⅝, and Minneapolis, St. Paul and Ste. Marie preferred, Western Maryland, Western Union and Great Northern preferred 1½.

A pause in the selling brought about a moderate rally, but a subsequent deluge of stocks came on the market, and new points of acute weakness developed. The standard railroad stocks, notably Union Pacific, Reading and New York Central bore the brunt of the late selling. Republic Steel preferred declined 7⅜, Reading 6⅝, Great Northern ore certificates and Westinghouse Electric 4¾, Delaware & Hudson and Denver & Rio Grande 4½, Wabash preferred 4⅜, Kansas & Texas, Union Pacific and National Lead 4, New York Central, Pressed Steel Car and Amalgamated Copper 3½, American Sugar 3¼, American Smelting 2¾, St. Paul 2, International Paper preferred 2⅝ and Southern Pacific 2⅜.

The market closed weak and disorderly. There was heavy covering among the shorts in the final hour and a rally resulted that ran to a point in active stocks. A renewed break in Reading which carried it down 10½ to 118 unsettled the market again. Allis-Chalmers preferred broke 6¾, Delaware & Hudson 6½, National Lead 5⅜, New York Central, Chicago & Alton, Chesapeake & Ohio, Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis, Great Northern preferred, Sugar 4 to 5, United States Steel sold as low as 41¼.

New York stock quotations furnished by Fred H. Merritt, 328 West Superior street. Closing prices are bid.

DIRT CHEAP

Are you looking for a good safe investment? If so, let me show you some of my lands in the Carlton County Valley, along the Great Northern and Soo lines; none better for general Farming, Dairying and Stock Raising.

Twenty years ago these very same kind of lands around the Twin Cities were selling at from $5.00 to $10.00 an acre; today they are selling from $75.00 to $125.00 an acre. The same applies to lands in this vicinity, but instead of waiting 20 years for the raising in value, I expect to see it within the next 5 years, as good lands around the Head of the Lakes are getting scarce, and will command a fancy price in the very near future. I have 10,000 acres for you to select from.

TELLING POINTS AGAINST ORE TONNAGE TAX RAISED BY TWO HOUSE MEMBERS

It Would Decrease the State School and University Funds.

Former State Auditor Dunn Shows Unfairness of Tonnage Tax.

Other Counties Besides St. Louis Deeply Interested in Measure.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crushing arguments against the tonnage tax upon iron ore accumulated at a rapid rate at yesterday afternoon's third public hearing of the house committee on taxes and tax laws on the tonnage tax bill proposed by Representative H. O. Bjorge.

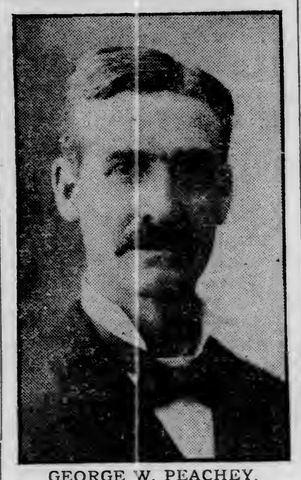

Representative Chester A. Congdon of Duluth continued his masterly argument, summing up with an appeal for fair play and for encouragement to Duluth in the upbuilding of the manufacturing side of the iron industry.

Former State Auditor Robert C. Dunn of Princeton gave a brief but convincing argument against the tonnage tax, speaking out of the fullness of his years of experience as state taxing official.

Two entirely new and telling points were sprung after the speeches were done by members of the house who have been studying the pending bill and the effects it would have upon the state.

For instance, Representative Hugh N. Allen of Minneapolis, chairman of the house committee on the state university, pointed out that it would take

EXEMPTION OF CREDITS

From Taxation Was Subject of Warm Debate in House.

Range Towns Want an Amendment to Village Annexation Bill.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Both branches of the legislature put in almost the entire morning session wrangling over the adoption or rejection of committee reports. The expected fight over the Stuart bill, exempting credits from taxation, came off in the house, and resulted in a victory for Mr. Stuart, the author of the bill, the majority report of the tax committee in favor of the measure being adopted and the minority report against it being rejected by a vote of 65 to 50.

On motion of W. A. Nolan, who led the fight against the measure, the report was referred to the judiciary committee for an opinion as to its constitutionality.

W. A. Nolan presented the minority report and urged its adoption, saying that the passage of such a law would set free of taxation property worth $20,000,000 to $30,000,000.

Carl Wallace of Minneapolis, in approving the bill, said that under the present condition it is practically impossible to sell local bonds in this state, because they are taxed and they have to be marketed elsewhere.

Mr. Stuart made a strong argument for the bill, and Representative Wells showed that out of the $209,000,000 in

DRUGGED, IS HER STORY

Chicago Girl Tells Police of an Exciting Adventure.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—That she was seized by two men Monday night, threatened with death, forced to swallow a drug and then carried to a hotel near Lincoln park, where she remained unconscious twenty hours, is the experience related to the police today by Miss Marie McInrue, 19 years old. The story told by the girl resembles in its wierd details the case of Ella Gingles, who was found bound to a bath tub in the Wellington hotel last week. Miss McInrue told Lieut. Custy she was about to be married and that jewelry given her by her fiance was stolen by her assailants.

She says she was stopped by two men, armed with revolvers, while she was on her way home. They ordered her, she says, to make no outcry and then forced her to swallow poison. How she was taken to the hotel she does not recall.

TOWN GONE; MANY DIE

Storm Leaves Trail of Ruin in Three States.

But Two Buildings Left Standing in Fisher, Ark.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 24.—That the storm of wind and rain in Eastern Arkansas, Northern Mississippi and Western Tennessee is most severe is confirmed by advices received today. In the counties of Lonoke, Woodruff, Prairie and Poinsett in Arkansas, the worst force of the storm, which apparently originated in the first named county, was felt. The town of Fisher, in Poinsett county, was destroyed, reports stating that but two buildings remain, while six persons were killed and a number of others sustained more or less serious injuries.

Near Augusta the dead number six. In Lonoke a child was killed.

Telegraph and telephone wires through the storm-swept section, however, are prostrated, and the full extent of the damage is not yet known.

In Mississippi considerable damage was done to property. Near Greenville several substantial structures were wrecked and a number of smaller buildings were demonlished.

At New Albany two electrical and wind storms prevailed and several houses were struck by lightning.

At Tucani a number of buildings was damaged and several completely wrecked.

In Memphis and vicinity the storm was very severe. At Aulon, Mrs. C. E. Baldwin was caught in the wreckage of her home and seriously injured.

At Greggs Station a church building was razed and several small houses were wrecked, W. T. Barnum was injured.

At Binghampton several buildings were damaged.

In Memphis trees were uprooted and telegraph and telephone wires tangled, but no casualties occurred.

ST. LOUIS FIRE LOSS IS $100,000

"Fireproof" Building Containing Furniture Company Damaged.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 24.—Fire which attacked the upper portion of a supposedly fireproof six-story structure, at 112-114 North Twelfth street today, caused a loss estimated at $100,000.

The building was occupied by the Milvihill Furniture company and much of the loss was caused by steam, smoke and water.

A general alarm brought out a large brigade of fire extinguishers, but despite their efforts the flames were not thoroughly checked until three hours after the fire was discovered.

CALLS FOR ACCOUNTING

House Passes Bill for Chippewa Indians of Minnesota.

Roosevelt's Hunting Trip Comes Up Again in Congress.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The house has passed the bill providing for an accounting of certain funds held in trust to the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota, and the bill providing for the sale of timber on allotted Indian lands.

The coming hunting trip of President Roosevelt to Africa was brought up during the consideration of the sundry civil bill in the house. Mr. Garrett of Tennessee wanted to know how much of the expense that expedition was to be paid by the government, and Mr. Mann of Illinois volunteered the answer that no public moneys were to be used. He said there is nothing in connection with the proposed trip that can be criticised.

Objects to Term "Sham."

The fact that there remains an unexpected balance of $225,000 of the $350,000 fund appropriated last year for the enforcement of the interstate commerce laws, stirred Mr. Fitzgerald of New York to a defense of the proposal

WALTER McCLINTOCK DINES WITH THE CROWN PRINCE

Berlin, Feb. 24.—Walter McClintock, the specialist in American Indian ethnology, dined with Crown Prince Frederick William and the crown princess last night, on special invitation, after which he talked with his hosts regarding the results of his most recent studies of Black Feet religion and traditions. Mr. McClintock presented the crown prince with a series of colored reproductions of Black Feet scenes at the sun festival. Prince and Princess von Buelow and the duchess of Mecklenburg were among the guests.

KILLS BOY, WOUNDS WIFE, ESCAPES FROM CONSTABLE.

Malvern, Ark., Feb. 24.—While in custody of a constable, being conveyed to jail on charge of having threatened to kill his wife, from whom he had been separated, B. H. Hunicutt fired on and killed his 14-year-old brother-in-law, John Hartsell, and wounded Mrs. Hunicutt. He then escaped.

GIRL PLAINTIFF FATALLY WOUNDS MAN DEFENDANT.

Hoxie, Ark., Feb. 24.—A telephone message from Salem, Ark., states that while waiting trial at the courthouse at that place, J. W. Jones, a merchant of Mammouth Springs, was stabbed and fatally wounded by Miss Lizzie Kisheo, the plaintiff in the case.

EVANSTON PAYS $28 FOR EVERY BALLOT.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—It cost the city of Evanston $28 for each ballot cast at yesterday's primary election. There was no contest in the election and only the Socialist party had a ticket in the field. Twenty-five votes were cast at a total cost of $700 for holding the primaries.

WERE KEPT UPON CARDS

But Stephenson's Manager Hasn't Expense Notes Any More.

Wisconsin Primary Probers Wrangle Over Character of Inquiry.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 24.—Rodney Sackett, one of United States Senator Stephenson's managers during the senatorial campaign, appeared before the legislative investigation committee today and told of the manner of keeping account of campaign disbursements. The expenditures, he said, were kept on cards and afterward compiled into an account form. The cards are no longer in his possesion. He received help from State Chairman Edmonds and Banker J. H. Puelicher, but none from Stephenson or the latter's attorneys. Sackett's testimony with regard to getting money was largely a repetition of the story told by Mr. Puelicher last week.

A wrangle among members of the committee then followed as to going into details of expenditures. Mr. Ingalls believed that lacking "nly specific charges" the committee should either go into the investigation more deeply or else adjourn. "And an adjournment spells whitewash," remarked Senator Husting, who said that the law requires that all items of $5 or over must be itemized.

The assembly and senate members of the committee claimed that the stand taken by the other spelled "whitewash." A motion by Mr. Ingalls to confine the investigation to "charges of some specific or definite nature," was lost 7 to 1 after considerable debate.

Mr. Sackett in reply to a question said he was not positive as to names of persons in Dane county to whom money was paid. He believed $200 was paid to Hugh Lewis to be used for promoting Stephenson's campaign in Dane county. He did not know how the money was spent.

ROOSEVELT AT THE FUNERAL

President and Daughters Attend Ceremonies for Stewart Robinson.

New York, Feb. 24.—President Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt and their daughters, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth and Miss Ethel Roosevelt, were in this city today to attend the funeral of Stewart Douglas Robinson, the president's nephew. The young son of Douglas Robinson was killed by a fall from the window of a dormitory at Harvard university Saturday night.

Mrs. Roosevelt and her son Kermit came over from Washington to attend the funeral, and the president and his daughters, Rear Admiral W. S. Cowles and Mrs. Cowles and Secretary Loeb came on a Pennsylvania railroad train last night. The party in the president's car arrived at Jersey City at 7:14 a. m. today.

Notwithstanding the rain, the president stood on the forward end of the ferry boat while crossing the river.

LEADERS OF GANG OF SWINDLERS CAUGHT; RAN FAKE WRESTLING BOUTS

HEARS ARGUMENTS IN OIL RETRIAL

JUDGE ALBERT B. ANDERSON.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—While the federal jury commission was engaged today in securing a new panel of 150 veniremen, from which to select a jury for the retrial of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, for the alleged acceptance of rebates, United States District Judge Anderson listened to arguments as to which shall form the basis of each offense charged. John S. Miller, for the defense, pleaded that the settlements of freight charges, of which there are thirty-six in the present case, should form the basis of the government's charges. District Attorney Sims argued that each shipment constituted a separate offense. Under the latter construction of the law a maximum fine of $10,000,000 is possible; under the former, one of $720,000.

State and Federal Authorities Make a Big Haul.

"Fixed" Sporting Affairs Got Victims by the Score.

Agents of Crooked Syndicate Worked All Over Country.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 24.—That their field of operations extended over the entire country and their victims numbered nearly 100, from whom almost a half million dollars was obtained in the last two years, is the declaration of state and federal officials who have caused the arrest of J. C. Maybray and three alleged confederates, leaders, it is charged, of a thoroughly organized band of swindlers, on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

In searching the effects of Maybray, records were found giving the names, the authorities declare, of men who were victimized and of over 300 others, in every state in the Union and in several provinces in Canada, who, the officials assert, acted as agents of the men.

Their operations, it is alleged, were to arrange bogus wrestling matches and foot and horse races.

Chief Inspector Swanson of the United States postal service, with headquarters in Council Bluffs, Iowa, effected the arrest, aided by local officials.

The men arrested give their names as J. C Maybray, F. M. Clark, J. M. Johnson and Isadore J. Warner. They were identified by T. M. Cavanaugh of New Orleans, who declared he lost $35,000 on a "fixed" wrestling match.

Support of Uncle Sam All Little Republic Needs.

Washingqton, Feb. 24.—From a correspondent in Monrovia, Liberia, the state department has received a letter touching affairs in that little republic, in which the writer says he has found general conditions much better than they had been represented to him, all along the course of an African trip of six months. The letter says:

"Everything here is reminiscent of home, flags on the houses, the names of the streets. Every college in the country is founded on American benevolence. All its institutions are unique. Yesterday I wandered through the old cemetery and on nearly every

MILLIONAIRE IN SLUMS; LEARNING

E. A. Brown of Denver Will Start Municipal Lodging Houses.

Dons Working Clothes in New York's East Side.

New York, Feb. 24.—Edwin A. Brown, the Denver millionaire who was recently reported as investigating conditions of the unemployed by personal tours in Chicago in the slums and lodging houses, is now in New York continuing his research work. He is staying at the Waldorf Astoria here, but nightly he dons rough working clothes and journeys to the East side. When he has sufficient data, Mr. Brown will return to Denver in the interest of a movement which he has started there to establish municipal lodging houses. He is a cousin of W. C. Brown, the new vice president of the New York Central railroad.

Aside from his plan to establish municipal lodging houses, Mr. Brown is interested in the creation of a national park in the White river forest reservation in Colorado. In the interest of this project he called on President-elect Taft yesterday. He will soon go to Washington to lay the matter before congress. Speaking of the plan, he said:

"My first thought in regard to establishing the White river national park was a philanthropic one, and I have thought for a long time what a grand place it would be to build a sanitarium for our indigent soldiers and sailors, and also for a recuperating station for malaria-stricken soldiers from the Philippines and elsewhere."

WORK TO FREE REBEL LEADER

Socialists Take Up Cause of Mexican Editor Aruajo.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 24.—The national Socialist organization has launched a movement to obtain the release of Antonio P. Aruajo, sentenced to two and a half years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., for the part he had as leader in the recent Mexican revolutionary outbreak. The action is similar to that conducted in behalf of Moyer and Haywood during the Idaho mining troubles.

Aruajo recently wrote a letter to E. V. Debs and this appeal, it is declared, has resulted in the effort to get his release.

Aruajo, as editor of a Mexican paper published at Austin, Tex., criticised the administration of President Diaz of Mexico.

PUZZLE: DID HETTY GREEN GIVE DAUGHTER A WEDDING PRESENT?

New York, Feb. 24.—When asked if she approves the marriage of her daughter to Matthew Astor Wilks, Hetty Green, richest woman in the world, said:

"I am happy because my daughter is happy."

She would not state definitely whether she had given the bride any wedding present. "I gave her my love," she said, "and when I die she will have a great deal more from me."

ROOSEVELT READS TAFT'S INAUGURAL

IRREGULARITY IN STOCK DEALS

Wall Street Price Changes Show Still Further Losses.

New York, Feb. 24.—Extreme irregularity marked the opening dealings in the stock market today. Price changes showed further losses as well as some substantial recovery from yesterday's demoralization in the United States Steel issues reported with occasional gains for both. There was also a 2-point gain for Reading with gains of over a point for Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul and Illinois Central. Northern Pacific and Canadian Pacific were among the weakest issues, declining 2 points or more each and Missouri Pacific was off 1½. The Harriman stocks were also heavy. The list was moderately firm during the first half hour, and a more stable tone developed.

ROAST MONKEY AND BOA CONSTRICTOR ON BILL OF FARE.

New York, Feb. 24.—Devilled whale blubber, grilled boa constrictor and roast monkey are among the delicacies on the menu of the seventh annual dinner of the Canadian camp, which will be held at the Hotel Astor March 2. Great disappointment has been expressed because a consignment of dried elephant from Calcutta has been delayed in shipment. There will be speakers at the dinner, provided the speakers survive the repast.

Document Also Submitted to the Cabinet Members-to-be.

Contains Five Thousand Words, Requiring an Hour's Delivery.

New York, Feb. 24.—With the one important news feature of the Taft cabinet held in abeyance—the selection of a secretary of the treasury—President-elect Taft today took advantage of his coveted opportunity to catch up with his correspondence and prepare a portion of one of the magazine articles he has contracted to write. Mr. Taft announces that ex-Governor Myron T. Herrick of Ohio will not be in his cabinet.

The inaugural address of Mr. Taft received its final revision today. The document is, according to custom, a declaration of the policies which the new administration will endeavor to carry out. The address contains 5,000 words and will occupy little short of an hour in its delivery.

The address has been submitted not only to the men who have accepted places in the Taft cabinet, and in each case received their approval, but Mr. Taft has also read the paper to President Roosevelt and others of his personal friends and political advisers. It is pronounced a strong state paper.

Mr. Taft's callers today were few, his wishes for exclusion being generally understood and observed.

Praised by the President.

A JOB FOR EVERY MAN

The Employment Agents Deny Claim There Are 2,000 Idle Men.

Say That Employers Are Looking for Steady, Reliable Men.

Duluth employment agents deny the statement, made at the meeting at St. Paul, Sunday, of various heads of the state free employment bureaus, that there are 2,000 idle men in the city of Duluth.

The statement came out of a talk upon the labor situation in the state. It was claimed that there kwere 10,000 idle men in the three large cities of Minnesota, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth.

An inquiry among employment agents of Duluth today, brought out the statement that there was a job for every man who was seriously looking for employment. The statement of the employment agents went further. The employment men say that they have orders upon their books that cannot be filled, for the simple reason that men cannot be secured to fill them.

According to every employment agent interrogated by The Herald today, there is a job awaiting every man who is really looking for work.

George S. Richards, proprietor of the National Employment company, made the statement that he had orders upon his files two weeks old, that he had been unable to fill for the simple reason that men were not obtainable for these positions. Mr. Richards showed his files to a representative of The Herald, showing orders dating back in some instances over two weeks, that remained unfilled.

Peter Quinn, another employment agent, bore out the statement of Mr. Richards. Mr. Quinn placed the number of idle men in Duluth at possibly 500. This Mr. Quinn stated, included the men who were not looking for employment.

Like Mr. Richards, Mr. Quinn says he has orders upon his books that he is unable to fill, as he cannot secure the men to fill them.

Both Mr. Richards and Mr. Quinn say that the employers of labor, are becoming more particular regarding the kind of men they employ. They want thrifty, intelligent laborers, the kind who aren't broke two days after they hit town; the kind of men that do not wait until they wake up with a headache, a bad taste, and an empty pocket before looking for work. They don't want the kind of men that the employment agents have to advance the price of the fare to, to get them to the scene of their labors.

There are exceptions to this rule of course. Some laborers are without money through misfortunes. But employers believe as a rule, that the steady laboring man is not the man that is habitually broke.

Other employment agents corroborated the statement of the two agents mentioned above. They stated that there was work for every idle worker in Duluth. They said that the men who are idle are drinking men, the men who won't look for work until they hacve the alternative of starving or working, and that the idle men upon the streets of Duluth today are the men who have not applied for positions.

Job for Every Man.

"You can quote me as saying that there is a job for every man that desires employment," said Mr. Richards. "This winter is much better than last winter in the number of jobs it gives to laboring men. The railroads are taking a few men; the lumber camps are looking for men they can't get; they want men upon the ranges and in the mines; and men are wanted for the pulpwood cutting. All of these various lines of industry want men that they are unable to secure."

Mr. Quinn was equally emphatic in his statement. "If we could bring some of the lumber camps down to Duluth, show them to the idle men, and explain everything to them, some of them might condescend to go to work," said he. "Those fellows who are not working are the fellows who don't want to get down to hard labor."

Mr. Richards was inclined to criticise some of the statements brought out in the St. Paul meeting. The reason why more men did not go to the state free employment bureau for employment, Mr. Richards explained, was because the employers of labor were not looking for men who applied for work through that source.

"I have been in the employment business for twenty years," said Mr. Richards. "It is a constant study to get the right kind of men for particular kinds of employment. The employers of labor are very particular what kind of men they employ. They employ those men selected with the utmost care. They want good men, men who are able to satisfy them. For that reason they place their orders with agencies they believe can secure them the kind of men they desire. When I am unable to satisfy my customers as to the kind of men they want in their various lines of industry, you may be sure that they will look elsewhere for men."

That there are idle men upon the streets of Duluth, none of the men interviewed attempted to deny. However, the agents stated that these men were generally the drinking men who are willing to wait for a job that is "soft." These men are designated as the "travelers."

Employment agents say that the men who have hit pedestrians for "two bits" or less, are the men that generally have the scent of liquor upon their breaths.

LAMP LIGHTER FATALLY HURT

Struck by Switch Engine During Storm at Negaunee.

Negaunee, Mich., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Albert Bird, a lamplighter on the Northwestern railroad, was struck and seriously injured by a switch engine this forenoon. Owing to a severe storm which was raging, he did not see or hear the approach of the engine. No hopes are entertained of saving his life.

Company Dissolved by Fire.

Asserting that the venture, in which they were interested, was wiped out by fire, which swept away the village of Chisholm, Sept. 5 of last year, the stockholders of the Chisholm Construction company filed a petition in district court today for the dissolution of the corporation.

The petition sets forth that the company made a contract to purchase a piece of ground from the First National bank of Chisholm, and to take over a certain building venture for the bank. The building was wiped out by the fire of last fall, and the stockholders say there is no reason why the company should continue to exist as a corporation. The assets consist of $20,-$640 loaned to the First National bank of Chisholm, and that is sufficient to retire all of the outstanding stock. The company owes no debts.

Care of The Bathroom.

To insure perfect safety from disease germs every part of the bathroom must be well looked after and a daily cleaning and weekly scrubbing are necessary to keep it in a sanitary condition. The tub should be cleaned each time after it is used. For this purpose keep in the bathroom a bottle of a solution made by dissolving two tablespoonfuls of Gold Dust washing powder in half a gallon of water. Once a week thoroughly scrub and scald the tub, basin, floor and all the fixtures with hot suds made from the washing powder and pour down the pipes boiling water to which has been added two tablespoonfuls of Gold Dust washing powder to every gallon of water. Use a small hook or bent hairpin to remove lint from the waste pipes. Clean the nickel and brass fixtures in the bathroom by rubbing with equal parts of whiting and Gold Dust washing powder.

COPPERS REGAIN THEIR LOSSES

Shares React From Tuesday's Slump, With Active Session.

The copper stock market, during an active session today, made up, for the most part, the losses in values it sustained during the bear raid yesterday. North Butte advanced three points and more, over the opening price, which was about on par with last night's close and the other issues showed similar recoveries. The close today was at the top level of the session.

A reduction of ⅛c in the bid price of the metal was reported, but the feeling seemed to be that liquidation in the shares had gone the limit and that they would rally, which they did.

North Butte opened at $66.25, advanced to $69.50 and closed at $69.25 bid and $69.75 asked. Amalgamated opened at $69, sold as low as $62.12½, rallied to $70.50 and closed at $70.37½ bid and $70.50 asked. Greene-Cananea opened at $9.87½, declined to $9.75, rallied to $10 and closed at $9.75 bid and $10 asked. Butte Coalition opened at $22, sold off to $21.37½, reacted to $22.50 and closed at $22.50 bid and $23 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $99.50, went off to $98, reacted to $101 and closed at $101 bid and $102 asked.

Giroux opened at $7, sold at that price during the day and closed at $6.87½ bid and $7 asked. Superior & Boston opened at $14.62½, declined to $14.37½, rallied to $15, and closed at $15 bid and $15.50 asked. Anaconda opened at $40.12½, advanced to $41.87½ and closed at $41.87½ bid.

Superior & Pittsburg sold at $14.25, declined to $13.87½, rallied to $14 and closed at $13.87½ bid and $14 asked. Cactus sold at $1.37½ and $1.50 and closed at $1.37½ bid and $1.50 asked; Calumet & Sonora at $14, and closed at $13.75 bid and $14.25 asked; Dominion-Arizona at $3.62½ and closed at $3.37½ bid and $3.62½ asked; National at 67 cents, declined to 61 cents, and closed at 60 cents bid and 61 cents asked, and Chief Consolidated at $1.12½, and closed at $1 bid and $1.12½ asked.

Globe was inactive and closed at $5.75 bid and $6 asked, Butte & Superior at $1 bid and $1.12½ asked, Red Warrior at $2.12½ bid and $2.37½ asked, Mowitza at $1.25 bid and $1.50 asked, Carman at $1.50 bid and $1.62½ asked, Savanna at $2.25 bid and $2.50 asked, Butte-Ballaklava at $17.75 bid and $18.25 asked, Cliff at $1.62½ bid and $1.87½ asked, Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.52½ bid and $1.87½ asked, and Butte-Montana at 38 cents bid and 42 cents asked.

Black Mountain sold at $2.25 and closed at $2 bid and $2.37½ asked.

MORE PERSONAL INJURIES SUITS

Three more personal injury suits, aggregating over $50,000 were filed in the district court late this afternoon.

Rasmus Loken wants $15,250 from the Boston Coal Dock & Wharf company for an injury to his hand, sustained Nov. 9, 1908.

Reta Carlson wants $5,000 from the street railway company for the death of her husband, who was killed by a street car on West Third street, Nov. 27, 1907.

Charles W. Hulse asks $30,000 from the St. Louis Hotel company for injuries received while repairing the elevator in the hotel, on Nov. 30, 1908.

Sue for Groceries.

The suit of F. C. Cerveny and J. C. Bradford, doing business as the Eveleth Cash Grocery, against George Milovich, John Kestrovich, Sam Bentar, George Banich, Theodore Provolocki, Mike Beondic and Mike Vocolic, as Camp 1, for $318.06, was taken up before Judge Cant in district court this morning. The defendants were living together in what is known as a boarding camp, and the bill is for groceries furnished them. The case was first tried in the municipal court of Eveleth, and judgment entered in favor of the plaintiffs. The case was appealed, and it is being tried today before a jury in district court.

Hockey Game.

The Bryants and Lester Park hockey teams will clash tonight at the Central rink.

The game was originally arranged for last night, but on account of the weather was postponed.

This will be an important contest, as it will put either one team or the other out of the race for the championship. The Bryants have an old score to settle with the Lesters, and they are as determined to win tonight's game and even matters up, as the Lesters are determined to eliminate them from the race.

PRIZE FOOD.

Palatable, Economical, Nourishing.

A Nebr. woman has outlined the prize food in a few words, and that from personal experience. She writes:

"After our long experience with Grape-Nuts, I cannot say enough in its favor. We have used this food almost continually for seven years.

"We sometimes tried other advertised breakfast foods but we invariably returned to Grape-Nuts as the most palatable, economical and nourishing of all.

"When I quit tea and coffee and began to use Postum and Grape-Nuts, I was a nervous wreck. I was so irritable I could not sleep nights, had no interest in life.

"After using Grape-Nuts a short time I began to improve and all these ailments have disappeared and now I am a well woman. My two children have been almost raised on Grape-Nuts, which they eat three times a day.

"They are pictures of health and have never had the least symptom of stomach trouble, even through the most severe siege of whooping cough they could retain Grape-Nuts when all else failed.

"Grape-Nuts food has saved doctor bills, and has been, therefore, a most economical food for us."

NOTICE TO MOVE OUT

Tenants Must Vacate Superior Street Stores May 1.

Work Will Begin Then on Handsome, New Building.

The tenants now occupying the buildings on the corner of Second avenue west and Superior street have been notified that they must vacate May 1, and construction of the big new building, mention of which was made some time ago in The Herald, will be begun as soon as the site can be cleared. The tenants are W. A. Abbett, Campbell & Doran, Vienna Bakery, Frank Sandstedt, George Holmes and R. B. Haire.

The new building is to be owned by R. M. Bradley, Arthur Lyman and H. D. Cabot of Boston and W. M. Prindle & Co. are the local agents. This year, only the first two stories will be erected, the design and construction to be such as to allow the addition of six stories at some later date. Plans for the first two stories have been prepared by W. A. Hunt and they call for an expenditure of between $175,00 and $200,000.

The new building will be an innovation in Duluth, in that it will have mercantile rooms on the second floor. In all there will be sixteen storerooms, five on the first floor fronting on Superior street and Second avenue west, and eleven on the second floor.

The building will front 100 feet on Superior street and 140 feet on the avenue and will be of modern fireproof construction. The steel work will be strong enough to allow the addition of six stories, which is planned for the future, and the walls will be of brick and terra cotta with the floors of hollow tile. As much glass will be put into the street and avenue construction as will be consistent with stability and architectural policy, so that all of the stores will be well lighted and have plenty of show space.

Stability and appearance will go together. The exterior construction will be of semi-glazed terra cotta, with an ornate cornice and the main entrance will be surmounted by an ornamental iron canopy. The main entrance will be finished in marble wainscoting and the stairway leading to the second floor will be of marble. All light courts will be finished in glazed brick and the interior finishings will be modern, durable and beautiful.

The floor space on the Superior street level will be divided into three store rooms fronting on the street. The big corner store will have a frontage of fifty feet, and will extend the full 140 feet to the alley. To the west of the big store will be the main entrance, and farther to the west will be two store rooms, about 20x80 feet. The two stores on the avenue will be on what may be termed an intermediate floor, between the first and second floors. The construction is made possible by the grade of the avenue. They will be on the alley level, and will have a frontage on the avenue of twenty feet, with a depth of about sixty feet. The floor of the corner store will extend under them.

The second floor will be reached by elevator or stairway from the main entrance on the Superior street level. The eleven stores will average about 20x40 feet in size, and will open from corridors. The corridors will be flanked by glass, giving the occupants of the stores opportunity to make their windows attractive to the people in the corridors.

Every detail of the construction will be for the convenience and comfort of the tenants, with all modern ideas in the architectural designing of such buildings incorporated. The building will be as thoroughly fireproof as the Wolvin building, the Sellwood building or any of the other modernly constructed buildings of the city. With the two stories alone, the building will be a creditable addition to Duluth's architectural assets, and there is assurance that the other six stories will be added in time.

W. C. T. U. AS HOSTESSES

Banquet Is Given by West Duluth Temperance Workers.

Memory of Frances Willard and George Washington Honored.

The members of the W. C. T. U. of West Duluth were hostesses at a banquet at Wade's hall last evening. The affair, which was a pronounced success, was given in memory of George Washington and of Frances Willard, the great temperance worker and president of the National W. C. T. U. for twenty years. Their pictures were hung side by side in the hall.

The banquet was an achievement to be proud of. It was featured by good things to eat and interesting discourses. The hall was decorated in red, white and blue, and ferns and potted plants graced the tables.

Mrs. W. F. Bailey, president of the W. C. T. U., acted as toastmistress and introduced the speakers.

Rev. M. S. Rice, pastor of the First M. E. church, spoke on the church and its connection with reform movements. He said it would be impossible to keep the church from taking a hand in such reforms as the W. C. T. U. had undertaken. The world, he said, cannot be revolutionized by law, and the church will play a large part in doing away with the liquor evil.

The aim of the teachers in the schools of the city, said Supt. R. E. Denfeld, is to turn out into the world honest young men and women, who will be of service to the world.

"Civic Government," was the subject of Mayor R. D. Haven's talk. He complimented the women on the great work they have undertaken, and said that every movement that the women of the country have entered into has been a good one, and that the temperance movement is the greatest and best they have undertaken to carry through.

Mrs. Joseph Cochran told of the life of Frances Willard and the work of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. J. S. Tostevin of Superior explained why women should associate themselves with the union. Miss Mable Merritt gave a reading. Mrs. Wesley Feetham and Norman D. McLeod spoke on the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. A Y. W. C. A. branch building for West Duluth has been a long agitated proposition by the members of the union. Charles Applehagen sang a solo.

THE PIPE DREAMER'S CLUB.

Some Splendid Nature Fakes Being Produced in West Duluth.

There will be another meeting of the "Pipe Dreamers' club," at the Zenith Furnace company, tomorrow evening, to frame up another "Wild Animals I Have Known" story for the morning paper.

The members of the night crew at the furnace have some idle hours each night on their hands. In the shift are a number of fertile brains, whose successes at nature faking are notable. Each night the "Pipe Dreamers' club" gathers and cudgels its united brains for a story for the morning paper.

Their latest production was a "blue racer snake," said to have been caught by Charles A. Anderson, an employe of the Zenith Furnace company. The snake has been a good advertisement for Jack Higgin's new confectionery store on Central avenue, where it is supposed to be on exhibition.

It must be admitted that the stories are good ones, and the "Pipe Dreamers" are to be congratuated on their vivid imaginations.

New Curling Trophy.

The Western Curling club members have another trophy to play for now.

Yesterday M. Henrickson, jeweler, donated to the club a silver loving cup, to be played for each year, and a set of four individual prizes, to go to the members of the winning rinks. Mr. Henrickson has promised to donate new individual prizes to go with the trophy. These individual prizes will be different each year. The first set are buttons. When the contests in the Esterly and Buckley events have been finished, play in the new Henrickson event will be started.

There was no game between McRae of Duluth and Fillatrault, last night, the former rink failing to show up, on account of the softness of the ice. The Duluth rink will play Fillatrault this evening on West Duluth ice.

Wade defeated Zauft, 19 to 3, and McDonald won from Donald, 14 to 5, in the Esterly event, last evening. There will be a game this evening in the Buckley cigar event, between the rinks of Evered and Zauft. The following are the line-ups and scores of last night's games:

LOWERED SKIP ON WORKMAN

Claiming that the engineer of a hoisting engine at Pit A of the Lincoln mine at Virginia, on being given a signal to raise a skip on Feb. 5, 1908, first lowered it to the bottom of the pit, killing Henry Lehtonen, Amanda Lehtonen, administratrix of the dead man's estate is suing the Interstate Iron company for $5,000 in district court. The trial of the case was begun before Judge Ensign yesterday.

Lehtonen was employed as a pitman and among his duties it was necessary for him to go to the bottom of the pit, which was about 200 feet deep, to shovel ore to one side and allow the skip to settle in the bottom of the pit. While he was in the bottom of the pit on the day of his death, another employe, it is said, gave the signal for the engineer to draw the skip up.

It is claimed that instead of raising the skip, which was some distance above Lehtonen's head, the engineer first dropped it to the bottom of the pit and then raised it. When it was raised Lehtonen's body lay at the bottom of the pit.

DAMAGE SUIT GOES TO JURY

Miner Claims $12,000 Damages for Being Caught in Blast.

The $12,000 personal injury damage suit of Joe Balego against the Oliver Iron Mining company for injuries sustained at the Fayal mine at Eveleth, April 23, 1904, went to the jury in district court this afternoon.

With records of time from its range mines, witnesses from Illinois coal mines, witnesses from Illinois, and expert witnesses, the Oliver Iron Mining company fought Balego's claim for damages. C. O. Baldwin fired several broadsides into Balego's claims in his argument to the jury this morning. This afternoon, W. E. Culkin made a plea for his client.

The company claimed that Balego's own carelessness was responsible for his injuries. Baleggo claimed that he was given no warning of an impending blast and received the force of it when he passed by the mouth of a drift. The company claimed that out of curiosity, Balego invaded a drift, where he had no right to be, and walked into a "shake" which exploded, knocked him down, and slightly injured him.

To refute Balego's claim that he lost nearly half of the time from work since the accident, the company brought time slips showing the time he worked on the range after receiving the injury and the time he worked in Illinois coal mines prior to coming back to Minnesota in September. The experts put on the stand by the company asserted that Balego's eyesight was not injured by an accident, while Balego claims that he is almost blind on account of the explosion.

CHILD KILLED BY RAILROAD TRAIN

Mother Starts Suit Against Railroad For $5,000 Damages.

Papers were filed in district court today in the suit of Lizzie Jetsu, administratrix of the estate of Susie Terrik, against the Great Northern Railway company. Susie Terrik, a child of 8 years of age, wandered on to the tracks of the Great Northern at Chisholm July 8, 1907, and was run down and killed by a train. Mrs. Jetsu, her mother, seeks to recover $5,000, claiming that the company had neglected to fence in is tracks and the child had access to the track, when the way should have been barred to her.

SUES RAILROAD FOR DEATH OF SON

The account of the death of her son, who was run down and killed by a Northern Pacific freight train at the crossing of St. Croix avenue Dec. 31, 1906, Mrs. Olivia M. Johnson has brought suit in district court against the Northern Pacific Railway company for $1,999. The papers were filed with the clerk of the district court this morning.

Oscar Johnson was 14 years old at the time of his death. It is claimed by Mrs. Johnson that the boy was walking north on St. Croix avenue and a train of freight cars blocked the crossing. The boy walked eastward about 300 feet to cross in front of the train, and just as he stepped on the track, it is claimed, the train suddenly started, knocking the boy down and dragging him for some distance.

It is claimed that Z. Zalk saw the accident and called to the engineer as soon as the boy was struck, but the engineer disregarded the warning. It is claimed that the train started without any warning of bell or whistle and that the men in charge were guilty of gross negligence. Mrs. Johnson, as administratrix of the boy's estate, brings the suit on behalf of herself and her husband.

CONTESTANT HAS LITTLE SURPRISE

No More Evidence in the Riddell-Riley Case.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Riddell-Riley election contest, involving the office of the sheriff, came to an abrupt termination yesterday afternoon, when it was announced by the attorneys for the contestant that, on account of certain reasons which they were not at liberty to disclose, no further testimony would be submitted.

The contestee had rested his case, except as to a few minor matters reserved for further consideration, Saturday, Feb. 13, at which time an adjournment was taken until yesterday. It was expected that considerable evidence in rebuttal would be offered by the contestant, and the move taken by Riddell occasioned some surprise.

Arguments will now be made to the court for its decision, which on account of the interests which are involved, will be given at the earliest possible moment after the court has had an opportunity to sift the voluminous evidence which has gone into the case.

Judge Cant and Mr. Hewitt, his stenographer, returned last night to Duluth. The case has been one of the most tedious ever tried in this part of the state, and relief is felt by all who have had anything to do with its trial that the end is at hand.

BIG MASONIC EVENT.

Institution of Canisteo Lodge of Masons Washington's Birthday.

Coleraine, Minn., Feb 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—By far the most important Masonic event in this section of the Mesaba range was the institution of Canisteo lodge, No. 27, of Masons, Monday evening, Washington's birthday, as briefly told in Tuesday's Herald. The fact that the lodge, which has existed under dispensation since September last year, came into full being on the anniversary of the birth of the first American citizen, himself a noted Mason, added to the interest in the occasion, which was largely attended by Masons from Duluth and other points.

Deputy Grand Master W. B. Patton was assisted in the ceremonies by Past Grand Master W. A. McGonagle of Duluth, Lionel Ayres of the same place, John H. Crane of Virginia, and E. A. Kreimer of Grand Rapids.

The charter members of the new lodge number twenty-four, as follows: Alexander King, R. G. Lacey, P. L. Ramquist E. G. Ingalls, J. A. Vandyke, Dorance D. Greer, H. C. Damkroger, H. A. Clark, E. Enstrom, F. W. Estabrooks, Thomas Cameron, George E. O'Connor, J. P. Roattama, V. S. Koumalainen, Frank Carson, George A. Olrey, W. J. Trescott, G. S. Jewell, Alfred S. Diehl, George S. Bolton, M. A. Hutchins, August Johnson, John Murray and W. E. Bowdler.

The officers were installed by Past Grand Master McGonagle and Lyonel Ayers as follows: Worshipful master, J. A. Vandyke; senior warden, August Johnson, junior warden, Dorance D. Greer; treasurer, George E. O'Connor; secretary, Alex King; senior deacon, H. C. Damkroger; junior deacon, G. S. Balton; senior steward, E. G. Ingalls; junior steward, A. S. Diehl; tyler, Moses A. Hutchins.

GAVE WASHINGTON PARTY.

Young Virginia Couple Entertained Many Friends Monday.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Corynne and Virginia Costin entertained twenty-two of their young friends Monday afternoon. The Costin home was prettily decorated with flags and red, white and blue streamers and the guests were presented with favors appropriate to the day, such as cherry trees, hatchets and George Washington hats.

Hugh McInnis, chief chemist at the Interstate Iron company, has been laid up for several days with an affliction of the eyes.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Burley were guests of the former's brother at Mount Iron the first of the week.

Miss Minnie Cohen came up from Duluth Friday to spend Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Cohen.

SEEGAL PERSISTS HE WAS HOLD-UP VICTIM.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The efforts of Chief of Police Walsh, and other officers, to worm from John Seegal, the driver of the Mountain Iron-Virginia stage, any other story than the one he first told last week, when he claimed to have been held up and robbed of $600 cash, have been barren of results. Attempts to "sweat" him by a mild dose of the "third degree" have resulted in the same story, that he was held up by two men about a mile or two this side of Mountain Iron and relieved of the money. Just how it happened that he was not injured in the mixup, not a mark being found on his person, has not been satisfactorily explained.

The case is a puzzler and unless something new develops it is expected his story will have to be accepted and the theory that he was handing up a "frame-up" discarded.

Many to Attend Wedding.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Miss Celia Milavetz well known here, will be married to Israel Kaner formerly of Duluth, but now of Virginia, at Virginia, March 23. On account of the popularity of the bride here many of her local friends are expected to attend the wedding.

VIRGINIA WANTS CHANGE IN LAWS

Relief to be Asked Relative to Special Sewer Assessment.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—City Attorney George F. Shea will leave tomorrow for St. Paul, carrying instruction to the St. Louis county delegation to offer their aid for an amendment to the general law in regard to special sewer assessments. There are outstnding against property owners in this city oxer $7,000 in sewer assessments which are not applied on the books to be collected as general taxes, but as separate accounts, and as a matter of fact are hard to collect by the county uditor's office. Deputy County Auditor Marvin was present at last evening's meeting of the council and suggested that the members take some action for such an amendment to the law. It may be framed up on the special sewer assessment proposition, whereby it will only apply to the city of Virginia, as a more extensive amendment might conflict with the other towns, villages and cities in the state which have an easier method of collecting delinquent sewer assessments.

The council also passed a resolution instructing the St. Louis county delegation to oppose the public utilities bill, which provides that the regulation of water, electric and telephone corporations be taken out of the hands of the city council and placed in those of the state railroad and warehouse commission.

Miss Bessie Whiting, clerk of the municipal court, reported $79.30 collected for the week ending Feb. 20.

E. S. Walters was granted a permit to sell lunches upon the streets, saloons, etc.

Dr. William Bell, a local veterinary surgeon, made application for the position of inspector of milk and cream for the city of Virginia. The matter was laid over.

The Pike Mercantile company was granted permission to use a portion of Mesaba avenue and Locust street for building material. The company will build a stone foundation under their present store building and make other repairs and additions about the premises.

The meat ordinance received its second reading without any changes being made in its make up.

Leander Koppalk and the Virginia Brewing company were granted licenses to sell intoxicating liquors. The latter company was refused a license some weeks ago on the ground that its location was outside the patrol limits. Later the council extended the limits so as to take in the brewery property. The Virginia Brewing company has a plant which cost something over $200,000, employes a large number of men, and the council took the stand that the company was entitled to at least this much consideration.

Alderman Elmquist, chairman of the fire department committee, reported that he had prices on four lots in the South side addition, which the city wants to buy, to hold in reserve for a future fire hall station. These lots are located between Cleviand and Wyoming avenues and can be bought for $275 per lot. Mr. Elmquist suggested the purchase of these lots, but the president thought it best to lay the matter over for another week.

The liquor license of Olon & Flink, who went into bankruptcy recently, was transferred to D. A. Fordy.

Street Commissioner Christopherson reported that work on the Gilbert road had been suspended on account of too much snow. He also suggested that the wagon bridge near the Bailey mill be repaired. The matter was laid over.

GILBERT CAUCUS WILL CONSIDER TWO TICKETS.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—A caucus will be held tonight, when two tickets, to be distinguished as the saloon men's and the "independents," will be discussed. Since the announcement of the two tickets, there has been considerable election talk in the village, but no new men have announced themselves, except Louis Finn, who has come out for municipal judge, the laboring man's candidate. There will be little or no opposition to President Caine and Recorder Linscomb, the present holders, who are out for re-election.

VIRGINIA CURLERS TO ENTERTAIN DULUTHIANS.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Virginia Curling club is making elaborate preparations to entertain the Duluth Curling club, which will come here next Saturday for a series of games. The visitors will be entertained at the Virginia club rooms and the local curlers, as well as other Virginia citizens, will endeavor to give them such a good time that they will long keep their visit to the range metropolis in their memories.

ANOTHER RANGE MAY BE DEVELOPED NORTH.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The reported discovery of ore between Ashawa and the Canadian border gives rise to the opinion that some of these days a new range will be developed north of the Mesaba. Many homesteaders and farmers living north of the divide have frequently brought statements to town that they have found very good indications of iron.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—A concert will be given at the Methodist church on the evening of March 4 by three of Walter L. Smith's pupils, Miss Josephine Sterle, pianist, Miss Angela Smith, pianist, and Miss Harriet Salmon, mezzo-soprano of Biwabik.

Remarkable Savings In Women's New Spring Suits and Skirts!

It's very rare that makers of women's garments of the Freimuth's standard can make such a fine concession on new garments. It happened this way—one buyer who is now in the East was hunting bargains for an advance sale, and a leading maker of suits had several pieces of cloth, too small a lot to sample the garments, and a temptation of a net cash order helped us to get these bargains in new Tailored Suits. The skirts are the entire sample line of one of New York's leading skirt makers and are offered at one-third less than regular.

Women's Stylish New Spring Suits Worth $52.50: Special at $24.95

PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYED

About 10,000 Idle Men in Three Chief Cities.

Meeting Held in St. Paul to Consider Plans for Relief.

There are approximately 10,000 unemployed men in Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul, about 2,000 in Duluth, 3,500 in St. Paul and 4,500 in Minneapolis, and there is little or no work for them to do in the big cities.

The above are the findings and conclusions of the heads of the various charitable, relief and employment organizations of the Twin Cities, who met Saturday at the state capitol with Labor Commissioner W. E. McEwen, to discuss what can be done for the unemployed man. James Walsh, head of the Duluth branch of the Minnesota State Free Employment agency, attended the meeting. He returned home yesterday.

The meeting was attended by representatives from the Twin City Salvation Armies, free employment bureaus, Y. M. C. A. and relief organizations, and there were many theories advanced, but nothing definite done for the unemployed laboring man.

James Walsh stated that it would help matters if the railroads, instead of giving their orders to pay agencies, would give them to the free bureaus to fill. That brought up the matter of transportation for men who are broke and wish to travel some distance to get work. Lewis Levy, head of the Minneapolis agency, suggested that the railroads make some special rates to unemployed men, who had a chance to get work in some other part of the country.

It was decided that it would be impossible to find employment for the army of unemployed in the cities. It would have to be on railroad work, or farms, or in the woods.

It was also brought out that seldom if ever, does a union man call for assistance from any of the Twin City charitable or relief organizations. It was stated that in the last two years only five union men were known to seek help from charity in the Twin Cities, and these five men were not in good standing in their unions.

Mr. Walsh says that last Sunday afternoon, he went with Mr. McEwen to the First Congregational church, where Mr. McEwen spoke before the men's club of that church on "Employer's Liability and Workingmen's Compensation." Mr. McEwen's audience was composed of university professors and professional men, and they seemed to be very much impressed with his talk. He declared that fully 80 per cent of the compensation intended for the injured working men, was diverted from its legitimate destination, and urged that a commission be formed to investigate the conditions and report to the state legislature with a view to procuring the legislative measures which he declared to be necessary.

At the conclusion of the address, President Cyrus Northrop of the state university, who was present, complimented Mr. McEwen, who was made an honorary member of the club.

AMUSEMENTS

At the Bijou.

"Ghost stories," declared Ben Hendricks, who will appear at the Lyceum tomorrow in "Yon Yonson," "won't always stand investigation. A friend of mine entertained a week-end party not long ago in an old-fashioned Elizabethan house in the country.

"One of the guests, a young lady, awoke in the middle of the night with a strange forebonding in her heart. As she lay in inexplicable terror in the great, old-fashioned bed, the door of her room opened noiselessly, and a figure, white from head to foot, appeared. She tried to scream, but fear held her voiceless. She could not move. She could not breathe. And the thumping of her heart sounded in her ears like a great hammer.

"The white, still figure glided noiselessly towards her. It reached the bed. The bed clothes were suddenly whisked off her, and the awful visitant vanished as silently and mysteriously as it had come.

"At breakfast the next morning the young lady was pale and thoughtful. She wanted to tell her strange experience, but she feared that no one would believe her. As she hesitated, an aged and rosy clergyman bustled into the breakfast room and said with a merry laugh to his host:

"'Wasn't it cold last night? I awoke nearly frozen, and, knowing that the room next mine was unoccupied, I took the liberty of going in there and stealing the bedclothes.'"

A Ben Hendricks Story.

The Bijou bill this week is attracting no little attention, not only among the regular patrons of the Bijou, but among others who rarely visit the vaudeville theater. Brindamour, the jail breaker, is the feature of an exceptionally strong bill, and his work is little short of marvelous. He claims to have broken out of 492 jails, and apparently can release himself from any combination of handcuffs and leg irons that can be devised.

The rest of the bill is also above the ordinary and the other acts are not slighted because of the one big feature act.

"Devil's Auction."

One of the exclusive features offered by Manager Charles H. Yale in the twenty-eighth edition of his "Everlasting Devil's Auction, which will be at the Lyceum Saturday matinee and night, "is a mechanical illustration entitled "The Dance of the Baby Elephants." The dresses in this number were designed and manufactured by Edward Seidle of London and New York. Mr. Seidle is unquestionably the foremost creator of stage properties. His first notable success in this line in this country was the huge and life-like comedy elephant, used in the original production of DeWolf Hopper's greatest success, "Wang."

"Shiny" Fat Folks

One of the fat woman's chief griefs in life is her shiny, greasy skin. If it be pimply besides, as it probably is (or may be), her cup of anguish is full. Powder and cosmetics simply hide these horrors for a season—a very short season. They are not a cure for them. There isn't any cure for them except getting rid of the grease beneath. When she does that she finds her complexion improves.

In this way only can I account for the clear, natural complexion acquired by those who use the Marmola receipt: One-half ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, 3½ ounces Peppermint Water. By causing the excess flesh to be absorbed, it clears the blood of the globules of fat which, physicians say, cause the greasy, oily skin of the over-fat.

This simple receipt makes a mixture both pleasant and harmless. It causes neither wrinkles nor stomach disturbances. It is also quite inexpensive. Make it point to try some; take a teaspoonful after meals and at bedtime for a week or two and see if your oily skin does not quickly disappear. As you lose your fat your complexion should progressively improve, and after a month or so, when you have lost 25 or 30 pounds of flesh, it should be nearly perfect.

YOUR WIFE OR YOUR LIFE

Nic Lyons Put Awkward Alternative Up to James Murphy.

Queer Drama of Tangled Domestic Relations in Municipal Court.

"Your wife or your life."

Nic Lyons, a short Italian, thus expressed himself to James Murphy, a tall Irishman, according to the testimony of Mrs. Jennie Lhreux, daughter of Murphy, in police court yesterday afternoon, during the trial of the case of the city against Lyons on an assault charge, which ended in the latter getting a straight jail sentence of sixty days.

The case presented a tangle of domestic relations. Peter Lhreux said on the witness stand that he did not know whether Jennie Lhreux was his wife or not, or whether she was divorced or not. He knew they had been married once, and said he had heard they were divorced, but had never seen the papers.

They are now living with the girl's father and her stepmother on West Michigan street, near Tenth avenue, in four rooms, and John W. Jones also lives there with them. The girl testified that her stepmother apparently is very fond of Lyons, who formerly boarded with the family, and that she and Murphy frequently had violent quarrels over him. She said she secured a divorce from her husband three months ago and that she was not living in the same house with him. Apparently their relations are very friendly, for they were playing a game of cards when Murphy's cries from the street informed them that something was wrong.

Lyons assaulted Murphy the night of Feb. 14, about fifty feet from his home, as he was returning from attending a religious service at the branch Bethel on West Superior street. Testimony went to show that Lyons was armed with a big sling shot, with which he pounded Murphy, knocking him down and inflicting various bad bruises about his person. Lyons was accompanied by a tall individual, four witnesses testified, who took no active part in the assault, further than to watch to see if any one was coming. The men were frightened away by Mr. and Mrs. Lhreux and John W. Jones, who rushed madly from the house when they heard Murphy's cries for help. The assault occurred about 9:30 o'clock in the evening.

"When we got back into the house," testified Mrs. Lhreux, "we found Mrs. Murphy lying on her face on the floor. She claimed to have fainted away. When she got her senses back she told us she knew Lyons was going to assault her husband, and try to kill him, but had forgotten to tell us about it, so we could have Mr. Lhreux and Mr. Jones go to meet him. Nic called her up half an hour before we heard father calling for help, and told her he was going to do him up, but she said she was so interested in the game of cards we were playing that she forgot all about it. When Lyons was rooming with us, he and stepmother were very familiar, and father and she had some quarrels on account of him. I heard Lyons say he would have father's wife or his life. Lyons trailed around after my stepmother like a sick puppy, and she seemed to like him all right, too. She said she would not come to court to testify against him today, declaring that she would die first. She is home in bed, claiming to be sick. She says she has fainting spells."

Lyons denied having seen or talked with Mrs. Murphy for two months, and said he was in his room on lower Lake avenue when the assault is supposed to have occurred.

Duluth Dry Goods Firm to Sell Out Entire Stock.

The Golden Rule Store Company of Duluth has decided to discontinue the dry goods and clothing business in order to enter the ready-to-wear line. The manager of the Golden Rule Store company stated that the goods for each department has been ordered and are on the way here. They expect to put up a fine store in this city, and will handle one of the most up-to-date lines of ladies' ready-to-wear apparel in the Northwest. The proprietors are very capable, having been in this line for many years. Extra help has been engaged to re-mark the large stock of merchandise.

POSTOFFICE IS STILL CROWDED

Five years after the plans for the addition to the local postoffice were approved, the addition will be finished and the postoffice workers enjoy the added space.

The department has been growing all the time, however, and the additional room coming at this time leaves the working force in the same fix they were in some five years back.

Several changes have been made in the plans for the addition since they were drawn up, and there are others now under consideration. Heretofore the weighing has been done on a platform scale, such as is used in stores. A truck scale is being put in the floor of the addition, so that the mail may be weighed in bulk or on trucks.

The storeroom capacity is not sufficient, and a part of one of the private offices will have to be used to store what the room designed for that purpose will not hold.

A roadway around the entire building is needed. Teams can then go in from the west, receive their loads and pass out on First street. There has been much trouble and delay on account of the insufficient room in the rear of the building.

SAYS MUSIC IS A REST

World's Fair Harmony Director Describes Its Vitalizing Power.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—In an address on the moral influence of music, before the department of superintendence of the National Education association, this afternoon, William L. Tomlins, choral director of the World's Columbian exposition, made some novel observations in regard to the power of music in furthering the betterment of mankind. The speaker said the power of music, as an uplifting force in life, is as tangible as electricity and may be utilized as electricity is at present. He said in part:

"Real music does not lend itself to ignoble expression. Music vitalizes as can nothing else. Under the influence of music the careworn and refreshed are strengthened, the hearts are stirred, and all feel themselves moved as if by one mighty bond of brotherhood. This power of music can be utilized for the betterment of mankind. Every school in the land should be filled with song. Grown-ups too, may get out of music a something that will give them strength to fight the battle of life. The whole nation can be benefited by the power of song. And this power can be utilized as electricity is at present, which at one time was considered just as intangible a thing, as music is by most people now. As in electricity so in music. We have not learned half its uses. Music comes in a flash. Those who hear it are lifted up by its power. A few take the strength and joy that music has given away with them. It is from these few that we can get an inkling of the power which is in music."

Mr. Tomlins said a good deal depended on the attitude of the listener as to the benefits he derived from music.

"A 5 o'clock tea attitude is not particularly helpful for getting the best out of music," the speaker continued, "neither can the selfish or the idle feel its uplift. Music lifts up as water does, you have got to do the swimming. If drawing rooms fail to provide the inspiration that a beautiful voice can give, let that voice be heard by the hopeless, in jails and in hospitals; then we shall know."

The speaker said that mere sentimentality in song is not music. The voice that thrills has in it the overtones of heart and hear and hand, he said.

Mr. Tomlins reviewed some of his methods and work among the school teachers here and in Great Britain. The school superintendents received his address with enthusiasm. The suggestion was offered that study circles should be organized throughout the country, and experiments carried on to test the matter fully and comprehensively.

LUMBER CROSSES LINE.

Canadians Sell Lath at Price That Meets American Market.

Adolph Loeffer of Chicago, a representative of the Wisconsin Lime & Cement company of that city, stated at the Spalding yesterday that a deal has been closed by his firm for the purchase of 5,000,000 lath from the Rat Portage Lumber company of Rat Portage, Ont. The lath will be sold to the Chicago firm at a price that meets the price set by lumber companies on this side of the border. The sale is of interest in the fact that it shows that even with a lumber tariff, the Canadian lumbermen can meet at least some of the American lumber prices.

Poker Game Raided.

The Superior police made a little raid on a session of the great American game of draw poker at a negro club at 1216 Third street, Saturday night, which resulted in the arrest of five negroes, and one white man. The negroes were Ben Hawkins, Robert Brown, Hunter Brisco, William Bates and William Johnson, and the white man Frank Smith. They were arrigned yesterday and each was given his choice between a fine of $10 or fifteen days in the workhouse. All the negroes paid the fine, but the white man, who claimed to have been fleeced in the game, and had no money, started to serve his fifteen days.

Sent to Penitentiary.

Found guilty by a jury of robbing Tony Snyder of $60, Albert Johnson was sentenced yesterday by Judge Smith to a term of one year at the state prison.

It was alleged that Johnson took $60 from Snyder while he was sleeping on the floor of a saloon. The police claim to have found $40 of the money in the lining of Johnson's hat at the time of his arrest. Johnson was unable to explain satisfactorily how he came to have the money in his possession.

EVERY ARGUMENT FAILS.

The Winona Republican Herald devotes a column of editorial to a review of the tonnage tax arguments, pro and con. It admits that there is much force and justice in the arguments put forth by Representative Congdon in presenting the St. Louis county brief against the tonnage tax and, in fact, appears to look upon the tonnage tax as fairly debatable ground upon which it is not yet able to voice a conclusive opinion. This is the conclusion to which all tonnage tax advocates are coming. The arguments against such a tax are so weighty and the difficulties of drafting a tonnage tax measure that shall not be rankly unjust to that section of the state most nearly concerned are so great, that tonnage tax advocates, while holding hard to their desire to levy such a tax, are growing more and more doubtful about its wisdom.

The Republican-Herald unwittingly misrepresents Duluth, however, when it declares that this city opposes a tonnage tax because "such a tax would be a general benefit instead of a benefit only to the iron section, as at present." It is certainly a surprise to the people of Duluth and the ranges to know that the iron ore of St. Louis county is now taxed only for the benefit of St. Louis county and not for the general benefit of the state. The state auditor's books show that St. Louis county pays 67.5 per cent of the net general tax of the state and as the principal taxable property of St. Louis county is iron ore, it is natural for us to have inferred that the entire state is profiting from the taxation of ore. The iron ore railroads of St. Louis county also pay 28.2 per cent of the entire railroad gross earnings tax of the state. Doesn't this look as if the benefit of iron ore taxation is already general and not purely local?

This argument is the same as every other argument advanced in favor of a tonnage tax. It cannot stand the test of analysis. It is this very fact, that every tonnage tax argument, when run to earth, proves to be fallacious, that is making all parts of the state look upon the proposal with suspicion.

THE CASE OF JAN JANOFF POUREN.

The hundreds of thousands of Americans who interested themselves in the case of Christian Rudowitz should not be deceived by the refusal of Secretary Root to return this man to the Russian government. We should not think that in snatching back this one man from the rapacious maw of the insatiable Czar of Unholy Russia we have settled the matter of political asylum in this country for political offenders. Rudovitz was only one brand plucked from the burning. The conflagration still rages.

Here is the case of Jan Janoff Pouren, who has been confined in a New York jail, now more than a year, upon the demand of the czar. Is this our vaunted justice? Can the vengeance of despotism reach across the seas and take liberty from any of its sons upon whom it cares to place its finger, here in this land of the free? Can a man, upon the mere word of a notorious tyrant, be cast into a dungeon in this country and compelled to rot there month after month? He can; and there is something rotten in the state that the thing is possible. Aside from the question whether Jan Janoff Pouren is a criminal or merely a political offender, it is horrible that any man in a free country shall be in danger of months of imprisonment, years maybe, upon the mere word of the czar of Russia. Shall the jails of a free country be filled at the bidding of an old world despot?

These things have come to pass under the operation of our present extradition treaty with Russia, ratified in 1893, after strenuous opposition, when the very evil with which we are now confronted was pointed out. That treaty makes it possible for a minor federal official to deny to the accused the right of asylum. The relentless tyranny of despotism, not content with stifling every liberty of thought and action within the jurisdiction of its own power, reaches out its horrid hand of oppression and clutches at those who have escaped it, even in the sacred home of freedom. By that treaty of extradition the czar sets up his throne in the United States of America, and lays his hand upon whomsoever he will. That man at whom his despotic finger points is cast into prison without a trial by jury, with only a hearing before some petty official. More than that, under this treaty, despotic Russia actually makes use of free United States to secure information against political agitators in Russia. A witness in the Rudowitz case was held in contempt by a United States judge for refusing to answer questions which would have revealed political secrets involving the liberty and the lives of men now living in Russia. It is a dreadful pass to which we have come when this land of the free is made to cast into prison, to deliver up to despotism its victims and to furnish tyranny with the means of continuing its persecutions.

We have saved Christian Rudowitz but we have yet to realize that we have become the agent by which tens of thousands of Christian Rudowitzs and Jan Janoff Pourens are being hunted to death both in this country and in Russia. There is something radically, vitally wrong with a treaty that makes free men the agents of despotism.

THE LINCOLN INNOVATION.

If the ideas of President Roosevelt are carried out by the presidents who succeed him in regard to the coinage of money, the famous Indian head, and maybe even the Goddess of Liberty, will disappear from American coins and the heads of great Americans will take their places. President Roosevelt has already issued an order for a design for a one-cent piece which will bear the head of Abraham Lincoln instead of the traditional American Indian. The design is a special profile of Lincoln by Victor Brenner, in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the martyred president.

It is claimed that the head of the American Indian now used on out one-cent pieces is "no more like the head of an Indian than it is like the head of a Chinese." The dress of feathers is alleged to be the only resemblance. Partly on this account and partly because he advocates the European custom of placing the heads of men of the nation upon our coins, the president has ordered the new one-cent design to contain the head of Lincoln. The custom with most European countries is to carry the head of the reigning monarch upon their different coins, but while the heads of famous Americans have been used upon our paper money, we have adhered to the custom of using only the heads of statesmen who are not living. The Lincoln one-cent piece will be the first American coin to bear the likeness of an American statesman.

It will be remembered that President Roosevelt has had other ideas in regard to our coins, one of which did not meet the approval of the people of the country. By his order the words "In God We Trust" were omitted from gold pieces, only to be replaced by the direction of congress. In no other respect has congress ever given any direction as to the design of coins or paper money, the matter being one which is left entirely to executive discretion.

We are not satisfied with the honor which we have been able to give the memory of Abraham Lincoln and the new Lincoln coins will be welcomed regardless of what we may think of the policy of stamping the likenesses of statesmen upon coins in place of the figures now used.

SILENCED.

Long before the roar of guns which on Monday morning announced the return of the American fleet from its epoch making trip around the world, the chorus of calamitous predictions under which the fleet set sail fourteen months ago, had been silenced.

Without being unduly boastful, every American citizen can take a great pride in the performance of the American fleet. Nothing like it was ever done before. Sixteen great battleships steamed out of Hampton Roads on the morning of Dec. 16, 1907, to return intact and in the finest condition, after circling the globe and sailing a total of 42,227 miles, reaching Hampton Roads and home again, on the morning of the anniversary of the birth of George Washington, having rounded the world and visited many lands in fourteen months. "Not until some American fleet returns victorious from a great sea battle will there be another such home-coming, another sight such as this," said President Roosevelt, Monday, in welcoming the fleet. Every ship was there in as perfect condition as if the fleet had lain the whole fourteen months at anchor in Hampton Roads, but with officers and men glowing with the consciousness of a great undertaking well done, with the navy and the people of the country it represents inspired by the lessons of the great trip.

When the trip was first proposed thousands of tongues clamored that it was impossible. It was said that no great fleet could make a continuous trip of nearly 45,000 miles without renewing her "vital organs;" that the hulks of some of the ships would surely be left rotting on a foreign shore, that the fighting energy of the fleet would be inevitably demoralized by the stress of the trip, that the trip would be merely a costly waste of money with nothing to show for it, and even that our unguarded coast cities would be the prey of the European and the Asiatic. The fleet is home and all these prophets of calamity have been proved to be false prophets. None of these things have happened, but the impossible undertaking has been triumphantly achieved, the seaworthiness of America's fighting ships has been tested under widely varying conditions, the efficiency of the service has been vastly increased, the people of the country have been inspired and the peoples of other countries have had another object lesson of America's power and independence—the fleet is home again with new prestige at home and abroad.

While Wall street and his petty personal enemies in and out of congress snarl at President Roosevelt's feet, the American people rejoice with him in this triumphant home-coming of the great American fleet from an undertaking which no other nation has ever had the temerity to attempt. It is a triumphant and a fitting close to an administration which has with high and honest endeavor and with great ability attempted in a thousand ways to better the condition of the country and to add to its prosperity and prestige.

George Washington was quite a man, even though he never ran a Marathon.

Doesn't seem to be any way to make Taft a member of the Ananias club on sight.

Now if Omaha will be good we will be willing to admit that it is still on the map.

Congress thinks it would have a perfectly corking time if it could only put a stopper on Roosevelt.

The way Taft hurries about the country from one place to another, is dreadfully hard on the office seekers.

Whether Mr. Taft gets those automobiles or not, it is confidently expected that he will go some after March 4.

The "conservatism of Washington's time," is good. Always had an idea that Washington's time was a revolutionary time.

Pulitzer is the fellow who is needed on the Culebra cut. In making the dirt fly he has got all the steam shovels beaten to a frazzle.

The "sweeping rebuke' is the sort of hero that comes around after the fighting is all over and tells what wonderful things it is going to do.

The supreme court says that the New York Central will please come across with that $108,000 fine assessed against it for granting rebates to the sugar trust.

Congress has one advantage of Roosevelt. It can keep right on administering "sweeping rebukes" till the end of time but the president has only until March 4 to write messages in.

In forty years, says James J. Hill, unless the farmer triples his product, there will not be enough in this country to eat. We can't add much to our wheat acreage; the great problem, then, is how to make three kernels of wheat grow where we have been growing one.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

Solomon Sax, one of the leading business men of Eveleth, who was at the St. Louis yesterday en route to St. Paul, is of the opinion that Gilbert will have a good boom this year.

At the present time, according to Mr. Sax, most of the business men of Sparta are moving to Gilbert. The United States Steel corporation has decided to move the town of Sparta, for the iron that lies under the town, and already the exodus to Gilbert has begun. Many of the citizens have not begun to move their houses as yet, says Mr. Sax, but the business men of Sparta have for the most part moved over to Gilbert.

"They are already building a new office building and I understand that others will be erected very soon," said Mr. Sax. "Property in Gilbert has already advanced as the result of this growth, and it is likely that it will advance further. This summer you will see a very large increase in the population. There will be many office buildings and homes erected. It is only a question of time before all Sparta will be moved to Gilbert.

"We look for a good year upon the range. Things are quiet at the present time, as business is very quiet all over. However, business is sound at the bottom and it is only a temporary quietness. There is no reason why this shouldn't be a very good year for the iron ranges."

On March 4, there is going to be a meeting of those range rivals—Mark Eddy and Walter Smith—who are horses, by the way, not men. They are going to have an ice race on that date at Eveleth and the citizens of that town who are interested in ice racing are planning to make the event one of great importance to the horse lovers of the range country.

Horses will be present from surrounding range towns. It is expected that Hibbing, Virginia and Chisholm will send some of their speed nags to take part. Charles Jesmore, who ought to know a good horse when he sees one, says that the best horses of the range will be at the Eveleth meet.

Mark Eddy and Walter Smith are hated rivals. There is a long standing dispute as to which is the better horse. To settle this dispute the Eveleth race has been arranged. The owners of the rival oat destroyers are backing their opinions by a respectable sum in cash. It should be a sight that would delight the soul of David Harum, when all these lovers of good horse flesh gather at the Eveleth meet. It is probable that John Kleffman of Hibbing will be present, with an eye open for a raffle or for an easy money nag.

Charles Jesmore, Solomon Sax, Frank Myers, John Costin and "Paddy" McDonnell were seated at lunch yesterday in the cafe of the St. Louis hotel. The dinner, from all reports, was a good one, and Mr. McDonnell was the man who glanced over the waiter's slip when the men pushed back from their chairs with a satisfied look upon their countenances. The gentlemen present say they dined well and heartily.

Many things were discussed at the dinner. Incidentally, pavement was brought up. This was near the end of the repast. The menu hadn't been overlooked, but one of the members of the party reached for it, just as if he could go a little further.

"We've been blowing Paddy a little hard, don't you think?" suggested one of the members of the party.

There was a silence. Then one of the members of the party looked straight at Mr. McDonnell and exclaimed, "Not yet."

There was an emphasis upon that "yet" that Mr. McDonnell could not resist.

Frank Myers, John Costin, Charles Jesmore and Solomon Sax are on their way to St. Paul. They were all at the St. Louis yesterday.

George Sheldon of Chicago, at the Lenox yesterday, states that Chicago has a crusade on for a cleaner city right at the present time, and that if the crusade lasts long enough, many of the unpleasant features of the city, which have given Chicago the name of being not the most cleanly city in the world, will be removed. The same influences that have agitated for the beautifying of Chicago are behind the movement to make the city more clean, according to Mr. Sheldon.

Claiming Lincoln.

THE WEATHER.

Last night's storm was a very fair imitation of a blizzard, but this morning broke clear and moderately cold—an ideal winter day. The weather man looks for colder weather tonight, with lowest temperatures from 5 to 10 degs. below zero.

A year ago today it was mild and cloudy.

The sun rose this morning at 6:57 and will set this afternoon at 5:46, making ten hours and forty-nine minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"The Missouri storm has advanced its center to Lake Huron, developing great intensity. During the past twenty-four hours this disturbance caused widespread rain or snow in all districts to the eastward of the 100th meridian, besides warmer weather in North Atlantic states and the Lake region. A rise in pressure over the Western lake region, Mississippi valley and Eastern slopes is attended by much colder weather in these districts, with zero temperatures in the Dakotas, Minnesota, Western Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The barometer is highest over Manitoba and Texas, but pressures are falling again in the extreme Northwest. Zero temperatures may be expected at the Head of the Lakes tonight."

Following were last night's lowest temperatures:

The House and the Road.

The little Road says Go;
The little House says stay;
And, oh—it's bonny here at home,
But I must go away.

The little Road, like me,
Would seek, and turn, and know;
And forth I must, to learn the things
The little Road would show.

And go I must, my dears,
And journey while I may.
Though heart be sore for the little House
That had no word but Stay.

Maybe no other way
Your child could ever know
Why a little House would have you stay
When the little Road says Go.

Clearings Tell the Story.

Philadelphia Record: If business isn't booming quite as was hoped for, there is no question about the radical improvement of things since a year ago. One evidence of this, cited by Dun's review, is that the bank clearings in 110 cities were $14,003,281,453 last month, against only $11,336,483,453 in January, 1908—an increase of more than 23 per cent. In many of the cities the clearings were larger last month than they were in January, 1907, when business was at its height. But for the great shrinkage in stock business in New York the clearings of the country would have run above those of two years ago. If there is still some idle machinery the volume of trade must be very nearly normal.

Somebody Must Be Disappointed.

Chicago Record-Herald: It is hard to please everybody. A president who satisfies the public is sure to get in bad with congress.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1884.

The chamber of commerce last evening selected C. P. Bailey to take the place of O. H. Simonds as Duluth's representative at Washington, Mr. Simonds being sick and unable to go at present. A committee, composed of Messrs. Graff, Stearns and Mitchell, was appointed to draw up a memorial to grant an appropriation for the improvement of the Duluth harbor, and the Minnesota congressmen were roundly scored for failure to look after Duluth's interests. Mr. Scott stating that we had always received more assistance from the members from Michigan, Northern Ohio and Western New York. The question of the valuation of property for assessment purpose was taken up, and it was proposed to tax all unimproved property at its full value, and to go as light as possible for improved realty. Judge Stearns said he owned considerable unimproved property, and he was willing to pay higher taxes on it, as he deemed this was only just.

The ball last evening by the Hose company was a success in every particular. The supper, prepared by Mrs. Fred H. Russell, was much praised.

The plans for the cold storage house to be erected in Duluth by the Marquis de Mores have been prepared. The main building will be 70 by 76½ feet, with a freezer 31 by 71 feet. Around this building will be a driveway thirty feet on one side and twenty feet on the other, with a dock leading from the building across the railroad track to Lake avenue. John B. Sutphin will be the manager of the business.

TIPS TO THE LEGISLATURE.

St. Peter Herald: Speaker Rockne's committee to look into the affairs of the state agricultural society is making a mistake in holding a sub rosa investigation. The committee should go about its work fearlessly and fairly, but all of its meetings should be public. If the fair management has conducted its affairs properly, it has nothing to fear from open meetings, and they will hasten vindication without arousing suspicion of white-washing.

Floodwood Broadaxe: Our legislative solons should be a little careful about placing any more power in the hands of the railway and warehouse commision until that body shows a disposition to take care of the business already intrusted to them.

Worthington Advance-Herald: A bill has been passed in the state senate to pay all convicts in state penal institutions at the rate of 25 cents per day, the money to be paid to the families of the convicts. This is a move in the right direction, for under present conditions, the family and not the culprit are the ones who receive the brunt of the punishment inflicted. The bill provides that in the case of an unmarried man, the amount will accrue and be paid to him at the expiration of sentence in lieu of the suit of clothing and donation now given.

Roseau Times: There is no use criticising the legislature. So far nothing of importance has been done, and it is possible that the assembly may adjourn without materially disturbing the present status of the laws, and in such an event happening, the legislature will be entitled to applause from the gallery.

Two Harbors Iron News: If the state legislature would do exact justice in the matter of agricultural schools, it would begin on the east end of the northernly tier of counties in the state and establish a school in every county, just as rapidly as possible, until the whole northern tier was supplied, when it would turn its attention to counties further south.

New Ulm Review: The Republican majority in the legislature may be successful in its puerile attempt to rob Governor Johnson of credit for any remedial legislation, but what the people will do to the members of this majority when they come to mete out rewards and punishments, two years hence, will be nothing if not one of the most interesting chapters in Minnesota's political history. Then the Lennons, the Nolans and the other small fry will come to know, if they have not learned it sooner, the full meaning of the wrath of offended justice.

Northfield News: If there is any portion of the public school system which needs special encouragement it is the rural school.

Cannon Falls Beacon: The object of most of the anti-pass law agitation is to discredit the law in public opinion; to accustom the reading public to the idea that it needs amending; and then amend it out of existence. It is mighty hard for policemen, firemen and politicians to pay their fare, and they are all working for amendment that really means repeal. Let the law alone.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The reason women can fool a man so easily is they can fool themselves just as easily.

When a man likes to go to a lecture it's because he'd have to spend the evening at home if she didn't.

It must have kept Solomon pretty busy explaining to every one of them that anyhow he loved her better than all the others.

If you ask a man to subscribe to a dinner in honor of somebody he'll go around telling how you tried to get him to make a speech at it.

State Duty, If Not State Right.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: It would be to the advantage of the Californians if they would proceed to make the acquaintance of the document known as the Constitution of the United States. California was supposed to know of its existence when the state was admitted to the Union.

The Slaughter of the Innocents.

New York Tribune: Dr. Darlington's report of the appalling increase of heart diseases and other physical infirmities among school children, and his confident designation of overpressure in study as its cause, should afford food for thought to teachers, physiologists, sociologists and all parents. It is startling to hear that only 30 per cent of school children are physically sound and normal, and that hundreds of them are dying yearly of heart diseases. Such figures give emphasis to the complaints which have been numerously made of overstudy, and especially to the forcing of young minds with too many studies at once and with studies in advance of their years. We have heard of such practices as the giving of six or seven "solid" studies, including civics, political economy and poetical criticism, to children not yet in their teens.

CHILD RULE FOR THE SCHOOLS

The Junior Republic Idea Is to be the Model.

New York, Feb. 24.—That the teaching of citizenship in a democracy may soon supplant the present paternal and aristocratic form of government in every school in this country is the object of a general movement that has been set on foot in this city. Following the principles of self-rule which have made hundreds of the best citizens out of boys and girls sent as "incorrigibles" to the George Junior Republic in this state during the last fourteen years, an effort will be made to have all children fitted to be independent and self-reliant Americans before everything else. With junior republics already established in California, New York, Connecticut and Maryland, and others being set up today in Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and projected in many more states, the organizers of this new school system are preparing to carry their object lesson into every public and private school throughout the nation.

One of the leading preparatory schools in this part of the country is already making plans to revolutionize its methods and put its pupils on the basis of citizens in a little republic of their own, it was announced at the headquarters of the National Association of Junior Republics at 22 William street today. The term "master" is to be abolished, and well-bred school boys are to learn to become bosses of themselves instead of servants of a political boss. In the public schools of this city as well as in a score of private and public educational institutions in this state, the junior republic idea is reported to be at present applied substantially as it is in the successful substitute for the reformatory which Mr. George has worked out.

THE PERSONAL INJURY GRABBAG

BOY WAS HIT BY ENGINE

No Flagman at Crossing and Lad Became Confused.

Loses Both His Legs and Father Sues for $50,000.

Claiming that the negligence of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway company was responsible for the injury which resulted in the amputation of both of his legs five inches below the knees, Matt W. Hillman, a boy 14 years old, is suing the company for $50,000 damages. The suit is brought in the name of the boy, by his father, Matt Hillman, and the papers were filed with the clerk of the district court yesterday afternoon.

The boy lives in Superior and the accident happened in that city Nov. 2 of last year. It is alleged in the complaint that the railway company maintains four tracks crossing Cumming avenue in an easterly and westerly direction and neither at the time of the accident nor at any time was there a flagman at the crossing to warn approaching pedestrians and vehicles of danger from approaching trains.

On the day of the accident, the complaint alleges, the boy was walking on Cumming avenue southward and when he reached the first track at the crossing, a train crossed on the track farthest from him. He stood on the third track to await the passage of the train and while there, he claims, a switch engine, backing, came upon him without warning of bell or whistle and ran him down. He was so badly injured it was found necessary to amputate both legs.

The allegations that there was no flagman at the crossing, that there were no gates, that the locomotive approached without warning of bell or whistle and that the locomotive was running in excess of the statutory six miles an hour form the basis for the contention that the negligence of the company was responsible for the injury.

WAS THROWN FROM A CAR

Switchman Stubbed His Toe on a Projecting Nail.

Fell From Moving Train and Wants $15,000 Damages.

Because, he claims, he stubbed his toe on a nail projecting from the running board on top of a box car in the railroad yards at Superior, Oct. 20 of last year, Frank H. Higgins thinks the Great Northern Railroad company should pay him $15,000 damages. He filed suit for that amount with the clerk of the district court yesterday afternoon.

Higgins was employed as a switchman by the Great Northern and in his complaint, he says running on the running boards on top of box cars was part of his duty. He says the ordinary custom of railroad companies is to have all cars examined for defects as soon as they come into the yards, and in the case of the car on which he was injured, the defect should have been discovered by the company and remedied.

On the day of the accident, Higgins alleges, he was running along, when he stubbed his toe on a nail projecting from the running board. The stub was serious. He was pitched to the ground from the train, which was running at a rate of four or five miles an hour and his right leg was broken at the knee. He claims the knee cap was injured so that it is motionless and his leg will be stiff for the remainder of his life. He is 33 years old and was earning $100 a month at the time of the accident, so he thinks he is entitled to $15,000 for his injuries.

CAR JERKED FROM UNDER HIM

Ore Puncher Fell Into Pocket and Wants $10,000.

Albert R. Mathes claims that while he was standing on an ore car at the Allouez ore docks, an engine jerked the car out from under him and he was pitched twenty-five or thirty feet down into a pocket. His suit for $10,000 against the Great Northern Railway company was filed with the clerk of the district court yesterday.

Mathes was working as an ore puncher, punching ore from the cars into the pockets of the ore dock He claims that while the men were on top of cars, the custom was to keep the cars stationary, or, at any rate, to notify the men when the cars were about to be moved. He claims the car on which he was standing on the day of the accident, Nov. 17, 1908, was moved without notice and he was thrown into the pocket.

He was severely bruised about the body, he says, and was forced to remain in a hospital for some weeks. He claims his earning capacity has been impaired by the accident and he wants $10,000 as recompense. He is 22 years old.

STRUCK BY TRAM CAR

Miner Caught in Collision in Pioneer Mine at Ely.

Sues for $20,000 for Injuries That Crippled Him.

Frank Zabukovetz found that a man pushing a tram car didn't have much chance in a collision with a train of ten cars propelled by an electric motor. Frank got into such a collision in the Pioneer mine at Ely and now he claims he is a hopeless cripple. He filed suit for $20,000 against the Oliver Iron Mining company in district court yesterday afternoon.

Zabukovetz claims the company was responsible for his injury. He explains the working of the Pioneer mine, which is of the undergound variety, in his complaint, and sets forth that a system of tracks running into the various drifts and cross-cuts is part of the mine equipment.

He says he was employed as a trammer and on June 27, 1907, was engaged in his regular duties. He says he pushed a car through a cross-cut and dumped it and was assured that a motor, which was in another cross-cut, opening on the one through which he had to pass, would remain there long enough for him to push his car back to the place he was working without fear of accident.

Relying on that, he says, he pushed his car back through the cross-cut and as he approached the opening of the other cut, the motor and ten cars swung around the corner and collided with him. His tram car was thrown back on top of him by the force of the collision.

Zabukovetz claims that his right leg was smashed in the collision and it has been necessary for him to undergo several operations to have pieces of bone removed. He claims he is still on crutches and his leg will be useless for the remainder of his life.

Boiler Works Sued.

John G. Paavola, administrator of the estate of Gust Aino, filed suit in district court yesterday against the Gogebic Steam boiler works and Frank King, for $5,000. The suit is brought for the benefit of Aino's aged father and mother, in Hame, Finland. Aino was working on the erection of a smokestack at Grand Rapids, April 8 of last year, under the direction of King, a foreman for the Gogebic steam boiler works. He was killed by a fall and the negligence of the company is alleged to have been the cause of the fatality.

CASE AGAIN ON THE CALENDAR

Mrs. Bambard Renews Suit Against Modern Woodmen.

The suit of Ollie M. Bambard against the Modern Woodmen of America was again filed with the clerk of the district court yesterday afternoon. It was on the calendar at the last term of court, but was dismissed, one of the witnesses having left the city just as the case was to go to trial.

Mrs. Bambard sues for $1,000 on a death benefit certificate held by her husband, who died Jan. 25, 1908. The organization claims that Bambard was in arrears in his payments and under the death benefit certificate his wife is not entitled to the money, her husband not being in good standing

TAFT BUYS SADDLE HORSE.

It Weighs 1,250 Pounds and Is Ideal Weight Carrier.

Washington, Feb. 24.—President-elect Taft has purchased at Hot Springs, Va., a 6-year-old blood bay gelding with black points as a riding horse. The horse weighs 1,250 pounds, and is an ideal weight carrier. While at Hot Springs last summer, Mr. Taft rode this horse.

Mr. Sterrett had been commissioned to select a horse for Mr. Taft, and after looking over the country he chose this one, which is by Forest Chief, a saddle bred horse, out of a granddaughter of Old Sam Purdy. The horse is described as having the best of manners, compactly put together and of the hunter type.

The president-elect has named the horse in honor of its former owner, Tate Sterrett. It is understood that Mr. Taft intends that his friend, Judge Harmon, now governor of Ohio, shall ride the horse in the inaugural parade.

LICENSE MAY BE REVOKED

Carpenter Brothers Must Explain Sale of Liquor to Minors.

Retiring Aldermen Say Farewell—Legislators Are Given Roast.

WHAT THE COUNCIL DID.

Ordered Carpenter Bros. to appear before council next Monday evening to show cause why their liquor license should not be revoked.

Adopted resolution providing for certain improvements at the aerial bridge, including the installation of a gasoline engine, or some other power, to use in getting the car to shore when electric power fails.

Revoked licenses of two Bowery fortune tellers, charged with stealing money from their patrons.

Provided new schedule for aerial bridge.

Gave first reading to ordinance making it unlawful for a minor to buy a drink of intoxicating liquor and providing punishment for such an offense.

Listened to farewell addresses of four aldermen.

Received estimate of cost of Hunter's Park sewer, $12,152.60.

Adopted resolution expressing indignation at stand St. Louis county legislative delegation took on Duluth's public utilities bill, and asking different business men's organization of the city to adopt similar resolutions.

The council last night ordered Carpenter Bros., proprietors of a saloon at 3831 Oneota street, to appear at the meeting next Monday evening and show cause why their license should not be revoked. Meantime the charge that liquor was sold to minors by Patrick Carpenter will be investigated by the police and license committee.

Mayor Haven had a communication in at the meeting last evening, recommending the revocation of the license, if facts brought out in the municipal court trial, in which the defendant was found guilty, were sustained. After recommending that a careful investigation be made, the mayor says: "If evidence presented in court is not contradicted beyond a doubt, the license should be promptly revoked."

Attorney McMahon, acting for Carpenter Bros., told the council that an appeal from the municipal court decision was to be taken. Absolutely no defense was made in municipal court, and there was no denial of the charges brought. Mr. McMahon depending upon having the liquor ordinance declared invalid to free his client. Six youths testified that they had been sold liquor by Patrick Carpenter, and at least four of them were very plainly under age. Some of them claimed to have become drunk in the saloon. While no denial was entered in court, the Carpenters have since declared that, to the best of their knowledge, the boys were not served drinks. They say it was a busy night, because of its being pay night in the West end, and that therefore there was a big crowd in the place, and the boys might have been there a short time, unobserved by the bartender. The boys may be asked to appear before the council next Monday evening, unless a transcript of the evidence taken in municipal court is deemed sufficient.

A good deal of time was taken up by a discussion of the aerial bridge. Engineer Green, who now has charge of the bridge, was on hand, and the aldermen asked him numerous questions. He said the structure was in fair shape at the present time, and said that when new trucks, which had been ordered, arrived and were in place, everything would be in fine shape. The new trucks are an improvement over the old and not so liable to get out of order.

Mr. Green said he did not consider a stairway leading to the top of the bridge necessary to himself or any workmen that were likely to be sent there. He thought the present ladder sufficient. He said it would be necessary to shut the bridge down for about three weeks in order to put the new trucks in place.

The board of public works reported on the condition of the aerial bridge, expressing regret that it had been found necessary to expend so much money upon it, but recommending that every precaution for safety's sake be taken, regardless of expense. The board offered a table of figures, showing every delay to the bridge since its construction in 1905, and the length of each delay. It was recommended that the schedule of the car be changed, so as to make trips of the car less frequent.

The council voted in favor of the following schedule: One round trip every twenty minutes during the day and evening, except between the hours of 6:30 a. m. and 8 a. m. and 11:30 a. m. and 1 p. m., when there will be a 10-minute service, and between the hours of 5:30 p. m. and 6:30 p. m., when there will be a 15-minute service.

It was decided that the life boats recommended for the bridge were unnecessary. It was voted, however, to provide a telephone for the car, and to provide some power to supplement the electric power, so the car could be moved back to shore if the electricity should fail while the car was crossing the canal. Mr. Green said the present hand power had never been of any use. Either gasoline motive power or an improved hand power apparatus will be installed.

Alderman Shartel offered an ordinance, making it unlawful for a minor to buy a drink of intoxicating liquor. The ordinance was given its first reading. The purpose of the measure is to protect the saloon men against youths who claim to be more than 21 years of age, and who look as old as they claim to be, but who are really minors.

Alderman McKnight submitted a resolution, which was adopted, expressing regret at the reported action of the St. Louis county delegation in the state legislature in indefinitely postponing action on Duluth's public utilities bill, and urging the various public organizations of the city to take up the matter and adopt similar resolutions of regret, if not of condemnation. Alderman McKnight charged the St. Louis county legislators with breaking faith with Duluth, and said that while they had promised to carry the bill through, provided certain changes were made in it, they had gone back on these promises after the changes had been made. The object of the bill is to allow Duluth to own and operate her own electric light plant.

Health Commissioner Patton recommended that $192 be provided for making necessary repairs at the city incinerator. The matter was referred to the committee on city property.

City Engineer McGilvray reported that the estimated cost of the sewer proposed for Hunter's Park is $12,152.60. The sewer, to be a sanitary main trunk, will run along Columbus avenue and Abbotsford streets, from St. Marie to Fairmont streets.

Chief of Police Troyer offered a communication strongly urging the revocation of fortune telling licenses held by Rosie Maria & Co. and Maria & Adams, who are operating on the Bowery. The recommendation was carried out, after an objection from Alderman Shartel, who thought the police and license committee should take up the matter and report to the council at the next meeting.

Chief Troyer objected to any delay, because, he said, the fortune tellers in question were robbing lumberjacks every day. He was sure he knew what he was talking about, he asserted, for numerous complaints had been made about the holders of the two licenses in question. One man had been robbed of $40, but had gotton it back by therats and on exhibition of force, and several had lost $15 and $10. The aldermen agreed with Chief Troyer that further delay was useless, and voted to revoke the licenses. There is one other Gypsy fortune teller in town, but no evidence of crooked work has been secured against her.

A motion by Alderman Moore was passed, calling for the removal of Duluth Telephone company poles from Superior street, between Second avenue east and Ninth avenue east, and from Second street between First to Thirteenth avenues east.

Under a resolution introduced by Alderman Moore, and adopted, the city attorney is instructed to proceed against all companies maintaining overhead wires in streets, avenues or alleys contrary to city ordinances.

Aldermen Tessman, Filiatrault, Kennedy and Ribenack, whose terms in the city council expire this week, made farwell addresses last night. All said they had enjoyed their very pleasant associations with the other aldermen in the council during their terms of office, said that feeling between the aldermen had always been of the best, despite occasional differences of opinion, and thanked heads of different city departments, and their employes, for willing assistance rendered in committee work. Alderman Kennedy, in his farewell remarks, said no politics, should enter into the work of the council. Every alderman, he declared, should forget his party while carrying out his duties as alderman, and work for the best interests of the city.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

The newly appointed committees of the Young Women's Christian association will hold the first meetings for organization within the next few weeks. The first committee to meet will be the membership committee of which Miss Minnie Leopold is chairman. The members will gather at the rooms this evening for supper and an informal discussion of the plan of work. The other members of the committee are Miss Augusta Ehling, Mrs. F. H. Rogers, Mrs. Brewer Mattocks, Miss Minnie Moody, Miss Sophie Ceska, Miss Marie Ceska and Mrs. Charles Haid.

A membership of 2,000 at the time of entering the new building, which will be ready for occupancy by May 1, is the mark which the officers of the association have decided upon and the committee this evening will probably formulate the first plans for this campaign. It is likely that the campaign will be carried on during Lent, and the members hope to enlist every member now enrolled, in the work of increasing the membership to the mark desired. With the new building and equipment every department will be enlarged and better work will be made possible. The general secretary, Mrs. Wesley Feetham, and the directors are particularly anxious that every advantage of the association be extended to as great a number of Duluth women and girls as possible.

A time limit will be set on the campaign and Easter may be named as the close of the effort to bring the membership to the hoped for number.

Last evening an interesting recital was given at the association rooms, and in spite of the weather a large number of the members were present and greatly enjoyed the numbers which were presented by the members of the Matinee Musicale society. Songs were sung by Miss Hyland and Miss Alice Sloselius and the latter sang two numbers in Norwegian, which were especially appreciated by a number of the Norwegian girls in the audience, who seldom hear songs in their native tongue. Miss Wyle was heard in some readings and the pianists were Miss Simonds and Miss Ruthe Rogers.

LENTEN LECTURES.

Series to Be Given Before Club Women.

Immediately following the holidays there is always a slight lessening of interest in club affairs, but with the coming of Lent and a quieter social life, there is renewed interest in the intellectual life as offered by the various women's clubs of the city. A series of lectures will be given under the auspices of the Twentieth Century club during the next few weeks. Friday morning of this week Dr. John Jackola of this city will speak at the club room of the library on "The Race Problem in World Politics." Dr. Jackola is one of the speakers who is always heard with great interest in the lectures he presents before the clubs. This lecture was given by Dr. Jackola a few weeks ago before the Outlook club and the opportunity for a greater number of women to hear his most interesting discussion was arranged by the Twentieth Century club. Anyone interested is invited to be present Friday morning.

Prof. Maria Sanford of the English department of the state university will appear before the club in an evening lecture early in March. A discussion of one of Shakespeare's tragedies will probably be presented, the exact subject of her lecture not yet having been decided. Prof. Andrist of the university faculty will also appear before the club, probably the latter part of March.

The March social of the club will be held Monday afternoon of next week at the home of Mrs. J. H. McLean of 302 Sixteenth avenue east. A musicale will be presented under the direction of the chairman of the musical department, Mrs. A. M. Gow.

These meetings are in addition to the regular meetings of the various classes of the club.

BARN DANCE.

Duluth Chauffeurs Are Hosts at the Garage.

Duluth chauffeurs last night gave another of their delightful barn dances in the garage of the Mutual Automobile company and 150 guests thoroughly enjoyed the affair. The music, furnished by Di Marco, was of the best, and the dance was even more of a success than the first one, which was given earlier in the winter.

Although all dances were enjoyed, it was the barn dance that was again the popular hit. There was no fear of breaking through the solid cement floor, and the dance that has been tabooed in nearly every hall in the city, was the most popular of all.

The committee in charge of the dance was composed of Fred Neuman, Fred Owens, and Alex Cosgrove.

Trinity Social Club.

The last of the pre-lenten affairs at which the members of the Trinity social club will entertain, was held last evening when the members were hostesses at a sleighride about the city. Following the drive an oyster supper was served at the church. Thirty guests enjoyed the affair.

Lent has come.

Those who, through the strength of conviction, omit meat from their diet during the forty days of higher spiritual life, may now turn to eggs in their various guises, and no end of fish. A nice, big fish, stuffed and baked, is not bad. A plate of blue points, accompanied by a sharp and antagonistic sauce which completely disguises them, is not bad, either. A golden omelet, light and delicate, and beautiful, is not much of anything, only an airy bit of tender egg fluff that makes no apparent impression on the hunger that one thought was to be assuaged. Anyone of these things might be welcomed occasionally, and yet how popular will remain the tender, thick, rightly broiled, porterhouse steaks—Lent or no Lent.

SOBERING UP WITNESSES

Delayed Progress of Election Contest at Grand Rapids.

Loaded down with notes, Judge W. A. Cant and Reporter Gordon Hewitt returned last evening from Grand Rapids, where they have been in attendance at the Riddel-Riley election contest over the sheriff's office of Itasca county. The contestant in the case sprung a surprise yesterday morning. Judge Cant returned to Grand Rapids, expecting about two weeks in hearing rebuttal testimony, but the contestant announced, yesterday morning, that no witnesses would be called in rebuttal, and the case was rested on the primary testimony of the contestant and the contestee.

Judge Cant's decision will probably be given as soon as he can review the mass of involved testimony introduced by the two parties to the case. With evidences of illegal voting in many precincts, ignorance of the laws and irregularities by many judges, repeating and stuffing, the case furnishes much material for judicial consideration.

The case was probably the lengthiest and most involved election contest ever started in Northern Minnesota. The first session was held Dec. 17 and, with the exception of about a week, during which Judge Cant was forced to attend court here it has continued almost uninterruptedly, with three sessions a day. Court was held morning, afternoon and evening, running ten or twelve hours every day.

In all, between 400 and 500 witnesses were examined, and it is estimated that a transcript of the testimony will make 5,000 pages. The witnessses were brought from all over the county. The report of the judges in three precincts were thrown out altogether, and it was necessary for the parties to prove up the votes for them. In one precinct about 137 votes were cast, and only 53 votes were proved.

The case was an expensive one for the contestants, and it is said that the great expense to which he has already been put induced Riddel to rest his case at this time, and forego the introduction of testimony in rebuttal. Witnesses were brought from all over the county, under heavy mileage charges, and were paid day wages while they remained in Grand Rapids. At times it was necessary to hold witnesses for three weeks or more before they could be put on the stand, and during that time it was necessary for the party that secured them to pay them $1 a day. Under such pressure of expense, the costs of the case mounted up quickly, and the entire expense of the proceedings will mount well into the thousands of dollars.

There were many amusing incidents at the hearing, according to Grand Rapids people, who were in Duluth today, and who followed the case. Booze figured at times in some of the amusing situations. Witnesses from the backwoods, striking Grand Rapids with their witness fees in their pockets, drawing $1 a day and waiting for their turns on the witness stand, were prone to fall, and in several instances it was necessary for Judge Cant to commit prospective witnesses to the county jail to allow them to sober up sufficiently to go on the stand and tell what they knew about the election.

The attorneys had a hard time drawing information from some of the witnesses, who could not testify without incriminating themselves. The operation of securing an admission from an election judge in one of the outlying districts that he had himself voted four times was like drawing a well rooted tooth. There were Indians among th witnesses also, and the efforts made to prove that Indians who had voted were living under civilization, brought out some ludicrous facts.

The Story of a Medicine

Its name—"Golden Medical Discovery" was suggested by one of its most important and valuable ingredients—Golden Seal root.

More than forty years ago, Dr. Pierce discovered that he could, by the use of pure, triple-refined glycerine, aided by a certain degree of constantly maintained heat and with the aid of apparatus and appliances designed for that purpose, extract from our most valuable native medicinal roots their curative properties much better than by the use of alcohol, so generally employed. So the now world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery," for the cure of weak stomach, indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, or biliousness and kindred derangements was first made, as it ever since has been, without a particle of alcohol in its make-up.

A glance at the full list of its ingredients, printed on every bottle-wrapper, will show that it is made from the most valuable medicinal roots found growing in our American forests. All these ingredients have received the strongest endorsement from the leading medical experts, teachers and writers on Materia Medica who recommend them as the very best remedies for the diseases for which "Golden Medical Discovery" is advised.

A little book of these endorsements has been compiled by Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., and will be mailed free to any one asking same by postal card, or letter addressed to the Doctor as above. From these endorsements, copied from standard medical books of all the different schools of practice, it will be found that the ingredients composing the "Golden Medical Discovery" are advised not only for the cure of the above mentioned diseases, but also for the cure of all catarrhal, bronchial and throat affections, accompained with catarrhal discharges, hoarseness, sore throat, lingering, or hang-on-coughs, and all those wasting affections which if not promptly and properly treated are liable to terminate in consumption. Take Dr. Pierce's Discovery in time and persevere in its use until you give it a fair trial and it is not likely to disappoint. Too much must not be expected of it. It will not perform miracles. It will not cure consumption in its advanced stages. No medicine will. It will cure the affections that lead up to consumption, if taken in time.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine OF KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, the same being attested as correct under oath.

All Over the city we have satisfied customers. Why not have you on our list!

MRS. TEAL, FORMER ST. PAUL GIRL, TRIED ON SUBORNATION OF PERJURY ALLEGATION

New York, Feb. 24.—Charged with attempted subornation of perjury in the divorce action of Helen Kelly Gould against Frank J. Gould, Mrs. Margaret Teal, wife of Ben Teal, the theatrical man, was placed on trial in the general sessions court. Mrs. Teal was jointly indicted with Mrs. Julia Fleming and Harry S. Mousley, a private detective, it being alleged that they attempted to have Mabel McCauslan, a 19-year old milliner offer perjured testimony in the Gould case. Mrs. Fleming and Mousley are expected to appear as witnesses in the case against Mrs. Teal.

Miss McCauslan testified Mrs. Teal told her she could have $500 or $600, a trip to the country and a theatrical position if she would testify that she had seen Mr. Gould under suspicious circumstances in Mrs. Teal's apartments at the Glenmore, which were then sub-let to Bessie Devoe, an actress.

The witness said she replied that she could not so testify, as she had not seen any such impropriety, whereupon Mrs. Fleming who was present said, Miss McCauslan declared, "I did not see it either, but I'd manage to swear that I did."

Mrs. Teal was formerly Mrs. Margaret Toomey of St. Paul.

No Darwin Observance.

S.S.S. CURES CATARRH

When we say S. S. S. cures Catarrh, we do not mean that it merely checks the symptoms for a short time. Some local applications will do that by simply cleansing and soothing the irritated mucous membranes, but all the while the cause which produces Catarrh is left in the system, and at the first cold, or disagreeable spell of weather, the trouble returns with all its annoying symptoms.

Catarrh is a blood disease which causes a general inflammation of the inner linings or mucous membranes of the body. The diseasing of these delicate tissues and surfaces by the continual contact with impure blood causes irritation and an unhealthy discharge, producing all the well known symptoms of Catarrh, such as mucus dropping back into the throat, buzzing noises in the head and ears, stuffy feeling in the nose, watery eyes, headaches, slight fever, a general weakness of the body, impaired health, etc. Even the lungs become affected by the continual passage of impure blood through them if the trouble is allowed to remain in the system.

S. S. S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all the impure catarrhal matter, and at the same time building up the system by its unequaled tonic effects. It goes into the circulation and attacks the disease at its head and removes every trace of impurity that is causing the trouble. In plain language, S. S. S. purifies the blood so that the mucous linings and tissues are all supplied with healthy, life-giving properties, instead of being saturated with unhealthy catarrhal matter. Then the inflamed and irritated membranes and surfaces heal, every symptom disappears, the stomach is toned up and Catarrh thoroughly cured. The inflammation which produces the disease can never be permanently relieved until the cause has been removed from the blood. This S. S. S. will do, and then nature hastens the return of perfect health.

If you are suffering with Catarrh, begin the use of S. S. S. and by driving out the cause and building up your system make a certain and permanent cure of the trouble. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice desired sent free to all. S. S. S. is for sale at all drug stores. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.

S. S. S. CURED HIM.

Gentlemen:—I wrote you some time ago, giving you an account of my suffering with an awful case of Catarrh. I had all the symptoms that accompany this disease, such as mucus dropping into the throat, a constant desire to hawk and spit, feeling of dryness in the throat, cough and spitting upon rising in the morning, scabs forming in the nose, which required much effort to blow out, sometimes causing the nose to bleed and leaving me with a sick headache. I had thus suffered for five years.

As soon as I heard from you I commenced to take S. S. S. as you advised, and after I had taken several bottles, I noticed a change for the better. This encouraged, I continued to take it, and in a short while was entirely cured.

JUDSON A. BILLAM.

NOSE STOPPED UP AND INCESSANT COUGH.

Gentlemen:—I suffered for a long time with a case of Catarrh, and took a great deal of medicine without any benefit. Several doctors told me I could not be cured.

I had a continual headache, my cheeks had grown purple, my nose was always stopped up, my breath had a sickening and disgusting odor, and I coughed incessantly.

I heard of your S. S. S. and wrote to you. On your recommendation, I commenced to use it, and after taking several bottles I was cured and have never since had the slightest symptom of the disease. I will always be glad to recommend it to other sufferers.

Respectfully,
MRS. M. L. WESSERMAN.
2710 Caroline St., St. Louis, Mo.

NO ONE COULD HAVE BEEN WORSE.

Gentlemen:—I had Catarrh for about fifteen years, and no man could have been worse. I tried everything I could hear of, and could see a little improvement from the first bottle, and after taking it a short while was cured. This was six years ago, and I am as well today as any man.

I think Catarrh is a blood disease, and know there is nothing on earth better for the blood than S. S. S. Nobody thinks more of S. S. S. than I do.

Yours truly, M. MATSON.
Lapeer, Mich.

COMPLETE CURE.

I took S. S. S. for Catarrh with very pleasing results and gave it to my daughter who was suffering with a bad case of Catarrh. She took it according to directions and it made a complete and lasting cure for her. I cheerfully recommend S. S. S. as a certain cure for Catarrh.

'RUBE" WADDELL WANTS DIVORCE

Eccentric Pitcher's Wife Keeps Him From Pitching in Boston.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 24.—George Edward Waddell prepared yesterday to sue for divorce by placing his case in the hands of local attorneys. "Rube's" present wife is living in Boston, and is suing to compel him to support her, which prevented him from playing with the Browns there last season, resulting in Boston winning a big majority of its series with St. Louis. It is understood that the plan is for Waddell to get a divorce or to compromise his wife's suit so he can pitch for St. Louis in Boston during the coming season.

Manager McAleer and four veteran Browns left today for French Lick Springs to drink water and frolic over the Indiana hills for ten days, preparatory to the regular spring training in Houston, Tex.

FIRST BASEBALL MEETING OF YEAR

Fans Invited to be Present at Commercial Club Gathering.

The first baseball meeting of the year will be held tonight at the Commercial club. Ball fans of the city are invited to be present.

In order to have a successful team the league officials believe that the fans should be taken on the inside and have a general knowledge of the workings of the team. So that they may understand all that there is to know in regard to the league generally, and the Duluth team in particular, they are invited to be present at the meeting tonight.

Officers will be elected and such other business as shall come before the meeting will be discussed. There is no doubt but what Dick Jacobs will be elected manager, but who will hold the other offices has not yet been discussed.

Darby O'Brien, playing manager of the team is in Cleveland looking up a number of promising players, booking engagements for the spring training trip, and completing his plans for the opening of the season.

FIGHT IS A DRAW.

John Wille Had the Better of Go With Al. Kubiac, However.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 24.—Al Kubiac of Michigan was able to make it a draw with John Wille of Chicago by developing a burst of speed and doing some effective in-fighting in the final rounds of a twelve-round bout at the Armory Athletic association last night. Throughout the contest Wille showed himself the cooler and cleverer fighter, wasting few blows and landing terrific left swings to Kubiac's face and head, while he escaped serious punishment by timely ducking. Kubiac did effective work with body punches, but was slow to follow up any advantage, losing almost every swing for the upper part of the body.

PLAY LAST GAME.

Canadian Curlers in Scotland Will Soon Start for Home.

Glasgow, Scotland, Feb. 24.—The Canadian Curlers played their last match in Scotland yesterday defeating the Dumbarton province curlers by ninety-one points. The Canadian will proceed to London today.

VAULT RECORD BROKEN.

Clair Jacobs of Chicago University Clears 12 Feet 3 Inches.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—Clair R. Jacobs of the University of Chicago broke the world's indoor pole vault record last night, when he cleared the bar 12 feet 3 inches in the dual track meet between the Chicago Athletic association and the University of Chicago at Bartlett gymnasium. The university team won the meet by a score of 48 to 38. Jacobs' performance is the sensation of the season. He held the former record of 11 feet 8¾ inches, which he made about a month ago. Jacobs took the record from Harold Iddings of the University of Chicago, who vaulted 11 feet 7⅞ inches in 1907. Jacobs tied for third place in the pole vault in the Olympic games in London last summer. He has a record of 12 feet 4 inches outdoors.

"PHILLIES" ARE SOLD.

Three Senators Buy Controlling Interest in Philadelphia Ball Team.

Philadelphia, Feb. 24.—The North American prints the following:

"Yesterday at noon the Philadelphia National league baseball club passed into the ownership and conrol of Contractor James P. McNichol, Banker Clarence Wolf and Israel Busham, all state senators.

Walthour the Winner.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 24.—Bobby Walthour last night defeated Elmer Collins in a scheduled 15-mile motor-paced bicycle race. Walthour won the first heat of five miles by 40 yards. Time 7:58 4-5, which is 1 1-5 seconds faster than the track record, made by Collins last week. The second heat was won by Walthour by 20 yards, time 8:02 2-5.

Player to be Reinstated.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 24.—Player Edward C. McDonald of the New York National league team will be reinstated on payment of a fine of $100 and a claim by Jack Sullivan, formerly of Kansas City, for expense money against the Pittsburg club is allowed in decisions promulgated by the National baseball commission yesterday. McDonald had failed to report. Sullivan's grievance started in a belief that he had not been offered enough money, a point on which the commission did not agree with him, declaring that the contract presented was liberal and he is entitled to no redress.

EASY FOR WOLGAST.

Dan Webster Takes a Severe Beating From Milwaukee Fighter.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 24.—A. D. Wolgast of Milwaukee had the better of a ten-round contest with Dan Webster of this city at the Pacific A. C. here last night, although no decision was rendered.

Wolgast was unable to knock Webster out, but gave him a severe beating. Webster did not leave a mark on Wolgast.

Wolgast will fight twenty rounds with Walter Little before the Jeffries club on Friday night.

Athlete Dies.

Imperial, Cal., Feb. 24.—As the result of an accident on Washington's birthday, George D. Franklin, aged 26, formerly of San Diego and Los Angeles, and for a time a foothall man at Stanford, is dead. Franklin was struck on the head by a pitched ball in a baseball game, but played out the game. Last night he became insensible and died today.

Billiard Expert Coming.

George E. Spears, the billiard player, will give an exhibition of fancy shots and play a game of 14-2 balk-line billiards with William F. Hatley the local expert, Thursday evening.

At the present time there is a great deal of interest being displayed in billiards by Duluth cue wielders and the coming of Mr. Spears to the city for the purpose of giving an exhibition of his skill is being looked forward to with much pleasure. The game will begin at 7:30.

away from the state school and state university funds their receipts from a valuation of nearly $200,000,000, which would deal both a blow that would be felt. The bill abolishes the state taxes on producing iron mines, and proposes in lieu thereof a tonnage tax, to go into the general revenue fund of the state. The state school fund and the state university fund would not share in this tax to any degree, but would lose what they now get out of the state tax in their behalf upon the producing iron mines.

Would Work Discrimination.

Representative Sawyer of Minneapolis asked what the effect of the tonnage tax would be upon Minnesota iron manufactures if it turned out that the tax would be unconstitutional as applied to ores destined for manufacture in other states. Mr. Congdon, in reply to Representative Bjorge's legal argument in behalf of the bill, had shown that in a very large proportion of the shipments, the iron ore produced in Minnesota becomes interstate commerce the moment it is separated from the earth, being scooped out by a steam shovel, placed in a car, and moved immediately to the docks where vessels are waiting to take it down the lakes. A state cannot, of course, tax interstate commerce under the Federal Constitution, and Mr. Congdon has fairly stated that so far as foreign shipments are concerned, the proposed tax would be unconstitutional. Mr. Sawyer wanted to know if this would not work a discrimination against Minnesota manufactures, and Congdon said it undoubtedly would, and that it would be the only case in the history of the country where a state had discriminated against its own raw material by discouraging its manufacture within the state borders.

What President Corey Said.

Some new facts concerning the new steel plant of the United States Steel corporation at Duluth were brought out by Mr. Congdon, who quoted W. E. Corey, president of the corporation as having said to him in New York, last December, when he went to get an authoritative statement, to be used in reply to queries about the prospects for the completion of the plant at Duluth, the following words:

"You can say anywhere, at any time, Mr. Congdon, that the plant at Duluth will be built."

Mr. Corey proceeded to explain the reasons for delay. The securing of titles to the many pieces of property involved in the site for the plant was one difficulty, and the last title, Mr. Congdon stated, was not secured until within a few weeks. The other reason for delay was the panic and its resulting depression. At the time of Mr. Congdon's conversation with Mr. Corey, 59 per cent of the capacity of the Steel corporation was in operation. The slow revival of business has increased this percentage, no doubt, but the Steel corporation is not likely to complete new plants while its old ones are idle. Mr. Corey stated, however, that in 1910 the Duluth plant would proceed to completion at a rate never witnessed in the construction of any plant in the country.

"Bob" Dunn Talks.

Robert C. Dunn, former state auditor and Republican candidate for governor in 1904, gave a straightforward and vigorous talk against the tonnage tax, according to his usual fashion. He said:

"I appear as a citizen of Minnesota, and one particularly interested in Northeastern Minnesota, at the request of friends in St. Louis, Lake, Itasca, Aitkin, Crow Wing and other counties. I was probably asked to appear on account of my well-known views on this question, views which I have never taken pains to conceal. I hold no brief for the steel trust. I owe it or its members nothing, politically or otherwise. I come in behalf of the best interests of my section of the state and of all Minnesota.

"When I became state auditor in 1895, things were in a chaotic condition. One thing speedily brought to my attention was the gross injustice of the tonnage tax law, which was then in force. This law, providing for a tax of 1 cent a ton, was passed at the special session of 1891. Half the tax went to the state and half to the county, the localities in which the mines were situated being ignored. Their tax rates were high, naturally. It appeared to me that the law was in violation of the state constitution as it was then, and I had the attorney general, Mr. Childs, pass upon it. He held it to be unconstitutional. I directed the auditor of St. Louis county to place the iron mines upon the tax rolls to be assessed in the ordinary manner, and thus we brought about what the legislature had been unable to do, the practical repeal of the tonnage tax law.

"From that day to this I have been a consistent opponent of the tonnage tax, believing it to be wrong in principle and mischievous in practice, with one exception. Two years ago, it appearing that the adoption of a tonnage tax law was inevitable, I saw Mr. Bjorge, one of the authors of the pending bills, and suggested that if any tonnage tax law be passed, it should provide that the taxes should go into the road and bridge fund, so that the sections contributing it would get back some benefit. But the bill was changed so that the taxes were to go into the general revenue fund, and I was glad to see it defeated.

The Tonnage Tax Bill Fair.

"I have read the present bill, and I wish to say that I have a high respect for its author, whom I believe to be honorable and conscientious. I think he intends to do what is right. I will say for his measure that it is the fairest tonnage tax measure ever introduced into the legislature, because it considers the need of the mining regions, leaving them to get their taxes upon an ad valorem basis. If any tonnage tax bill is fair, his is fair. But I believe that no tonnage tax bill is fair. I have read the arguments of the St. Louis county delegation against this bill, and they appear to me to be simply unanswerable. I don't see how anybody can get around them. Yet I have thought of a few reasons that are not mentioned why the tonnage tax bill should be defeated.

"It should not be thought that St. Louis county alone is interested in this measure. It is interested more than any other county, perhaps, but Aitkin, Crow Wing, Itasca, Kanabec, Mille Lacs, Todd and other counties are also concerned.

"I stand upon this broad ground, and assert without fear of successful contradiction that the state has no moral right to levy a special tax against the industry of any one county or any one section of the state. It may have a legal right, thanks to the amendment to the state constitution which was adopted by a majority of the supreme court; I don't know as to this. But I do know that the state has a right to its general state taxes from the iron counties, and to no other taxes.

"The argument for the tonnage tax is that the Steel trust is not paying its share of taxes, because the local tax rates in the mining sections are low. What has that to do with the question? What business is it of the state what local tax rates may be? The general average rate in the state is 26.9 mills. The Aitkin county rate is 38.16 mills, the Carlton county rate is 45.60 mills, the Itasca county rate is 30.29 mills, the Mille Lacs county rate is 45.66 mills, the Hennepin county rate is 32.6 mills, the Ramsey county rate is 32.20 mills, and the Dodge county rate is 20.4 mills. The state should not be interested in local rates, which are none of its business. But if it is going to enter into that, it should see why Dodge county's rate is only 20.4 mills while my county pays 4½ per cent. If there is a low rate in some parts of St. Louis county, that cannot affect the state rate or the state tax. The state receives the amount of tax it levies upon that county, and it is entitled to no more.

Much Land Exempt.

"In Northeastern Minnesota there are great quantities of state lands, swamp lands, railroad lands and government lands, not subject to taxation. In Southern Minnesota there is little or no such lands. It is true that the state got from the government sections 16 and 36 in each township, but when selections were made most of these towns in Southern Minnesota had been settled upon, and under the law the state took indemnity lands. Where? In Northern Minnesota, of course. In Northeastern Minnesota there are many districts where there is so much land exempt from taxation that the settlers cannot maintain schools or build roads. There should be a law allowing counties to levy a special tax for their benefit, and such a law should be passed rather than a tonnage tax for the benefit of more favored portions of the state.

"I have read the report of the state tax commission on this subject, and I agree with one of its members—Judge Hall, who opposed the tonnage tax. The majority of the commission approves the tonnage tax because when the ore is gone there will be nothing but holes left. This is true; but why not permit the mining counties, by giving them their fair share of the taxes from the mines, to guard against that evil day? Northeastern Minnesota needs all the taxes it can get, and it needs them badly.

"The only possible purpose of a tonnage tax is to relieve somebody of a small share of the state taxes. Surely the rich cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul and the rich sections of Southern and Central Minnesota can afford to forego this mere bagatelle and let Northern Minnesota have a show for development. It would not amount to a fraction of a mill for any single citizen anyway. Besides I can assure you from my knowledge of state government that there will be no saving of taxes anyway. It was predicted that if the indirect taxes could be increased the direct state tax would be decreased. Since then the direct taxes have increased 50 per cent. Has it cut the direct tax? No, that tax has also increased about 50 per cent in the same time.

"I believe that there is going to be at Duluth a steel plant costing $10,000,000 to $15,000,000, and employing 10,000 to 15,000 men. This will bring other plants. But if the iron trade believes Northern Minnesota to be hostile to it, and that it is threatened with a special tax burden, naturally it will hesitate before it makes large investments in this state. I believe the development of iron and steel manufacturing in this state should be encouraged. When Duluth is as big as either of the Twin Cities—and I believe that it will be—its growth will add to the value of produce raised in the state."

Mr. Congdon's Argument.

Mr. Congdon continued and completed his argument begun last week, and with the same effectiveness. He said that it was the principle of the bill he objected to, not the amount of tax proposed. If the tax were a mill a ton instead of 5 cents, he would still oppose it. If it actually reduced the taxes paid by the iron mines, as it ultimately may, he would still offer as strenuous objection to it as he does now.

"We are not seeking to reduce the iron taxes," he said. "We want the docks and warehouses and mines of St. Louis county taxed just the same as the property of any other county is taxed, but we want the taxes distributed just the same as other taxes are distributed. This is an unequaled system of taxing, and it is an unequal and unjust way of distributing the taxes. It would be a mere exercise of brute force. As the United States supreme court said in declaring invalid a 2-cent tonnage tax on coal, 'if the state has a right to tax coal 2 cents a ton, it has a right to tax it $5 a ton.'"

Mr. Congdon showed that in no state in the Union are mining taxes distributed in a manner different from that by which other taxes are distributed. Mining regions as a rule are more or less useless for other than mining purposes, and this has always been recognized in taxation. No state is now using the tonnage tax method, though several states have tried it and abandoned it.

Speaking of the proposed manufacture of steel at Duluth, Mr. Congdon said that that section wants a chance to develop along the only line possible—that of manufacturing.

"A great manufacturing center, just just about to be located, is hovering in the air," he said. "We are trying to locate it in our own front yard. Yet we fear that the rest of the state will step in and drive it away by special legislation. We have shown you that you can get all the taxes needed in the usual manner. If the mines are not paying taxes enough, raise them. I shall not oppose it. But if you propose a tax upon iron different from that imposed on other property, and if that tax involves an element of uncertainty, so that it is impossible to figure accurately the cost of manufacture, then you imperil our future. We are not speaking for St. Louis county alone, but for the whole state, which will reap enormous benefits if the manufacture of steel can be established within its borders."

Incidentally Mr. Congdon stated that besides the increase of the allowance for the plant from $5,000,000 to $12,500,000, the expert in charge of its plans, Mr Reis, has asked for $1,500,000 more, and has stated that if it is allowed, pig iron can be made at Duluth as cheaply as it can anywhere on the continent. He also referred to the "postage stamp freight rate," under which all Minnesota is at a disadvantage because freight rates to Western makers are the same from Minnesota as they are from the East. The establishment of a manufacturing center in the state, he said, would result in abolishing this rate, and in giving Minnesota the advantage in freight rates to which its location entitles it.

This probably finishes the public hearings on the bill, except that its author, Mr. Bjorge, will ask to be heard in rebuttal. The house tax committee will meet every day this week, and if Mr. Bjorge is ready with his reply, it will be heard before the week is out.

Before the tonnage tax was taken up, the committee heard from the members of the tax commission on two pending bills, introduced by Chairman Balzell of the committee, at the request of the commission. One provides that all property shall be valued at its actual worth, and that for purposes of assessment these figures shall be cut in two. The members of the commission pointed out the inequalities and injustices that grow out of the present system, under which percentages are largely a matter of the individual feelings of assessors, and there are assessments all the way from 9 per cent to 300 per cent of actual value.

The other bill increases the exemption of household goods from $100 to $200. The members of the commission said that this change recognizes the principle that household goods ought to be touched lightly for purposes of taxation. No action was taken on either bill.

While the St. Louis county delegation, as stated yesterday, voted against the St. Louis county highway commission bill, Representative Grant will probably introduce it as an individual measure. The members of the delegation who voted against the bill feared that it was taking too much power away from the members of the county board. Those who voted for it believed that under the present system it is impossible to get complete returns from the county's investment in roads, because the political necessities of the commissioners lead to wastes which cannot be prevented without a change of the system.

The delegation was quite emphatic in rejecting the bill proposed by the city council allowing cities of more than 50,000 to issue bonds in excess of the legal limit for the construction or purchase of public utilities.

This was for several reasons. In the first place, representatives of the city who appeared before the delegation admitted that there was absolutely no probability of a new municipal ownership project in Duluth in the near future. They admitted that they wanted the bill in order to have a club over the electric light company, to force it to renew its existing contract for lighting the city. There was no showing that there would be any difficulty about this renewal, and it was evident that even if there was difficulty, the existing contract does not expire until after the next session of the legislature, and that there will be plenty of time then, when the situation of the St. Louis county legislative delegation will be perhaps less delicate, to take up this matter.

In the second place, there was a feeling among the members of the delegation, strongly reinforced by protests from citizens of Duluth, that it is dangerous to imperil the city's credit by adding new bond issue possibilities, in view of the present large bonded indebtedness and the present large expense for interest and sinking fund.

In the public utilities bill, which is sweeping in its nature and applies to all parts of the state, there is a chance to continue public ownership if Duluth deems it proper, and in the Sawyer-Elwell bill, allowing cities to condemn public utility plants, there is still another.

The senate yesterday afternoon heard some more argument on the Armour packing plant controversy, and finally laid the whole matter on the table by a vote of 29 to 24, after it had taken up most of the day's time. Senator Dunn offered an amendment to the Hackney resolution, providing for a committee of investigation, making the committee one of seven from each house, all from outside the Twin Cities. Senator Wilson suggested that the entire legislature visit the New Brighton site. Then Senator Works, declaring that the state's business was more important than all this, moved to lay the whole matter on the table and get down to business, which was carried, as stated. The St. Louis county senators divided, two against laying an the table and one, Senator Pugh, for.

On motion of Senator Stephens of Crookston, the senate reconsidered the vote by which the bill asserting the state's right to minerals underlying lake beds was passed, and returned it to the calendar.

Senator Nelson proposed a state license for circuses and other vagrant amusements in a bill put in yesterday afternoon. Circuses must pay the state $100 per performance, and side shows, traveling vaudeville outfits, moving picture shows, merry-go-rounds, etc., $20 for each location. This is not to apply to performances at state or county fairs.

Senator Clague introduced a proposed "good roads" amendment to the constitution, similar in form to that inserted in the fundamental law of the state by the attorney general's dismissal of the contest, yesterday afternoon.

An optional income tax on credits is proposed by a bill offered in the senate by Senator E. E. Smith of Minneapolis. People owning credits can refrain from listing them for taxation if they wish to pay in lieu of a personal property tax of 5 per cent upon their gross income from their credits.

The senate committee on game and fish offered two measures yesterday afternoon. On requires everybody who takes out a hunting license to report to the state game and fish commission the number and kind of the birds or animals they kill, and the other requires everybody hunting small game to pay a tax of $1 for the privilege, unless they hunt on their own land. At present the law exempts from paying the license fee those who hunt small game in their own counties.

Senator Wright proposed a new agricultural school plan in a bill introduced yesterday afternoon. It provides for departments of agricultural, manual training and domestic science in one high school in each county, toward the support of which the state is to pay $5,000 the first year and $2,000 for each subsequent year.

Senator Pugh, at the request of the Duluth naval militia and with the approval of the St. Louis county delegation, introduced in the senate yesterday a bill fixing the rank and pay of the officers of the sea forces of the state. The executive officer, navigating officer, and past assistant engineer are raised to the rank of lieutenant commander from the rank of lieutenant, and the ordnance and equipment officer, assistant surgeon and assistant paymaster are made lieutenants.

There will be a public hearing Thursday afternoon on the Hackney bill providing a correspondence course in agriculture before the senate committe on agriculture.

The house committee on commerce and retail trade will have a public hearing this afternoon on the bill against trading stamps.

HIS SKULL FRACTURED

Ejected From Bagley Saloon, John Uvlan Dies From Injuries.

Jerry Demo, Who Threw Him Out While Drunk, Being Held.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Ulvan, a laborer of Bagley, who formerly lived at Hendrum, in the western part of the state, died in this city from concussion of the brain and a fractured skull, and Jerry Demo of Bagley is under arrest, charged with manslaughter in the first degree.

Oscar T. Stenvick of Bagley, county attorney of Clearwater county, accompanied by Ole Hesby, a friend of the deceased, took charge of the body. Stenvick said that Ulvan had been injured in a saloon brawl at Bagley on the evening of Feb. 5.

Ulvan had been raising a disturbance in the Bank saloon and the bartender had twice thrown him out of the place. When the man returned the third time, it is understood, the bartender told Jerry Demo, a young Frenchman who had been drinking quite heavily, to kick Ulvan out. Demo threw Ulvan out the door and the latter fell upon the cement sidewalk, fracturing his skull.

The injured man was brought to this city for medical assistance and Jerry Demo was arrested, but later released on bail. Dr. Bjorneby of Bagley, the coroner of Clearwater county, assisted by Dr. Henderson of this city, performed an autopsy on the body of Ulvan, deciding that death was due to concussion of the brain.

Stenvick allowed Ole Hesby to take the body to the old home at Hendrum for burial, and then returned to Bagley, where Demo was rearrested and is being held. The prisoner will be given a hearing next Monday. Demo is 22 years of age and is not accustomed to drinking heavily. His parents live at Bagley and are well respected.

NEW POSTOFFICE PLEASES CLOQUET

First Day in New Quarters Shows Improvement in Service.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The postoffice distributed mail for the first time from their new quarters yesterday.

A fine building especially adapted for use by the postoffice has been erected adjacent to the old building by F. L. Redfield of this city. General satisfaction was heard on all sides over the great improvement in keeping the line moving. Heretofore the crowded conditions wrought a hardship on not only those calling for their mail on a Sunday when there are no deliveries, but on the cerks themselves, who did not have sufficient room to properly sort the mail for distribution. Only one-half of the new building is occupied by the postoffice. The other half will be rented by a new haberdashery store, which will open the first of March, while upstairs is for office space, etc. Postmaster Redfield goes out of office March 1 and will be succeeded by Fred Vibert, manager of the Cloquet Pine Knott.

ASSESS PIANO NOT EXISTING

Crookston Man Pays Taxes on Mythical Instrument for Years.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the meeting of the city council last evening there was a deadlock over the election of a successor to Alderman B. F. Zerracher, from the Second ward, whose resignation was read, and the seat declared vacant, as provided by the charter.

Alderman Zerracher has removed to Minneapolis, and his seat is apparently hard to fill. J. D. Ball received four votes on each ballot, there being four scattering votes the first ballot, and A. E. Morck receiving the other four votes on the second and each succeeding ballot, Ball getting the other four. After repeated ballots, the seat was left vacant, and other business was taken up.

During the session an unusual circumstance developed in the petition of R. L. Huffman to have his personal property taxes reduced. It developed that he has been paying taxes on a piano for the previous five years, and never owned one or had one on the premises. He discovered the fact last year, and the assessor was notified, but the assessment on the piano bobbed up serenely again this year, and Mr. Huffman naturally protests.

SPORTSMEN ARE AROUSED.

Poisoning of Fine Dogs in Crookston Causes Indignation.

Crookston, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—The poisoning of five valuable hunting dogs in Jerome's addition Monday and yesterday has created great indignation among the scores of bird dog owners. It is the common practice to let all bird dogs run at large more or less during the winter, and the owners fear that some miscreant has deliberately planned a wholesale poisoning campaign with the object in view of scaring all dog owners to keep their dogs in kennels or chained up. A committee is now raising a substantial reward, and three of the leading attorneys of the city, who are keen sportsmen and own dogs, will prosecute the case if any evidence is secured.

The new school building is three stories in height, occupies ground space 80 by 180 feet, and is fireproof throughout. Portage entry sandstone is being used for the exterior, which is of a beautiful classic design. The interior when completed will present all that is latest and best in a model, sanitary and hygenic school building.

GOOSE NOT WILD.

Bird Caught on Superior Street Was Just Plain Bird.

Ernest Johnson's "wild goose" has turned out to be only one of the common or garden variety of grown up goslings, which was slated for the slaughter at a First street meat market and wandered out into the weather.

The owner of the goose, who "identified" it last evening by the color of its eyes and the peculiar way in which it parted its hair, branded Mr. Johnson's story, that the goose was wild, as a nature fake of the worst kind. The goose was not so overjoyed at being found as the owner was at finding it. Truth to tell, the goose was speechless with rage and had to be put into a straight jacket before it would consent to being removed from the genial warmth of Johnson's place of business. It's neck was wrung today and somebody's table will be graced with "wild goose" during the next week.

POISON AND REVOLVER

Colored Boy Tried Two Methods of Ending His Life.

Emetic Administered in Time and Bullet Missed Its Mark.

Ray E. Glenn, a negro, 19 years of age, living at 620 Sixth avenue east, made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide late yesterday afternoon. He drank carbolic acid, and shot at himself, but the bullet only tore through the ceiling, and an emetic prevented the poison from taking effect.

"I started to go, but I stopped, and this is my good-by. Ray."

After leaving this note, the young man retired to his room and swallowed the acid. He shot at himself, but missed. Ray's little step-sister came into the house a few minutes later and found him writhing in agony on the bed. The other occupants of the house were away from home. Dr. Lovell was called, and emetics were administered. The doctor, after working an hour over the boy, pronounced him out of danger, and ordered him removed to St. Mary's hospital, where he is resting easily today.

Disappointment in love is thought to have been the reason for Glenn's rash act. His father, Joseph Glenn, is now in Florida, employed as porter on John Millen's private car. All other members of the household were attending a social in the negro Methodist church when the suicidal attempt was made. The family is prominent in church work.

FRENCH MINISTER FIGHTS REVISION

Opposes Move to Raise Duties on American Products.

Paris, Feb. 24.—Opposition to revision of the French tariff which proposes an increase in the duties on American products on an average of 20 per cent, as against a 10 per cent increase on European goods, as evidenced when Minister of Commerce Cruppi appeared before the tariff commission and urged especially that no increase be made in the existing duty on cotton seed oil, which comes from the United States. Foreign Minister Pinchon and Minister of Agriculture Ruua also spoke on the same lines. The government fears that if this increase went through it would result in traffic reprisals on the part of America.

The tariff commission, at the close of its meeting, adopted an amendment restoring the old maximum and minimum rates for all oils with the exception of cotton seed oil, which will pay a uniform rate of 25 francs per 100 kilos. It also maintained its difference with regard to chilled meats.

by the committee last year to appropriate only $50,000. At that time, said Mr. Fitzgerald, President Roosevelt characterized the proposition as a sham and said that it would be better to repeal the law. Defending the interstate commerce commission, which had asked for the larger appropriation, Mr. Townsend of Michigan said the money would be expended after certain plans, now under way, had been formulated. Mr. Mann objected to the president's characterizing an appropriation of $50,000 as a sham.

An amendment by Mr. Fitzgerald to strike out the provision for reappropriation of the balance was voted down.

Clarke of Florida Fails.

Appropriation bills occupied considerable time in the house. The sundry civil bill was considered, but progress with it was slow. The fortifications, legislative, executive and judicial, diplomatic and consular and postoffice appropriation bills were sent to conference.

Clarke of Florida unsuccessfully attempted to secure an investigation into the writing of the recent letter by Secretary of State Bacon apologizing for Rainey's remarks regarding President Obaldia of Panama. Clarke's object being to ascertain if Bacon's reference to Rainey constituted an abuse of the privileges of the house.

For Negro Re-enlistment.

The president is authorized to appoint a court of inquiry to determine the qualifications for re-enlistment of discharged negro soldiers of the Twenty-fifth infantry regiment, accused of shooting up Brownsville, Tex. The Aldrich bill for this purpose was passed by a party vote of 56 to 26, except that Senator Teller voted with the Republicans for passage. The bill is a compromise measure approved by President Roosevelt, Senator Foraker and all of the Republican members of the committee on military affairs. The court of inquiry will act as a board to consider applications for re-enlistment and recommend the restoration to duty of such soldiers who are not found guilty of complicity in the affray.

The senate also passed the fortification bill, with appropriations aggregating $8,320,111, and the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill, carrying $3,646,308.

Ocean Mail Bill Appears.

INSANE FROM SHOCK.

Narrow Escape From Death Bereft Mountain Iron Man of Reason.

An accident, in which one of his horses was killed, unsettled Matt Lovshin's reason and he was committed to the Fergus Falls asylum after an examination in probate court yesterday afternoon. A locomotive struck a team of horses at Mountain Iron last fall and the slight unnerved Lovshin. He has a wife at Mountain Iron.

ROOSEVELT READS TAFT'S INAUGURAL.

able feature of the inaugural souvenir, issued by the committee in charge of the inaugural ceremonies is a biographical sketch of President-elect Taft by President Roosevelt. The keynote of the president's sketch is in these words:

"No man of better training, no man of more dauntless courage, of common sense and high character has ever come to the presidency than William Howard Taft."

The president, in concise terms, precedes this statement with a history of the president-elect, touching simply upon the public achievements of the man. In one place he says, referring to Taft as solicitor general:

"He won an enviable reputation and succeeded to a remarkable degree in combining entire fearlessness in stating and upholding his own convictions, with the ability to avoid giving needless offense to those whose convictions differed from his. It is one of Mr. Taft's great gifts of usefulness that he possesses exactly the ability, unflinchingly, to stand by the right, and yet to do it with the minimum of offensiveness toward those who do not see matters as clearly as he does."

The president thus refers to Taft's judicial record:

"It fell to Mr. Taft to decide a number of cases in which he blazed in advance the trail that all our judges must in the end follow. This was notably the case both as to corporations and the rights of labor."

MUST BACK UP LIBERIA

tombstone I read, 'Virginia,' 'South Carolina,' and so on.

"After painstaking' effort to get to the bottom of things, I am convinced the government is to be commended for having kept its head above water, in spite of its poverty, and that the future of the country is secure if the Liberians could only have the assurance that the integrity and independence of Liberia is secure. There will be no difficulty about reforms if the threats of partition could be offset by one little assurance that the mother country would see them through, as in the case of Cuba."

MAKE ROOM FOR WOMEN

many women in the throng, however, but they arrived later and many an unfortunate man who had spent several hours waiting for a seat, was ejected from it by a deputy, before he had been in it an hour, in order to make room for a woman. There was some delay, caused by a conference of counsel for the defendants and their host of relatives and friends. Gen. Washington nodded to Col. Cooper and the colonel walked over to the witness chair. As he passed his youngest daughter. Mrs. Beverly Wilson, she squeezed his arm affectionately.

Gen. Washington took up the line of questioning where he left off last night. Col. Cooper said as they approached Seventh avenue Robin and Sharp were in front of him.

"Robin turned and urged me to hurry. I told him to wait a minute. He and Sharp stopped and I caught up. Then he grabbed me and said: 'Let's hurry, Papa.' The nervous grasp of his arm aroused my suspicions and intuitively I turned and saw Senator Carmack. Instantly I decided to go over and have a plain talk with Carmack to see if this affair which was worrying my friends, my children and myself, could not be stopped."

"When you started out did you propose to meet him?"

"No, sir. The impulse came over me at once when I saw him, to go over and talk to him."

"Now tell what happened, in your own way."

"Well, I saw Senator Carmack coming up. First I thought I would wait for him. Then I thought that might carry some significance so I walked toward him. I saw him speak to Mrs. Eastman. I said 'Mr. Carmack.' He threw up his head as though he had not seen me and at once drew his revolver and stepped in front of Mrs. Eastman, pulling her between us and stepping toward the curb. He was five or six feet from the curb when I called his name."

"What next?"

"He had his pistol in his hand and passed in front of Mrs. Eastman. Mrs. Eastman became wildly excited and grabbed the old man with her. I had made no hostile movement."

"What did you say?"

"Damned Cowardly."

"I said I think that it was damned cowardly to get behind a woman with a pistol in his hand."

"Did you have a revolver out?"

"Not at that time."

"Did you have any purpose of shooting or killing him?"

"No, sir."

"Did you say, 'I have the drop on you.'"

"I did not."

"What happened next?"

"Well, Senator Carmack got around the post and at the same time Robin got in between us. In a second Carmack shot between the poles and Robin got around them. Then for the first time I saw Robin's revolver and saw him shoot."

"Did you have your pistol out?"

"Not until after Robin was shot. Then I drew my gun, but I saw Carmack was down and that Robin was shot, so I put my revolver back in my pocket."

"How many shots were fired?"

"Five in all."

"What next?"

"Robin attracted my attention. He was leaning against the post, and I could see he was wounded. I took him to Dr. Forts' infirmary. Sergeant Reid came in then, and said: 'You are my prisoner.' I said, 'You are entitled to my revolver, then,' and gave it to him."

"Was that gun still unfired?"

"It was."

"What about Robin's pistol?"

"Some other officer than Reid got it. Robin told me the gun was in his overcoat pocket. I do not recall getting it out."

"Do you recall saying to keep people out of the room, that you did not want to kill another man?"

Mrs. Eastman Excited.

"I do not remember."

"Did Mr. Eastman make any accusations against you after the shooting?"

"I know he said something, but my interest was centered in Robin and I got only a vague impression as to her excited talking."

"Cross-examine the witness." Capt. Fitzhugh, of the state, arose to begin the cross-examination and the audience with a murmur, leaned forward to catch every word. The attorney asked the colonel a few queestions as to his earlier career and then handing him some papers, said:

"Are these some bonds executed by you in 1870?"

"They are."

The defense objected, but the court permitted the question.

"They were bonds you gave as clerk and master and aggregated $56,000?"

"I think so. You have the bonds." Fitzhugh read the bonds and their reasons. They were given when Col. Cooper was master in chancery of Maury county.

The prosecution intimated that the witness had withheld $350 of the proceeds of a land sale in 1883. Judge Anderson contended that Col. Cooper need not answer.

Jury Retires.

Attorneys for the defense argued against the admission of the charges and the state replied through Fitzhugh, but after the first sentence the defense demanded that the jury retire. This was done and Fitzhugh resumed.

"We propose to show that this defendant, Col. D. B. Cooper, is a defaulter and an embezzler to the extent of over $100,000. We propose to prove this beyond doubt and thus to show to the jury just how much credit they should place in his words. We propose to go further and prove by court records that his own brothers came into court and admitted that the defendant is a defaulter.

"We propose to show that he embezzled from estates, from widows and orphans, from the county and from the state and that the very records kept by him prove it."

"But there is a further reason for this question. We have heard of the colonel's deep sense of honor, how stung he was by a few sarcastic editorials. But we will show that he was openly accused of embezzlement, that he never said the town was not big enough for him and for the men who made the charges."

Attorney General McCarn followed Fitzhugh nd declared that they would carry these dishonest transactions from 1883 down to 1908, and that they were not too remote. Judge Anderson replied for the defense:

"We never claimed that Senator Carmack was killed because of those editorials," he said. "Our theory is that Robin Cooper shot Senator Carmack in self-defense, after the senator had shot him twice."

"Do you mean to say," interrupted Fitzhugh, "that you have not forced the editorials written by Carmack into evidence, as tending to show that Col. Cooper was driven almost mad by these attacks upon his honor?"

"We have," replied Anderson, "to show the defendant's state of mind, not as a justification for the slaying."

Columbia, Mo., Feb. 24.—In an address on journalism before the University of Missouri Walter Wellman advised Andrew Carnegie to build his most useful and enduring monument by founding at Washington the greatest newspaper in the world. New Orleans, La., Feb. 24.—The action of the secretary of war in issuing instructions for the restoration of the name of Jefferson Davis on the cabin John Bridge, near Washington, is hailed with satisfaction by members of the Confederate Southern Memorial association. It is asserted it was this organization rather than the Daughters of the Confederacy which inaugurated the movement to have the name of the Southern leader put back in the place from which it had been chiseled.

WHEAT HAS FIRM TONE

Prices Go Up Again in All the American Markets.

Flax Sells Off and Closes at a Loss Here.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 24.—Wheat had another advance in the American markets today. The Chicago bulls were active buyers and the other markets followed closely, the Northwest markets participating in the rise with more enthusiasm than was evidenced last week. Receipts were quite liberal as compared with the previous day, but the fact depressed the market not at all.

Bradstreet's reported an increase of 1,058,000 bu. in the world's visible supply of wheat. In the United States and Canada there was a decrease of 2,942,000 bu., and afloat and in Europe, an increase of 4,000,000 bu.

Liverpool closed 1½d to 1¾d higher, Antwerp ⅝c higher and Berlin ⅜c higher.

The May option closed ⅝c higher in Duluth, ½c higher in Chicago, ⅝@¾c up in Minneapolis, ¾c higher in New York, ⅜@½c higher in St. Louis and ⅜c up in Winnipeg. The July option closed ½c higher in Duluth, 1⅝@¾c higher in Chicago, ⅝@¾c higher in Minneapolis, 1⅜c higher in New York, 1⅝c higher in St. Louis and ⅜c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅜@½c higher in Chicago and unchanged to ½d higher in Liverpool. May oats closed a shade lower in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"Wheat—Firmness characterized the early dealings in wheat and values were 1⅛d higher. The disappointing American cables yesterday were offset by light offerings here and a continued good demand both from the United Kingdom and Continent. Durational strength and values further advanced ½ to ¾d with the principal strength in March and July. There was a continued good demand for cargoes which were firmly held. Advices state that the Australian surplus is being reduced, and this together with existing expected light shipments from Argentina caused free covering among shorts. Spot markets were firm. At midday, the market was strong and from ⅝d to ⅞d higher than yesterday.

"Corn was quiet at the start and unchanged. Later a decline occurred, owing to a very poor demand for spot and the dullness of trade."

Car receipts at Duluth were 88 against 92 last year, and at Minneapolis 129 against 140 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 217 against 228 last year. Chicago received 100 against 21 last year. Winnipeg received 103 against 102 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 494,000 bus last year 249,000 bus. Shipments 316,000 bus, last year 436,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 100,000 bus.

Primary receipts of corn were 1,294,000 bus, last year 503,000 bus. Shipments, 502,000 bus, last year, 268,000 bus. Clearances of corn were 79,880 bus.

Wheat was quite active during the session in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ½c higher at $1.12⅜, declined to $1.12¼, rallied to $1.13 and closed at $1.12⅝, a gain of ⅝c over yesterday. July wheat was inactive and closed ½c higher than yesterday at $1.13¼.

Durum wheat closed 1¾c higher. There was a stronger foreign demand for durum.

Cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of ½c over May for No. 1 northern.

Longs took profits in May flax today and the option fell off here. May flax opened ¼c lower at $1.69½ bid, advanced to $1.70 and declined gradually to $1.66½, rallied to $1.67¾ and closed at $1.67½, a loss of 2¼c from yesterday. July flax was inactive and closed 2½c lower at $1.65½. October flax sold at $1.37¾ and closed at $1.38½, a loss of 1½c from yesterday.

Oats closed ⅛c lower and barley was 2c higher.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Advance in Price of July Delivery Furnishes Wheat Feature.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—The feature of early trade in the wheat market today was an advance of 1c in the price of the July delivery. Bull leaders turned their attention today to the more distant delivery, and as a result of active demand from that source, the price of the July option advanced to $1.02½ in the first few minutes of the session. The market opened strong, with prices unchanged to ⅜@½c higher, initial quotations on May being at $1.12¾ to $1.16, and on July, $1.03¾ to $1.01⅞@1.02. The firmness at the start was due chiefly to an advance to a point ½c above the best market at the opening, where it held firm, but the May option, after selling at $1.16⅜, dropped off to $1.15⅝.

Demand for the July delivery continued extremely urgent the entire day and further advance of nearly 1c was made, the price touching $1.03⅝ late in the session. In the meantime May sold up to $1.16⅜. The market closed strong with July up 1⅝@1¾c at $1.03⅜@¼ and May up ¼c at $1.16.

Despite receipts here of 1,035 cars, the corn market displayed considerable firmness, shorts taking advantage of yesterday's slump to cover sales. Prices at the start were a shade lower to ⅛c higher, May opening at 65¼c to 65⅝c. Early in the day May sold up to 65½c.

The high point of the day for May was reached at 65⅞c. The market was firm all day and closed near the top with May up ⅜@½c at 65¾c.

Trade in oats was quiet, and the market was steady. May opened unchanged at 54⅜c, sold at 54½@⅝c, and then rallied to 54¾c.

An advance of 5c to 10c in the price of live hogs caused moderate firmness in provisions, but the volume of business was small. Prices at the opening were 2½c to 5@7½c higher.

Midway Horse Market.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 24.—Barrett & Zimmerman report: Liberal orders are being placed by dealers from Dakota and Canadian points. The better classes of horses came in for more attention than for several days past, although plain horses have the call. Receipts are heavy and the midweek sale promises to be a record breaker in the volume of offerings. A number of Eastern buyers were on the market filling orders for general purpose horses. Matured farm mares weighing 1,300 or better are in urgent demand with liberal supply to select from. Values fall as yet to show any advances to a higher spring level on account of the extra heavy receipts.

CONSOLIDATE ALL THREE ROADS

It is generally believed in Northwestern railroad circles that the three railroads under the control of the Canadian Pacific, will be consolidated under one head, as far as the Duluth headquarters of the Wisconsin Central, the Soo, and the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic roads are concerned.

This opinion was given yesterday by a passenger official, who was in Duluth yesterday. He bases his opinion upon rumors that are current in Minneapolis, the headquarters of the Soo line.

It is now generally known that the offices of the Soo and the Wisconsin Central will be consolidated in Minneapolis. The contract for an addition to the general office building of the Soo has been let, which is to make room for the additional offices of the Wisconsin Central. While it is not believed that the departments of the Wisconsin Central will be fully reorganized, some railroad men believe that there will be a Northwestern passenger agent acting for the three lines at Duluth, and that the three lines will be more or less under one controlling head.

The Soo and the Wisconsin Central will utilize the same terminals in Duluth and probably the same offices.

TWENTY-FIVE DIE ID WRECK

The accident was caused by a displaced rail.

Deadlock Continues.

ADVANCES IN STOCKS

Market Opened Irregular, But Firmer Tone Was Soon Developed.

Violent Fluctuations in the Contest Between Opposing Forces.

New York, Feb. 24.—The stock market opened in an exceedingly unsettled state, with wide price changes in both directions. When trading began prices of Americans in London had rebounded violently from the low level of yesterday's closing here. Some stocks showed sympathy with this influence in the New York opening dealings, but others suffered from renewed liquidation. Reading was lifted 2 points, St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio and Republic Steel 1¼, and Illinois Central and Pressed Steel Car a point. The first sales of United States Steel were of 6,000 shares at 41½ and 41⅝, compared with 41¼ last night. Canadian Pacific ran off 2½, Northern Pacific 2, Missouri Pacific 1¼ and American Smelting and Tennessee Copper about a point. The dealings were large and there was much confusion in the early situation.

Violent and feverish fluctuations reflected the contest between opposing forces in the market. When support became effective the shorts scrambled to cover and some effervescent upshoots occurred. Prices fell back from the early high level, but met buying again, and a more stable tone developed. There was a decline in isolated stocks, due to the liquidation. Erie first preferred broke 2, and United States Rubber, Mackay companies and International Pump, 3. On the rebound the gain in Reading reached 3½, Baltimore & Ohio, Denver & Rio Grande and American Car 2¼, Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Republic Steel preferred 1¾, Pennsylvania and Great Northern preferred 1⅝, United States Steel, Colorado Fuel and Atlantic Coast line 1½, and several other active stocks a point or more. At the end of the hour the general list was a fraction under the best. Reading had reached 1¼.

The market became firm around the lowest level and attempts were made to bid up prices. The rally carried the market a fraction higher than before, but increased offerings were encouraged and the market weakened. Gains in People's Gas had reached 1¾, Union Pacific 1, Wabash ½. American Smelting yielded 2⅜ below last night, Toledo, St. Louis & Western 1¾, Erie and Southern Railway 1¼ and Reading fell back to 120. The tone was irregular at noon. Bonds were irregular.

An interval of dullness followed a rally in which most of the leaders touched their best prices. United States Steel, Union Pacific and Reading were absorbed in round amounts. Northern preferred advanced 2 points, United States Steel 2¼ and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred declined 3.

The market closed slightly irregular but near the best prices. The repeated resistance shown to declines by the market caused general covering by shorts and prices rose to the top level of the day in the final hour. Reading's gain reached 5, Delaware & Hudson and Republic Steel 3½, the preferred 3¾, United States Steel, General Electric and American Cotton, Electric and Union Pacific, St. Paul, Kansas & Texas, Rock Island preferred, Colorado Fuel, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, Pressed Steel Car and United States Steel preferred 2 to 2¾. There were fractional recessions in the late dealings.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Feb. 24.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 1 point to a decline of 1 point, which was about in line with the cables. Local sentiment was much unsettled by fears of further Wall street liquidation or weakening spot markets and during the early session active months sold off to a net loss of 2@3 points. After rallying 3 or 4 points from the lowest, the market showed the absence of aggressive support and the tone was nervous during the middle of the morning.

FEBRUARY 24, 1909.

The New York and Boston markets did drag through the mud in good style yesterday afternoon, but the turn comes just as quickly on the good stocks. When you own shares with real value back of them and you have bought them right, then you need not worry, for they always go back to their real value. Shattuck, Calumet & Sonora, Butte-Balaklava, Butte-Montana, Butte & Superior and many of the others can be figured in the list of our local good ones. These mines are all selling below their real true value, and therefore cannot easily drop from their present level.

Calumet & Sonora struck it rich in high grade copper only a few days ago and shipments are to begin at once to the smelters. This mine can earn big dividends and an advance of $20.00 a share would be easy for this stock. It closed $14.00 bid, and is worth $80.00 a share.

Butte-Montana is a big proposition, and we can say to our best friends, buy the stock with every dollar you can scrape together. We know what we are doing when we advise the purchase, for the mine is worth at least $3,000,000 on any kind of a copper share market.

Butte-Alex Scott will be the leader of the big true money-makers and it is a safe stock all the time. You certainly own something when you have an interest in this property. Balaklava is a good one, but the Alex Scott starts out with almost as much development work done, just as much ore shown up and at a level where you should again make as much money as those fellows did from their $3.00 mark.

Corbin-Hidden Treasure never looked better, and inasmuch as there is big value back of this one, buy it.

Thursday morning we leave for Butte. And to those who have not brought in their stock and signed proxies, please do so at once. When I return from Butte I want to again be able to tell my customers that I have made good. Stand by me strong on B. & M. and it will not be many months before your profits on this mine will be very near $2,000,000. Show me, if you can, where I have made a misstatement, and also show me on the spot where I have not fought for you. We own a $3,000,000 mine, and all you have to do is to go to Butte and see it. This game is on the square, and we will be only too glad to show you. I also want to thank the people, for in the last few days they have made me feel that they appreciate the work I have done on this proposition. We need not worry on this issue, for the reason that we all got in very near the bottom.

There will be several in this party and some of them you all know. They will tell you what they see in the B. & M. I have been there twice before and have seen all workings in the mine except the 1,200-foot level.

BUSINESS IMPROVING

Washington, Feb. 24.—Opportunity now offers to test the business conditions of the United States at the close of the calendar year 1908 in comparison with corresponding dates at an earlier period, and to thus determine whether or not business conditions have really improved. Some figures just compiled by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor give this opportunity for comparing present conditions with those of a year ago and two years ago.

The conditions in the various industries, occupations, businesses, and groups of people can be measured, at least approximately, by movements of all the articles in which they are in one way or another interested, and in whose production, movement, purchase, sale, or consumption they respectively participate. The quantity of manufacturers' material imported, for example, must give at least an approximate indication of the activity of those of our manufacturers utilizing these various raw materials. If, for example, the quantity of raw silk imported in December, 1908, is twice as great as in December, 1907, and this is the fact, it may be assumed that the great silk manufacturing industries of the country have greatly increased their activity as compared with that of a year ago.

Busier Than a Year Ago.

If the importation of India rubber was two and one-half times as great in December, 1908, as compared with December, 1907, and this is the fact, it may be assumed that the numerous industries which utilize India rubber in their various lines of manufacture are busy, much busier than a year ago. If importations of skins and hides have doubled, and this is the fact, comparing figures of December, 1908, with those of December, 1907; if raw wool importation have increased nearly 150 per cent, and unmanufactured fibres 20 per cent, and this is the fact in each case mentioned, it may be assumed that there is greatly increased activity in all these lines of manufacture. If the importation of diamonds and other precious stones is in value six times as great in December, 1908, as in December, 1907, and this is true, it may be assumed that the class of our population chiefly utilizing these materials of importation are again returning to that general business condition which has permitted them to expend from three to four million dollars a month in recent years for merchandise of this character.

If the number of cars handled by the great car service associations of the country is greater at this time than a year ago, and this is the fact, it may be safely assumed that general business conditions are improving and that the quantity of merchandise being bought and sold and transported is increasing. If the number of building permits and the value of the proposed buildings in the great cities of the country show a marked increase in December, 1908, when compared with December, 1907, these figures may be accepted as a further evidence of the increase of general activities and increased employment among those engaged in building and in supplying material from which buildings are constructed.

Return to Normal Conditions.

All of these cases are shown statistically by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, and in every case they show marked improvement in December, 1908, over December, 1907, and in many cases a return, or at least an approximate return, to normal business conditions in the lines which they respectively represent.

Special compilations made by the bureau of statistics, with the purpose of comparing conditions of imports, of exports, traffic movement, and building improvements at the close of 1908 compared with conditions in the latter part of 1907 and the early part of 1908.

The table of imports shows that importation of crude foodstuffs, which amounted to $16,750,000 in December, 1906, had fallen to $11,000,000 in December, 1907, and returned to $14,500,000 in December, 1908. Foodstuffs, manufactured, which were $26,500,000 in December, 1906, had fallen to $13,500,000 in December, 1907, a fall of practically one-half, and reached $19,500,000 in December, 1908. Manufactures ready for consumption were $31,500,000 in value in December, 1906, $29,750,000 in December, 1907, and $27,000,000 in December, 1908, being the list on the import side to respond to improved business.

Decline in Wheat Exports.

In exports of domestic products, crude foodstuffs show in December, 1906, $15,250,000; in December, 1907, $25,500,000; and in December, 1908, $11,500,000, the fall occurring almost exclusively in wheat, of which the quantity exported in December, 1908, was but 5,750,000 bushels against over 17,000,000 bushels in December, 1907. Foodstuffs, manufactured, in December, 1906, $30,750,000; December, 1907, $29,500,000, and December, 1908, $34,000,000. Crude materials for use in manufacturing, in December, 1906, $81,000,000; December, 1907, $87,500,000; December, 1908, $80,000,000, the fall occurring almost exclusively in cotton, of which the quantity exported in December, 1908, was larger than in December, 1907, but the selling price materially less, the quantity in December, 1908, being 808,000 pounds against 669,000,000 in December, 1907; the value in December, 1908, $72,250,000 against $77,750,000 in December, 1907; an average price per pound in December, 1908, of 8.96 cents against 11.6 cents per pounds in December, 1907.

Growth of Imports.

Taking up a few of the more important articles of imports, the bureau's tables show, apparently, a return to normal conditions in the closing months of 1908. In India rubber, for example, the monthly importations in the first quarter of 1907 showed an average of about 8,000,000 pounds a month, dropping rapidly in the second half of the year, being but $2,250,000 in September, 1907, and $3,500,000 in January, 1908, but returning to 7,000,000 pounds in October, 1908, nearly 9,000,000 pounds in November, and 9,333,333 in December, 1908.

Taking diamonds as an example of luxuries imported, the figures of the bureau show that during the early part of 1907 the value of diamonds imported averaged about $3,500,000 per month and in July, $4,500,000, but in the later months of the year ranged rapidly downward, being in October but $1,500,000; in November, $933,000; in December, $383,000; February, 1908, $283,000; then moving slowly upward, ranging about $1,500,000 per month; March, April, May averaging $500,000; $750,000 in June, $1,333,333 in July and August; averaging $2,000,000 per month in September, October, and November; and $2,250,000 in December, 1908.

PLANS FOR THE CITY HOSPITAL

Committee of Duluth Doctors Approves of One Set.

A committee of Duluth doctors yesterday looked over the three sets of plans for the proposed city hospital, drawn by as many local architects. Two of the plans were laid aside as not following out proper specifications, but the third set the medical men decided would answer the purpose, after a few modifications had been made. This does not necessarily mean that the plans will be accepted, however. More drawings may be asked for. The hospital situation has not yet reached a stage where bids may be called for for the construction of the building.

CAR FERRY MILWAUKEE AGROUND ALL NIGHT.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 24.—The big car ferry Milwaukee, Capt. Lyman, of the Grand Trunk-Milwaukee Car Ferry company, which went ashore at North Point last night on its run from Grand Haven to Milwaukee, is still aground. A powerful tug which went to her assistance could not move the vessel. The steamer is said to be in no danger, as there is little sea.

WOMAN IS ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF ARSON.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mrs. Schoessow was acquitted on the charge of arson. The jury did not leave the box before returing the verdict. The defendant was charged with an attempt to burn the store of John Skala, over which Mr. and Mrs. Skala live. All the testimony was of a circumstantial nature and was controversed by an alibi by Mrs. Schoessow which the state could not break down.

ORDERS NEW JURY PANEL

Judge in Standard Oil Case Quashes Farmer Offering.

Insists Twelve Men Must Include Fair City Proportion.

Chicago, Feb. 24.—The retrial of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was unexpectedly delayed when Judge Anderson quashed the panel of 150 veniremen because of what he considered the singularly large proportion of farmers thereon.

It was a so-called farmers' jury which brought in the verdict making Judge Landis' fine of $29,240,000 in the original case possible, and John S. Miller of the defense, was prompt in calling the courts' attention to the fact that the panel then present for the new trial contained but three Chicagoans, although 60 per cent of the population within the jurisdiction of the court lives within Cook county.

"It looks like design, or if not design, it looks like a strange coincidence" commented Judge Anderson, whereupon T. C. McMillan and R. C. Jones, the jury commissioners insisted with vigor that the latter was the case, that the panel had been drawn exactly as in other cases. This the court later admitted to be a fact.

The jury commission was ordered to produce a new panel tomorrow.

the banks of this state, only $9,000,000 of credits appear upon the tax rolls.

Chairman Dalzell of the tax committee and Representative Washburn also approved the majority report, and Representatives Thayer and Haugland argued against its constitutionality.

If the judiciary committee holds the bill constitutional, it will be considered by the house in the regular order.

A delegation of range business men, including Solomon Sax and Charles Jesmore of Eveleth, John Costin, Jr., of Virginia and F. B. Myers of Biwabik, are here today urging an amendment to the bill by Representative Austin of Chisholm allowing villages to take in outside territory. The range towns want this in order to take certain mines that will help pay village taxes.

When the bill passed the house an amendment was proposed by Representative Wallace of Minneapolis and adopted, limiting the territory to be absorbed to half a mile. This amendment the range folks consider objectionable, and the delegation stated that the bill will do them little good unless the amendment can be removed.

The senate spent most of the morning debating over whether the Swanson bill against the tuberculin test for cattle should be killed, as the committee report proposed, or placed on general orders, as a minority report proposed. The result was a victory for the minority report, and the bill will be considered later by the senate in committee of the whole.

The house passed a joint resolution by Representative L. H. Johnson, asking Admiral "Bob" Evans to talk to the legislature in joint session, tomorrow noon.

Senator Elwell offered a bill similar to one introduced in the house by Representative Ferguson, accepting for the state a demonstration and experimental forest for the State university, 2,200 acres of land, near Cloquet, in the Fond du Lac Indian reservation. The land is given by the government, certain lumbermen paying $1.25 an acre for it, and the state is asked only to maintain it and to buy 480 acres of Indian allotments, scattered through the forest area.

Senators McColl and Hardy of St. Paul introduced in the senate this morning the bill against the Armour packing plant, prohibiting its location within five miles of the state university or state fair.

The senate passed a joint memorial offered by the road and bridge committee, asking congress to appropriate $50,000,000 for road work.

Senator Weisse offered a bill allowing state banks to have savings departments.

Senator Farrington proposes to prohibit the killing of game in national forest reserves and lands designated by the state game and fish commission as breeding grounds for game, in a bill offered today.

The senate bridge and road committee offered a state highway commission bill, providing for a state highway commission and a county superintendent of highways to oversee in co-operation all road work. The state commission is to be appointed by the governor and the superintendent by the county board.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM...

COWBOY BREAKS LEGS.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—Martin Basting, a cowboy employed at the stock yards in South St. Paul, was pulled from his horse Thursday while attempting to lasso a steer, and both his legs were fractured, as he was dragged around the yard among the stampeded cattle.

MEDICAL INSPECTION

Experiment Will be Tried in the City Schools.

Doctors Will Give Their Services for the Purpose.

Medical inspection of schools, absolutely without cost to the city, will be given in Duluth for a month or two, long enough to demonstrate the practicability of the idea, if the board of education is willing to see the experiment carried out.

A committee appointed by the Women's council to investigate the matter of medical inspection in the public schools held a meeting yesterday afternoon, and decided to ask the board of education to appoint a committee to meet with the Women's council committee, to confer in regard to the proposition.

Among those present at yesterday's meeting were: City Health Commissioner F. J. Patton, Dr. E. L. Tuohy, Dr. J. M. Robinson, C. L. Rakowsky and Mrs. John McLeod. The physicians said that to prove the practicability of the plan, the medical men of the city were willing to contribute their services, free of charge, for a period long enough to demonstrate the need of medical inspection. The proposition will be put to the board of education at its next meeting.

There seems to be a general public sentiment in favor of an inspection such as proposed, and it is expected the board of education will be willing to see the experiment carried out. Chicago and various other large cities through the country have medical inspection of schools. Health Commissioner Patton, and Duluth doctors in general, are enthusiastically in favor of it.

FREEDOM SHORT LIVED.

Released From Jail for Selling Liquor, is Rearrested.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 24.—(Special to The Herald.)—George Dean enjoyed his freedom only forty-eight hours after being released from serving a long term sentence for peddling liquor in this county. Dean is now charged with the robbery of the depot at Horace, ten miles southwest of here. He is claimed to have made the trip there during the night and stolen a handcar. So far the officials have been unable to secure the loot.

Scrappy Time Over Grain Buying by the Line Elevators.

Senate Sends Women's Suffrage Bill Back to the Committee.

Bjorge Granted Another Hearing on Ore Tonnage Tax Bill.

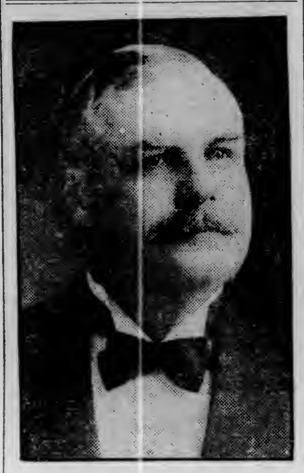

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house this morning definitely killed the initiative and referendum bill by the adoption of a report of the judiciary committee recommending it for indefinite postponement. The fight was on a minority report made by J. N. Johnson, author of the bill, and Representatives Carley, Haugland, Burnquist and Davies, which was defeated, 45 to 68.

Representative Johnson explained his bill, in urging the adoption of the minority report, stating that "it simply means popular rule and the development of pure democracy."

Representatives Loheck and Campbell, the former a Prohibitionist, made speeches for it, and Representatives McKenzie, Lennon and Spooner spoke against it. Mr. Spooner said that he had been unable to discover any real demand for this system, and Representative McKenzie said he was satis-

BUY FARM LAND, PAY IN COTTON

Plan Proposed to Allow Negroes to Earn Homes.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 25.—A plan for the material uplift of the negroes of Georgia, which comes entirely from negro initiative, was announced today. The plan contemplates buying 20,000 acres of farm land, dividing it into 400 farms of fifty acres each and allowing tenants to pay for this land in cotton.

A period of seven years is to be given each tenant to buy his land, paying 1,000 pounds of cotton per year. This amount is said to equal about the average rental rate now paid by good negro tenants for their farm lands.

It is planned to call a meeting of negroes in Albany, Ga., April 15, to put this plan into effect.

The combination represents a total net capitalization of over $316,000,000. A small group of ten stockholders controls 60 per cent of the outstanding voting stock of the American Tobacco company, through which company the entire combination is controlled."

READY FOR THE BATTLE

Lively Fight Expected in Both Houses Over Normal School.

Express Companies Oppose Tax Increase and Reduction in Rates.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn. Feb. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The normal school contest is now ready for open battle upon the floors of both houses, and the normal school lobby, consisting of active, hustling and deeply interested citizens of Cass Lake, Bemidji, Thief River Falls, Park Rapids and Warren, is on the ground ready for the fray.

The normal school committees of both houses acted on the matter yesterday afternoon with different results.

The senate committee voted to send out the Bemidji bill and the Cass Lake bill without recommendation, letting the senate decide between the two towns.

The house committee voted to send out the so-called "general bill," leaving the location of the school to the state normal school board, recommending it to pass. Representative P. H. McGarry of Walker, who has been the chief scout for the Cass Lake site, will submit a minority report, asking that the Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 25.—Propelling and controlling submerged torpedoes by wireless telegraph, hurling instruments of destruction against hostile battleships without the sacrifice of a man on the part of the naval power equipped with the new terror—all this is made possible, it is claimed, by the invention of a resident of Los Angeles, Carl Abrahamson.

Abrahamson is engaged in his laboratory in San Diego, perfecting the details of the wireless terror for the use of the United States navy department, it is asserted.

Nearly a month ago, Abrahamson, in the presence of two attorneys, two naval officers and two other naval experts from the department at Washington conducted experiments with his invention which were successful.

Washington, Feb. 25.—In an appeal for an adequate appropriation for the aeronautic work of the signal corps sent to members of congress in a communication from James Means of Boston, it is declared that if such an appropriation is not made by the Sixtieth congress "it will be nothing less than a calamity."

After stating that the first use to which the motor aeroplane will be put is that of a signalling scout, the letter points out that the only thing needed in this country for the rapid development of this military instrument is money.

Defendant Tells Judge to Let Prosecutor Go on.

Jurist, However, Insists on Sticking to Main Issue.

Governor Patterson of Tennessee May Also Give Testimony.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 25.—It was thought last week that the limit in crowds had been reached in attendance at the Cooper-Sharp trial for the murder of Former Senator E. W. Carmack, but the throng that surrounded the jail building almost before dawn today, made the other crowds look like a mere handful of casual passersby. The deputies, at times, had to use force to keep the men and women from pushing pellmell into the courtroom.

The cause of the excitement was a rumor that Governor Patterson would take the stand on behalf of the defendants as soon as Col. Cooper was excused. As the testimony goes on, the name of the governor is being mentioned more and more freely, hence the public accepted the rumor as a fact and determind to be present when the chief executive was called to testify on

ALL UP TO TWO FOES

Foraker and Clark Will Swing Steel Merger Report.

Absorption Sanctioned by Roosevelt May be Held Violation.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Upon Senators Foraker of Ohio and Clark, Democrat, of Arkansas, depends whether the judiciary committee of the senate will declare the absorption of the Tennesssee Coal & Iron company by the Steel corporation to have been in violation of the Sherman anti-trust laws, and whether President Roosevelt was authorized by law to sanction the merger.

The committee was in session for more than two hours, having under consideration the report of the majority of the sub-committee which investigated the merger, and by a vote of 3 to 2, condemned the merger and the president's action in permitting it. Finally it was agreed to meet again Monday and vote on the report.

Senators Kittridge, Culberson and Overman, who signed the majority report, claim that the vote of the committee will be at least 7 to 6, and possibly 8 to 5, for its adoption. This claim is opposed by Senators Clark of

CODE OF ETHICS FOR STREET CAR HOG URGED AT NATIONAL EDUCATION MEETING

Chicago, Feb. 25.—A course of ethics for the street car hog was recommended at the annual meeting of the department of superintendents of the National Education association by Miss Ella Lyman Cabot of the Massachusetts board of education.

When the selfish man who has fixed himself comfortably in a car with his barricade of bundles around him, sees other persons get on and look around for seats, he undergoes a peculiar mental process," said Miss Cabot. "He begins to figure out how he can pretend he is doing the right thing. He thinks to himself: 'There are other seats further down the aisle.

"'I can't help it if there are not seats enough for all of us.

"'It is just as easy for them to stand up as it is for me to hold my bundles on my lap.

"'I got here first, anyway. If they had got here first I wouldnt have complained at having to stand up.

"'I guess if they want seats they know enough to ask for them.'

"These answers all illustrate the tendency of the selfish person to try to deceive himself. He should take up the study of ethics."

Miss Cabot then took up another branch of her discourse with aphoristic grace:

"The modern tendency toward confused thinking is a mark of moral degeneracy.

"We need a pure truth law as much as we do a pure food law.

"It is better to be honest in your dishonesty than not to be honest at all.

"Our modern long words tend to confuse thinking.

"It is never right to worry.

"Practically everybody will lie in a sudden answer to a sudden question."

LIQUOR ISSUE TIES UP FINAL ACTION ON THE PENAL CODE BILL

Washington, Feb. 25.—The liquor question promises to tie up for some time final action on the penal code bill. That and the provisions relating to the race question constitute the only important elements of difference. The liquor provisions, the purpose of which is to regulate interstate traffic in liquor, were originally in a bill introduced in the senate by Senator Knox but not passed.

The measure was added in the house to the penal code bill, providing that any officer or employe of a common carrier, who shall knowingly deliver any intoxicating liquor to any but the person to whom it is consigned, or to any fictitious person, or person under a fictitious name, shall be subject to fine and imprisonment; that it shall be unlawful for any common carrier to collect any part of the purchase price of any intoxicating liquor, or to ship any package containing intoxicating liquor, unless the package is labeled, so as to show the name of the consignee, the nature of the contents and the quantity.

HONDURAS HELPS SOUTH CITIES TO COMPETE WITH WEST PACKERS

Tegucigalpa, Spanish Honduras, Feb. 25.—The government has granted George Blardone the right to export free of duty 2,000 head of cattle, with reduction of duty on additional shipments to one dollar per head, the concessions to cover a period of fifteen years. This concession also exempts from local duties and grants the privilege of pasturage on unoccupied government lands. About 25,000 acres of public lands, in three or more places along the north coast, is thus specified.

Started Some Time Ago.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 25.—Concessions by the Honduran congress in the way of reducing export duties on cattle, granting free pasturage, etc., is believed here to be the outcome of a movement which was started several months ago to import cattle from Central America through the gulf ports. At the time the movement was started, the promoters announced their intention of erecting abbattoirs in various Southern cities, and competing with the Western packing and slaughter houses.

MANAGERS SUMMONED

The Wisconsin Legislative Committee Decides to Hear Them.

Senator Blaine Refuses to Accept Order to Appear.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 25.—Upon the convening of the senatorial primary inquisition today, Assemblyman Hambrecht informed the committee that Senator Blaine had refused to accept the summons served upon him to appear Friday with his records. This fact was noted upon the subpoena.

Assemblyman Ingalls moved that the managers of F. E. McGovern, W. H. Hatton and S. A. Cook, Republican senatorial candidates, be summoned at once, and this brought on considerable argument. Mr. Hambrecht said it would be unwise to have just one man investigated, when the time limit arrived. He believed the present policy of the investigation meant a "whitewash pure and simple."

"Unless we can have specific charges of corruption," he continued, "our efforts are purposeless."

He believed the present plan would keep the committee in session till July 1. Senator Husting thought the reason for a thorough investigation of Stephenson was because he was the Republican senatorial nominee. Replying to a question by Mr. Bray, Chairman Marsh said he had enough confidence in the legislature to believe that there would be no election of a United States senator until the investigation is finished.

Senator Morris said there will be a vacancy in the United States senate March 4, and added, "Unless this investigation is finished by that time or the investigation of Senator Stephenson is finished by that time, the public good will suffer." He believed the completion of the investigation of Senator Stephenson to be the most logical method of procedure.

Mr. Bray observed that the committee was getting to be more or less a joke before the people.

"The question is whether the corrupt practices act has been violated," said Senator Morris, "not whether all candidates are guilty, but whether any one of them has been guilty."

Assemblyman Whitman held the condition analagous to a contested election.

Mr. Ingalls' motion to summon the campaign managers of the candidates named finally prevailed, 5 to 3, the senate committee members voting against the motion.

State Chairman Edmonds, resuming his testimony, said he did not keep any account of receipts and disbursements. He did not realize at the time that it was necessary, although he assumed Mr. Sackett was seeking one.

A detailed account of moneys distributed by Stephenson managers showed that assemblymen, state employes and federal office holders were workers and as such were recipients of funds. The list included Henry Overbeck, former game warden, O. C. Wellensgard, Green Lake assemblyman; T. J. Sexton, assistant fire marshal, Rockdlint, United States marshal at Madison; Hugh Lewis, doorkeeper at Washington; Assemblyman L. F. Reynolds, Former State Senator J. J. McGillivray, Speaker L. H. Bancroft, J. W. Stone, state game warden and others. The amounts range from $25 to $3,000. There are many entries described as "touch by old soldiers $2." Other items read "touches by heelers, $2," touch by lesser lights $2," "trip through the ghetto, (Milwaukee) by three men cost $35."

RADIOTHOR DISCOVERED

Physicans' Convention Hears of Cheaper Substitute for Radium.

Enables Photographer to Take Pictures Through Stove Lid.

New Orleans, Feb. 25.—Dr. E. Stillman Bailey, a prominent member of the staff of Hahnemann Medical college, Chicago, in an address before the Southern Homeopathic convention, announced that he has discovered a substitute for radium, available in such large quantities that it will be almost as cheap as ordinary lead.

"I call it radiothor," said Dr. Bailey. "It generates the purple ray, the same which Finsen used so successfully in treating lupus, and which is given off by radium. The substance resembles kid leather and is made from pitch-blende, of which twenty tons have been discovered near a Colorado mine, with twenty tons more in sight under the surface.

"One of the most curious experiences with the new substance was the taking of a photograph through a stove lid on which radiothor had been spread. The powerful rays of this element enabled the light to pass through the iron plate, thus permitting a photograph of a number of pennies and other articles on the opposite side to be taken.

"The basis is pitch-blende, but with this element are mingled others which I do not care to disclose at this time. Some of them are so rare that we keep them in a safety deposit vault. The new element, while far from being inexpensive, will be within the reach of everybody who needs it for treatment. Its action is quite as efficacious as that of radium. There is not enough radium in the whole world to treat all the people who need its curative properties."

FARGO FILTRATION PLANT.

Voters to Decide Upon Making Expenditure at April Election.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fargo voters will decide April 5, at the aldermanic elections, whether the city is to issue $100,000 bonds for a filtration plant in connection with the municipality owned waterworks system. The plant is to be moved to another location and the council asks for authority to expend $100,000 on a mechanical filtration system. The source of the supply will still be from the Red river.

Efforts to have test artesian wells put down have not succeeded, as there is a sentiment that a sufficient supply could not be secured. The prohibitory expense makes it impossible to secure a water supply from the Minnesota lakes, where the best quality would be obtainable.

RAILROAD NEWS

AN ALASKA FOR DULUTH

Northwest Canada Will be What Alaska Was for Seattle.

General Manager of Erie Dispatch Hands Duluth a Bouquet.

W. R. Crow, general manager of the Erie Dispatch, with headquarters in Chicago, was in Duluth today, looking over the railroad situation. Mr. Crow gets to Duluth about once in five years, and every time he comes here he makes a thorough investigation of the local railroad situation.

"If they take the tariff off, the trade part of the country will do the same for Duluth as the Alaskan trade did for Seattle," said Mr. Crow. "It would make Duluth one of the biggest cities in this state, for you would be the gateway for the immense trade to that great area of Western Canada.

"I was in Duluth twenty-six years ago. At that time if a man wanted to cross the street he stood and contemplated the other side of the street for a while, looked at his feet, and wondered if his business were worth while. The streets were veritable mud holes. I used to stay in my room nights. I was afraid to go out after dark. Duluth was a pretty tough town in those days. Today you have a city that is going ahead in the railroad business and some day it will be next to Chicago, one of the big traffic points of the Northwest.

"We are still waiting, in the railroad business—waiting for better business. It was coming after election, but it hasn't come yet. We are still hoping that it will come. It is only a question of time until the big business of the country begins to move. I have talked with lumbermen in the southern part of the United States, and they told me that they had enough orders for lumber to increase the lumber business very greatly, but these orders they are not allowed to ship at the present time. I think that it is the same in many other lines of business. There are many orders in the hands of the manufacturers, but they are being held. When these orders are shipped, the business of the railroads of the country will be materially increased, and increased very quickly.

"The passenger business of the railroads of the country will surpass the business of last year. It is not as good as it was in 1907, of course, for that was a very big year, but it is better than it was last year, and there is a very good indication that it will show improvement."

PASSENGER BUSINESS GOOD.

Railroad Man Says Southwestern Travel is Very Heavy.

E. Hinckley, passenger agent of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, with headquahters at Minneapolis, was in Duluth today. Mr. Hinckley says that the best evidence that Duluth is prosperous is that many of the citizens of this city are going to the coast. Duluth has sent more people to the coast than any Western city of its size, according to Mr. Hinckley.

Mr. Hinckley says the movement of homeseekers toward the Southwest is something immense. On Feb. 6, 106 trains of homeseekers moved out of Kansas City. They were on their way to the Panhandle country of Texas, the Gulf country, New and Old Mexico, Arizona and Idaho.

The coast traffic is much heavier this year than last, according to Mr. Hinckley, which is always a very good indication that the country is feeling prosperous. Passenger men are feeling well and believe that the freight traffic of the country will increase in the near future.

SEAWEED A FERTILIZER.

Seaweed is a valuable fertilizer. The Irish peasants prefer it to manure, and the farmers of the Orkney Islands formerly let farmyard manure accumulate unused on account of its inferiority to seaweed as a fertilizer, says the New York Sun.

The seaweed that is brought ashore or drifts there is dried and burned and the ashes are spread over the land. The ashes contain a good proportion of potash and phosphates, and some kinds of weed also yield nitrates. These three substances are the life of vegetation, and for this reason the ashes of seaweed are an ideal food for crops.

Some years ago a French sea captain attempted to organize a company to send ships to the Sargasso sea, where they could easily collect big cargoes of drift weed and bring it to France, to be burned for the fertilizing ashes. Capitalists told him, however, that they did not think it would pay to carry the weed so far, and the money was not raised.

It is asserted by some authorities that the great deposits of nitrate of soda which are sent from Chile to all parts of Europe and the United States, to be spread over the farm lands, were formed by the decay of huge masses of seaweed when the land was sunk under the sea. Undecomposed parts of seaweed, it is said, are still found there.

The attention of the Cape Colony government was recently called to the fact that very large quantities of seaweed are constantly being washed ashore along the northwest coast, and at last accounts the government had sent for samples of the weed to determine its value as a fertilizer.

Sir Humphrey Davy was one of the first to recommend seaweed as a fertilizer, about a century ago. For generations the inhabitants of the Channel Islands have gained a fair living by collecting and burning the weed and selling the ashes as manure. These ashes are also largely used in the British Isles and along the Norwegian and French coats.

The publications of the United States agricultural department say that the use of seaweed as a fertilizer is increasing in this country; that for long stretches of the New England coast the weed is utilized by the farmers for fifteen to twenty miles inland, and that it is especially favored for the stimulation of clover fields. Rye Beach is almost always strewn with the weed, and few lands ever show so luxuriant a growth of red clover as those in the neighborhood of this beach.

The seaweed thrown up on the shores in the neighborhood of Cape Town has long been regarded as an expensive nuisance. The city government has for years been paying teamsters to collect the stuff, haul it away and bury it. The amount of weed thus disposed of has been about 1,500 tons a year.

The city authorities have now seen a new light and are spreading the news among the farmers that theweed is a very valuable fertilizer.

REAL HEROISM DEMANDED.

Cleveland Leader: He had been courting a girl for a long time. It happened on Sunday night after church. They were sitting on the sofa, and she looked with ineffable tenderness into his noble blue eyes.

"Tom," she murmured with a tremor in her voice, "didn't you tell me once you would be willing to do any act of heroism for my sake?"

"Yes, Mary, and I gladly reiterate that statement now," he replied, in confident tones. "No noble Roman of old was fired with a loftier ambition, a braver resolution than I."

"Well, Tom, I want you to do something really heroic for me."

"Speak, darling! What is it?"

"Ask me to be your wife. We've been fooling long enough."

In Suits It's The "Cut" That "Counts"

The prime factors of Garment Making are: "Lines," "Workmanship" and "Material." Of these, correct and modish "Lines," or the Perfect Silhouette is what every maker aims at. Many fail, and few succeed. It is in this "Flawless Outline" that Gidding Garments excel.

Manufacturers are often indignant at us, and complain that "Giddings" have their own ideas about every little detail.

We have a widespread reputation for being "Fussy" and "Exacting" about the inner construction, and small details of our Garments. But we are rather proud of the reputation, for it is the foundation of our Success, and the Keynote of our Specialty Business.

Our Duluth and Cincinnati buyers are now spending much time in the Fashion centers studying the Styles and having Garments worked out to their entire satisfaction. Thus Gidding prices are commonplace enough—but in Garments, far from it!

PARTIALLY IN STATUES.

"Under my window in Boston was dedicated the other day a statue of Gen. Banks," writes Edwin D. Mead in the Outlook. "Still nearer my window is the great equestrian statue of Gen. Hooker, quite dwarfing the modest figures of Daniel Webster and Horace Mann further back in the State House yard.

"Now I have a very considerable respect for Gen. Banks and Gen. Hooker, but I cannot forget that there is no statue in Boston of Emerson or Lowell or Whittier or Longfellow, whom there is vastly higher reason, as there would be vastly greater benefit, for Boston to honor.

"There are statues of Gen. Glover and Col. Cass, of whose services not one reader in a thousand could give the slightest account, but there is no memorial of John Adams or John Quincy Adams, the two great Massachusetts presidents of the United States.

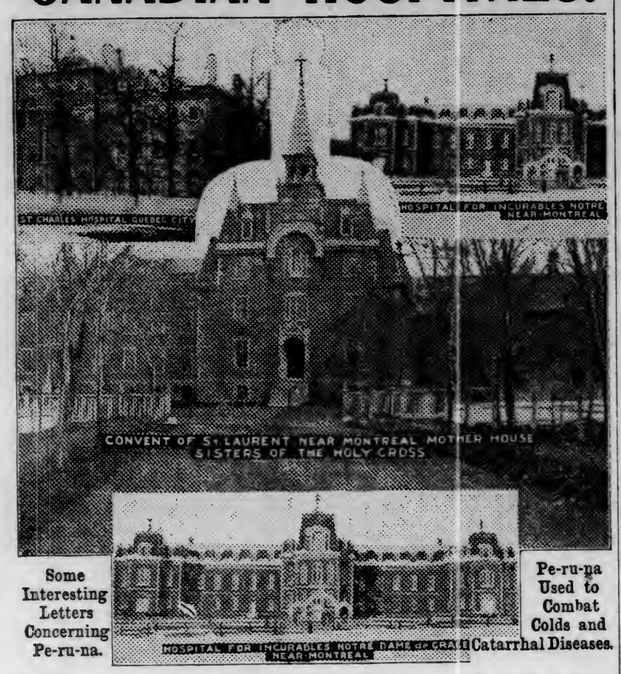

"The streets and squares of Washington swarm with statues, but it is no exaggeration to say that three-quarters of them are of generals and admirals, and most of these men of whom even the high school boys of the city know but little.

"There is next to nothing among them to remind the visitor from Mars or from Maryland, that the nation of Washington and Jefferson and Franklin—whose judgment of war and the proper prominence of the soldier in their new republic is remembered by some of us—ever produced a poet or historian, a scholar or a teacher, a painter or sculptor, a philosopher or philanthropist, a statesman or a man of science worthy of notice," or that up to date it really honors, enough to spend any money to show it, any vocation to save the warrior's. It is the measure of our barbarism."

Recent geologists have confirmed the statement of Louis Agassiz that the whole of New England was once covered with an ice cap a mile thick.

Some Interesting Letters Concerning Pe-ru-na.

Pe-ru-na Used to Combat Colds and Catarrhal Diseases.

ST. CHARLES Hospital, Quebec City. One of our sisters, who commenced to take Peruna, has improved and will continue to take it. Some others are trying it also. Sr. Ste. Marie, Superior.

CONVENT of St. Lourent, near Montreal, Mother House Sisters of the Holy Cross.

After using Peruna for two or three months, several members of the community have experienced such good effects that they can recommend its use to others. Sisters of Holy Cross.

HOSPITAL for Incurables, Notre Dame de Grace, near Montreal.

Notre Dame de Grace Hospital for Incurables, having used Peruna for several months, recommends it highly as an excellent tonic, and it is with pleasure that we add our testimonial to the others.

HAVING used Peruna for the past few months, for our sick and poor, we are happy to say that it has given us great satisfaction. The Sisters of the Good Shepherd, Montreal.

After a continued use of the remedy, this institution has found no reason to change its good opinion of the remedy and expresses its satisfaction in the following terms:

"WE found Peruna a relief in several cases.

"We can say it is a good tonic and we are very thankful." Sisters of the Good Shepherd.

One of the many hospitals which have found Peruna of value in treating old and obstinate cases of catarrh is the Hospital of St. John, who writes as follows:

"WE are happy to tell you that your Peruna has given us satisfaction. Three patients have tried it, one 68 years old. Renoul Dupuis, afflicted with catarrh, is much relieved, more than he has been for a number of years.

"A young girl, 15 years old, had an obstinate cough, which half a bottle of Peruna caused to disappear.

"As to myself, two bottles have convinced me that Peruna is magnificent as a tonic. Before the treatment I could not walk for a quarter of an hour without experiencing much fatigue. Now I can walk a mile easily.

"Through these three cases we desire to make known to the public the efficiency of your remedy."

TO TAKE UP COURT CASES

January Term of District Court is Nearing an End.

March Calendar Will Not Be as Heavy as Expected.

The January term of district court is nearing an end and as many of the cases remaining on the calendar as possible will be tried during the few days remaining before next Wednesday, when the March term opens.

Tomorrow the trial of court cases will be reached, with Judge Ensign and Judge Cant presiding. Judge Dibell will probably be engaged with jury cases for the remainder of the term. The case of the Northern Hardware company against R. A. Torrey, which is on before Judge Ensign today, will probobly be concluded this evening and the trial of jury cases before Judge Cant is also expected to be concluded. No more jury cases will be called for trial before them and the court cases will be taken up.

On account of the lengthy calendars and the congestion of jury cases, very few court cases have been tried during the last two or three terms of court and the list of court cases is exceedingly heavy.

The March calendar will not be as heavy in point of number of cases as was expected, but the term is expected to be long drawn out, nevertheless, on account of the importance of many of the cases and the prospects for long drawn out trials. The continued list comprises ninety-seven cases, of which sixty-eight are for trial by jury, twenty-five regular court cases and four divorce cases.

But for the delays occasioned by Judge Cant's absence during the January term, when he was at Grand Rapids conducting the election contest hearing, the calendar would have been cleaned up during the January term and very few cases would have gone over to the March term. As it is, conditions are not as bad as was expected and the comparatively small list of new cases relieves the apprehension with which the prospects for an exceedingly heavy calendar for the March term were viewed.

STOCK DEAL BEFORE COURT

M. M. Gasser Seeks to Recover $1,500 Paid for Stock.

A stock deal, in which M. M. Gasser and J. J. Wall are involved, is occupying the attention of Judge Dibell and a jury in district court today. Mr. Gasser seeeks to recover $1,500 he says he paid for a half interest in 10,000 shares of Consolidated Copper stock, in February, 1907. He says Mr. Wall misrepresented facts to him. Mr. Wall claims Mr. Gasser is "hedging."

Mr. Gasser and Mr. Wall tell conflicting stories. Mr. Gassre says Mr. Wall approached him Feb. 2, 1907, or thereabouts, and told him that he knew where he could obtain 10,000 shares of Consolidated Copper for 20 cents a share. Mr. Gasser says Mr. Wall asked him to go in with him in the deal and he consented. He says he paid Mr. Wall $1,500 and he afterwards learned that Mr. Wall had only paid that ambunt for the 10,000 shares. He says on discovering the fact, he offered back his interest and asked for his money back, but it was refused.

Mr. Wall says there was no partnership deal at all. He says the stock was being subscribed at $1 a share at the time and he told Mr. Gasser that he knew where he could get some cheaper and would sell him 5,000 shares at 30 cents a share. He claims it was a straight sale and Mr. Gasser had nothing to do with the deal by which he bought 10,000 shares from C. O. Baldwin.

A Common Cold.

We claim that if catching cold could be avoided some of the most dangerous and fatal diseases would never be heard of. A cold often forms a culture bed for germs of infectious diseases. Consumption, pneumonia, diphtheria and scarlet fever, four of the most dangerous and fatal diseases, are of this class. The culture bed formed by the cold favors the development of the germs of these diseases, that would not otherwise find lodgment. There is little danger, however, of any of these diseases being contracted when a good expectorant cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It cleans out these culture beds that favor the development of the germs of these diseases. That is why this remedy has proved so universally successful in preventing pneumonia. It not only cures your cold quickly but minimizes the risk of contracting these dangerous diseases. For sale by all druggists.

Several Curling Events May Go Over Until Next Year.

Victory of Hall's Rink Counts in Three Events.

It now looks as though a number of the curling events would have to go over until next year. Every night there are from one to three sheets of ice vacant and in order that the events might be finished up every sheet should be working all the time.

There are any number of games posted on the boards each day, but when it comes to play a number of the rinks forget they have games on and the ice is left vacant, although reserved for those who forget. The games committee will, within a day or so, post a notice to the effect that those rinks that do not play their scheduled games will be thrown out of the squad and the other rinks allowed to play it down, unless either one side or the other forfeits.

The season is getting short, play in the different events is far behind and the different squads are being urged to get their games played off.

At the rink Saturday, play for points will begin. Contrary to an announcement made last night, play will not be continued through any certain dates, but will be on Saturday and the Saturday following. All those who wish to play this game are urged to enter.

The ice last night was in the best condition of the year and four games were played.

J. F. Catlin defeated John Oldham by a score of 11 to 8 in the Manley-McLennan event. R. D. Bradley was defeated by Frank Currier by a score of 14 to 11. In the Bagley event, S. W. Rhodes May Come Here.

Billy Rhodes, who claims the welterweight championship of the world, never having been defeated at the welterweight limit, is coming to Duluth. A friend of his in this city has received a letter from Rhodes, in which he states that he is coming here looking for matches. He wants to meet Curly Ulrich.

Rhodes defeated Rube Ferns, welterweight championship of the world at one time, has knocked out Tony Caponi, fought a 20-round draw with Joe Walcott, drew with Billy Papke, and later lost to the ex-champion middleweight. Rhodes is a great fighter, and if he comes to Duluth he will probably have no trouble in finding an opponent

TURK WILL COME HERE

Yousiff Mahmout Will Meet Fred Beell in Duluth.

Whitehead Will Give Exhibition Sparring Match With Potts.

Yousiff Mahmout, the great Turkish wrestler, who in three weeks will attempt to win the world's wrestling championship from Champion Frank Gotch, will wrestle Fred Beell, the Wisconsin marvel, at the Temple Roller rink, next Thursday night.

Upon the night when the great Bulgarian appears in this city, one of the best sport cards ever offered to a Duluth audience will be put on the boards. In addition to the great match between Mahmout and Beell, Walter Whitehead and Jimmy Potts of Minneapolis, one of the best welterweights in the country, will appear in exhibition. Another exhibition bout will also be staged.

In casting about for a man to attempt to wrest the championship from Gotch, Yousiff Mahmut was brought to the United States and pitted against the best men that could be found. In quick succession, Mahmout defeated Tom Jenkins, the man Gotch won the championship from, Charles Olson, Leo Pardello, Americus, Henry Ordeman and Hjalmar Lundin, the Swedish champion. Beell is the only man outside of Tom Jenkins, that has put Champion Gotch upon his back, and in securing him as opponent of Mahmout, Duluth will be assured of one of the best wrestling matches ever held in the West.

At the present time Yousiff Mahmout is matched with Gotch for the world's championship. They will wrestle in Chicago or Kansas City some time in March. The match with Beell will be the last big match that Mahmout will engage in before meeting Gotch.

Men who have seen both Gotch and Mahmout in action, say that if there is any wrestler living that can defeat the champion, Mahmout is the man. He is said to be fully as fast as Gotch, and Duluth fans know what that means, and he is possessed of a tremendous strength.

Mahmout wrestles in his bare feet. There is an object in this. His manager has been coaching him against the dreaded toe hold of Gotch. It is more difficult to obtain a toe hold upon a man who doesn't wear shoes, and for this reason in every match that Mahmout has wrestled in this country he has appeared without the regulation shoes.

When the Turk made his initial appearance in the United States at Madison Square Garden, New York, with Tom Jenkins as an opponent, the men at the ringside laughed in derision at the big foreigner when he appeared without shoes. He quickly beat Jenkins in two straight falls, and the laughs of the wise ones were turned to admiration for the ability of the Turk.

ANOTHER GREAT RUNNER IS FOUND

Indian Said to Have a Wonderful Record, Goes East.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Feb. 25.—Albert Wahbunoosa, an Indian, who is said to be a phenomenal runner, was found in the woods at the Garden river Canadian settlement, below the Soo. He left last night for New York with Guy M. Dailey, a newspaper man from Pittsburg, to make arrangements to meet Longboat. He has a record of 26 miles, 385 yards, in 2 hours, 50 minutes, and he finished fresh. It is believed with proper management he will be able to break all records. He will meet Dorando or Hayes in St. Paul soon.

Is After Ulrich.

Herbert Catherwood of Minneapolis, who claims that he can make 133 pounds, is upon the trail of Curly Ulrich. He claims that he has $500 backing for a match with Ulrich, and he issues a challenge to any boxer in the Northwest.

that arose following the independence of Panama and the creation in that republic of the canal zone.

Congress was called in special session two days ago to consider this treaty as well as other matters of importance. Submitting the agreement for ratification by congress, the president says it has the full approval of the government.

The treaty was signed last month in Washington by Secretary of State Root and the Colombian and the Panaman ministers. It was ratified by the Panaman congress Jan. 27 and by the American senate yesterday.

McKAY CASE IS DISMISSED

City Will Not Proceed Against Its Former Veterinarian.

The City of Duluth officially dropped its proceedings against Dr. John McKay and his associates in the Duluth Horse company, H. R. Elliott and John Runquist, by filing a dismissal of the action brought to recover the price of horses sold to the city by the company through Dr. McKay, who was city veterinarian at the time.

The dismissal states that the action was compromised for $195, which was the profit derived from the sales by the company. The case grew out of charges made against Dr. McKay by other horse dealers of the city and was for about $2,000, the full price of horses purchased for the city from his own company by Dr. McKay.

COLOM WILL BE TRIED IN MARCH

Case of Man Accused of Murder Goes Over to Next Term.

Frank Colom will not be tried for murder at this term of district court. He will probably be placed on trial very early in the March term, however, as he has been in jail since early November, and the indictment was returned against him by the January grand jury.

It was expected that Colom would be placed on trial this week, but the rush of business in court, incident to the closing up of the January term, prevented. Colom is accused of killing one Lazzo Evanich, by hitting him over the head with an axe at a lumber camp near Alborn, early last November.

Two or three other criminal cases also go over to the March term. Frank Sharp is under indictment for grand larceny in the first degree and is out on bonds. Victor Lahti is accused of assault in the first degree and is in the county jail awaiting trial. H. H. Mutch, who is under indictment for grand larceny in the first degree, will probably be released without trial, as the verdict of the jury in the action brought by E. L. Seavey against the Board of Trade Livery company practically settled his case and disposed of the charges against him.

Mr. Revell's name was among those in the new panel of 150 ventiremen drawn today. The names of Edward Ahlswede and J. C. Vaughtan, both at the head of important interests, also apnear on the panel.

COURT HAS SCANDALOUS REFERENCES STRICKEN OUT

New York, Feb. 25.—Harry S. Mousley, the private detective under indictment with Mrs. Margaret Teal on a charge of attempted subornation of perjury, testified today at the trial of Mrs. Teal of conversations he had with her in relation to her securing an affidavit falsely accusing Frank J. Gould on his wife's suit for divorce. Mousley told of his introduction to Mrs. Teal through his sister, who is an actress, and went into detail as to statements he said Mrs. Teal made to him in regard to Bessie Devoe, the actress. All these references, however, were ordered stricken out by the court as irrelevant and scandalous.

NOTHING TO THE REPORT

Mayor Says St. Croix Avenue District Will Not Reopen.

Women of Questionable Reputation Numerous on the Streets.

A report that the St. Croix avenue disorderly district will open up again in March, and operate under the same conditions as before the closing order went into effect the first of the year, except that the sale of beer will be prohibited, seems to have gained general credence all over the city.

Mayor Haven was asked regarding the matter this morning. He said he had heard the rumor from different sources, but that, so far as he was concerned, there was nothing to it. He said if the council wanted to adopt a resolution, going upon record as favoring re-establishing old conditions on St. Croix, and directing the chief of police to allow the several houses to resume operations, that was the council's business, and not his.

"Is there any likelihood of such a resolution being adopted by the new council?" Mayor Haven was asked.

"I know nothing more than you do," he said. "I have not heard that any alderman considers introducing such a resolution."

Chief of Police Troyer made statements along the same line. He said he had been ordered to close the houses, and keep them closed, and had followed and was following out the order. He intends to keep them closed until some order is issued to the contrary. From the remarks of Mayor Haven and Chief Troyer, it was to be inferred that nothing but a direct order from the council, issued at a regular meeting, and on public record, would open the houses again. Hints that the houses would be allowed to quietly resume business, without the aldermen going on record as allowing them to, were declared to be entirely without foundation.

Meantime girls who make a profession of walking the streets are very numerous. They are in evidence at all hours of the day and night, but it is so very difficult to obtain evidence against this class of women that the police are almost powerless, against them. They have flocked to Duluth from other cities since the closing of the St. Croix avenue district, and seem well satisfied to remain here.

One man who has interested himself in the matter says that any evening in the week a person of masculine gender, of fairly good appearance, will be accosted on an average of once to a block between Fifth avenue west and Lake avenue, on Superior street.

CROWD OVER INTO FRANCE

Germans Begin Move Which Has Long Been Predicted.

One of Them Buys More Than Half an Island.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—A cablegram to the Daily News from Paris says:

The first instance of long-predicted actions by the Germans in buying up large tracts of land in France for industrial purposes, in order to escape the overcrowded condition of their own land, has just occurred, much to the disgust of certain political and patriotic groups of persons, who for some time have been reminding their compatriots that the day would arrive when the German, with his large family and large business interests, would appear on French soil to stay. The case in question is as follows:

The son of an important Frankfort banker has quietly bought up more than half the island of Brehat, near Palmpol, in the department of Cortes du Nord. Now this island, which is important industrially and strategically, practically belongs to him.

Three senators have already brought before the senate the outlines of a bill forbidding the sale of any French territory near the frontier of any foreign country, without the express permission of the government.

MRS. TEAL SENT TO THE TOMBS, IN PERJURY TRIAL

New York, Feb. 25.—Mrs. Margaret Teal, charged with attempted subornation of perjury in connection with the Helen Kelly Gould-Frank J. Gould divorce action, has been committed to the Tombs prison by Judge Foster. She has heretofore been out under $5,000 bail. Mrs. Teal, when she lived in St. Paul, three years ago, was Mrs. Toomey, wife of W. J. Toomey, at that time private secretary to J. J. Hill. Mr. Toomey was divorced later, and then left the employ of Mr. Hill. Mrs. Toomey later brought breach of promise action against a young physician in St. Paul, and the testimony was sensational to the last degree, much of it being unprintable. The verdict of the jury was against Mrs. Toomey.

The witnesses in the trial here included Mrs. Julia Fleming McCabe, who was indicted with Mrs. Teal, and Detective Mousley; Blanche Hale, a manicurist, who said she was asked by Mrs. McCabe to sign a false affidavit in the case; and Mrs. Margaret Falk, a colored dressmaker, who testified that she was approached with a similar proposition.

BLIND PIGGER LET OFF WITH FINE

Ash Lake Woman Greatly Dreaded a Jail Sentence.

Mrs. Lizzie Briggs greatly feared a jail sentence, when she was brought into district court yesterday afternoon on a charge of having sold liquor without a license. She shed a copious flood of tears, but finally admitted her guilt, and was greatly relieved when Judge Ensign let her off with a fine of $100. She was warned that a jail sentence was still hanging over her head if she repeated the offense, but she promised to give up the traffic in firewater.

Mrs. Briggs lives at Ash Lake with her five children. She said she sold the booze because she had to have the money, but after being separated from $100 yesterday by the court, she concluded that there was no profit in it after all.

NO NEGLIGENCE.

Company Not to Blame for Death of Henry Lehtonen.

After arguments on a motion of the defendant for a direct verdict, Judge Ensign yesterday afternoon directed a verdict in favor of the defendant in the case of Amanda Lehtonen, administratrix of the estate of Henry Lehtonen, against the Interstate Iron company. Mrs. Lehtonen sued for $5,000 damages for the death of her husband, who was killed by being crushed by a skip at the Lincoln mine at Virginia. The defendant claimed that the plaintiff had introduced no evidence to show that the company was negligent. After the directed verdict, Judge Ensign allowed the amended complaint in the case to be filed and the case will be tried again at the March term of court.

MARRIED MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Now Pennsylvania Man is Stepfather to Sister-in-Law.

Millville, N. J., Feb. 25.—A wedding that has just come to light, has the city working out problems of relationships, for by it a man became the husband of his mother-in-law and she became the stepmother of her grandchild, while he is also the stepfather of his sister-in-law. Mrs. Belle Harvey became the bride of Ralph Dehart. The Rev. William Fitzgerald, rector of St. Mary Magdalen church, performed the ceremony.

Six years ago, Dehart married Miss Rosa Harvey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Harvey, at the same church. Three years later Mr. Harvey died, and a year ago his daughter, Mrs. Dehart, passed away after a lingering illness.

Mrs. Harvey continued to keep house for her son-in-law, and their friends hinted that there would soon be another marriage. The couple are now receiving congratulations. Mrs. Dehart is 46 years old and her husband 28. Mrs. Dehart has three children, while her husband has one.

CRUELTY IS WIFE'S CHARGE

She Claims Husband Has Abused Her Since Shortly After Wedding.

Extreme cruelty is charged by Mrs. Juella Ford, aged 28 years, in the complaint filed with the clerk of the district court yesterday in her action for divorce from her husband, Samuel Ford. When she asked for the aid of a physician at the time of the birth of her child, she alleges her husband said, "Die if you want to, d—n you; it makes no difference to me."

The couple were married at Ironwood, Mich., Dec. 24, 1903, and shortly after their marriage, Mrs. Ford claims, her husband began to treat her cruelly. She claims he has abused her frequently, calling her vile names and charging her with unfaithfulness. Since the birth of her child, she says, he has failed entirely to provide for her. She asks for a divorce, alimony, and the custody of the child.

Rear Admiral Franklin Dead.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Rear Admiral Samuel R. Franklin, retired, died at his home in this city yesterday, aged 84.

WILL TAKE THEIR SEATS

New City Council Will be Organized Next Week.

Democrats Have Not Yet Agreed Upon a President.

The five new aldermen elected at the recent municipal election will take their seats in the city council next Monday evening, at the regular meeting. No very great formality will mark the event. City Clerk Cheadle will announce that the newly-elected members have qualified, and that is about all the proceedings will amount to.

Tuesday, March 9, at a special meeting, the new council will be organized.

It will be up to the new council to elect a president and a city clerk, who also acts as clerk at the council meetings. H. W. Cheedle, who at present holds the position, will undoubtedly get it again. There appears to be some question as to who will be made president. So far as can be learned, the aldermen have not gotten together on the proposition yet, although the Democratic members, who are in the majority, are understood to have held a caucus, which did not result in any agreement being arrived at.

At that caucus, Alderman Shartel of the Fourth, is said to have come out with the largest number of votes; W. B. Getchell of the Eighth, present president, getting only two votes. There are nine Democrats and seven Republicans in the new council, so the former will have the choosing of the president, provided they get together and settle upon one of their number. It is hinted around the city hall that the Democrats may not be able to agree on a president, and that the Republicans may line up with that faction of the other party which has the most acceptable candidate, unless the Republicans see a chance to get a man of their own into the chair.

The new aldermen will have to go on record right at the beginning on the saloon question, for saloon matters will probably occupy considerable time during the next two or three meetings of the council.

The first of the liquor troubles will be the proposed revocation of the Carpenter Bros.' license. A vote upon this will not necessarily disclose the liddists and the liberals, however, for, if the violation of law was as flagrant as indicated during the course of the trial of Patrick Carpenter in municipal court, upon a charge of selling liquor to minors, some of the liberals might be expected to vote in favor of a revocation of the license. The Carpenters claim the facts were not as bad as made out in court, however, and will appear before the council next Monday evening to prove their case.

There have been five or six other convictions of saloon men this month upon charges of violations of the liquor laws, and some of the liddists may summon the offenders to appear and show cause why their licenses should not be revoked.

The new aldermen who will take their seats next Monday evening are T. J. Storey, Republican, succeeding Nicholas Mueller, Democrat, from the Second ward; C. J. Hector, Democrat, succeeding Emil A. Tessman, Democrat, from the Third; J. A. McDonnell, Democrat, succeeding E. H. Ribenack, Democrat, from the Fifth; C. R. Hoar, Democrat, succeeding Alexander Kennedy, Republican, from the Sixth; Lucien Merritt, Democrat, succeeding M. J. Filiatrault, Democrat, from the Seventh. The election resulted in no change in the number of Democrats and Republicans in the council. Two contests are now before the courts, however, William Jeffrey contesting the seat of Eucien Merritt and Nicholas Mueller contesting the seat of T. J. Storey.

READY FOR THE BATTLE.

Cass Lake bill be considered along with the general bill.

The fight in the house will then be Cass Lake against the field, as all of the other communities have joined hands to back the general bill. An attempt may be made in the senate, when the normal school fight is reached in the regular order of business, to amend one of the pending bills by submitting the provisions of the general bill.

It had been expected that the visit of the special sub-committee from the two normal school committees to Northern Minnesota would result in a choice of a location, but the division of opinion was too great to bring this about. The senate committee did not vote on the question, and failed to meet with the house sub-committee in joint session. The house committee, however, cast three votes for Thief River Falls, one for Cass Lake and one for Bemidji.

The fight will be a lively one in both houses, and in the meantime the boosters from the various Northern Minnesota towns that are after the school may be depended upon to do their share toward keeping the situation warm.

The house committee on commerce and retail trade heard the case for and against the trading stamp in a public hearing in the house chamber yesterday afternoon. The friends of the trading stamp said that the proposed bill prohibiting it is unconstitutional, because it is impossible to forbid a man by law to give away goods if he wishes to do so. It was asserted that in a number of states laws have been tried, and that the courts have always held them to be unconstitutional.

On the other hand, merchants who are anxious to rid themselves and their customers of the trading stamp burden complained of it bitterly. They said that it benefited neither the merchant nor the customer, because one or both of them must pay the full cost of the system, which develops enormous profits to its promoters. It was shown that when the trading stamp gets a foothold in a community, competition forces practically all merchants to adopt it without a general agreement to drop it, which it is difficult to bring about. The only way to kill it off is to make it unlawful.

The committee will act upon the bill later.

The house committee on taxes—which is, by the way, the busiest committee of the legislature these days—heard arguments against the Thayer bill taxing for state purposes transfers on grain and other exchanges. A delegation from the Minneapolis chamber of commerce, headed by C. A. Magnusson and Secretary J. G. McHugh, appeared in opposition to the measure, and the Duluth board of trade was represented by C. F. Macdonald, secretary of the board.

The measure imposes a tax of 1 cent for each $100 of value on "all sales or agreements of sale, or agreements for sale of any products or merchandise, on any exchange or board of trades, either for present or future delivery." The tax is to be paid by purchases of stamps, which are to be affixed to the memoranda of trade, and the bill imposes fines of $500 to $1,000 for violation.

Against the bill it was argued that the grain industry should not be singled out for special taxation, especially since the cost, at least on cash transactions, will go back to the producer. In the case of dealings in futures, it is asserted that the tax will be a discrimination against the markets of this state, because such dealings can be carried on as easily in the markets of other states, where no such tax is imposed, and will naturally go that way if the bill becomes a law.

This same measure was introduced in the house two years ago by Representative Ambrose Tighe of St. Paul. It passed the house, but died in the senate.

Senator Pugh of Duluth will introduce shortly a bill appropriating $7,000 for the use of the Association of Minnesota Territorial Pioneers. The bill is offered at the request of the association, of which Senator Pugh is a member, he having come to this state in 1855, when the territorial swaddling clothes had not yet been thrown off.

The house committee on express, telegraph and electric lines had a public hearing yesterday afternoon on the two pending bills affecting the express business. One increases the tax upon the net earnings of the companies, from 6 to 8 per cent, and the other provides a flat cut in express rates of 25 per cent.

Representatives of all the express companies, including some of the high officials from New York, were present to oppose the bills, and they asserted that their Minnesota business, that is, business beginning and ending in the state, is being conducted at a loss. No action was taken by the committee.

The house merely got started upon its order of business yesterday, and there were no motions and resolutions, no introduction of bills, no calendar and no committee of the whole. This was because the spirited fight over the Stuart bill, exempting credits from taxation, took up the forenoon, and so many public hearings before committees had been set for the afternoon, that it was impossible to have a session.

The senate nearly took action in committee of the whole yesterday afternoon on the Alderman bill, limiting the number of saloons to one for each 500 people in each community, but at the request of Senator Canfield, action was postponed until today.

Senator Nelson offered two amendments, which were not acted upon. One reduces the basic figure from 500 to 400, and the other provides that the reduction shall take place at once. As the bill stands, those now in the saloon business would not be affected, but no new licenses could be granted in excess of the legal figure. Senator Dunn of St. Paul stated that he had investigated the statistics, and he found that if the reduction were made at once, 63 per cent of the saloon keepers of Minnesota would be put out of business.

Representatives Opsahl and Sulerud are the authors of five house bills designed to extend agricultural education. These bills are the product of a meeting of the house members from the Ninth congressional district, held early in the week.

One bill provides a preparatory course in agricultural at each of the state normal schools, for fitting teachers to instruct in this subject in the public schools. Graduating courses are to be finished at the state agricultural college.

Another bill adds to the state agricultural school a teachers' graduating course in agriculture, where students from other departments and other schools have taken preparatory courses in agriculture may prepare themselves for teaching.

A third bill adds a preparatory course of studies in agriculture to each state high and graded schools, with a view to fitting pupils to become teachers. A fourth bill adds an elementary agricultural course not to exceed one hour a day to each rural school. This is to get the country folks interested in advanced agriculture, and to head pupils toward the higher branches of agricultural learning.

The fifth bill, slightly different in scope, provides for state supervision of private schools whose systems prepare their students for teaching in the public schools. The reason for this bill, as explained by its authors, is that as the state has adopted a policy of licensing doctors, druggists, engineers, etc., to protect the public against quacks, the state should guard its educational facilities against incompetents.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

Wyoming and Dillingham, the minority of sub-committee, and by Senator Knox, who are working to uphold the president's course. Other members do not profess to know how Senators Clarke of Arkansas and Foraker will vote. Known to be for the report are Messrs. Nelson and Kittredge, Republican, and Bacon, Culberson, Overman and Rainer, Democrats. Against it are Messrs. Clarke of Wyoming, Depew, Dillingham, Knox and Fulton, all Republicans.

Appears to Be Violation.

At the suggestion of Mr. Overman the report was modified to the extent that the assertion that the merger was in violation of the Sherman law was changed to a declaration that the "deal appears to the committee" to be a violation of the law.

The minority of the sub-committee filed a typewritten statement asserting that the committee had exceeded its functions which had not been before the president when he sanctioned the merger and that the committee had judged the case upon this new evidence which the president had not the opportunity to consider.

This report stated that the committee should have decided the case only on evidence which was before the president and that in doing so it would be necessary to find that the president had not proceeded in violation of the law. This report will also be printed and will be before the full committee when it meets Monday.

House Dons War Paint.

With its war paint on, the house of representatives, by sweeping majorities, many times defied the senate by rejecting its amendments to the legislative appropriation bill providing for salary increases for the president, the vice president, the speaker, the judiciary and for the creation of the offices of under secretary and fourth assistant secretary of state. Party lines were obliterated completely.

It was a regular field day in the lower body, where oratory and confusion vied with each other for honors. Not during the present congress has the speaker been compelled to wield his gavel with such force to bring about order as on this occasion. Of parliamentary tangles there were many, but the veteran presiding officer emerged from them all with his decisions undisputed. The battle waged more than six hours, at the end of which the bill was sent to conference.

Cannon Is Unruffled.

First, the house voted 168 to 141 against raising the salary of the president. Before the announcement of the vote was made Speaker Cannon directed that his name be recorded in the affirmative.

An unusual scene followed. Members were on their feet in a general scramble for recognition for motions of one sort or another. The speaker, unruffled by his besiegers, held that a motion by Mr. Watson of Indiana, to recede from the amendment and amend it so as to make the salary $75,000, was preferential. Mr. Watson sought to shut off debate by moving the previous question, and on that proposition the roll was again called.

The previous question was ordered, and on the vote being taken on the adoption of the amendment it was carried, 163 to 149, amid Republican applause.

The amendment will make the president's salary equivalent to the present salary plus the $25,000 appropriation heretofore allowed him for traveling expenses, the latter appropriation being stricken out.

A long debate was precipitated by Mr. Bingham offering an amendment to the amendment of the senate designating the proposed new official of the state department as "vice secretary instead of "under" secretary and reducing the salary from $10,000 to $7,500.

Objection and Ridicule.

Strenuous objections and ridicule even came from all sides to both the titles. Mr. Fitzgerald of New York in defining the word "under" said it meant, among other things, the under dog or goat, and in international usage the nation that had been defeated in an international settlement.

The charge having been made in several quarters that the United States was trying to "ape" foreign powers, Mr. Denby of Mich. disclaimed such a suggestion. The idea, he said, was to make the department conform to the diplomatic usage of all the world.

The amendment was vigorously supported by Mr. Watson (Ind.) while Mr. Mann, (Ill.) in opposing the proposed creation of both the offices of under secretary and fourth assistant secretary, maintained that it was simply another way of giving office to two additional people.

Without an opportunity being afforded to vote on the Bingham amendment the house by a vote of 89 to 134 rejected the whole amendment.

Two Treaties Ratified.

Treaties with Panama and Colombia, relating to the Panama canal were ratified by the senate. Approving the conventions, the senate, however, adopted a resolution intended to obviate the necessity of submitting to arbitration questions connected with the limitation of the cities of Panama and Colon.

Under the treaty as negotiated, this question will be submitted to a board of three, one representing Panama, one the United States, and one appointed by the president of Peru, and thus if a dispute of serious character should arise, two South Americans would be pitted against one North American.

This feature of the treaty was originated in the committee on foreign relations, but in view of the indignation of the Republic of Panama at the recent speech of Representative Rainey of Illinois, who severely criticised President Obaldia, it was not thought advisable to ask Panama to amend the treaty, which already has been approved by that republic.

Forestry Policy Attacked.

Senator McCumber made an extended argument to sustain the constitutionality of legislation authorizing the grading by the Federal government of grain entering into interstate commerce, in connection with a provision of the agricultural bill, which was under consideration. The fixing of definite grades of grain was, on motion of Senator Aldrich, stricken from the paragraph, which, as finally adopted authorized the secretary of agriculture to "investigate the handling, grading and transportation of grain and to make a study of factors entering into the usual operations connected therewith," for which $52,440 was appropriated.

Senator Heyburn opposed increasing the appropriation for the forestry service as proposed by the senate committee on agriculture and this phase of the discussion was participated in by several senators.

Mr. Heyburn attacked the forestry administration and urged restoring to the people the right to locate on any public land. He declared that each year additional funds were demanded for the forestry service with the promise that next year it would be self-sustaining. Messrs. Teller, Carter and Borah arraigned and Messrs. Flint, Dixon and Smoot defended present methods of forestry administration.

the report. It is also shown that the combination is practically the only important exporter of tobacco from this country. Astonishing figures are given in respect to the development of the combination. In 1891 it controlled 89 per cent of the business of cigarette manufacture, and this proportion is maintained today. In cigars its output increased from 4 per cent of the business in 1897 to 14 7-10 per cent in 1906; while in manufactured tobacco (chewing, smoking, fine cut and snuff) "the combination's output increased from 7 per cent of the total in 1891 to 77 per cent in 1906. Finally, in 1906, the combination controlled of these separate products respectively, plug 82 per cent, smoking 71 per cent, fine cut 81 per cent and snuff 96 per cent." In the year 1906 the combination used in the manufacture of its various products nearly 300,000,000 pounds of leaf tobacco.

Absorption of Rivals.

"An idea of the absorption of competing plants," said Commissioner Smith, "and of the changes through combination within the last decade may be had from the fact that in 1897 the combination had ten plants, each producing over 50,000 pounds of manufactured tobacco or snuff per year, while there were 243 independent plants of the same class. In 1906, on the other hand, the combination had forty-five plants of this class and independent manufacturers 140. Especially conspicuous has been the absorption of the large plants. In 1897 the combination had eight plants, each producing over 1,000,000 pounds of these products per year, while its competitors had forty-six such plants. In 1906 the combination had thirty-four plants of this size, and independent concerns only seventeen.

"Despite the combination's enormous expenditures for advertising and in schemes, and despite frequent price-cutting by means of its so-called 'fighting brands,' there has been, in several branches of the industry, a constant tendency for competitors to gain business more rapidly than the combination and thus to reduce its proportion of the output. This tendency has been overcome by continued buying up of competitive concerns. Many weaker concerns have been virtually driven out of business or forced to sell out to the combination, either by reason of the direct competition of the latter, or as an indirect result of the vigorous competition between the combination and the larger independent concerns. In the case of the larger and more powerful concerns which it acquired, however, the combination has usually secured control only by paying a high price. The immense profits of the combination have enabled it to keep up this policy."

GRATEFUL FOR ECZEMA CURE

Any Sufferer Can Write to Robt. Sussman of Toledo, Ohio, for full information.

There are undoubtedly many frauds in the testimonials of medical firms—letters written by friends or even employes of the advertiser. But on the other hand, in some cases the testimonials are thoroughly genuine, gladly offered by prominent citizens, who are grateful for the cure.

Such a case is that of Robt. Sussman, a well known furrier of Toledo, Ohio, who for years suffered with a severe case of eczema.

He described his case as almost unendurable. About five years ago he was induced to try the oil of wintergreen compound known as D. D. D. Prescription for eczema sufferers. He has gone out of his way to find sufferers and to tell them of this remedy. He has done this without pay, of course, and without even having been requested to do so by the D. D. D. Company. It was simply the fact that his health, his very life, had been restored that made him so enthusiastic. Mr. Sussman recently wrote a letter offering to write to any eczema sufferer and to describe his case. If any reader of this paper should write Mr. Sussman, we request that self-addressed stamped envelope be enclosed.

D. D. D. Prescription, also D. D. D. Soap, are strongly recommended in Duluth by Lyceum Pharmacy.

HIT THE SPOT.

Postum Knocked Out Coffee Ails.

There's a good deal of satisfaction and comfort in hitting upon the right thing to rid one of the varied and constant ailments caused by coffee drinking.

"Ever since I can remember," writes an Iud. woman, "my father has been a lover of his coffee, but the continued use of it so affected his stomach that he could scarcely eat at times.

"Mother had coffee-headache and dizziness, and if I drank coffee for breakfast I would taste it all day and usually go to bed with a headache.

"One day father brought home a pkg. of Postum recommended by our grocer. Mother made it according to directions on the box and it just "hit the spot." It has a dark seal-brown color, changing to golden brown when cream is is added, and a snappy taste similar to mild, high-grade coffee, and we found that its continued use speedily put an end to all our coffee ills.

"That was at least ten years ago and Postum has, from that day to this, been a standing order of father's grocery bill.

"When I married, my husband was a great coffee drinker, altho he admitted that it hurt him. When I mentioned Postum he said he did not like the taste of it. I told him I could make it taste all right. He smiled and said, try it. The result was a success, he won't have anything but Postum." "There's a Reason."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

BACK FROM ISTHMUS

Duluth Man in a Party That Inspected Panama Canal.

Guest of American Fruit Company in Junket to Colon.

So thoroughly has the government drained and covered the the swamps alofig the course of the canal across the Isthmus of Panama, that there is hardly a mosquito to be seen there now. Before the government started its work, they were so thick it was as much as a man's life was worth to travel cross the country.

Vern R. Culbertson of the Thomas Thompson company of Duluth, who returned yesterday from a trip to the counties of Central America, says that he did not see a mosquito during the four days he was in Panama. He says that he was told there that when the United States took up the construction of the canal, the mosquitoes were so bad, that even the native workmen would come from work with their ears so badly bitten that they would beg to have them cut off.

Mr. Culbertson was one of a party of fifteen fruit men who took a trip to the banana regions of Central America, as the guests of the United Fruit company. The majority of the party were from Kansas City. They spent a day at the Mardi Gras, in New Orleans from which city they sailed to Colon, Panama. At Colon the fruit company furnished them with a private car, from which they inspected the work on the canal. It took them to Panama City.

Mr. Culbertson was very much impresed with the vastnes of the great inter-ocean canal undertaking, with the great speed with which the government is removing the dirt, and the thousands of laborers employed on the job. He says that the American consul at Panama City told him that there are 32,000 men employed on the work and that the monthly payroll is over $1,250,000. The method used in paying off the men interested Mr. Culbertson. At each pay station, of which there are twelve or thirteen along the line, there are two pay windows, from one of which only gold is paid and from the other only silver. The gold is paid the white employes and the silver to the natives and negroes. The line between the two is very closely drawn. Mr. Culbertson visited the Culebra cut, where the French abandoned the great job of canal building they had undertaken. The Americans have torn through it with their steam shovels like so much cheese.

From Panama the party went to Puerto Lemon, Costa Rico, where they were provided with a private car on the narrow-guage railroad and taken over the 100,000-acre banana plantation of the United Fruit company. From there they went to Guatemala.

Mr. Culbertson says that the banana crop is a continuous one, a banana tree having a life of but twelve months, and bearing but once.

COPPERS IN A DECLINE

Bears' Raid on Amalgamated Starts Slump in East.

Rally Does Not Prevent a Weak Closing Level.

The copper stock market was not without excitement today, prices declining heavily during the first part of the session, led by Amalgamated. The shares rallied somewhat in the afternoon, but the closing prices were weak as compared with yesterday.

The bears' drive on Amalgamated was said to have been on the news that the Amalgamated mines would close. This was emphatically denied and heavy pressure ceased, permitting the stocks to regain some of the losses of the morning. They did not reach yesterday's closing level, however.

News of a good strike on the 900-foot level in East Butte caused some interest and trading in that stock. It opened at $14.62½, declined to $13.75, rallied to $14.25 and closed at $14 bid and $14.25 asked.

Amalgamated opened at $68.87½, rallied to $67.50 and closed at $66.62½. New York was very bearish on Amalgamated.

North Butte opened at $69, advanced to $69.25, declined to $66.50, rallied to $68 and closed at $67.25 bid and $67.75 asked.

Greene-Cananea went off from $10 to $9.50 and closed at $9.50 bid and $9.75 asked. Butte Coalition opened at $22.12½, advanced to $22.50, declined to $21.50 and closed at $21.50 bid and $22 asked. Calumet & Arizona opened at $100, advanced to $101, declined to $98, rallied to $100 and closed at $99 bid and $100 asked.

Anaconda opened at $41, sold off to $38, rallied to $40.50 and closed at $39.50 bid. Giroux opened at $7, advanced to $7.25, declined to $7 and closed at $7 bid and $7.25 asked. Superior & Boston opened at $15, declined to $14.75 and closed at $15 bid.

Superior & Pittsburg sold at $14, declined to $13.87½, rallied to $14.12½ and closed at $14 bid. Butte & Superior sold at $1 and 90 cents and closed at 95 cents bid and 96 cents asked; National at 61 cents, declined to 56 cents and closed at 58 cents bid and 60 cents asked; Copper Queen of Idaho at $1.62½ and closed at $1.50 bid and $1.87½ asked, and Calumet & Sonora at $13.87½ and closed at $13.50 bid and $14 asked.

Globe sold at $5.50 and closed at $5.50 bid and $5.75 asked.

Denn-Arizona closed at $3.62½ bid and $3.87½ asked. Red Warrior at $2.12½ bid and $2.50 asked, Mowitza at $1.25 bid and $1.37½ asked, Savanna at $2.12½ bid and $2.25 asked, Carman at $1.50 bid and $1.75 asked, Butte-Ballakhava at $17.50, Cliff at $1.60½ bid and $1.75 asked, Butte-Montana at 36 cents bid and 40 cents asked, and Chief Consolidated at $1 bid and $1.12½ asked.

GRAFT PLOT IS REPORTED LARGE

Tribute Paid by Saloon Keepers for Gambling Protection.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—A graft plot, said to have involved Chicago politicians of statewide influence, was responsible for the appearance of nearly 100 saloonkeepers before the grand jury today.

They were faced with the alternative of indictment for maintaining gambling devices or revealing the identity of those to whom they are alleged to have paid tribute for the privilege of operating these machines.

The clique to which the tribute is said to have been paid is alleged to have divided $80,000 within a year through farming out unlawful privileges to keepers of saloons on the outskirts of the city proper.

MAY MANAGE THE WINONA TEAM

Krick May Take Charge of Southern Minnesota Nine.

"Josie" Krick, who last year pitched for the Duluth baseball team, may this year accept a position as playing manager for the Winona team of the Minnesota-Wisconsin league.

Ever since the league proposition started some time ago, the Winona team has been hard after Krick and it is said that he has all but signed up with the Southern Minnesota team.

The Winona fans have had a number of enthusiastic meetings during the last week or two, and they have already enough money in the bank to start business. They are planning the fastest team possible and are very anxious to sign up the former Duluth pitcher.

Krick is a good man. He pitches great ball at times and was one of the most effective of the Duluth twirlers. His loss will be keenly felt by the Duluth fans.

He is well up in the fine points of the game, has a faculty of getting on with the players and should prove a good drawing card in Duluth

WOMEN BEGIN SERVING TIME

Suffragettes Wear Prison Garb and Eat Prison Fare.

London, Feb. 25.—The suffragettes who were sentenced to jail because they would not promise to be good and raise no more rows on the streets began serving time today. They were committed to the "second division," which, in the case of the present batch of prisoners who belong mostly to the educated classes, entails drastic changes in food and method of living. They will be garbed in the rough and uncouth ready-made prison garments spotted with a broad arrow and their food will be the ordinary prison fare of thin porridge, watery cocoa and a small allowance of meat and potatoes once a day.

They will not be allowed to communicate with each other and will be obliged to exercise in single file in the prison courtyard.

In spite of this far from alluring prospect the women went off to their uninviting captivity giving signs of apparent cheerfulness.

TWO REPORTED DEAD FROM DUEL

Fatal Fight in Kentucky —Passenger on Train Wounded.

Lexington, Ky. Feb. 25.—Word was brought here today from the Big Sandy valley that Frank F. Blevins, conductor on the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad and W. A. Prewitt and his son, John Prewitt, fought a duel. W. A. Prewitt being badly wounded by Blevins and the latter being fatally shot by John Prewitt, who escaped to the mountains. The shooting is the result of an old grudge. Blevins has since died and it is reported Prewitt is dead.

A passenger on the train was wounded by a bullet.

FAIL TO RECOVER.

Eveleth Grocery Firm is Stung by Boarding Camp.

Eveleth grocers evidently have their troubles with the mining camps and boarding houses on the range.

The Eveleth Cash Grocery brought suit in the district court to recover $380 from six men, whom they claimed to have supplied with groceries. A verdict for the defendants was directed by the court this afternoon, after it had been shown that the men who had secured the groceries had moved out, and that the six who were being sued were not the men who had purchased the goods.

SAYS HE FIRED AT THE PRIEST

Chicago Man Admits Robbing Woman Who Was Praying.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Henry Vasey, 26 years of age, confessed today, that he is the man who fired three ineffective shots at Rev. Father Fielding, pastor of Corpus Christi church, Oct. 18 last.

Up to today the motive of the shooting has been a mystery. Vasey's confession is made public by the police and shows he fired because he feared arrest.

The young man was arrested Monday on charge of stealing a purse from a woman kneeling in prayer at the church. He is said to have admitted similar thefts from members of the same church during the last three years.

EXONERATES LAWYER FOR A. BOOTH & COMPANY.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Affairs of A. Booth & Co. were under investigation in two quarters today, the grand jury and in the court of Master in Chancery Booth.

The proceedings before the latter were brief, consisting chiefly of a statement by Attorney Jacob Newman, which was entered on the record, exonerating Harry L. Gordon of Cincinnati of any suspicion in connection with a check for $5,000 recently produced as evidence.

Mr. Newman said he made an investigation and found the check was given oGrdon as legitimate compensation for legal services rendered to A. Booth & Co.

SIXTY DAYS IN COUNTY JAIL

John Scott Threatened to Take Life of Range Woman.

John Scott of Virginia was too vehement in his quarrels with a woman friend and as a result, he must spend the next six months in the county jail, unless, perchance, he can furnish bonds of $150 to keep the peace.

Scott was brought down from the range this morning and placed in the county jail on a committment from the municipal court of Eveleth. It recited that he had threatened to beat one Belle Peterson and had followed it up with a threat to take her life. Belle was afraid he would carry out the threat, so she appealed to the law for protection.

When he was arraigned in the municipal court of Eveleth, Scott was found guilty of the charge. His bonds to keep the peace were fixed at $150, but he couldn't furnish them and had to take the trip to Duluth. His committment reads for six months and unless he can scare up the bond before that time, he will be a guest of the county until some time next summer.

LADD'S FAME SPREADING.

British Authorities Are Seeking the North Dakotan's Advice.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—Litigation over flour bleaching patent rights—rather than official action against the use of bleached flour is the reason for the effort of the British authorities to secure the testimony of Pure Food Commissioner Ladd of this state. The commissioner's initiatory action against the bleaching process and his successful prosecution in both a state and national way long ago, made him a national character and now he has gained international prominence if he cares to make the trip to London.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

A membership campaign will be waged at the local Young Woman's Christian association for the month preceding the moving into the new home, and among the first of the social affairs to be held at the new building will be the banquet at which the successful members in the contest will be the association's guests. The plans for the campaign are now being made, and the active work for members will begin March 15 and close at 6 p. m. of the evening of April 15.

Every member in the association list, which now numbers about 750, will be invited to work in the campaign. The plan is known as the honors class campaign and honors will be conferred upon the members, who, at the end of the month, secured three or more new members or renewals. The honors class contest has been used only once before, in Indianapolis, and with great success. The degrees conferred are similar to those bestowed at universities, but the initials have a secret meaning which is not disclosed until the end of the campaign. The degrees will be conferred at the banquet.

The different degrees will be identified by a distinctive color and the number of new memberhips or renewals necessary for securing the degree and the colors chosen to represent them are as follows: Three members, B. A., pale green; four members, B. S., purple; five members, M. A., white; six members, Ph. D., orange; seven members, M. D., yellow; eight members, D. Sc., violet; nine members, D. D., red; ten members, LL. D., blue; eleven to fifteen members, D. D. L. L. D., pink; sixteen to twenty-one members, Y. W. C. A., foliage green.

It is hoped that every member now enrolled will enter the contest and bring at least three new memberships or renewals during the month of the campaign. The membership desired by April 15, is 2,000. Every member who brings three names to the membership list will be guest of the association at the banquet, which will be served in the new building, and other members desiring to attend may do so by paying for their tickets. This will be the first membership banquet which the local association has ever held, as the rooms have always been too small to accommodate the members, but in the new building the equipment will be adequate.

The next two weeks will be devoted to making preparations for the campaign and every member will be notified of the work planned, and by March 15, it is expected, that the campaign will start with a rush. The weeks will be very busy ones, for the association will move into the new building the latter part of March, two weeks after the close of the membership contest.

Announce Marriage.

Announcements have been received in the city from Mr. and Mrs. William Emery Foster of Boston of the marriage of their sister, Miss Susan Sparkling, to the Rev. Albert Ransom Parker of this city. The wedding took place Monday of this week at Boston. Mr. Parker and his bride will be at home at 1815 East Fifth street in this city.

Hosts at Dinner.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Silberstein entertained at dinner last evening at their home, 31 West Second street. Pink roses were the decorations, and covers were laid for twelve. Mr. and Mrs. Silberstein will be hosts at dinner again Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Traubman will entertain at dinner Sunday at their home on East Second street.

CURIO COLLECTION.

Interesting Exhibit to Be Shown at Library.

Mrs. Harriet Bishop Arnold has loaned to the public library a collection of Chinese and Japanese curios which she collected in a long residence abroad, and the exhibit is now being catalogued and placed in cases. The collection is a most interesting one and will be open to the public next week. It will be shown on the main floor of the library, probably in the Americana room, and will remain at the library for an indefinite period.

Club Lectures.

"The Race Problem in World Politics" will be the subject of a lecture by Dr. John Jackola tomorrow morning at the club room of the library. The lecture will be given under the auspices of the Twentieth Century club and both men and women, whether members of the club or not, are invited to be present. The hour of the lecture is 10 o'clock.

Col. Freeman Thorp spoke before the art history class of the Twentieth Century club yesterday morning at the regular meeting and his talk on the relation of Italy to the modern art was much enjoyed. There have been several requests for an evening lecture by Col. Thorp, and it is possible that one will be arranged on "Landscape Gardening."

League Social.

The members of the Epworth League of the First Methodist church entertained at an informal social last evening in the church parlors. A musical program was given by Miss Luella Nell, Miss Maddox and Miss Brown, and there were recitations by Lillian Preston. An amusing feature of the evening was a series of silhouettes, for which a number of the guests posed. The committee in charge of the affair was Mr. and Mrs. Paul Thompson, Misses Nellie Tegnall, Eula Baker, Alice Howard, May Coulter and Messrs. William Alred, Ernest McLeod and Bert Nichols.

Personal Mention.

Miss Nell Coleman of Lakeside will leave Sunday for Muskegon, Mich., to enter the Hackeley hospital for the nurse's training.

Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Daugherty and Mrs. Ell Jacques will leave tomorrow for Washington, to be there during the inaugural ceremonies. Mrs. Daugherty and Mrs. Jacques will later visit Mrs. Jacques' daughter at Buffalo.

Mrs. W. T. Wright of 630 East Third street has returned from a visit with her parents at Milwaukee.

Mrs. L. M. Botsford is ill at her home, 719 West Second street.

Miss Helen T. Kiley of 318 West Second street has returned from a seven weeks' visit at Mount Clemens, Mich., and Chicago.

Mrs. C. D. Jacobs of 1110 East Fifth street has returned from a visit at Milwaukee, Chicago and Marinette, Wis.

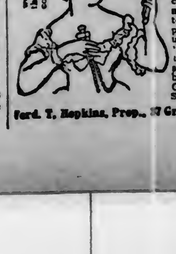

Mr. and Mrs. Swan Johnson have returned from a six weeks' wedding trip through California, Oregon and Washington, and are now at home on Park Point.

Mrs. H. J. Fetzner of 715 East Second street is visiting friends at Minneapolis.

Mrs. C. D. Thompson has returned to St. Paul after a visit with friends in this city for a few days.

NOT ALL HOPE GONE.

An Unmarried Life May Be One of Usefulness.

The striking phase "race suicide," invented by President Roosevelt to emphasize the importance of marriage and partenage as a social ideal, may possibly have proved useful in some cases, where conditions of domestic happiness were suitable and encouragement was needed. But it has also been harmful as encouraging hasty and injudicious unions, where material and moral adaptions were lacking, and has tended to intensify a narrow popular prejudice, which regards an unmarried life, especially for women, as necessarily a failure, says the Woman's Journal.

On this, as on other social questions, there is another side which needs to be considered. We are glad that President-elect Taft has given it expression. In an address to the women students of the Georgia state normal school at Atlanta, a few days ago, he said to the prospective women teachers:

"I hope that you will not regard matrimony as necessary. I think that the secret of most domestic infelicity is in the fact that young women think that unless they are married their lives are not a success. As a matter of fact, I think the reverse is often true." He called to mind the sweet, self-sacrificing maiden aunts he had known, and boldly expressed his disbelief that "all such women would have been better off if they had married."

In this connection it is a fact worthy of consideration that in the more civilized and progressive communities, for thousands of years, celibacy has been regarded as a condition of the highest possible human life. Even in Pagan Rome, the "Vestal Virgins" were objects of popular veneration, and in the Catholic type of Christianity, priests and nuns have been and still are pledged to celibacy, as inseparable from a life especially devoted to "religion."

Certainly, in words of philanthropy, self-sacrifice and social reform, unmarried women, in modern society, have been and are honorably conspicuous and almost indispensable. Success and failure depend mainly on personal character and achievement. No intelligent person would say that Florence Nightingale, Dorothea Dix, Clara Barton, Frances Willard, or Jane Addams have been failures.

George Washington is deservedly idolized as "the father of his country," although he was not the father of children. The same newspaper which reported Mr. Taft's address, announces the decease, at Ogden, of Lorin Farr, aged 87, one of the founders of Utah, as having been "the husband of seven wives and a progenitor of 300 living children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren." Which of the two lives are most worthy of honor? Is Washington or Farr better entitled to be regarded as a "success?"

THE SUMMER HAT

May Be Either Large or Small.

The best milliners assert that a more reasonable period in hat shapes is on the way. Midsummer hats will be as big and shady and picturesque as ever they were—and this is quite as it should be, for with dainty lingerie and silk frocks, nothing is so pretty as the broad-brimmed picture hat banked with flowers.

For street wear, however, the woman of refinement prefers a less conspicuous style, and every woman must admit, whatever her personal taste may be, that in crowded street vehicles, or for motoring wear under a veil, the hat with unexaggerated brim is vastly more comfortable and sensible.

The new shapes, while conservative in size, are as smart as any of last season's monstrous styles; and the new trimming effects show beautifully blended color effects.

Two-toned effects promise to have great vogue in street and general wear models; the straw of the hat being matched by ribbons, wings or other trimming in the same shade and another shade just a tone lighter or darker.

The familiar, and it must be admitted well-beloved style, the becoming mushroom, is again noted on every hand; just a mite of difference in the slope of the down-turned brim marking it as belonging to the 1909 vintage.

Fashion, it seems, might as well try to oust the tailored sailor hat, which has been accepted as correct for certain uses, as the mushroom.

Women having once found out how invariably becoming this drooping brim shape is, and the undeniable suggestion of youth it always lends its wearer, are more than loath to part with it. They absolutely refuse to be robbed of its advantages.

IMPROVE HERSELF.

Ugly Woman May Become Almost Beautiful.

Women should learn to make the most of what they are rather than bemoan what they have not. Study your type and live up to it, advises an exchange. There are some girls who can afford to play tricks with their looks; the majority, even of so-called beauties, fall short of their full charms by thinking themselves lovely enough to stand anything in the way of adornment.

Get a definite idea of what beauty is, and see that the idea is a high one. Do not bank too much on artificiality to improve your looks. There is no wrong in helping along one's complexion of hair, but too often it is an error in judgment and good taste.

In the quest for beauty never overlook the value of clothes. This need not mean costliness; it certainly does not mean exaggeration or conspicuousness. Again study your type. Buy what suits it and learn to carry it well. To dress becomingly is more a question of time and thought than of money.

Do not forget charm in the beauty hunt, you girls who think yourselves ugly. Attractive ways and a gracious manner are rivals of good looks. The peevish, lifeless, discontented, or self-conscious beauty has fewer admirers than she imagines. Fascination will blind most of us into the belief that a girl is good looking.

Have you never seen a woman without one good feature who seems lovely from her expression alone? What we are cannot be hidden

A lovely character is a beauty maker worth while; its good looks are beyond form and coloring, and the ravages of years.

It is this soul beauty that often makes women of mature years lovelier far more than girls.

Stop moping over ugliness. Look on beauty as a duty, and do your best to live up to it. It will not be hard these days, when one may pass as a fairly good-looking woman, even though those looks are largely self-created.

GET THE LATEST.

Economy to Be Ultra in Buying Clothes.

Here stands the homely griddle of the farmer's wife of today, engaged, as Mr. Dooley so touchingly observes, in a never-ending struggle with the hired man's appetite, says the writer of "The Women's Invasion" in Everybody's. And every hour of intervening time is filled, always and everywhere, with Eve, enduring, besides her own special curse of childbirth, a considerable part of Adam's special curse of toil!

Ada Heather-Bigg put it precisely in the first volume of the English Economic Journal. "The share taken by women in industry," she said, "has not altered in amount, nor evening in intensity, only in character."

And if one cannot be surprised that women work, neither can one be surprised that in the United States the number of women at work in gainful occupation outside their homes is increasing.

The United States has been a primitive, undeveloped country. It is becoming a modern finished country. It is still far behind the more completely finished countries of the world (such as England) in the relative number of its women compelled, or permitted, by the growth of urban, manufacturing, commercial life, to pass from their old work in their homes to their new work outside their homes. But the United States will continue automatically to make a gain in the number of its wage-earning women along with almost every gain made in industrial organization. We cannot, for instance, bake our bread in bakeries, instead of in kitchens, without transferring a certain number of women from kitchens to bakeries, there to continue their necessary participation in the task of feeding the country.

THE PENITENCE OF RUBY-NELL

By M. Columbus Hamilton.

(Copyrighted. All rights reserved.)

"A woman's ways air always a mystery," said the squire, thoughtfully, "and no mistake about it."

"I don't understand Ruby-Nell," said Mrs. Rockwood, petulantly. "I've done all I can possibly do to persuade her to carry out her contract with Roger May! but she's as stubbourn as a mule."

"Perhaps you have done too much!" The squire chuckled as he thus mildly reproached her.

"That's just it, my dear," interposed Mr. Rockwood. "We have been too anxious. Matters of love are best left alone."

"Somebody said the wedding was to be this Thanksgiving day," said the squire. He looked inquiringly from one to another.

"Why, he even had his license, squire," said Mrs. Rockwood, vehemently, "and by giving him up for that flippant little city brat Ruby-Nell has crushed the heart of one of the grandest young men this community ever saw!" Mrs. Rockwood emphasized the statement with a sweeping gesture.

"There is no doubt about that," the squire continued. "They say Roger never speaks of it, though. Not long ago some of the boys he had been running around with went to him and offered to tar and feather the dude, but Roger says: 'No, boys, we have no right to interfere.'"

"The dude is gone now these three days," said Mrs. Rockwood after a pause. A perceptible sigh escaped her as she glanced out on the snow-clad woodland which stretched away to infinity. "Ruby-Nell has done nothing but lament for him. She has cried until her eyes are red, and she ain't et a bite in two days."

"Are you sure, dear," said Mr. Rockwood, "that she is lamenting for the other fellow—I mean the one that left?"

"What else can it be, James? Sister Jennie tried to coax her to make up with Roger and Ruby-Nell looked daggers at her."

At the mention of her name, Miss Jennie, the spinster sister of Mrs. Rockwood, and a recognized paragon of matchmakers, became alert. "Roger is stubborn, too," she said. "He is so polite and good! but he won't budge an inch. I told him a falsehood today, and if the expected happens, there'll be an earthquake in the house tonight!"

"La, Jennie!" exclaimed Mrs. Rockwood, removing her spectacles. The squire shifted uneasily in his chair and cleared his throat. Mr. Rockwood laid his Bible down.

"A falsehood on Thanksgiving day?" queried the latter.

"A lie on Thanksgiving day is about the same as on any other day, Brother Rockwood," said the squire. He really meant only to relieve the situation.

"It's none of your business, Squire Cox, I'll give you to know!" snapped Miss Jennie. She nursed an ancient grudge against this township functionary. He had formerly been a suitor, without success, but when he was chosen justice of the peace she had offered to share his honors and he had refused.

"Tut, tut, Jennie," said Mrs. Rockwood, raising a restraining hand. "Now tell us just what you told Roger."

"It is a secret, and I will not tell it!" declared Miss Jennie doggedly. Miss Jennie had long been the autocrat of the Rockwood home, and every one questioned the wisdom of further challenge.

"You should remember, Jennie," said Mr. Rockwood at length, "that this is a matter in which we are quite as much interested as you are, and if you have said or done anything that will embarrass Ruby-Nell we have a perfect right to know it."

"James Rockwood," she replied, her eyes flashing fire, "have I ever done anything to embarrass you or your family?"

"No, no, Jennie, but—"

"According to my way of thinking—" the squire hesitated, allowing one look from the spinster to silence him.

"But this is an occasion, and these are circumstances which have no precedent in our home," said Mr. Rockwood with gravity.

"It is your duty," said Mrs. Rockwood, sternly, "to be a actin' fair and square, to tell us what you told Roger, and you've got to do it!"

A sharp click was heard at the door leading into Ruby-Nell's room, and the little group at once became all ears. Ruby-Nell entered and stepped lightly to her aunt, whose distorted face still smothered in her apron folds.

"Come with me, aunty," she said.

"It's no use," sid Mrs. Rockwood; "it's no use trying to coerce Jennie. She was always that headstrong."

"Let us leave the matter with the Lord," said Mr. Rockwood, opening again the well-worn Bible.

"Have the boys chunk up the fires, James," said Mrs. Rockwood, rising "and will go and help Mary with the turkey. We'll not let these fusses interfere with our Thanksgiving, what little of it there is left."

"It's a new idee, Sister Rockwood," said the squire, jovially. "We don't hear of Thanksgiving Supper very often. It's mostly always Thanksgiving Dinner I celebrate twice today. How does that come?"

"It's Jennie's doin's. Just ask her why she did it."

Twilight, with its chores and busy preparations in the kitchen had passed, and deep dence snow-bedriven night had settled over the Rockwood household. A few guests had arrived, each of voices around the great fire arose.

The neighborhood knew well the history of Ruby-Nell and Roger May, their expected marriage on this very day, and the strained relations which now existed between them, and, of course, no one alluded to either, or offered a word of comment on the apparent absence of Ruby-Nell.

Mrs. Rockwood, in her eagerness to arrange just to taste the sumptuous supper, had almost forgotten the afternoon's experiences, but her husband's face was clouded.

Nervous Miss Jennie divided her time between the guests and the dining room, glancing with a shudder occasionally at the old-fashioned clock.

At a moment when there was no human sound there came a knock—a steady, meaningful knock—at the door. Miss Jennie hesitated, clutching nervously at the hem of her apron. A step forward and another backward, a crimson countenance, which she strove futilly to hide from the questioning scrutiny of her friends, aroused the alert squire, who bethought him to play the gallant, for here was an opportunity not to be slighted. He advanced to her side and tilted his bald head significantly. She pointed to the door and turned away. Proud, proud for many a long day in the years which followed was the squire of the office she assigned him, for when he opened the door the blast ushered in Roger May!

The guests were speechless, congealed by an icier influence than that of the wintry night—a presence which tehy could not look upon in any other light under the circumstances than that of an intruder. They riveted their eyes upon the white, manly face before them, which though drawn and grief-stricken showed not a trace of embarrassment or fear.

A door groaned with startling loudness, and Ruby-Nell, with tear-stined cheek and dishcveled hair, came forward and stood for a moment in silence. Mrs. Rockwood had appeared in the dining room doorway and stopped, amazed beyond expression. Roger advanced toward Ruby-Nell.

"I came by your appointment, Ruby-Nell," he said.

"My appointment?" There was genuine surprise in her tones.

"I was told—he said, as his countenance fell, "I understood—that—that you cared to see me—of course—it is perfectly—all right, Ruby-Nell but—" A disheartened smile played for an instant on his features as instinctively he glanced at Miss Jennie. He readily perceived where the trouble lay, but it was not for him to mar the effect of good intention. He turned to withdraw, but paused at the door as if something had been left unsaid. "It is all right," he repeated, "only I hate to have intruded."

Ruby-Nell involuntarily stretched forth her arms. "Roger!" she screamed, and the next moment she was sobbing in his arsm, muttering incoherently words of penitence and love. "I knew I was doing you wrong," she was saying, "but I loved you, Roger, and you alone. I have—have suffered, too, oh, oh so much! It seems to me that all should be forgiven! Tell me, tell me you love me and forgive me!"

Above the roar of the winds, above the clatter of voices, the squire's piping accents were heard. "I knowed something was going to happen! Brother Rockwood, shake! Roger, have you got them licenses with you? Have you got them? Give them right here to me!"

WHERE TO GO TONIGHT.

LYCEUM—Ben Henricks in "Yon Yonson."

"Yon Yonson."

Ben Hendricks in "Yon Yonson at the Lyceum tonight and tomorrow is pretty firmly established in public favor. For years it has drawn large and pleased audiences with remarkable regularity. The play presents American life in an aspect not commonly understood and seldom seen, the scenes and incidents of the piece being located in the lumber regions of the Northwest. The play and star made quite as favorable impression on eastern audiences as it did upon the western theater-goers. In an artistic sense the success of "Yon Yonson" is said to rest upon the correct delineation of the Scandinavian character; in a dramatic sense, upon the scenery and effects. As Ben Hendricks has been the only recognized Swedish dialect character for many years, the fact that he will play "Yon" is a guarantee to the public that the delineation of the Scandinavian character and the scenery and effects will give the greatest satisfaction.

Quick Change of Scene.

It has been customary in the majority of all large scenic plays or spectacles, in making an instantaneous change of scene, to darken the stage and auditorium by lowering all lights, and while the audience sat in gloom, the stage hands by means of revolving scenery or other methods made the "instantaneous change" in question. Manager Chas. H. Yale, however, has introduced an innovation in this line in the twenty-ninth edition of his "Everlasting Devil's Auction" at the Lyceum on Saturday matinee and night. A new trick change has been prepared showing "The Realms of Mephisto," this elaborate set filling the entire depth of the stage and at a cue it changes to ""The Beautiful Valley of Andochs," a beautiful pastoral scene complete in every detail, the change being made in the full light with apparent absence of stage hands. The effect is instantaneous and a triumph of stage mechanism.

Francis Wilson.

Few comedians on the stage of today can create genuine laughter with such ease as does Francis Wilson and in his dream play, which he is presenting in its second year in this country, his drolleries are decidedly the best he has given since his comic opera efforts of days gone by. Charles Frohman will present Francis Wilson in "When Knights Were Bold," at the Lyceum next Monday and Tuesday, March 1 and 2.

TANGLED RELATIONS

Wife of Carlisle Graduate Accuses Him of Infidelity.

She is Under Arrest on Warrant Sworn to by Husband.

Tangled domestic relation cases are coming to be quite the fashion in municipal court lately. The last of a series of three or four came up before Judge Windom this morning. It was the adultery case brought by Norbert Sero, a full-blooded Indian of the Odanah reservation, near Ashland, Wis., against James Murphy. The case was continued for one week, to allow the plaintiff time in which to find a witness.

Sero claims Murphy was unduly intimate with Mrs. Sero, a white woman, in Duluth, on Oct. 31 last, and Mrs. Sero's attorney, Michael Dillon, of Ashland, charges Sero with having been caught with a white woman in a road-house, near Ashland, and claims that the present case is brought merely to discredit Mrs. Sero, who is now suing and his wife are having difficulty over who shall have the custody of their child. The father has the child at present. It developed in court this morning that Sero really had appeared in an Ashland court because of his relations with a woman found in his company ina road-house, and that he was bound over to the grand jury as a result.

A feature of this morning's hearing was a little talk delivered by Judge Windom from the bench, objecting to a continuance of the case without good reason, on the ground that it would be unfair to the woman, especially in view of her divorce suit, which will soon come to trial, to let the matter hang fire indefinitely. The judge said he was acquainted with Mrs. Sero's family, who are people of excellent standing in Ashland, he declared.

Three attorneys were on hand—Dillon for the woman; Charles C. Teare for Murphy; and Assistant County Attorney Greene for the state. Mr. Greene said he desired a postponement of the case to allow time in which to find a witness upon whom they depended to prove their case. He objected to giving the name of the man, but Mr. Teare saved him the trouble, by saying it was James Harwood, a man who was convicted in municipal court last November of stealing coal from the Northern Pacific. Judge Windom remembered the case, and said Harwood had lied in court at the time of his hearing. Because of the family dependent upon him for support, he was allowed to go under suspended sentence at that time.

Sero is a graduate of the Carlisle university, and is employed in the United States police service on the Odanah reservation. His wife, Mrs. Eunice Sero, called at the county jail yesterday afternoon and asked if she could see James E. Murphy, being held there on the adultery charge. The sheriff had a warrant for her arrest, and, suspecting that she might be Mrs. Sero, asked her her name, and when he found out that she was the woman wanted, she was placed under arrest. She is now under $100 bonds.

WANTS $15,000 FOR DEFORMED LEG

Planks in Shaft Gave Way and Miner Had Fall.

Alleging that his right leg is shortened, crooked and deformed as the result of injuries he sustained in the Kellogg mine at Biwabik, Matt Maki has brought suit in district court against the New York Steel company and Harry Tregilles, to recover $15,345, which he claims as damages.

In his complaint, Maki explains that at the time of the accident, Nov. 5, 1907, the Kellogg mine was down to a depth of 150 feet, with a three compartment shaft. In one of the compartments was a ladder, which the men used in descending into and ascending from the mine. The ladder near the bottom of the shaft, but some distance from the bottom, rested on planks, which rested on the timbers of the shaft.

Maki claims that on Nov. 5, 1907, when he stepped to the planks at the bottom of the ladderway with two other men, the plank gave way and he fell to the bottom of the shaft. His right leg was broken and his left leg and his body bruised, he claims. He was in the hospital for some time and he alleges that his right leg is now deformed.

Washington Notes That Russian-Chinese Differences Grow Acute.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Touching the situation at Harbin, Manchuria, where the differences between the Russian and Chinese municipal administrations are becoming more acute, the state department is watching events with deep interest. The administration is anxious that there shall be a faithful observance of the provisions of the treaty of Portsmouth, to the end that there may be no impairment of Chinese territorial integrity or any denial of her interests there.

The situation is practically a recrudescence of that of a year ago, when difficulty arose over the application of the Russian regulations.

Here the view is held that the question is one largely between the Russian and Pekin governments, this country and other nations being interested to the extent that the rights of their citizens shall be protected and that there shall be no violations of treaty provisions.

RUN AWAY TO CONQUER MARKET

Boys Under Arrest Fired by Industry-Captain Stories.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—The dime novel which inspired the youth of the land to go out West and kill Indians has been succeeded by the modern fiction of industrial and commercial heroes, according to Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler. Arresting very small runaway boys with very large weapons has been a routine duty of so many years as to create little interest, but today detectives took into custody two 16-year-old Michigan City, Ind., youths who confessed to having left their homes to "break" the Chicago board of trade.

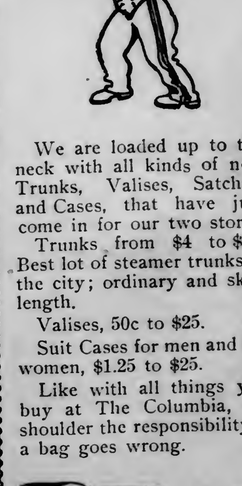

They gave their names as Carl Taylor and Lloyd Kiesner, and said they had a "system" to beat the market, and produced between them $900 with which they had expected to begin operations.

The arrests were made on complaint of their fathers.

Senator Sageng moved that the report be rejected and the bill go on general orders for consideration.

Senator Seward moved as a substitute that the bill go back to the elections committee for further consideration, on the ground that only a few members were present when the committee took it up yesterday afternoon.

Senator Laybourn said the matter was thoroughly considered two years ago and rejected and there was no occasion for devoting more time on it.

Senator Seward called attention to the fact that the senate yesterday overruled a committee report to give consideration to the bill against the tuberculin test for cattle. "My God," he added dramatically, "are bull calves more important than the women of this state?"

The bill was sent back to committee, 29 to 19.

It was a scrappy morning in the house. There was a split report on the Bendixen bill prohibiting discrimination by line elevators in the purchase of grain in different localities. The majority of the grain and warehouse committee voted against the bill, but a minority report in favor of it was carried by a narrow vote, 36 to 32.

Representative Bendixen charged that line elevators push up grain prices to beat out farmers' elevators.

Representative Peterson, a farmer and member of a farmers' elevator company, said that was a good thing, and the increased price always goes into the pocket of the farmer. However, the bill was put on general orders for consideration.

The house adopted the Rosenwald resolution for the investigation of the state oil department to see why so much of the fees have been absorbed by costs since the department went on a salary basis eight years ago.

There was a fight against it, led by Representative Carley, who thought thought the matter should be referred to the illuminating oils committee, which is already working on it. He said it was time to call a halt on useless, time-wasting investigations. If there was to be investigations, why not look into the organization of the house, with its horde of useless employes.

This led Republican members to declare that the Democrats added five needless men to the temporary organization of the house.

Representatives White and Nolan said there was evidently something needed investigation, and the amendment was voted down and the resolution adopted, only one Democrat and one Republican voting against it.

There was another little fight on Adams' motion to recall from the tri-county delegation the bill allowing cities of the first class to let saloons stay open till midnight. He wanted it referred to the temperance committee, but his motion was overwhelmingly rejected.

The house committee this morning reported favorably on the Thayer bill, providing a state tax on grain transfers.

Representative Bjorge has asked for another hearing on his tonnage tax bill, which the committee will grant him.

The range delegation here on the bill bill to allow communities to take in outside territory will have a hearing this afternoon, before the senate committee on municipal corporations.

The senate passed the Works-Alderman bill, extending the Torrens law all over the state, also the Clague bill, forbidding saloon keepers to let minors and drunkards into their places.

A large crowd gathered to hear Admiral Evans, but his health would not permit his appearance.

STOCK MARKET IS WEAK AGAIN

Good Part of Rally of Day Before Is Lost.

New York, Feb. 25.—Renewed weakness developed in the stock market today and a good part of yesterday's rally was lost. Several factors contributed to this showing. Stocks of companies connected with the copper industry declined violently. Amalgamated Copper and Anaconda both slumped 4 points. American Smelting lost 3⅝, and National Lead 2⅝. London was a heavy seller of stocks here, renewed uneasiness over the situation in the Balkans being responsible. The day's news from the steel trade renewed the apprehension of the gravity of the situation and pointed to a competition that promised to be destructive of profits.

The coming tariff revision, the fear of an unfavorable supreme court decision in the commodities clause case and the suspicion that yesterday's upward movement of stocks was caused almost entirely by covering of shorts, were all factors in undermining speculative confidence.

A number of the most active trading stocks, including Union Pacific, St. Paul, Reading, United States Steel and others fell from 3 to 3¼ below yesterday's closing prices.

TWENTY-FOUR AUTOS AND GARAGE DESTROYED.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 25.—The garage of the Sanger Automobile company, 572 and 574 Farwell avenue, together with twenty-four machines, was destroyed by fire this morning. The loss principally on the contents is estimated at $70,000, partly covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is unknown.

GALESBURG MAN CRUSHED TO DEATH IN COLLISION.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Charles Curtis of Galesburg, Ill., was crushed to death early today in a rear-end collision of stock trains on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. He was riding in the caboose of the first section, which was stopped near the city limits. A second section crashed into the caboose, demolishing it and setting fire to the wreckage. Engineer C. B. Johnson was slightly injured.

ALBERTA GUARANTEES BONDS OF RAILWAYS.

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 25.—The Alberta government today guaranteed the bonds on a railway running from Edmonton to Fort McMurray on the Mackenzie river, promoted by a Kansas City capitalist, at $20,000 a mile. The government also guarantees 850 miles of Canadian Northern railway branch lines and 500 miles Canadian Pacific branch lines, all in Alberta, at $14,000 a mile.

Photographing Mars.

No fewer than 7,000 photographs of the planet Mars were taken by the expedition sent out under Prof. Todd to the Andes, and this achievement is a remarkable one in the annals of astronomy. There are few people, indeed, in our modern times who do not recognize the value of a good malt tonic, such as golden grain belt beer. Have it on the home table at all times and enjoy its benefits. THE NAVY YARD SCANDAL.

They do say that this happened in the senate the other day. The senator from Wisconsin, Mr. La Follette, was showing that very large sums were appropriated by the naval bill for "ship yards, political in their nature, and useless for naval purposes," when the genial senator from South Carolina, Mr. Tillman, bellowed forth: "How is this to be remedied? By a commission? We have been ruled by boards and boards and commissions and commissions until congress has delegated its powers to commissions, and when we attempt to oppose the executive power we are criticised, howled at, and damned! Can the senator suggest a remedy?" To which Mr. La Follette is alleged to have replied, "I can suggest a remedy. The senator says congress has effaced itself. But it is apparent that the members of the committee on naval affairs, of which he is one, have not effaced themselves when they have come to make appropriations for navy yards within their own state. My remedy is that hereafter no senator from a state having within its boundaries a navy yard shall have membership on the naval committee."

That's the sort of a remedy that commends itself to common sense; is it not? If Mr. La Follette's remedy were to be applied, how long think you, would great navy yards eating up each year millions of dollars, but so situated that no battleships can possibly get into them—how long would such navy yards last?

That time honored authority, The Congressional Record, is quite illuminating as to the real purpose for which these navy yards exist. The navy bill, carrying $130,000,000, was under discussion and we quote from the Record:

> Mr. Tillman rose.
> Mr. Hale—And Charleston.
> Mr. Tillman—I was just going to remark that the senator ought not to leave out Charleston.
> Mr. Gallinger—That was an inadvertence.
> Mr. Tillman—Unless the coast survey officers and the engineers of the army are lying we have about as much water there as at any other port on the coast.
> Mr. Hale—We cannot leave out the senator from South Carolina.
> Mr. Tillman—Not when he belongs in. You will not leave him out without his being heard from.

Whatever may be the truth of the president's criticism of Senator Perkins that he has been a consistent foe of the navy, it must be said for him that he has never neglected the useless California navy yard, for in connection with the above discussion, Mr. Perkins was promptly on his feet and we have this from the Record:

> Mr. Perkins—There are two docks at Mare Island.
> Mr. Lodge—Yes. I do not want any one to suppose that I suggested that the senator from California had neglected Mare Island. (Laughter.)

All this will doubtless be highly edifying to the people of the country if they will stop to think about it. Millions are spent each year maintaining navy yards which are in accessible to our battleships. When these yards come up for discussion the matter of their usefulness or the uselessness is not a subject of debate; the only thing talked about is whether each senator or representative is properly "taken care of."

Senator La Follette is said to be possessed of an ambition to boss the senate. We can't confess to any great admiration of La Follette as a boss, but we are willing to let him be boss for quite a spell if he will apply his remedy of shutting off from the naval committee every senator from a state having a naval yard within its boundaries. It is highly probable that we should then have some navy yards for the navy in place of the ones we now have for the politicians.

LAYING A FIRM FOUNDATION.

The proposal to establish district agricultural schools in Minnesota involves elementary principles of the deepest concern to every citizen of the state.

Let us consider the case. The need of systematic, enlightened instruction in agricultural and the industrial arts being admitted, as it now generally is, we have to consider the best means of effecting it. The state should certainly not make the mistake of laying a narrow foundation for an institution of so great importance as the agricultural and industrial education of its citizens.

It is believed by those who have given the matter extended study that the district system of agricultural schools, as embodied in a bill now before the legislature, reference to which has been made hertofore by The Herald, will give the state a broad, firm foundation for this work. The plan has the approval of Minnesotans who have given years of study to the needs of the farm and the farmer; it has been worked out by national authorities whose business it has been over a long period of years to investigate agricultural conditions, and it is heartily approved of by writers on agriculture and by the leading farm journals of the country. The district system involves the establishment in Minnesota of nine experimental farms, upon which shall be located nine schools for farmers' boys and girls where they shall actually live in the midst of the best conditions for farming, learn the best methods of farming and be inspired to go back to the farm and apply their new knowledge. The system aims to discover better methods of farming, to teach these methods at the same time to farmers' boys and girls, thereby disseminating them in the quickest and most thorough manner, and to stop the exodus from the farm by actually instilling an enthusiasm for the farm and for farm life.

The methods by which it is proposed to administer these district schools are such as will be certain to make them centers of the highest usefulness to the state. The schools are to be under the direct control of the regents of the state university on the one hand and are to articulate closely on the other hand with the national plan of agricultural and industrial education proposed by the Davis bill. The principal cost of the schools to Minnesota will be their initial cost, as the Davis bill in congress provides for an annual appropriation of $25,000 for instruction in each state district school. It is possible, even probable, that some county agricultural schools will also be established; they will do valuable work and will not in any way interfere with the district system which lays a firm foundation for a harmonious system of state and national agricultural and industrial education.

THE MEANING OF ROOSEVELT.

Theodore Roosevelt is probably the most popular man in the world today. The bitter hatred exhibited toward him in certain quarters explains his popularity; the people respect him for the enemies he has made. The mere mention of his name before an audience composed of all classes of people in Chicago, gathered to listen to an address upon Washington, brought forth such enthusiasm that the speaker was unable to proceed for many minutes. It is the same everywhere.

Much that his accusers say of Roosevelt is true. He has made, perhaps, more mistakes than most presidents, he has stretched the powers of the executive to greater lengths, he has brushed aside courtesy, he has overridden the letter of the law. Yet with no army at his back, with less authority than most of the rulers of nations, he is the most popular and most powerful man in the world. Why? What is the meaning of Roosevelt?

Roosevelt is the most popular man and the most powerful sovereign in the world because he is thoroughly believed in by the people of his country, the most powerful, in its ultimate ability, of any country in the world. He has no army behind him, but he has a whole people.

In a recent message to congress transmitting a report of a bureau of the government, the president said of his administration:

> The administration has achieved some things; it has sought, but has not been able, to achieve others; it has doubtless made mistakes; but all it has done or attempted has been in the single, consistent effort to secure and enlarge the rights and opportunities of the men and women of the United States.

That this is exactly what the people of the country believe of the Roosevelt administration can not be doubted. It is this that is the meaning of Roosevelt. Other administrations have perhaps carried through to a successful issue more policies of public importance; few administrations have failed in so many vitally important policies. But no administration has ever struck so hard and so frequently for the whole people. Others made promises, but Roosevelt has been constant in performance. Few if any of our presidents have been so free from the entanglements of political necessity, and few of them have made public appointments and urged public rights and exposed public wrongs with so little regard to political effect. No president ever sounded so many clarion calls to action; he has been instant in season and out of the season in the behalf of the whole people. The few who hope to profit at the expense of the many, fear him and hate him and revile him. The many believe in him; they have found him mistaken, but they have never found him untrue.

Other rulers may have been greater, others may have been more beloved, but no ruler of any nation has ever been more thoroughly believed in by his people than has Theodore Roosevelt and none has ever been a greater force for good in any nation.

WOMEN VETO IT.

The senate committee on elections in the Minnesota state legislature yesterday voted, without debate, to report adversely the proposed law for a constitutional amendment granting women the right to vote. There was no interest in the matter.

Women will not get the ballot until they show some evidence of wanting it. The Herald is firmly convinced that the great majority of men are ready to vote the ballot to women any day that the latter will declare their desire for it. It would not be necessary for a majority of women, even, to want it. A respectable minority eager for the franchise would gain it for the entire sex. The fact seems to be that outside of a very small fraction that is actively agitating for the ballot, women are absolutely indifferent to the matter.

The Ladies' Home Journal repeats the experience of a president of the United States who was memorialized to recommend to congress the granting of the franchise to women. He was assured in the memorial presented to him that the ballot was demanded with practical unanimity by all womenkind. To test the matter he wrote to fifty women of his acquaintance in whose judgment he had confidence. He got forty-six replies. Thirty-four did not want the ballot under any circumstances, eleven were indifferent, one thought it might be nice to have it but said that when it came time to vote she would probably not use the right. Not one of the forty-six had a positive desire for the ballot.

The city of Chicago is inhabited by a very large number of women but the number who exercise their right of franchise at the hotly contested school elections is each year is hardly more than 1,000. If only 1,000 out of several hundred thousand women care to vote at a school election, an election in which women ought by nature to be more interested in than any other, what interest can we say that the women of Chicago really have in the ballot? In some of the western states woman has had the franchise for a generation, but the number of women who vote at the annual elections is almost infintesimal compared to the population of the sex.

Some men believe that woman is better off without the ballot; that the sex is not by nature endowed with those qualities which fit it for active participation in the routine details of government. Those who so believe are but a small fraction; most men are indifferent about the matter and feel at heart that no action is necessary so long as woman herself shows such indifference.

Liberia is a libel on the name.

The passing of Senator Hemenway of Indiana has not been unnoticed.

Evanston, Ill., has the state of Wisconsin completely outdone. The latter's senatorial primary cost several hundred thousand dollars, but a primary held at Evanston Tuesday cost the city $28 for each vote cast. Elections come high but we must have them.

St. Louis county would like to know how it happens that the state has a "heritage" in the iron ore of St. Louis county but not in the granite quarries of Stearns county. Will our good friends of Goodhue county who want a tonnage tax on iron, please introduce a bill for a tonnage tax on clay?

HOTEL GOSSIP.

"One of the most surprising things about college life of the present day, is the number of girls who are taking up sociological studies," said a Wisconsin university graduate, at the Lenox hotel last night. "Especially is this so in our Western colleges. A number of girls at Madison have the political economy bug, and are making a study of social problems with a view of going into some kind of settlement work. Down at Minneapolis, the Minnesota girls have the same fad, the men tell me, and you can see future young Jane Addams' with their hair brushed down low over their ears, and wearing a sweet smile, discussing the problems of woman's place in the industrial world, and the sweat shop evil.

"Of course I have no doubt that many of them are really in earnest, and are going into the work because it interests them, and because they think they really can do some good, but then there are others whom I fear rather like the pose of the 'little sister of the poor.'

"But whatever the reason is, the fact exists that the number of young women who are taking up studies along this line, is increasing every year, and the time will come when they are going to cut a big figure. Some of them will doubtless settle peacefully down into domestic life, after a few months of lightening the burdens of the poor, but many of them, who are really in earnest, will go into the work and make a life study of it. Sooner or later they are bound to have their effect, and I believe it spells women's suffrage and also a great betterment in the conditions surrounding labor, especially the women who work I may be wrong, but I have seen the co-ed reformer, and know how enthusiastic she is. The Western colleges are turning loose several hundred a year now, and it won't be long before it is several thousand a year at the present rate of increase."

"As a matter of fact the packers of this country don't make their profits upon the meat; they make their money upon the various by-products that have been developed during the past decade or so," said W. P. Strom at the St. Louis hotel last night.

"Before the wonderful saving inventions the past ten years or more, many of the by-products were wasted. Today, under the modern methods of the packers, nothing is wasted, and it is these by-products that make the income for the packers.

"For instance, there are pearl buttons, that are made from the hoofs of the cattle. Then, too, there is imitation ivory. You think you are getting ivory, but much of the ivory in knife handles and other objects is made from the by-products of the packing houses. There is glue, lime and many other things. Most of the mattresses you sleep upon are stuffed from the hair of the hog. Then there are the hides of the cattle and the sheep, and innumerable other things that I have failed to mention. There is nothing that escapes the packers, or they have utilized every waste and have turned it to their advantage.

"You have heard where they have even turned the squeals of the hogs, when they are being slaughtered, into profit. They have placed this noise into the records of the phonograph, and are receiving a profit from it. They utilize the blood, and even the water upon the floor of the killing room, for fertilizing purposes.

"The best meat of this country is sent to the East and to England. As a matter of fact, you can't get as good a steak in Chicago as you can get in New York. This may sound funny, when you stop to think that Chicago is right in the section of the country where the best cattle of the country are killed; yet the best of the beef is sent to England and the East, for the fancy trade. They don't pay the price for the best beef in Chicago, and as a result, you don't get the meat that they get in New York. Some day the dealers in the West will awaken to this fact, and demand the best that the market affords. But at the present time the dealers in the East are purchasing better meat than the dealers of the West."

J. E. Corning of Louisville, Ky., literally threw his money to the wind yesterday. He has been in such a grouch ever since, that you can't mention Minnesota weather to him.

Mr. Corning was seated in his room at the Lenox hotel. He was making up his statement to the house. Upon his table he had, besides his writing material, some coin of the realm, and some of it was in big bills. In fact one of the bills was a fifty.

The room was very warm, and the gentleman from Kentucky opened the window to get a breath of fresh air. It happened that his writing table had been drawn up close to the window, and when he opened the window, one of those cross fire winds, that blew in various directions yesterday, swooped in through the window and picked that $50 bill rikht off from the table. It blew it down the street, and the last look that Mr. Corning got of his half-century, it was blowing toward Superior street at a rate of progress, that if continued, would take it to the bay front. Sure, he looked for the bill. You have that privilege, too. He carefully looked the ground over, from the hotel corner to the bay front, but nary a trace of the bill did he find. It has gone, and Corning is sore at the weather as a result.

C. E. Clarke of Virginia, at the Lenox yesterday, says Virginia mining men are at the preesnt time speculating upon the coming season. Some are inclined to believe that it will be a better year for ore than last year, while others are pessimistic and believe that even less ore will go down the lakes than went from the Duluth and Superior ports last year.

THE WEATHER.

Last night was clear and sharp, a perfect winter's night. The lowest temperature recorded was 12 below zero, but the air was so dry and still that nobody appeared to notice the cold. It moderated this morning, and the mild, cloudy weather promises to return. The thermometer is not likely to get within 10 degs. of the zero mark tonight.

A year ago today it was raining.

The sun rose this morning at 6:55 a. m., and will set this afternoon at 5:47, making ten hours and fifty-two minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Barometric depressions overlie the New England coast and Southwestern Saskatchewan. During the past twenty-four hours these disturbances caused rain or snow in the lake region, Ohio valley, Atlantic and Pacific states, Northern Montana and Southwestern Saskatchewan, besides warmer weather over the Rocky mountains and eastern slopes. Ideing barometric pressures from the Mississippi valley eastward to Pennsylvania and the South Atlantic coast are attended by much colder weather in all districts east of the Mississippi river. The barometer is high over the Mississippi valley, Gulf states and California. The easterly movement of the Saskatchewan low pressure will cause milder weather, easterly winds and snow flurries at the Head of the Lakes tonight and Friday."

An Enduring Monument.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Last year President Roosevelt changed the name of a forest reserve in Southern California from San Jacinto to Cleveland, in honor of the late president. The reserve has just been enlarged and now contains 1,573,000 acres. No monument could be devised with a better chance to be handed down the ages.

Scholarship and Women.

Collier's for Feb. 20: For the girl from abroad who wishes to study in this country new opportunities are opening with every year. In Bryn Mawr college, for example, ten scholarships are offered to the foreigner—five to English, Irish, or Scotch women, and five to German women. These scholarships are intended for the graduate worker. It is necessary that the applicant shall already have done work equivalent to that which is sufficient for a bachelor's degree in an American college. The scholarship awarded covers the fees for board, residence, and tuition at Bryn Mawr for one academic year. With almost every month comes fresh proof that the scholarly woman has come to stay. For many years this country has helped clothe and feed human bodies in the Old World. More and more our nation is able to offer sustenance for European minds as well.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Taken From the Columns of The Herald of This Date, 1884.

The secretary of the interior has refused to review the land case of Charlemagne Tower from the Duluth district. H. T. Thompson, attorney for the Iron Range road, says the case relates to some pine lands pre-empted west of the line of the railroad and expects that it will go into the courts and be made a test case.

The Omaha railroad has decided to go to work at once and complete its road into Superior and down to Duluth bay. At present the line runs only to its intersection with the Northern Pacific about three miles from the proposed location of the depot. Nothing has yet been decided in regard to the extension to Duluth.

Another telegram has been received from Herman E. Long, representative in England of the Duluth, North Shore & Southwestern Railroad company, stating that he has secured all the money required to build the road and will leave for home about March 1.

W. J. Cook and family will leave this evening for the West. He was one of the first to begin opening up what is now called the "Douglas gold and silver mine," and regrets having been compelled by ill-health to dispose of his eighth interest.

At a meeting of the common council last evening, George R. Stuntz presented plans for a drawbridge across the canal, but action was deferred until a future meeting. An ordinance in relation to giving the franchise across the bay from Rice's to Minnesota Point was read the first time.

C. R. Fulton, representing the Minneapolis Sash & Door company, has arrived in the city to establish a branch warehouse and is looking for a suitable place.

The Omaha railroad has decided to go to work at once and complete its road into Superior and down to Duluth bay. At present the line runs only to its intersection with the Northern Pacific about three miles from the proposed location of the depot. Nothing has yet been decided in regard to the extension to Duluth.

Miss Hattie Kuykendall will leave tomorrow for the South, where she will spend the remainder of the winter.

Some gentlemen connected with the Peninsula Car Works of Detroit, Mich., have purchased a building, site and dock property in Superior and propose to go into the business of building freight cars.

Leatherheak, the tailor, who skipped out of Duluth, has been heard from by his wife, who is stopping at the St. Nicholas. He is in Nebraska working at his trade.

John Neip, who works for M. Fink & Co., went to bed last night leaving a lamp burning. The woodwork adjoining caught fire, and had it not been for its timely discovery the building would have been destroyed.

Mr. Grant of the Grant House says there was no woman with Contractor Lombardi when he left on the train and says jealousy caused Mrs. Lombardi to start the story.

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Winona Independent: It might help some if Mr. Bryan would deliver his "Prince of Peace" lecture in Sacramento, Cal.

Le Sueur Sentinel: The bridegroom is the first acquired but least important article in a trousseau.

Eveleth Star: The St. Louis county courthouse is a great credit, both to the contractor and to the commission having the building in charge.

Cannon Falls Beacon: It was a rude jolt which the supreme court handed the interests when it decided that a concern engaged in violating the anti-trust law cannot collect its bills if the customer wishes to contest them in the courts.

Albert Lea Tribune: Because we have celebrated Lincoln in good shape is no reason for forgetting Washington. Without Washington there would have been no Lincoln.

Moose Lake Star-Gazette: And now, Miss Cuba, you are given freedom once more with the request that you use it like a perfect lady.

Princeton Union: Although Hon. J. J. Opsahl's bill, which provides for an appropriation of $100,000 to purchase dynamite to aid the settlers of Northern Minnesota in clearing their land of stumps, was regarded as a joke by many members of the legislature, Mr. Opsahl is in dead earnest, and there is merit in his bill. The settlers are not over-burdened with money and they are obliged to pay high prices for explosives to blast out the stumps. If they could secure dynamite at wholesale, plus the cost of distribution, it would mean quite a saving to them. The state, of course, would be reimbursed, in the same manner as seed wheat loans were repaid by the Red River valley farmers on several occasions. The man who first suggested the idea of a dynamite loan from the state was Charles S. Carter of Hines, Beltrami county, a former resident of Princeton.

Eveleth Star: Speaker Rockne of the state legislature is by all means the most respected speaker the Minnesota law makers have had since the days of M. J. Dowling. This fact the writer discovered while on a few days' visit at the state capitol recently.

Northfield News: Real, general prosperity will make itself noticeable whenever the people live within their income and put aside something for a rainy day. A majority could reduce their expenses without stinting themselves, either as to food or garments. This applies especially to families whose annual income exceeds $1,000 and who own their own homes. The simple life is not very much so from the standpoint of healthfulness and contentment.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Either a man is always wronging somebody or somebody is wronging him.

The way to make any nonsense sound reasonable to a girl is to put it into a song or a love letter.

It takes an awful lot of money to convince people they can afford to act as if they didn't have any.

A bank account is a good thing to keep a woman from having a balance twenty-four hours after her husband makes a deposit for her.

The only thing a woman regrets about not being a man is how, if she was one, she could pretend she had too much brains to understand her wife.

MEANT TO BE FUNNY.

Philadelphia Record: Wigg—Biggins' wife insists upon buying his cigars for him.

Wagg—Horrible!

Wigg—Yes. She buys them to match his stockings and neckties.

Houston Post: "You say he always wins at poker?"

"Always."

"Haven't you ever played with him?"

"No, I don't play poker."

"Then how do you know?"

"He is always trying to get up a game."

Nashville American: "I suppose your wife was tickled to death at your raise in salary?"

"She will be."

"Haven't you told her yet?"

"No; I thought I would enjoy myself for a couple of weeks first."

Catholic Standard and Times: "No," snapped the sharp-faced woman at the door, "I ain't got no food fur you, an' I ain't got no old clo'es. Now, git!"

"Lady," replied Harvard Hasben, "I could repay you well. Give me a square meal and I'll give you a few lessons in grammar."

Kansas City Times: "That mind reader is no good. He couldn't read a thing from mine."

"That doesn't prove him no good."

Pittsburg Post: Wasington was crossing the river on the ice. "I do hope that history won't confuse me with Eliza!" he cried. Herewith he had the painting executed to nail it.

Yonkers Statesman: Mr. Redd—There go Mr and Mrs. Greene in their new car.

Mrs. Redd—What make is it, dear?

Mr. Redd—Same as ours.

Mrs. Redd—Oh! it is. It doesn't smell the same, does it?

Detroit News-Tribune: She (indignantly)—You had no business to kiss me!

He—But it wasn't business; it was pleasure.

Brooklyn Life: Teacher—Johnnie, where is the North Pole?

Johnnie—Dunno.

Teacher—You don't know, after all my teaching?

Johnnie—Nope. If Peary can't find it, there's no use of my trying.

Puck: The Man—I can look in your eyes, dear, and see everything.

The Maiden—I am sorry, but when I told father he looked in Bradstreet's and saw nothing.

California Reconsiders.

Baltimore Sun: California has concluded not to go to war with Japan just now.

WHITE BILL IS KILLED

North Dakota House Rejects Change in Primary Election Law.

Passes Bill Giving Vote to Women on Liquor Questions.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The White primary election bill was killed in the house on Wednesday afternoon by a vote of 58 to 39 after a short debate in which the author of the measure took an important part. This bill provided for a convention system of nominating majority and minority candidates and submitting them to the people at the primary election. When the bill had been voted for indefinite postponement, Mr. White gave notice that he would ask for a reconsideration.

JUDSON LA MOURE,
Chairman of Committee on Appropriations of North Dakota Senate.

At the evening session a bill was passed giving women the right to vote on questions relating to the liquor traffic. The anti-Prohibitionists lined up against the measure, but the vote was 59 to 27 on final passage.

At a meeting of the state affairs committee to be held today, the bills introduced by Representatives McCrea of Pembina and Atwood of Stutsman county, which provide for a board of trustees to care for the various penal, charitable and reformatory institutions, will be given consideration. The measure sintroduced are practically the same in their provisions, creating a board of five, which board shall take the place of the existing boards of control of the different institutions.

At a meeting of the temperance committees of the house and senate, held Wednesday, the representatives of the W. C. T. U. and of the State Enforcement league appeared to urge the retention of the present system of druggist permits as governing the sale of liquor for medicinal purposes. The bill before the legislature, which was passed by the senate and which has been favorably reported in the house, being referred back to the committee, however, at its own request, would make the sale of liquor for medical purposes only possible after a physician's prescription had been given. This would allow all regular druggists to handle liquors, but would restrict the sale of the same to the prescriptions. Under the drug permit system, now in vogue, the druggist makes the sale on a sworn affidavit of the purchaser that the liquor is to be used for none other than medicinal purposes. This system has given rise to many hot fights and has been pronounced to be far from satisfactory.

The development of the vast coal districts of the western portions of the state is the object of the establishment of a sub-experimental mining station to be maintained and operated under the direction of the faculty of the school of mines. An appropriation of $12,000 has been granted by the legislature for the establishment of this station with the provision that it shall be located at or near Hebron, in Morton county. It is planned to make experiments in lignite coal, determining its value in the manufacture of gas and of briquettes. Already some work has been done along this line and it is said that wonderful results have been obtained. The further prosecution of these experiments, it has been urged, will result in the opening up of a vast expanse of territory in the western section of North Dakota, the resources of which have not yet been developed to any extent.

The abolishment of spring shooting is now practically certain. Both the house and the senate have passed bills doing away with spring shooting, and while the fact that the two game bills before the assembly have been passed by the house in which they originated has caused some little friction between the two branches, there seems little doubt but what the spring shooting feature will finally be agreed upon. A conference committee of the house and senate will be appointed this week for the purpose of taking up the game bills and securing some measure that will be acceptable to the assembly.

WEST END

SLEEPING ON PORCHES

West Enders Would Prevent Inroads of the White Plague.

"Tuberculosis Porches" Are Attached to Dwelling Houses.

"You would be surprised if you knew how many 'tuberculosis porches' are attached to dwellings in the West end, and how many are being added or planned," remarked a West ender today.

"I have been noticing it lately and I was surprised to see so many houses on which were protected porches, evidently for members of the family who are tubercular. Many of these porches have been built after the dwellings were completed and they are very noticeable. It certainly is an indication of the prevalence of the 'white plague' to see them.

"Yesterday, I noticed three of these porches which had just been finished, evidently. Nearly all of those I have seen are located on second floors and evidently are in use nearly every night.

"The campaigns which have been waged against consumption have brought out the theory that sleeping out of doors, or as nearly out of doors as possible, is beneficial for people afflicted with tuberculosis and the people who have tubercular children or relatives are taking precautions and having them sleep in these extra verandas.

"Some of these porches, I imagine, are being used by people who are not really afflicted with tuberculosis but whose health is such that it is feared they will be, and they propose to take precautions while there is still time."

COL. COOPER IS ENRAGED

behalf of the men who have been his ablest political lieutenants and most devoted personal friends.

Lancet Editorial Excluded.

As soon as court opened Judge Hart announced that he would exclude the Lancet editorial which the state offered. It was offered to prove that the Lancet, in which Col. Cooper was interested, printed the original charges against Governor Cox, which, when repeated by Carmack in the Tennesseean, caused Col. Cooper to say that either he or Carmack must die.

"Do you want to hear any more argument?" inquired one of state's counsel.

Bang, came down the judge's gavel. "I not only do not want to hear any more, but I do not propose to do, unless some attorney feels as though he will die unless he gets a speech out of his systen. And I want to say that long argument must stop. We are wasting the public's time."

Col. Cooper again took the stand and Capt. Fitzhugh resumed the cross-examination, commencing with the state debate between Carmack and Patterson during the last gubernatorial campaign.

The witness was asked if the Nashville papers did not report this debate in full and if he ever read of Carmack's attack upon him in the American. He said he had not read it, but he believed the papers did not publish the debate in full.

"Didn't you say he attacked you nearly every day in this debate?"

"I said practically every day."

The witness was asked to tell what he meant by practically, but refused to say until ordered to by the court.

Many Told of Attacks.

"I know what it means," he said, "and so does the jury. If you do not, it is your fault."

"Do you remember what he said?"

"I can refer to my notes and tell."

"You have notes?"

"Yes, sir."

"Where did you get them?"

"From the stenographer, who took the debates."

"You got these notes since the trial began?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who told you of the attacks?"

"John Sharp and Governor Patterson and hundreds of others told me."

"Why there were only forty-five debates."

"But I heard from hundreds of persons of the attacks. I scarcely met a man who attended the debates that did not tell me of the attacks."

"What were the facts of this attack —the words?"

"I did not recall except the one about the 'angel with the smell of hell upon his wings.'"

"Don't you know he never said hell."

"Yes."

"You put it in—you use the word hell often?"

"I certainly do. It's a favorite word of mine and I use it whenever I want to."

"Didn't counsel tell you to look this expression up in the stenographer's report of the debate?"

"No, sir. I told counsel to have it looked up for me."

Fitzhugh was on his feet, firing questions rapidly and Judge Anderson said:

Rebuke by Judge.

"I wish counsel would keep his seat and avoid these exciting demonstrations."

"Let him alone," said Col. Cooper. "Let him alone. He can't frighten me; I can parry his attacks."

"Did you say these attacks ocurred practically every day?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, didn't you say they happened every day?"

"I said so, practically."

"So you are just testifying practically, are you?"

"Let it go at that and pass on," retorted the witness.

"So you are anxious to pass over this feature of your examination, are you?"

"No, sir, I can stand it a week if you can."

The witness was next asked to read the schedule of the joint debate in Middle and Eastern Tennessee, which he did.

"What was the first attack?"

"Carman called me a bolter."

"Didn't you bolt the ticket and vote for Gen. Fussell against Governor Bates for governor?"

"I never voted for a Republican in my life. I did vote for Fussell and against Bates."

Witness Half Arises.

Counsel for defense objected, but Col. Cooper was excited, and half arose from his chair and exclaimed:

"Let him alone; let me answer. I want to answer him."

"Didn't you bolt the regular ticket?"

"No, sir, I did not. There were two regular Democratic tickets."

"What else did you object to?"

"The statement that I dominated the governor, a man who was a bigger man than I am, and who was my friend. It was aimed to hurt and slur him."

"It was a compliment to you, was it not?"

"No, sir; it was not. It was meant as a slur. I was a private citizen and had no mouthpiece, no office, and no way to protect myself."

"You say you are not in politics. Did you not tell the proprietor of the Maxwell hotel, that unless a certain picture was removed the Democratic committee woud change its headquarters?"

"After a request from the manager of the Maxwell, I went to see him. The pictures of the Democratic state candidates were put up. Also was one of Taft. I demanded that either Taft's picture be removed or the picture of the Republican candidate for governor be displayed to show the Democratic committee was not responsible for the Taft picture, for at that time Carmack was charging that we were trading Bryan for Patterson.

"I cannot see the competency of these questions or facts," said Judge Hart. "You should stick to the case, gentlemen, or we will be here forever."

The state next reverted to the News Scimitar editorial in March, 1908, which Col. Cooper said was the first break between himself and Senator Carmack. He denied that he knew another man had written it but admitted that another man claimed to have written the article.

Colonich was indicted on a joint indictment charging him and Peter Bacha with entering the dry house of the Mariska mine at Sparta and stealing a quantity of clothing. The men were given separate trials and Colonich was convicted, while Bacha was acquitted.

Cass was employed at the company's mill and the accident occurred May 5 of last year. The papers in the case were filed with the clerk of the district court yesterday afternoon.

TEXAS TO GET TAFT

the dinner Friday night in honor of Elihu Root and with Mrs. Taft will take an early train for Washington Saturday.

Soon after his inauguration, Mr. Taft will visit the ranch of Charles P. Taft, near San Antonio, Tex., to spend probably two weeks. Preparations are being made for this visit, a residence being under construction and golf links being laid out.

The president-elect has completed his cabinet by the oiler of the treasury portfolio and its acceptance. That the offer was made to and accepted by Franklin MacVeagh of Chicago is as near a positive statement of what is believed to be the fact as may be made in the face of an absolute refusal by Taft to throw any light on the most interesting situation.

It is vaguely hinted there are things to be accomplished in Washington before an announcement may be properly made. Mr. Taft, however, gave a bold hint that it might be possible for him to divulge the identity of his latest cabinet acquisition very soon.

The first three prizes went to St. Cloud players. The first, a silver loving cup, was won by George M. Walz; the second, another loving cup, by Gustav Koch, and the third, a gold handled silk umbrella, by Math Nuerenberg.

The fourth, fifth, sixth and booby prizes were won respectively by M. Bohl, J. T. Powrie, J. N. Joergensen and Math Kraker, all of Wahpeton.

A LONDON JOKE.

London News: "Really," said the stylish lady, enthusiastically, to her friend, "it is quite worth while going to the zoo, if only to see the wonderful supply of rhododendrons."

"Is it?" replied her friend, languidly. "I like to look at the great, big clumsy beasts, too, but it always smells so unpleasantly round the cages."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON: FEB. 28. Acts 8:4-25; The Gospel in Samaria.

By Rev. J. S. Kirtley, D. D.

THE CONNECTION.

The murder of Stephen was the first taste of blood and the tiger in the heart of the enemy became rampant. The young man Saul of Tarsus became the leader of the new form of persecution. Men and women were dragged to prison. But God causes the wrath of man to praise him and the scattered disciples lighted the gospel fires wherever they went.

THE LESSON.

I.

Sympathy From the Mother Church. 14-17.

"Now when the apostles that were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John, who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Spirit; for as yet he was fallen upon none of them; only they had been baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Spirit."

1. The New Leader of the Enemy.

Saul of Tarsus was a great leader of men and was zealous for God.

Finding himself at the head of the bloody business he did his work thoroughly, for he laid waste the church as a wild beast would lay waste a field of grain. He did it systematically, for it was a house-to-house canvass; he did it with unspeakable brutality, for he dragged women as well as men to prison, and from words of his own we judge that he sometimes committed murder; he did it conscientiously, as he afterwards tells us, for he thought he was defending God's honor and properly punishing evildoers.

As a result Jerusalem was a dangerous place for them and most of the church was driven out of the city. The apostles remained either because being less sympathetic with the Gentiles they were less subject to persecution, or because they bravely ran the risk of death in order to supply the needs of the city.

2. The New Era of Christianity.

This introduces a new era in Christianity with two distinct marks—the enlarged work of laymen and missionary work. This new movement is started by two laymen, who had been chosen as deacons—Stephen, whose preaching widened their thoughts of the Gospel and brought on the persecution which drove them out to preach the Gospel to foreigners; Philip, who won the first foreign converts. From that time every man was an informal preacher. The word translated "preaching" is very much like our word chatting and they went about chatting the Gospel. Why they had not made any effect to obey Christ's last command to go into all the world with the Gospel is probably due to their stubborn Jewish feeling, their success in Jerusalem and their popularity which made it very comfortable for them, and to the further fact that many foreign born Jews came to Jerusalem to attend the feasts and were converted there. Two things start them at it now—their Christian instincts that at last compel them and the persecution that drives them out. They not only accept the inevitable, but made use of it. Though they were driven, still they went. They added the momentum of a fresh and powerful lever to the force that sent them out of the city, and deliberately, wisely, systematically went about preaching.

3. The Attack on Samaria.

Their experience in only one place is recorded and that is because the people were part heathen—the Samaritans. They were descendants of those five foreign nations whom Shalmanezer brought from the distant East more then 600 years before and were mingled with the scattered Jews. This mongrel race had enough Jewish blood in them to cherish the hope of a Messiah, yet they were ranked with Gentiles. It was easier to go to them than to those who were wholly Gentiles. Is not that the reason their ancestors were brought there centuries before—that these descendants might bridge the chasm between Jew and Gentile? The broad-minded Philip was the one who went there.

The success was instantaneous and marked because they cherished hopes of a Messiah and because Jesus had often shown mercy to some of them, in one instance having won a great many to himself as Messiah. The miracles arrested their attention, awakened reverence, in many cases gratitude, and led them to believe the Gospel which Philip preached. The whole city was changed and a new joy took possession of them.

4. The Pretended Conversion.

Simon was a shrewd soothsayer, like the many who still practice magic in the East today. His imposture lay in his claim to be a higher order of being. He saw there was a reality and a power in Philip and the gospel he preached, and he allied himself with it, for the purpose of utilizing that new power in his business. He had not heard of Ananias and Sapphira, evidently.

5. The Re-enforcement from Jerusalem.

The church at Jerusalem was reluctant to see the disciples too free in preaching the gospel to non-Jews.

The delegation was sent with a desire to know the real truth of the matter, with the purpose of preventing any sour to extravagance, with the benevolent purpose of instructing and encouraging the young converts. They were there to help and they did so, especially in imparting to them the endowment of the Holy Ghost. That would complete their equipment for serving God. Philip could only pray for the Spirit and God would answer as He saw best. The Spirit had converted them; now he would empower them to testify of Christ. It would seem that only the apostles could impart that gift and it died with them. Everyone who was converted had the Holy Spirit; some received His power in a large way, so that it could be called receiving the Holy Ghost; some did not receive the special power at all. The hands were laid on to signify, not that they imparted the gift themselves, but that they received it from God. Simon saw that they had a power which he had not and from that moment his own all-absorbing purpose was to secure it in any way, in order that he might regain his lost influence and resume the acquisition of money.

II.

The Singular Case of Simon. 18-25.

"Now, when Simon saw that through the laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Spirit was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsover I lay my hands, he may receive the Holy Spirit. But Peter said unto him, Thy silver perish with thee, because thou hast thought to obtain the gift of God with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right before God. Repent therefore of thy wickedness, and pray the Lord, if perhaps the thought of thy heart shall be forgiven thee. For I see that thou art in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity. And Simon answered and said, Pray ye for me to the Lord, that none of the things which ye have spoken come unto me.

"They therefore, when they had testified and spoken the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel to many villages of the Samaritans."

This is the second marked case of imposture, and it must be dealt with in a way to protect the infant church at that Samaritan town.

1. Attempted Simony and modern Simony.

It was this man who gave the name to that species of vice which in modern times, or chiefly in medieval times, has consisted in buying a place in the religious organizations by means of money. He could have made limitless wealth if he had gotten the power to bestow the Holy Spirit on those who gave him money. That attempt is different from modern Simony, because he wanted to buy the Holy Spirit and not the church; he failed, while his namesakes have succeeded. Those who sell pardons from sin and permission to sin seem an anachronism in any age, but they still do business. We laugh at the superstition of the presumptious fellow, yet strut about, thinking we are concealed from God.

2. The Curse on Him.

It did not close the door on him. It only saw him going to perdition and bade his money keep out of the channels of activity proposed and go with him.

3. Mercy Extended.

The thought of his heart had not yet fully crystallized and was therefore in a state of flux. Though he was in a state of unrelieved sin, expressed by a very striking phrase, he was still offered pardon, if he would repent. Every form of sin against God seems to be forgiven by Him, if men will only put themselves in an attitude to receive forgiveness and cease to practice sin.

4. Probable Repentance.

The case was not in itself a hopeless one, for he had been brought up in ignorance of moral distinctions. He even seems to have been really penitent, or was it a mere desire to escape the terrible wrath of God? At any rate, it is possible that he really repented: Perhaps the apostles on their return to Jerusalem, had a new story to tell of God's grace transforming the heart of a shrewd hypocrite. There was satisfaction in Jerusalem over the work in Samaria and the workers could go on to other places, as Phillip did.

WHAT THE MASTERS SAY.

The mothers must often push the birdlings out of the nest in order to teach them to fly. In spite of the beauty and glory of the Gospel, in spite of the natural impulse of the soul to communicate its joys and its discovery to other men, it is a fair question whether the religion of Jesus would ever have gotten beyond Palestine if it had not been for its prosecutors. It is so easy to stay in the warm nest. But a cruel hand flung out the birds far forth, and away they went singing. It is lack of an income that has scattered the younger sons of English noblemen over the earth. It is poverty that has scattered the peasants and lazzaroni of Europe broadcast over the New World. Persecution drove the Puritans and the Huguenots to America. "Let me stay here in the bin!" cries the wheat to the farmer. "Not much," cries the farmer to the wheat as he flings it into the furrow. Thank God our modern missionaries are going without being driven! But how they are scattered! From China to Japan and Korea, from India to Ceylon and Africa. We shall have a harvest that shall make the reapers shout some day.—Goss.

We see now why the Samaritans were raised up more than six hundred years before and why they have been preserved in their half and half character for centuries. They were neither Jews nor Greeks. They were midway between these distant moral extremes. The gulf between the two extremes was social, religious, political—and the Samaritan bridged it. God plainly intended him for this from the first.—Stifler.

PERTINENT QUESTIONS.

1. Is there any special gift of the Holy Spirit for today?
2. Would some persecution do us good?
3. Is there any race prejudice for us to overcome?
4. Are there any traces of Simony among us?
4. Why does not the offer of pardon for sin encourage the practice of sin?
6. What is the strongest reason for home missions?

FIRE UNDER HIS FARM.

Phenomenon on Charles Chase's Land Adjoining Famous Bad Lands.

Fargo, N. D., Feb. 25.—Are the ancient fires, which formed the peculiar freak of nature known as the Bad Lands, still burning? And is the area of the Bad Lands to be increased and will the farm of Sidney Chase soon become an addition to the queer natural wonder?

Recently underground fires have been discovered on the Chase homestead in Stark county. This claim adjoins the Bad Lands and the fires are visible through a crack in the surface of the earth. There seems to be a huge furnace underneath. Its area is unknown and considerable interest attaches to the discovery.

Severe Cold Cured
BY CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

MISS ETHEL ROCHE

It was a happy thought that prompted Miss Ethel Roche of 227 Florida Ave., Jacksonville, Fla., to ask her druggist's opinion when looking for something to cure her cold. A druggist knows the value of a medicine by the popularity it enjoys and the repeated calls he has for it, and his prompt advice to her was to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Sister Was Also Cured

Miss Roche had a neglected cold about three years ago and was so hoarse she could hardly speak. She says: "The druggist told me to try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I did so and in three days I was greatly relieved; within a week I was cured. Mother felt so pleased, she said she would never be without it and when sister caught cold soon afterwards, she at once gave her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it broke up the cold in one day."

Never Neglect a Cold

A cold should never be treated lightly as it is always more or less serious. Many people make the mistake of neglecting a cold until it settles in some of the delicate pulmonary organs and chronic catarrh, bronchitis or serious lung trouble develops. If every cold received the attention it should have, all danger of this kind would be avoided. Every cold can be cured by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. A bottle or two of this remedy taken when the cold is first contracted will promptly cure it, and not only save doctor's bills, but much suffering and annoyance later on.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is for sale everywhere at 25c per bottle, large size 50c.

"VIC" HAS A PEDIGREE AS LONG AS A PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGE AND CARRIES LIFE INSURANCE

At the Spalding this week there is an attraction that at different times in its career has vied as a magnet of attention, with "Fighting Bob" Evans and Ambassador James Bryce. The object is one that first alarms and then endears. It is an English bred bulldog, named Prince, owned by F. H. Seeley of New York, and it has a line of royal ancestors that extends back into the maze of history as far as Alfred the Great.

"Vic," as the dog is called outside of kennel shows, has a face that is a cross between Tom Sharkey and "Kid" Broad, those two eminent has beens of pugilistic usefulness. It is so homely that it is positively fascinating. "Vic" cost $1,000 in real money when he was a mere pup. Today he is 3 years old. Merriman, the Chicago cigar man, offered Mr. Seeley $3,500 for the dog. The offer was promptly refused. He carries $2,500 life insurance, and the dog is so healthy-looking, and appears so abundantly able to take care of himself, that life writers consider him in the class of first rate risks.

Stephen Crane or Robert Louis Stephenson, able artists of word description, might have been able to adequately describe the dog; others less gifted with descriptive expression had best desist. The dog weighs fifty-five pounds, out of condition. He has a width of shoulder and chest that makes his tapering body look frail and out of proportion. He has the "undershot" jaw, as they say in the parlance of the kennel, a nose a little over an inch in length, a lower jaw that protrudes fully an inch over his upper lip, from which gleam two sharp tusk-like teeth, that seem just made to grasp viciously and cling with death-like grip.

The dog attracts by his vicious homeliness. It would be quite as impossible to pass "Vic" by without giving a backward glance as it would be to give Lillian Russell the haughty high stare. You would believe that his main usefulness was like Bosco's—"to eat them alive." But it is not. He is the most docile and harmless of creatures. He has been at the Spalding but two days, yet already he is the pet of the house. The most timid feminine guest of the house is in raptures over "that lovely dog." The bell boys play and fondle his royal ugliness and the clerks back of the desk endeavor to coax him back into the sanctum.

Mr. Seeley secured the pup in England. He represents the acme of breeding. The blood in his veins is the bluest of the blue, running back to the early strains of the original breed of the species. He has won bench prizes and he has won fights, impromptu ones, but nevertheless, desperate ones. He has killed three dogs that had picked him as a "dead one," but in each instance the fight was not the fault of "Vic," according to Mr. Seeley. He never picks upon a smaller dog, for there he shows that he is a thorough gentleman, and shows that blood will tell in the end. He is not embarrassed by any kind of company, as he has drawn attention from "Fighting Bob" Evans and James Bryce, ambassador to the United States from England, when he was at the same hotel as these two eminent men.

"Vic" travels over the country with Mr. Seeley. He is as much at home in the most exclusive club or hotel as he would be in the dogpit, awaiting the release to fly at an opponent. He is a true, almost perfect type of the highest bred bulldog that years of study and breeding can accomplish, and as such he is a marvel, in that he combines the most homely and vicious face, strength and fighting ability, with a disposition that is as sunny and optimistic as his looks are otherwise.

If you want to see something that would feint Jack Johnson into a posture of self-defense, go down and take a look at that fighting phiz of "Vic's."

HAD DOUBLE CELEBRATION.

North Dakota Was Admitted Into Union on Washington's Birthday.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb 25.—Aside from being the birthday anniversary of George Washington, Feb. 22 was a red letter day in the calendar of North Dakota for other reasons—reasons which, twenty years ago Monday, were of great moment to the residents of this state. It was on Feb. 22, 1889, that Grover Cleveland, president of the United States, signed the bill giving statehood to North Dakota.

That day, by the same token, is one on which the residents of Washington, Montana and South Dakota are as fully licensed to celebrate—as North Dakotans. President Cleveland signed bills giving statehood to those commonwealths at the same time that North Dakota received that recognition.

SELLERS GROPE IN DARK; STEEL TRADE IS AWRY

Reversal of Policy of the Steel Corporation Sets Each Interest to Work Trying to Get Its Bearings—Individual Courses Mapped Out.

New York, Feb. 25.—The Iron Age today says: The complete reversal of the selling policy of the Steel corporation has thrown the entire trade into confusion and sellers have been groping in the dark. Each interest is endeavoring to find its bearings and is seeking to determine what prices must be met and whether it is wise to take a part in the struggle. Small mills are even now withdrawing completely.

Each constituent company of the Steel corporation appears to adopt such course as the special circumstances surrounding it justify.

As yet there are no facts upon which to base any opinion concerning the effect of the price reductions in stimulating business. There have been no sales of consequence and what inquiries are being received are either put out as feelers or as a means of securing data for claims for readjustments on recent contracts. A preliminary step in a number of instances has been the demand for cancellation of such contracts. It may be well to warn the trade that it may take some weeks before the skirmishing among buyers and sellers is over and round tonnages are placed. It is tonnage that is wanted by the mills and the prices will be made to bring it out.

There are some indications of a friendly spirit among some of the leading interests so that the term "price war" should not be indiscriminately used.

It is only in a few lines of mill products that prices have been openly made and some of the published reports regarding other lines are undoubtedly exaggerated.

Issue New Discounts.

The leading pipe mills have issued new discounts on merchant pipe of 80 off on three-quarter to six inch, with the usual one point on the base and 5 per cent differential to leading jobbers. The new discounts show reductions ranging from $6 to $10 per ton.

There is little disposition to force the selling of billets, but it is probable that the price will be made $22 Pittsburg, with $23 for tin bars.

There is no truth in the reports that the price of steel rails has been reduced from $28 to $25. The opinion is expressed, however, that they may be affected by the struggle.

Steel bars are definitely and openly down to $1.20, although it must be noted that some leading sellers decline to commit themselves beyond July 1. It may be observed in this connection that there is a disposition on the part of some important mills in all lines to decline to be drawn into long-time contracts at the present level of prices and to touch in any way the long established lists of extras.

So far as we can learn, no prices lower than $1.30 Pittsburg have yet been named by any body on structural material and on plates. The reports that $1.24 is being done cannot be confirmed.

Hoops and bands have been reduced $4 per ton, but while it is admitted that some sharp concessions have been made on sheets, no exact figures are available. Nor has there developed anything tangible in the matter of prices on tin plate.

Wire Prices Maintained.

Wiremakers are maintaining prices for the present, the feeling being that the condition of the trade is such that development concerning the spring movement must be awaited before intelligent action can be taken.

One point in connection with the developments of the past week, which cannot be too strongly insisted upon is that the decline in prices of finished iron and steel has discounted any possible effect of a reduction in the duties of iron and steel upon the domestic markets.

A sharp distinction must be drawn between these finished lines in which co-operation has had its sway and the crude material, pig iron, in which there has been an open market all along. Only part of the metal made is bought and sold. In January, the steel makers produced for their own use 1,110,000 tons, leaving 683,000 tons only to the merchant furnaces, who therefore represented a little over 26 per cent of the output. A moderate proportion of this is Bessemer basic, low phosphorus and mill iron, which is directly affected by the recent events in the steel market. Since it is almost entirely consumed by the small independent steel works and puddling mills, it would suffer if these were beaten in the struggle for work by the large companies who make their own iron. The bulk, however, is foundry iron, which could only be stimulated by the inevitable increase in general consumption if it were not for one important consideration and that is one which soon loom up. We refer to the prices for Lake ores for the coming season.

The sellers of Lake ores are few in number and are powerful though not united, and it remains to be seen whether and to what extent they will be backers of their steel producing customers, directly or indirectly, by a readjustment of prices. Some of them are makers of pig iron and can meet the market without making any concession to outside ore buyers. But there would probably develop from any concessions made on ore prices to outside steel merchants' furnaces a general lowering of prices on ore, and it is this contingency which might lead to a weakness in foundry iron after the season's ore prices had been fixed.

Pig Iron Dull.

Coke is already so low that there is little chance that pig iron makers could pass on to their customers' economies in production thus effected.

During the last week, pig iron has been very dull in all markets and is weaker. One of the most significant developments during the past week is the announcement from Chicago that that city will hereafter be a basing point in naming prices on such products as are turned out by the mills of the United States Steel corporation in that district. This will be established without reference to the freight rate from Pittsburg as an arbitrary differential. Some sort of differential will be observed, but just what it will amount to has not yet been fully determined.

The copper market is very dull and it is probable that electrolitic may go to 12½ cents, which should begin to attract buyers.

$50,000 NECKLACE STOLEN AT BALL

Wealthy California Belle Loses Gems Hidden Under Dress.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 25.—A $50,000 pearl necklace, belonging to Miss Jennie Crocker of this city, was stolen during the Mardi Gras ball given by Mrs. Charles O. Alexander at the San Francisco hotel.

Miss Crocker was one of 402 guests, the list including all persons prominent socially in this city. She was also a guest at the more exclusive dinner given by Mrs. Alexander before the ball. Miss Crocker wore the jewels at the dinner and still had them on when she donned her costume for the ball.

She went to the ball room at 11 o'clock with the pearls hidden under her simple costume. She did not become aware that they had been stolen until nearly 4 in the morning.

Miss Crocker is the 24-year-old daughter of the late Frederick Crocker, one of California's wealthiest pioneers. She is one of the richest women in the west, having inherited a large share of her father's estate. The necklace, which has been ranked as one of the finest in the West, if not in the country, is composed of fifty-three pearls, all flawless specimens, which were brought by Miss Crocker from Europe some years ago.

He is now $500 richer, and Mrs. Alfred J. Merle, a wealthy woman of Alameda, is again in possession of her jewels. Among the jewels was a diamond pin, valued at $1,000. After losing the Jewels, Mrs. Merle advertised for their return, and offered a reward of $500. After picking up the diamonds, Potter returned to the office of the telegraph company, asked for a brief leave and took the jewels to the home of Mrs. Merle, where he received the reward.

When the Blood Is Bad the Digestion Is Bad

Showing the Reason for the Wonderful Success of the Tonic Treatment for Stomach Trouble in Even the Most Stubborn Cases.

Good red blood, which means blood well supplied with oxygen, is absolutely necessary to healthy digestion, for upon it depends the proper flow of the digestive fluids, the activity of the muscles of the stomach and the assimilation of the digested food.

That is why a debilitated, run-down condition so often brings on a disturbance of the digestive system that frequently runs into a severe stomach disorder.

The principle of the tonic treatment for indigestion is that it makes the blood rich and red, promotes a normal flow of gastric fluids, tones up and strengthens the stomach. There is a healthy desire for food, an improved digestion and recovery is rapid and permanent.

IN MINNEAPOLIS.

How Acute Indigestion Was Cured by This Treatment.

Miss Adena Anderson of No. 1930 14th avenue, South, Minneapolis, Minn., cured herself of indigestion by building up her blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Her case shows the value of the tonic treatment. She says:

"A few months ago I was greatly troubled with indigestion and everything I ate hurt me. I think the trouble was brought on through overwork at my studies, for I was a student at the University at the time. consulted a doctor who advised me to go home and rest as I was all run down. As I was just about through I did not want to do this. So I kept at my work although I would get tired very easily and had but little ambition. My stomach was sour most of the time and there was a great deal of gas on it. What little I ate greatly distressed me. I had severe pains through my shoulder blades and a sort of dull pain across my back.

"The doctor did not seem to help me and so one day my sister told me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They benefited me at once and I was able to finish my studies. I was soon able to eat heartily and have no distress in my stomach. The pains in my shoulders and back disappeared and I have been well and strong ever since. I can heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and hope every one who suffers from indigestion will try them."

CAN EAT HEARTILY NOW.

Another Cure in Minneapolis by the Tonic Treatment.

Mrs. J. S. Wilder, a saleswoman of No. 338 Ninth street, S. E., Minneapolis, Minn., found no relief from stomach trouble until she tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Speaking of her case, Mrs. Wilder says:

"About four years ago I was suffering with stomach trouble, which was brought on by irregular and hurried eating. I was confined to my bed for three days at a time with headaches due to biliousness. My stomach felt as though there was a lump in it and the gas on my stomach gave me awful distress. I had severe pains in my back, my complexion was sallow and I was nervous and irritable. It made me short of breath to go upstairs. In the morning there would be a brown coating on my tongue.

"The doctors gave me only temporary relief and after I had been sick for a year I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills upon the advice of a friend. The pills worked wonders for me. They helped me after a fair trial and then made a rapid cure. I can eat a hearty meal now without distress and can work every day. I always praise Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and shall never be without them."

HAD SPLITTING HEADACHE.

Stomach Trouble Caused Distressing Symptoms in This Case.

Mrs. Anna S. Bowyer, a farmer's wife, of R. F. D. No. 1, Dundee, Minn., has been entirely cured of stomach trouble by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and heartily recommends this tonic treatment to anyone similarly afflicted.

"Following a general run-down condition," she says, "I suffered with stomach trouble for about one year. I had been feeling mean for some time. My stomach became sour and I was constantly belching gas. My heart was affected and for six months I could not lie on my left side. It beat so fast that it seemed I would choke and could not get my breath. The least effort to do anything made me short of breath. I was so nervous that sleep was almost impossible and I could not bear any noise. I was troubled with splitting headaches and with dizzy spells. My appetite was gone and I had no ambition to work. I was confined to bed for two or three days at a time.

"The doctor said I had stomach trouble but I gave up his treatment after a short trial as it did not hlep me in the least. I tried many medicines but nothing helped me until I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I read in our paper of a case that seemed to be exactly like mine that had been cured by the pills. I was hopeless of ever feeling better but thought I would give the pills a trial. At first they did not seem to help me but I had confidence in them and after a thorough treatment I felt well again. I have been wonderfully benefited. My heart and stomach do not trouble me any more and my appetite is hearty."

A ST. PAUL WOMAN

Tells How She Was Cured of Indigestion and Rheumatism.

Anyone who has suffered from either rheumatism or indigestion can appreciate the conditon of a frail woman whose body was racked by the agonies caused by a complication of these diseases. Such was the experience of Mrs. J. T. Sloggy, of No. 1117 Cortland street, St. Paul, Minn. She says:

"During the winter of 1898 I suffered very much with rheumatism, being confined to my bed some of the time, was under a physician's care and was unable to do any work. I was also troubled with indigestion. When spring came I was thin and nervous, had a poor appetite and was broken down in health generally. That summer I made a visit to Wisconsin and while there met an old friend who said she had been a great sufferer from indigestion and had been completely cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I knew her word could be relied on so I bought a box of the pills and commenced taking them. I felt benefited in a few days but continued to take them for about five months.

"That winter I had no return of the rheumatism, my appetite improved and I gained in flesh and strength. My cure was permanent and I have not taken any of the pills since.

"I have told others how the pills helped me and I sincerely hope that others suffering in the same way may be induced to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

IT CAME ON GRADUALLY.

A Minnesota Woman Describes a Severe Attack of Stomach Trouble.

"A few years ago," says Mrs. George Fallu, of Finlayson, Minn., "I began to suffer with stomach trouble. It came on me gradually and I do not know what caused it. I gave little heed to it at the time thinking that it was merely a slight attack of indigestion. It finally developed into a severe form of stomach trouble and I suffered terribly for months.

"At the beginning of my sickness I had fainting spells and became unconscious. There was gas on my stomach, my appetite was very poor and what little I ate did not seem to be digested. I was sick to my stomach a great deal and had severe dizzy attacks. I had hot flashes when it would seem as though I was burning up. I could not sleep night or day during these spells unless I took something to ease the pain. I was very weak and was in this condition for six months. I could not do any work and was confined to bed for two or three days at a time.

"A doctor at Duluth said I had gastric fever. He did not give me much hold so I tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills upon my mother's advice. I gave the pills a thorough trial and unlike the doctor's medicine, they agreed with me. I took several boxes of the pills and was entirely cured. I think so much of the pills that I always keep them in the house."

HELD TO GRAND JURY

Alleged Assailant of Edna Strohbutt Has Preliminary Hearing.

Victim of Assault Tells Her Story on Witness Stand.

Alphonse Laurin, charged with criminal assault upon the person of Miss Edna Strohbutt, was bound over to the grand jury yesterday afternoon, without bail, after a preliminary hearing in municipal court, before Judge Windom.

The assault is said to have occurred last Friday evening, on the Hermantown road, two miles from the West end, while the girl, who is 23 years of age, was on her way home from the city. She resides with her parents on the Hermantown road, three miles from town, and Laurin lives on the same road, a short distance above the boulevard.

Miss Strohbutt told her story on the wiltness stand yesterday afternoon. She seemed entirely composed, and went along without hesitation, describing in detail how she met Laurin on the road about 6 o'clock, and passed him; how he turned around five minutes later and ran after her, until he had overtaken her; how he fell into step at her side, and walked along with her for three-quarters of a mile, until a hollow in the road was reached, where, she says, the assault was committed.

There were twelve other women in the courtroom besides Miss Strohbutt. All of them were friends of the girl, with some sort of testimony to offer as to seeing her just before or just after the alleged assault; the finding of pieces of clothing at the scene of teh alleged assault, etc. Most of the witnesses were girls, about Miss Strohbutt's age, or younger. Aside from the witnesses, only court officers and attorneys were admitted to the hearing, which was conducted behind closed doors. A crowd of about 100 men, most of them friends of the principals in the case, stood about in the hall, very much disgusted at being unable to get into the room, after having come in from the country to hear the testimony.

Laurin was not represented by an attorney. He sat silent throughout the trial, and had no question to ask of any of the witnesses. Neither did he take the stand in his own behalf. Laurin gave his age to the police as 25 years, but he hardly looks that. He is short, and not very heavily built. Laurin is a rather good-looking chap, and his countenance is attractive. There is nothing vicious about it, to the casual observer. In fact, his whole appearance is such that it is difficult to connect him in one's mind with the crime.

Miss Strohbutt's story on the witness stand was practically the same as told in The Herald last Saturday. She said Laurin, while walking at her side, suddenly struck her with his fist upon the right temple, knocking her to the ground, unconscious. When she regained her senses she cried out, she said, and he choked her.

Finally he allowed her to stand up, and when she started to walk towards home, he blocked the way and told her she would have to walk towards town. She turned and walked about fifty feet, and then refused to go any farther, she said. They had quite an argument, she said. At this juncture the jingle of sleigh bells scared the young man away, and Miss Emma Decker and Miss Dora Decker, friends of the girl in the road, drove up, and after she told them what had happened they took her in the cutter and drove her to her home.

Charles Strohbutt, father of the girl, was so enraged at the attack upon his daughter that he seized a shotgun and started in pursuit of Laurin, in a cutter. He overtook him on the Hermantown road, and attempted to shoot him with a charge of buckshot, but the cartridge missed fire, and Laurin escaped into the brush, later being arrested at his home.

Dr. Weston testified that he had examined the girl and had found marks of human teeth upon her right hand, where she claims Laurin bit her. He also said there were marks of an assault upon her person.

HERMAN EGGERT ALIVE.

Attempt at Suicide Failed, But Father Had Been Misinformed.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 25.—Herman Eggert of Seattle, Wash., who attempted suicide on the steamer Queen just before that vessel reached this city, on Feb. 10, by shooting in the temple, the bullet destroying the sight of the right eye, is still at the University of California hospital, where he was taken when the steamer docked, and is in a fair way to recovery. His life probably was saved by the fact that the news of his attempt at self-destruction was flashed by the wireless telegraph operator on the Queen to the Russian Hill station in this city, which in turn notified the authorities who had an ambulance waiting at the wharf to convey Eggert to a hospital without delay. Despondency, caused by domestic difficulties, is given as the cause of Eggert's act. His father, Carl Eggert, who recently went to Seattle from Oshkosh, Wis., shot and killed himself in that city on Feb. 14, believing that the son's attempt at suicide had been successful.

JUST FIVE AT MEETING

And Two of the Five Fans Were Reporters.

Officers of Ball Club Meet and Elect Themselves.

At the meeting called by Al. Kuehnow last night at the Commercial club, the fans swarmed the big library room and nearly raised the roof off the building with their enthusiasm.

Al. Kuehnow, J. C. McGreevy, Dick Jacobs and two newspaper reporters made up the meeting. It is true that a good deal of enthusiasm was shown in a billiard match between Mr. Kuehnow and Mr. McGreevy, and some interest was displayed in a game of smear in the card room, but—baseball—it was mentioned when it had to be.

It was the third attempt this winter to get the fans of the city out to a ball meeting. Like the other times it was a miserable failure. The worst of it is these very fans who are at this time starring in "Alice Sit by the Fire" are the ones who will occupy seats in the bleachers and roast the management, the players, and everything pertaining to the club if anything is goes wrong.

Those who were present elected J. C. McGreevy president; O. H. Clark vice-president; Al. Kuehnow secretary and treasurer; C. D. Jacobs manager; and Darby O'Brien playing manager.

With this line-up of officeholders, the Duluth baseball team will open the season in the Wisconsin-Minnesota league. Matters do not seem so very rosy to those in charge of baseball affairs, and they admitted last night that they were greatly disappointed at the way the fans failed to turn out.

BEACH RACE MAY BE CALLED OFF

Automobile Organizations at War Over Daytona, Florida, Meet.

New York, Feb. 25.—According to an announcement made Tuesday night by W. J. Morgan, it is quite possible that the annual beach races at Daytona, Fla., will be called off owing to the unexpected demands of the contest board of the American Automobile association. Mr. Morgan returned from the West on Monday of this week and met the combined committees of the Manufacturers' Contest association and the American Automobile association's contest board. The members of the combined committees introduced some new tournament rules which they wish to have enforced during the Florida races, and to which Mr. Morgan strenuously objected.

The Florida promoter objects to the new rules proposed by the committee on Monday, as he made formal application on Feb. 5 for an A. A. A. sanction, which the chairman of the A. A. A. contest board says did not reach him, though it was addressed care of the Automobile Club of Buffalo, where he makes his headquarters. The delay in securing the sanction and the introduction of the new rules, which are not yet completed, has resulted in a mixup that may mean the abandonment of the Florida races for this winter. Mr. Morgan wired the demands to Daytona Tuesday, and it is a queston whether matters can be straightened out in time so the races can be held, as they were scheduled for March 23.

GOPHERS WILL MEET HAWKEYES

Minnesota and Iowa Basketball Teams to Clash Saturday.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 25.—Minnesota and Iowa will meet for the second time this season Saturday night. The game will be played at the 'varsity armory. Two contests were originally scheduled, but the first was cancelled last week. The Gophers, who were defeated at Iowa City last Thursday and returned Sunday night, say that the Hawkeyes have a first-class quint, fast and aggressive, and that compare favorably with the Chicago five, who now have the best place in the championship race.

This is Iowa's first year in the big eight basket ball schedule, and the Hawkeyes have been showing that they have big-eight caliber in basketball. They should put up a mighty clever game next Saturday, and the fact that the Gophers will want to retrieve last week's defeat with a victory on their home floor should mean a fast match at that time.

GOES TO PORT ARTHUR.

Tommy Robinson Will Manage Canadian Baseball Team This Summer.

Tommy Robinson, the local catcher, will manage the Port Arthur baseball team of the Ontario league the coming season.

Robinson has for a number of years played with various fast clubs about Duluth. He is a good player and will surely make good.

He says that he has a number of Duluth and Superior players on the string and that he will take some of them with him to the Canadian town to play baseball the coming summer.

BOTH SKATERS ARE CONFIDENT

Norval Baptie and Johnny Nilsson to Meet in Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 25.—Norval Baptie, former world's champion ice skater, who is matched to meet Johnny Nilsson at the Hippodrome rink Friday night, in a battle for the coveted title, is confident that he can regain his laurels, and has offered to make a side bet with Nilsson on the result. Nilsson has refused to bet, however, claiming that he has always steered clear of wagers on himself, as it is considered by many as bad luck. Nilsson made a large bundle of money in his day as a champion, but he carried it all off on his ability as a skater, and not on wagers. Baptie claims that he does not bet as a rule, but that this race looks good to him, and just to show his Minneapolis and St. Paul friends how confident he is, he is willing to risk some of his cash.

Friends of Nilsson claim that the present title-holder will give Baptie the hardest race of his life in every heat of the match. Nilsson's backers say that their favorite may lose the first event, which is a half-mile sprint, but that the mile and two-mile events are too much for Baptie, and that Nilsson will take both of these. Baptie is taking in all of this talk and saying but little, although he has expressed himself as confident of winning all three races of the match.

Schreck on His Way.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 25.—Mike Schreck left here last night for Duluth, Minn., where he is to box Walter Whitehead next week. Because of this he had declined to meet Marvin Hart.

Will Not Play Purdue.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—The University of Chicago football team will play the University of Indiana eleven Oct. 9, according to an announcement yesterday by Coach Stagg. There appears to be little chance of a meeting between Chicago and Purdue. It is probable that Chicago will meet another Eastern team beside Cornell in the place of Purdue.

To Give Exhibition.

Tonight at the St. Louis billiard parlors, George F. Spears, the billiard expert, will give an exhibition of fancy shots. He will also play a game of 14-2 balk-line billiards with William F. Hatley, the local player.

Racing to Begin in April.

Mexico City, Feb. 24.—According to a dispatch received in this city last night, racing will begin in the city of Aguas Callentes in April. A concession by the government has been granted an American company and work on the track has begun. The track will be built by American workmen.

Sunday Ball Approved.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 25.—The Indiana legislature went on record yesterday as favoring Sunday baseball, when the senate passed Representative Brolley's Sunday baseball bill by a vote of 30 to 18. The house had already passed the bill, but as the senate amended the bill it must go back to the house.

At the Tournament.

St. Paul Minn., Feb. 25.—There were no changes among the leaders in the interantional bowling tournament last night. Following are the scores of the Duluth and Superior teams: Fitwells, Duluth, 2,509; Columbias, Duluth, 2,485; Jacobsons, Superior, 2,470; Big Duluths, Duluth, 2,304.

Record Walk.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—John Schumann arrived in Chicago last night after a record walk from New York. He covered a 1,200-mile route in 315 walking hours. He left New York Jan. 13 on a wager. March 4 he will start from Chicago to push a wheelbarrow back to New York.

Indoor Record Smashed.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—Fred Simpson, a Peterboro Indian, ran ten miles here last night in 52:30, smashing all indoor records. His time for five miles, 25:35, is also a record.

C. R. Kluger, the Jeweler, 1060 Virginia Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., writes: "I was so weak from kidney trouble that I could hardly walk a hundred feet. Four bottles of Foley's Kidney Remedy cleared my complexion, cured my backache and the irregularities disappeared, and I can now attend to business every day, and recommend Foley's Kidney Remedy to all sufferers, as it cured me after the doctors and other remedies had failed." BILL PASSES ASSEMBLY.

Anti-Gambling Law is Now Up to the Nevada Senate.

Carson City, Nev., Feb. 25.—The anti-gambling law pased the assembly yesterday by a vote of 27 to 20. Before the vote had been announced two members changed their votes in order to move a reconsideration.

The bill carries the amendment which extends the time when it becomes operative from September, 1909, to Jan. 1. The bill provides that it shall be "unlawful for any person to conduct, play, deal or carry on in any capacity any game of chance, such as faro, roulette, rondo, poker, Klondike, or any similar game of banking game carried on with cards, checkers, device or otherwise; also slot machines when money is involved."

Violation is punishable by a fine not to exceed $1,000 or by imprisonment not to exceed one year or both.

The bill also prohibits owners of houses renting for the purpose of gambling.

The bill now goes to the senate.

OPENING OF GYMNASIUM

Curley Ulrich Entertains His Friends at His New Headquarters.

Fans See George Gunther in a Three Round Exhibition.

Curley Ulrich opened up his new gymnasium on lower Lake avenue last night with three three-round bouts and a wrestling match. A few of the Superior man's friends were invited in to enjoy the program, which was first-class in every way.

Kid Martin and a fighter named Fury, fought three swift rounds, at the end of which neither seemed to have the advantage.

Scraps Costello and Chuck O'Connell boxed three swift ones and furnished good sport. Both the boys are Battling Nelson fighters and their willingness to mix cost them both some stiff jabs. They are plucky boxers however, and they made many friends by their clever work.

Olson and Nelson, two wrestlers from the West End Athletic club gave a 15-minute wrestling exhibition at the end of which time neither man had scored. This bout was a very fast one. Both boys showed that they knew considerable about the game and they proved hard workers.

George Gunther, the Australian fighter was introduced to the crowd after which he and Ulrich boxed three fast rounds in order that the fans present might get a line on the new comer. Gunther proved to be a very shifty fellow and kept Ulrich moving all the time. He has a mean jab and he has a habit of landing it every once in a while. Speculation was rife as to how he would stack up with Whitehead, the majority of the fans expressing the belief that a bout with the two as principals would be a fast affair.

Gunther fights Ben Tremble Monday night, and soon afterward will meet Barrel Smith. Some time in April he will be matched to meet Whitehead.

PEEKHOLES ARE VIEWED BY JURY

Sees Gimlet Openings Which Helped Reveal Graft Transactions.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 25.—"I would rather be a councilman than mayor; there's more money in it."

This is the language attributed to Councilman John F. Kleni by Harry B. Wassell, a witness in the graft trial against Klein, Councilman J. C. Wasson, President of Council William Brand and Banker W. W. Ramsey, charged with conspiracy. Mr. Wassell also testified that an agreement was made between Detective Wilson, posing as a lumberman, and Wasson to pay $3,000 for paving Fourth avenue with wooden blocks and 15 per cent of all future contracts. The jury visited the hotels to see gimlet holes in doors through which the alleged bribery transactions are said to have been seen.

MRS. BROWN POTTER QUITS.

Retires From Stage, Discouraged by Failure of Vaudeville Engagement.

New York, Feb. 25.—With her health impaired by worry over her recent disappointing essay in vaudeville here, Mrs. James Brown Potter has left the stage. Her recent reconciliation with her daughter, Mrs. James Stillman, Jr., has been solidified and she is now living with the young woman. Mrs. James Stillman, Sr., is said to be on most cordial terms with Mrs. Potter and has prevailed on her most intimate friends to extend a welcome to the retired actress, and it is not impossible that she will be received, at least by a scetion of New York socsiety.

COREY TO QUIT STEEL?

Report That He Will Resign at Annual Meeting in April.

New York, Feb. 25.—There was a revival yesterday of the report that William E. Corey would resign from the presidency of the United States Steel corporation at the annual meeting in April. Among the many names mentioned in connection with the presidency in the future, was that of E. J. Buffington, president of the Illinois Steel company. Mr. Buffington is a personal friend of E. H. Gary, but, naturally, the officers of subsidiary concerns are not talking about the presidency of the parent company.

It has been the understanding of steel men in Chicago for some time that Mr. Corey would retire. Some of them believed that he would do so before now. Some of the directors have never been reconciled to Mr. Corey's domstic performances.

SUFFRAGETTES AND FOES BESIEGE THE NEW YORK ASSEMBLY

Albany, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Hosts of suffragettes and anti-suffragists crowded the gerat assembly chamber in the capitol and for over four hours their chosen speakers argued before the members of the judiciary committees of the senate, and assembly, at a joint hearing for and against concurrent resolutions introduced by Senator Hill of Buffalo and Assemblyman Tombs of New York, proposing an amendment to the constitution striking gout the word "male" from the suffrage clause. Suffragists wearing yellow badges, with the inscription "Votes for Women," anti-suffragists, who bore no distinguishing badge and women who attended out of mere curiosity, crowded every foot of available space in the chamber.

The suffragists were more outspoken in their opinions than those opposed to the ballot for women, but the anti suffragists were most in evidence.

United States Senator-elect Root, whose wife is one of the vice presidents of the New York state association opposed to woman suffrage, dropped in at the hearing and stood for a time listening to the arguments of the anti-suffragists.

The Only Ash Sifter

Made For Furnaces.

The Shovel-Sifter works right in the ash-pit without dust or litter. So simple, it is a wonder that the man who invented the furnace didn't make one to go with it. Fill it with ashes and shake it, just like a corn-popper, right in the ash-pit, bank your fire with the coal saved and put the ashes into a handy receptacle. Made of one solid sheet of steel, durable as any shovel, three-eighth inch perforations, saves every particle of coal as big as a kernel of corn.

NORTHWEST IS STRONG

Duluth and Minneapolis Markets Go Up More Than a Point.

Flax Is in Good Demand and Prices Are Up Here.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 25.—The strength in wheat continued during the session in the American markets today, and closing prices showed good gains over yesterday.

Although receipts were good, the Northwest was very strong, and both active options closed more than a point higher than yesterday in Duluth and Minneapolis. Chicago bulls were also active, although there was more activity in July than May today.

News from the winter wheat country is still bullish, and light shipments from Argentina are estimated.

Liverpool closed ½d to ¾d lower, Budapest 1½c higher and Antwerp ⅝c higher.

The May option closed 1⅛c higher in Duluth and Minneapolis, ⅞c higher in Chicago, ½c higher in New York, ⅛c higher in St. Louis, a shade up in Kansas City and ¼c higher in Winnipeg. The July option closed 1¼c higher in Duluth and New York, 1⅛c higher in Chicago, 1⅛@1¼c higher in Minneapolis, ⅝@⅞c higher in St. Louis, ¾c higher in Kansas City and ⅜@½c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅜@½c higher in Chicago and unchanged in Liverpool. May oats closed ¼c higher in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool:

"Wheat—There was a firm undertone to the speculative wheat market at the start, and values were ¼d higher, and during the early morning the distant months gained an additional ½d to ¾d. The strength in America yesterday, together with the forecast of smaller shipments from Argentina this week, started renewed covering among shorts. Later, however, some pressure developed and as offerings become larger prices declined ⅛@¼d. There was a smaller inquiry for forward positions and liberal selling, thought to be for American account. At mid-day the market was easier and ⅛@¼d lower than Wednesday.

"Corn was firm and ¼d higher at the opening in sympathy with America. Later the market was characterized by dullness and prices held unchanged at the opening advance."

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 28 against 8 last year, and at Minneapolis 86 against 174 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 113 against 182 last year. Chicago received 64 against 17 last year. Winnipeg received 706 against 89 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 365,000 bu, last year 331,000 bu. Shipments 354,000 bu, last year 239,000 bu. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 240,000 bu.

Primary receipts of corn were 797,000 bu, last year 351,000 bu. Shipments 285,000 bu, last year 343,000 bu. Clearances of corn were 104,500 bu.

Wheat was actively traded in during the session in Duluth. May wheat opened unchanged at $1.12⅝, advanced to $1.13⅜@¼, declined to $1.13⅛, rallied to $1.14 and closed at $1.13⅝, a gain of 1⅜c over yesterday. July wheat opened late at $1.13¾, advanced to $1.14⅝ and closed at $1.14½, a gain of 1⅜c over yesterday.

Durum wheat closed ½c higher, and cash spring wheat was selling on a basis of ⅞c over May for No. 1 northern.

Flax was fairly active and prices were better than yesterday. May flax opened ½c higher at $1.68, advanced to $1.69, declined to $1.68½, rallied to $1.69 and closed there, a gain of 1½c over yesterday. July flax was inactive and closed 1½c higher than yesterday at $1.67, October flax opened ½c lower at $1.38, went to $1.39 and closed there, a gain of ½c over yesterday.

Oats closed ¼c higher and barley 2c higher.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Firm Tone Caused by Renewed Buying of July Delivery.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Renewed buying of the July delivery caused a firm tone in the wheat market today following a somewhat irregular opening, when prices ranged from ⅛@¼c lower to ⅜@½c higher, compared with the previous close. Pit traders and commission houses were the principal buyers, the leading longs showing little inclination to trade either way. A moderate decline at Liverpool tended to quench bullish enthusiasm here. July opened at $1.03@1.03⅜, and advanced to $1.03⅝@¾, while May, which opened at $1.15⅜@1.15⅞ sold up to $1.16¼.

Trading became more active later in the session, and the July delivery advanced to a new high record mark for the season, the top being reached at $1.04⅜@1.04½. The market closed strong, with July up 1⅛c at $1.04¼@1.04⅜. May closed at a net gain of ⅜c at $1.16⅜.

Cold weather in the corn belt induced considerable realizing sales of that grain at the opening resulting in declines of a shade to ⅛@¼c, but buying by shorts soon caused a mild rally. May opened at 65½@⅝c to 65⅝c and sold up to 65⅞c.

The bulge in wheat imparted strength to the corn market during the last half of the session. May advanced to 66¼c. The close was firm, with May up ⅝c to ⅞@½c at 66⅛c to 66⅛@66¼c.

Oats were firm in sympathy with wheat and corn, but the volume of trade was small. Prices at the opening were a shade lower to ¼c higher, with May at 52½ to 54⅜c. Later May sold at 54⅛@54⅜c.

Provisions were firm because of a falling off in receipts of live hogs at Western packing centers. Trade was quiet. At the opening prices were 2½c to 5c higher than yesterday's closing quotations.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Strength Shown Despite Bullish Foreign and Domestic News.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 25.—News was bullish, both foreign and domestic. In spite of this the local market showed strength at the opening, advancing half a cent. This advance was independent of any movement in the Chicago May. Activity in July helped boost the market. Minneapolis wheat elevator stocks showed a decrease of 150,000 bushels for the day. A new high point was reached on an advance when May went to $1.13⅝. Minneapolis got 85 cars, against 174; Duluth, 28, against 8; Winnipeg, 105, against 89. May opened $1.12; high, $1.13⅝; low, $1.12; close $1.13¼. July opened $1.12⅝@⅞; high, $1.14⅛; low, $1.12⅝@⅞; close, $1.14@⅛. Cash wheat was in demand by the millers. Only outside of milling grades demand was slow. No. 1 northern sold 1⅝@2c over May and No. 2 ¼c under to the full May price. THE PRODUCE MARKETS.

Hog receipts are rather light at South St. Paul, Chicago and other killing centers, giving the pork market a stronger undertone, although prices are still unchanged. They are expected to go up a little, however. The rest of the market is about unchanged from yesterday.

An electric spark is the luminous effect produced when a sudden disruptive electrical discharge takes place between two charged conductors, or between two conductors at different electric potentials. The length of the spark depends primarily upon the difference of potential of the two charged bodies; it is, hence, in general a conspicuous phenomenon, with high potential frictional electricity, and not with ordinary voltaic currents.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Market Opened Lower and Attempts to Cause Rallies Failed.

Disinclination Shown to Follow Prices Far in Either Direction.

New York, Feb. 25.—The stock market showed renewed unsettlement today, influenced by the first declines in the London market. The majority of stocks were lower, but there was a mixture of gains. Anaconda ran off 1⅝, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western and American Smelting and St. Paul, Reading and Amalgamated Copper big fractions. Pacific Mail sold at an advance of 1¾, and Denver & Rio Grande preferred 1.

Attempts to rally prices did not meet with success, and there were violent declines after the effort was abandoned. The copper stocks, United States Steel, Reading, St. Paul and Union Pacific were notably weak Pittsburg Coal preferred declined 5½, Amalgamated Copper 4⅜, Anaconda 4, American Smelting 3⅝, Reading 3⅛ and New York Central and Norfolk & Western 2. The room shorts covered and the resulting rally ran to a point where declines had been greatest. The demand died down again at the rally and threw the market into dullness. Bonds were irregular.

The market closed heavy and dull. Disinclination to follow prices far in either direction showed the growing professionalism of the market. There was a corresponding shrinkage in business.

The Cotton Market.

New York, Feb. 25.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 2 points on March on covering, but generally unchanged to 3 points lower in response to disappointing cables. Some of the leading interests supported the market early, particularly new crop months which were brought here against sales abroad and prices rallied to a net advance of about 2 to 5 points, but the general sentiment remained very nervous and remained very nervous and during the middle of the morning prices eased back to about the closing figures of last night.

Futures closed steady. Closing bids: February, 9.27; March, 9.28; April, 9.26; May, June, July and August, 9.27; September, 9.21; October, 9.23; November, 9.19; December, 9.19; January, 9.16. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9.65; middling gulf, 9.90; sales, 500 bales.

To the average mind the conception of the atom, or electron, as a sort of whirlpool in the ether, renders it difficult to understand how matter can be rigid. Rigidity is explained as due to the enormous velocity of these ethereal vortices.* It has been shown that water moving with sufficient velocity through a tube can not be broken into by a violent blow from a sabre. "A layer of water a few centimeters thick," says M. le Bon, "animated by a sufficient velocity, would be as impenetrable to shells as the steel plates of an ironclad.

THURSDAY, FEB. 25, 1909.

Boston and New York coppers are having another off day and the bears started early in the day with their hammers and all stocks were selling from one to three points lower.

North Butte opened at $69 and sold as low at $67½.

Amalgamated opened at $69⅞ and sold down as low as $66.

Duluth curbs however, were more firm, and the decline in the Eastern market the last few days has had no effect on the local curb market.

There was quite a lot of trading in Butte & Superior today at 99c to $1.00.

Superior & Globe was also very active at the same price.

The East Butte company has made an important strike of ore on the 900-foot level. It has encountered a lode from seven to twelve feet wide and carrying 9 per cent copper and good silver values. Drifting is now in progress.

Messrs. Martin Rosendahl, Thos. Merritt, and a good number of stockholders of the old Butte-Montana company, including Mr. Stevens of Ironwood and a large number of other brokers all left Duluth this morning for Butte, Mont., to perfect the re-organizing of the old Butte-Moutana Mining company, into the new Butte & Alex Scott Copper company. Everything looks favorable for a very satisfactory adjustment of the old company's affairs, and we look for very favorable news from there in a day or two. There is no doubt but what the new Butte & Alex Scott Copper company will be one of the very best sellers on the board as there is no question as to the quality of the mine or as to its title, and we advise all of our customers to buy the stock as early as possible in the new company as this is bound to be one of the big winners in the copper market.

DIRT CHEAP
Are you looking for a good safe investment? If so, let me show you some of my lands in the Carlton County Valley, along the Great Northern and Soo lines; none better for general Farming, Dairying and Stock Raising.
Twenty years ago these very same kind of lands around the Twin Cities were selling at from $5.00 to $10.00 an acre; today they are selling from $75.00 to $125.00 an acre. The same applies to lands in this vicinity, but instead of waiting 20 years for the raising in value, I expect to see it within the next 5 years, as good lands around the Head of the Lakes are getting scarce, and will command a fancy price in the very near future. I have 10,000 acres for you to select from.

THREE PLANS PROPOSED FOR REAPPORTIONMENT AND OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

Action of the Senate Committee Is More Encouraging.

Protest Against Bill Taxing Water Powers for State Purposes.

Committee Approves Bill Taxing Street Railways Upon Gross Earnings.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The outlook for a reapportionment bill, which has not been very rosy, owing to the delay of the senate committee in taking it up, took on a brighter aspect yesterday afternoon owing to the action of the senate committee in voting to empower the chairman, Senator Clague, to appoint a sub-committee of nine, one from each congressional district, to prepare several alternative reapportionment plans. This was done on motion of Senator Laybourn of Duluth, whose motion also provided that Senator Clague shall be the member from his congressional district and shall act as chairman of the sub-committee.

The three plans proposed are as follows:

First, to redistrict the state on the present senatorial average, which is about 31,000 to the district. This would leave the senate with the same number of members as at present, and if fol-

CONGRESS BREAKS RECORD OF QUARTER OF A CENTURY; TAWNEY SCOLDS ALL NIGHT

Washington, Feb. 26.—All records for the sixtieth congress were broken by the house session, which ended at 3:21 this morning, having lasted sixteen and one-half hours.

Efforts of the leaders to rush through all the important appropriation bills in the closing hours of the session, which terminates next Thursday noon, together with the obstructions placed in their way by the Democrats, probably will necessitate long night sessions on every one of the five remaining days.

When the house met yesterday at 11 o'clock, Chairman Tawney of the appropriation committee renewed his attempt to secure the passage of the sundry civil appropriation bill, which he hoped to get through before recess was taken early this morning. The Democratic filibuster, inaugurated Wednesday night, greatly irritated Mr. Tawney, and the result was frequent flashes between him and members on the opposite side of the chamber.

As the hours dragged on, the tired law-makers lost some of their self-restraint, and bitter personalities were indulged in. When Mr. Tawney's temper was referred to by Mr. Beal of Texas, Mr. Mann of Illinois suggested that Mr. Tawney's temper might be improved if the gentleman from Texas would improve his manners.

"To copy those of the gentleman from Illinois," was the hot retort, "would make of myself a clown."

Mr. Gaines of Tennessee also took offense at Tawney and announced he would stand the "snarls and howls of the gentleman," but little longer.

A sharp passage occurred late in the night between Tawney and John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, formerly minority leader, when Tawney declared he was not trying to prevent the gentleman from making a speech, but an exhibition of himself. Mr. Williams responded in kind, stating that if he were making as great an exhibition of himself as the gentleman from Minnesota naturally does of himself, he would feel safer for himself than he then did. Mr. Williams was about to state that he had been proceeding in the best of good humor when a demand for the regular order cut him off.

The records of the official stenographer show that the aggregate of the remarks of the day's session exceed those of any day in the last quarter of a century.

Tawney Lectures Democrats.

The Democrats after midnight offered scores of amendments, none of which were adopted, but which inspired Chairman Tawney to "lecture" the Democrats for their "levity." He urged them to consider the bill conscientiously as representatives of the people should, in order that the senate might be given proper time to consider the bill.

As though in reply, Representative Williams immediately offered an amendment to increase the appropriation of $15,000 for extraordinary repairs on the White House to $25,000, and to authorize the use of this money for a "whitewashing" at the White House. "When he are providing money in favor of this administration cleaning up," he said, "I am not in favor of parsimony."

Mr. Gaines of Tennessee delivered a speech on Andrew Jackson, and Mr. Byrd of Missouri, in the course of a speech in which he strode from one side of the chamber to the other, denounced the attitude in the American government on the Japanese question, as the "most humiliating exhibition of obsequious senility on any party ever in power." Several yells followed the speech.

At 12:20 a. m. a motion by Representative Clayton of Alabama, that the committee of the whole in which the house was sitting, rise, was voted down, 27 to 61. Vice President-elect Sherman appeared in the house at 1:30 a. m. for the first time during the night. His evening attire contrasted with the "working clothes" of the other members.

Two Steel Merger Reports.

Two reports will be before the senate committee on judiciary Monday when it meets to vote on the investigation of the absorption of the Tennessee Coal & Iron Co., by the United States Steel corporation. Since the publication of the majority report of the subcommittee finding that the merger was a violation of the Sherman anti-trust law and administering a severe rebuke to the president, the minority, Messrs. Clark of Wyoming and Dillingham have put their dissent in the form of a report. All day there was a variety of wire pulling and manipulation on the floor of the senate proper as to the vote in the committee.

The view of the minority is that the senate does not impose upon the com-

Startling Attack Upon His Integrity by State Spurs Counsel.

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 26.—Counsel for both sides in the trial of D. B. Cooper, Robin Cooper and John J. Sharp for the slaying of Former Senator E. W. Carmack spent a busy night.

The startling attack of the state upon the integrity of Col. Cooper as clerk and mastery in chancery, and as an associate of a defaulting state treasurer, took the defense by surprise. Special agents were put to work, and last night several men from various points in the state arrived who are presumed to be able to throw some light upon the charges. Until far into the House Compels Congressman Cook to Check His Abuse.

Provision Restricting Civil Service Is Overwhelmingly Approved.

Washington, Feb. 26.—By an overwhelming vote, and without party distinction, the house of representatives has sustained the committee on appropriation in again reporting a provision in the sundry civil appropriation bill, restricting the operatons of the secret service detectives of the treasury department. The president was scathingly denounced by Cook, Republican, of Colorado, while Smith, Republican, of Iowa, a member of the appropriations committee and one of those named by the president in his message of Jan. 4 as bing responsible for the secret service limitation, seemingly employed all the invective at his command in an attack on that service. He compared the secret service detectives with "common liars," declared them to be worthless and pointed to the assassination of President McKinley as a sample of the watchfulness and capacity of those men, one of whom, he said, stood at the president's side when he was shot down and failed to observe the approach of the assassin with his supposedly bandaged hand in full view.

Although the icicle had torn through the rim the resistance broke the force of the blow and her injuries are slight.

ASKS POWERS TO ACT IN BALKANS

French Parliamentary Arbitration Group Wires to Washington.

Intervention Is Urged Before It Is Too Late.

Paris, Feb. 26.—The French parliamentary arbitration group, of which Baron d'Estournelles de Constant is president, today undertook an effort to arouse the public opinion of the world, and to compel the powers to offer mediation in the event that a conflict in the Balkans becomes inevitable.

Resolutions were adopted and communicated to the parliaments of the signatories to The Hague agreement, calling attention to the fact that an offer of mediation by neutrals, under The Hague convention, "can never be considered an unfriendly act by litigants."

The support of the United States and of the South American republics is especially desired by the French group, and telegraph appeals will be dispatched to Washington and South American capitals, requesting co-operation. Baron d'Estournelles de Constant considers it urgently important that preparations should be made for intervention in the Balkans situation before it is too late.

RIPPER IS CAPTURED

Berlin Attacker of Women Caught After Knife Onslaught.

Had Just Made His Thirty-Sixth Slashing Attempt.

Berlin, Feb. 26.—The man who during the last fortnight, has been making a series of attacks on women on the streets, was captured this morning.

He made an attempt to stab a woman on Friedrich Strasse, one of the crowded shopping streets. The clothing of his intended victim was cut, but she suffered no harm. The woman screamed, and her assailant fled into a house on an adjoining street, where he was seized by a policeman. He is a young man, but he has not yet been identified.

Today's attempt was the thirty-sixth "ripper" case since the beginning of the outrages. The descriptions of the assailant does not agree, and for this reason it is believed various men may have been engaged in the work. There has been an actual state of terror among the women of Berlin, many servants refusing to go on the streets alone after nightfall.

The police have made every effort to capture the assailant. They even had special detectives dress up as women and saunter through the streets inviting attack, but all to no purpose.

The assaults have been made by day as well as by night and on the open street as well as in the halls and stairways of houses. The assailant would approach his intended victim quietly, strike at her swiftly with a sharp stiletto, and then make his escape.

DORMITORY AT DULUTH

Grant of $65,000 Provided in the Normal School Bill.

Also $50,000 For Construction of West Wing of School.

(From a Staff Correspondent.)

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The floodgates on new bills were removed in the house this morning owing to the postponement of matters expected to consume the forenoon, and fifty new measures, mostly of minor importance, came into the hopper.

The normal schools committee introduced the general appropriation bill for the normal schools of the state and it includes $65,000 next year for a dormitory at the Duluth school and $50,000 the following year for the construction of the west wing of the school for model school purposes. Soldiers From Ohio Barracks Perform Deeds of Heroism.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 26.—Fire early today in the four-story Judge Black building, occupied by the Brunswick Bowling company, spread to the five-story brick building occupied by the Tracy-Wells company and destroyed it and its contents. The loss is placed between $200,000 and $300,000. The fire was started by a gas explosion.

Twenty families were driven out. Soldiers from the barracks carried out a number of half-clad frightened women and children.

Chicago Fire Loss, $100,000.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Fire destroyed warehouse No. 2 of the Albert Dickinson company, seeds, a mammoth building at Taylor street and the river early today, entailing a loss estimated at $100,000. The warehouse, eight stories high and 500 feet long, was discovered ablaze by a watchman. Within a few minutes the fire had spread throughout the seventh and eighth floors, and before the first engines responded the entire structure was in flames.

Dry seeds, which choked the bins within the building, were easy prey for the fire, which broke through the roof within a few minutes after the conflagration was discovered. Fire Chief Horan sent special calls for engines after a general alarm had been sounded. Fire boats from the river fought the blaze, which burned fiercely and stubbornly. Only a few workmen were in the building and all are reported to have escaped. The fire, it is believed, originated from spontaneous combustion in one of the seventh floor seed bins.

Two firemen were injured by a falling wall. Three girls were knocked down in the rush of fifty others for the stairway, but were rescued by policemen.

Asks Washington to Recognize That Senatorship Is His.

United States District Attorney Takes Certificate to Capital.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 26.—United States District Attorney W. G. Wheeler left last night for Washington with a certificate, signed by Governor Davidson of the vote in the senate and assembly, Jan. 26, electing Isaac Stephenson United States senator. The certificate of election was countersigned by the secretary of state, James A. Frear, and the state seal was placed thereon.

The separate ballot gave Stephenson 60 votes in the assembly, a clear majority, and 12 of the 17 votes cast in the senate.

Lieutenant Governor John Strange, who presides over the joint assembly when a ballot for United States senator is taken, has steadfastly refused from time to time to entertain a motion that Stephenson was elected on separate ballot, each time ruling the motion out of order, and ordering the clerk to call the roll.

Since the balloting in joint session began, Senator Stephenson has failed to secure a majority.

That state officeholders, present and past, state employes, federal officers, several prominent attorneys and others were paid money to further the interests of United States Senator Isaac Stephenson, as candidate in the recent primary election was shown in the statement of election expenses filed by Rodney Sackett with the legislative committee investigating the senatorial primary. Among those who figure prominently in the list and the amounts received are:

Levi H. Bancroft, speaker of the assembly branch of the legislature,

EGG PRICES HAVE SLUMP

Drop of Nearly Ten Cents During the Last Week.

Potatoes Scarce and High —Fruits Unchanged in Price.

Greatly to the satisfaction of the housewives of the vicinity, the back of the fresh egg market has been broken, and prices have fallen to the lowest level they have been since long before the holidays.

The slump in egg prices was the week's feature in the produce market. The rest of the market has not undergone any great changes during the past seven or eight days.

Potatoes are very strong, the price hovering around the $1 mark, and even flirting with quotations above there, and there is a stronger tone to the meat market, due to light receipts at South St. Paul, Chicago and other killing centers.

Fresh eggs are 25 to 27 cents a dozen on Michigan street. The decline came the first of the week, and it was a drop of ten points or so from the previous week's quotations.

It has been several months since eggs could be had at such a reasonable figure here, so 25 and 27-cent eggs are hailed with joy. Against the 40-cent eggs of a week or so ago they seem like the cheapest commodities offered anywhere.

Warmer weather and large receipts, back of all of which is a better laying disposition on the part of the hens, are responsible for the easier prices. The dealers figure that eggs are going to remain under 30 cents, wholesale, during the rest of the season, so that it is reasonable to expect that last farewells to 40-cent eggs have been said until next year.

Stocks of potatoes are getting low, and prices are getting higher. The Southern states have not sent up any new potatoes, for the reason that they have not dug any yet, and the spuds in circulation here are those raised in Minnesota last summer. Naturally, the demand all winter has been shrinking stocks, and the tag end of the winter finds them sadly depleted.

Nominally, potatoes are 95 cents to $1 a bushel, but a stronger undertone pervades the market.

Sweet potatoes cling cheerfully to the market, at prices unchanged from a week ago.

Cabbages are still among the luxuries of the staple vegetable market, selling at $3 per crate.

The fruit market has been undisturbed by any violent fluctuations during the past week. The banana market is firm at 4 cents a pound and Florida pineapples are $4.50 per crate.

Receipts of oranges are liberal, ample to care for local demands, at unchanged prices. Grape fruit is arriving daily, and it is the best the local market has had yet. It is selling on Michigan street at $4 a box.

Cranberries are still offered at $14 a barrel, at which price they have been selling since Thanksgiving time. The crop was a short one and prices have been at top notch all season.

California lemons are $4 a box, the same price they were quoted at last week.

Figs and dates are in good supply and prices for them are steady and unchanged.

Malaga grapes are scarce and are selling at $8 per keg, a price which lifts them somewhat out of the popular grasp.

Green vegetables are in good supply and the market is steady. Most of them are coming from the hothouses.

Creamery butter prints are selling at 34 cents and tubs are 30 to 33 cents a pound. Renovated butter is 27 cents, ladies 22 cents, and packing 16 to 20 cents.

The dressed poultry market is still firm. Spring chickens are quoted at 15 to 17 cents a pound and hens 15 to 16 cents a pound. Turkeys are 22 to 23 cents a pound. Ducks are 17 to 18 cents and geese are 14 to 15 cents.

Low fish prices, which have ruled since the receiver for Booth & Co., ordered a cut, still obtain here.

Hog receipts at the packing houses have been light during the week and the market for pork is very firm.

Beef prices are unchanged, but the market is firm. Other grades are unchanged from last week.

LYCEUM—"Yon Yonson."

"YON YONSON."

Old Favorite Swedish Character Portrayed by Ben Hendricks.

"Yon Yonson" was back at the Lyceum last night and he's the same old "Yon," who delighted audiences for years and years. The big-hearted Swedish lumberjack from "Yimtown, N. D.," has always been a favorite in Duluth and he drew his full quota of theatergoers last night.

Ben Hendricks, in dialect, makeup and action, is perfect in the role. He has been playing it for years, and his perfect ease on the stage is refreshing in the face of the unreal work of a few members of his supporting company. Hendricks sings well, and the Swedish dialect songs of his own composition cannot fail to please.

On the whole, Mr. Hendricks is supported by a good company. Some of the melodramatic situations are overdrawn by Miss Belle Francis as Grace Jennings and Edward Krause as Amos Jennings, but the whole play is melodrama, and the unreal nature of some of the situations does not impair their melodramatic work. Walter Liebmann as John T. Holoway is good and Bertie Conway has a good part as the book agent. Miss Rose Mack's dialect as the landlady is somewhat uncertain at times.

If you haven't seen "Yon Yonson," see him. He is refreshing, and in this day, and age and country has come to be something of a classic in melodrama.

"Devil's Auction."

Among the very many clever things that have become part and parcel of the kaleidoscopic performance of Charles H. Yale's everlasting "Devil's Auction," which will appear at the Lyceum Saturday afternon and night, are a number of exceedingly funny and intricate trick scenes that are each year introduced in this popular show play.

Mr. Yale states that in the present twenty-eighth edition there will be no deviation to this rule; and that there will be introduced a new and very laughable trick scene, entitled, "The Magic Picture Gallery," in which "Toby," the transformed donkey, again meets his old enemy, "Chaos," the sprite, resulting in the introduction of a series of new tricks, odd mechanical effects, scene leaps, star and vampire trap workings, etc., all of which will prove most interesting to the oldest or youngest theatergoer.

What Precious Stones Mean.

Diamonds rank first among precious stones, being the most beautiful, brilliant and valuable of gems, and signify light, purity and life. The ruby signifies love and power, dignity and royalty. The pearl is an emblem of purity, humility and innocence. Like the diamond, golden grain belt beer ranks first among all brews. It is not only the purest of all beverages, but also the most beneficial to body and mind. Order of your nearest dealer or be supplied by Duluth branch Minneapolis Brewing company.

TAXES DINING CARS FOR LIQUOR LICENSE.

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 26.—A bill was introduced in the house today by Representative Crampton, providing that dining cars on Michigan railroads shall be taxed $250 for a liquor license. At present cafe cars in this state pay no license fee. The bill does not give authority to sell intoxicants in the cars in local option counties.

WEST END

MAY REVIVE OLD SOCIETY

Plan to Combine West End Clubs Under Central Head.

Would Work Together for Improvement of West End.

When the West End Republican club meets in President George M. Jensen's office next Thursday evening, the principal topic of discussion will be the improving of Garfield avenue, and it is possible that the resuscitation of the West End Commercial club will result from the session.

At the last meeting of the club politics being a thing of the past for the present, the condition of Garfield avenue was brought before the meeting, and the members discussed the needed improvements there.

A committe was appointed to confer with members of the public affairs committee of the Duluth Commercial club about the matter, and it will report at the meeting.

At the time, the need of organization of West end residents, not merely of Republicans or members of any one political party, but all citizens of that section of the city, to discuss matters of interest to their part of the city and to discuss improvements, was felt and many of those present expressed a desire to have the Commercial club revived.

As it is now, such matters of public interest at come up are talked over by different organizations. The Republican club at its last meeting took up the Garfield avenue matter and discussed it thoroughly, and the West End Hillside Improvement club has been working hard for better conditions for hillside residents, but there has been, since the West End Commercial club's demise no central organization of all residents of the West end to consider affairs affecting that section of the city.

If the Commercial club or a society similar to it were started, the West End Republican club could contribute a number of members, the West End Hillside Improvement club folks would come in, and so would the Democratic club and several of the men's societies of the different churches, which, during the winter, have been debating and talking on different questions.

EDSTAM TO SAY FAREWELL.

Popular Pastor Will Leave Next Week for New Field.

Rev. A. Edstam, who for the past six years has been pastor of the First Swedish Baptist church in the West end, will preach his farewell sermons as minister for the congregation, Sunday morning and evening.

Next week, he will remove with his family to Worthington, Minn., where he has accepted a call from the Swedish Baptist congregation.

During his stay in the Wet end, Rev. Mr. Edstam's congregation has grown and he and members of his family have made many fast friends among the members of his church and out of it. They regret his departure, but Mr. Edstam feels that the Worthington field offers greater openings for him in his work.

No successor to him as pastor of the church here has been named as yet. A call was extended to Rev. Mr. Nelson, state evangelist for the Swedish Baptist church, but he has not accepted yet.

During the past week, Rev. Edstam and his family have been the guests of honor at several farewell functions.

Their Share of Trouble.

Mr. and Mrs. Gust Carlson of 2117 West Fourth street have certainly been having more than their share of misfortune. Three of their children came down with diphtheria at the same time and one of them, Marguerite, died. The bereaved parents had scarce time to attend her funeral, so precarious was the condition of the two tots who were left them. By constant treatment and care the lives of the other two children were saved. They are now thought to be out of danger.

West End Shortrails.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Norweglan-Danish M. E. church gave a social in the church parlors last evening.

The roller skating party given by the Adams school alumni at Lincoln park rink last evening was largely attended by young people. It was the finale of roller skating at the Lincoln park rink, as it will be transformed once more into a dancing hall.

Miss Ella Merwin of Rice Lake, Wis., is in the West end, the guest of her aunt, Mrs. G. E. Horwitz of West Third street.

Fred Chambers of St. Paul is registered at the Esmond. He will return to his home this evening.

The Ladies Guild of St. Luke's Episcopal church is meeting this afternoon with Mrs. Kulo, at her home on Fourth avenue west.

The Maroon hockey team is seeking a game with the second team of the Adams Alumni association. A contest between the two organizations may be held Sunday afternoon, if the weather is favorable.

The Haven Marching club, which is fostered by the Twentieth Century club, held a meeting last evening in the clubrooms in the basement of St. Luke's Episcopal church.

Rev. A. Edstam, who leaves next week for his new post as pastor of the Swedish Baptist church at Worthington, Minn., conducted services in the West Duluth church last evening.

Members of Beta council, No. 2, Modern Samaritans, are planning to give a social Monday evening in Columbia hall. An elaborate program is being prepared and it is expected that members of several other councils will be present.

GREAT NORTHERN COUNSEL.

Former Judge Brown of Minneapolis Takes Western Job.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frederick V. Brown, judge of the fourth judicial district court, who resigned recently from the bench, has entered the employ of the Great Northern road as counsel.

He will have charge of the legal business of the Great Northern in the states of Washington and Idaho, with headquarters in Seattle. Judge Brown has not yet completed arrangements with regard to his new residence, but it is probable that his Minneapolis home at 2117 Kenwood parkway, will be given up and that he will become a resident of the Pacific coast shortly after March 1, on which date the Great Northern appointment becomes effective.

SAY GLENN IS INSANE

Relatives of Negro Boy Believe He Has Suicidal Mania.

Attempt to Commit Suicide Tuesday Night Was His Second.

Ray E. Glenn, the negro boy who attempted suicide Tuesday night by two routes, and didn't get to the end of either, is believed to be insane, and information against him will be filed in probate court this afternoon. He is now at St. Mary's hospital, recovering from the effects of his last attempt to shuffle off, and he will be examined there.

The boy is believed to be possessed of suicidal mania and his relatives fear to allow him to remain at large. The attempt of Tuesday night was his second attempt to commit suicide. Both attempts were unsuccessful, but his relatives fear he will not be so fortunate if he is given another opportunity.

Glenn is 19 years old and lives at 620 Sixth avenue east with his father and stepmother. His father is now in Florida as porter on John Millen's car. The boy's action Tuesday night was thought to have been caused by disappointment in love, but since it has developed that he had once before attempted to take his own life, the conclusion has been reached that he is a subject for treatment in an insane asylum.

Glenn's last attempt was surrounded with peculiar circumstances. He virtually stripped the house of everything movable and packed up as though he were going on a long journey. Every trunk and suitcase in the house was packed, and with a shotgun, a revolver and other weapons, he retired to his room, into which he had taken the baggage, which he couldn't take along on the journey he contemplated. He first took carbolic acid and then fired a revolver at his head. The effects of the acid probably spoiled his aim, for the bullet went through the ceiling, and an emetic counteracted the effect of the poison and brought him back to life.

VETERAN AND HIS AGED WIFE NEED GUIDING HAND FOR THEIR AFFAIRS

Richmond L. Booker and his wife, 94 and 92 years old, respectively, will probably be placed under guardianship as incompetents by the probate court. A petition asking the appointment of Asa Dailey as guardian was filed by Frank D. Ronoe, grandson of the aged couple this morning.

Mr. Booker is a veteran of the Civil war and draws a pension of $30 a month. He also has some other small personal property, amounting to a few hundred dollars altogether. The petition sets forth that he and his wife are both aged and feeble and unable to attend to their own affairs, and the appointment of a guardian is necessary.

Mr. and Mrs. Booker live with their granddaughter and her husband, Mr. Ronoe, and the petition states that they are being cared for well, but they are unable to attend to their small property.

LEADING A DOUBLE LIFE

Mrs. Ella C. Smith Makes Sensational Charges Against Husband.

Claims He Maintained Apartments in Duluth and Eau Claire.

The suit of Mrs. Ella C. Smith of Eau Claire, Wis., for separate maintenance from her husband, John S. Smith of Duluth, will be heard in district court next Monday afternoon. The case was called before Judge Cant this morning, but after a passage of words between the attorneys, it was continued until Monday afternoon.

Aside from the action itself, the contempt of court proceedings against Mr. Smith are now a subject of contention. The attorney for Mrs. Smith yesterday had Mr. Smith brought into court on an order to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court. At the time the case was first brought, an order was secured directing Mr. Smith to pay $10 a week to Mrs. Smith pending the trial of the case. The attorney for Mrs. Smith claimed that Mr. Smith had failed to pay the weekly allowance since Jan. 18, and Mr. Smith was cited for contempt. The contempt proceedings were allowed to go over this morning to Monday afternoon, also.

In her complaint, which was filed last August, Mrs. Smith claims that her husband has for ten years past been leading a dual life. The charges are sensational in the extreme. Cora Warren and William O'Brien are made co-defendants with Mr. Smith for the purpose of preventig Mr. Smith from placing his property out of the reach of his wife, it is claimed.

Mrs. Smith charges that for ten years her husband has consorted with Cora Warren in Duluth, maintaining apartments at one time at 205½ West Superior street. She charges him with infidelity at different times and places during the last ten years; says he maintained apartments at Eau Claire for immoral purposes, and associated with immoral people in different cities in Minnestoa and Wisconsin, spending his money in drinking and on immoral women.

She charges that for seven years her husband has contributed little to her support and that of their invalid child, and she has frequently been forced to come to Duluth and remain for weeks before she could induce him to give her enough money to return home and purchase necessities.

In his answer, Mr. Smith claims that his wife has been unreasonable in her demands and he maintained apartments in Eau Claire solely because he was not able to remain at home on account of her treatment of him. He says he has had years of prosperity, but has also had reverses, and he was not able to support his wife in the manner and style, which she demanded.

He says he has been sick frequently and for long periods during the last few years and on acount of the necessity of dieting and the need of nursing, he has maintained apartments in Duluth and employed a nurse and housekeeper, who acted in no other capacity.

He further claims that in 1907, his wife began an action for divorce at Eau Claire and he does not know whether or not she secured the decree. He said at that time, he agreed to pay $1,000 permanent alimony if the decree were granted and he says he did pay $500 to his wife, the remainder to be paid at the termination of the divorce proceedings, if the decree were granted. He claims he does not own the property, which his wife claims he has, but took logging contracts from William O'Brien and they were not always successful in recent years.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith were married in 1884 and one child, Evelyn, 23 years old, is living. Two other children born to the marriage have died. Mr. Smith is 67 years old and his wife is 53.

TALKS OF NEW STYLES

E. A. Silberstein Predicts Most Successful Year of Trade.

A deeper knowledge of American requirements and a broader view of American trade methods has awakened international competition to a most wonderful extent, said E. A. Silberstein, in an interview with a Herald reporter this morning. Time was, and not so many years ago either, that the fashionable world were dissatisfied with any article of dress that did not wear the stamp of some Paris or London maker. While in the Eastern markets, I made an exhaustive comparison of the lines shown by the most prominent designers of European centers, with the adaptations of our best American makers, and the result but confirms my opinion, that in time American artists will equal, if not overtop, the efforts of their over the sea competitors. For, the American tailor and style creator has made possible the broad merchandizing movement in women's garments. He has not only found out how to use Paris fashion ideas, but is himself a creator of styles; and, further than this, he is able to turn out both replicas of Paris models, and his own original designs, in the form of practical, usable garments, at such prices as put them within the means of the general public.

In regard to the favored styles for the new season "Moyen Age" (medieval) styles predominate. This new fashion movement is expressed in the long waist line and is apparent in the latest suit and separate coat models. Directoire effects will unquestionably hold throughout the spring season, in spite of the newer medieval effects. A shortage in quantities of early styles has been overcome for our concern by being among the first buyers in the market, thus enabling us to have the correct new modes on display here in Duluth just as early as shown by the most exclusive shops in the East. The directoire or hipless cut has been applied with great success to all classes of garments. The best authorities on the question of cut this season agree that in the spring garments the back body should be narrower, the seams of the French back, coming perhaps not over an inch and a half from the collar line, instead of extending almost to the point of the shoulder. One of the marked features in the cut of the newest coats is an accentuation of the low waist line, while the length averages from 36 to 40 inches. The full length, close fitting sleeve is the most favored, while the extreme mode calls for the sleeve set to the armhole without any fullness whatever. The three piece costume will be, if anything, more exclusive and on account of the added expense of construction will be confined mainly to the better stores in larger cities.

Regarding the popular materials, two stand out prominently, these being the fine serges and the new prunella cloths. Going into garments which are developed in silk, I find in Princesse dresses and costumes a strong representation of messaline and soft finish satin. There is, perhaps, more novelty this season in the separate skirt than there has been for some time. There has been a radical reaction from all pleated styles in skirts into the plain, simply gored cut. The extreme skirt models are very narrow—a markt feature is the high waist-band, this applying to both separate and suit skirts. The inside belt from which the skirt is suspended at the top line is, however, of moderate height, no longer being of the type noted at the introduction of the idea last season—the generally approved width being two inches. The color movement for spring has been largely along novelty lines. There is every indication that this will continue throughout the spring. The popular new shades are well described as dark pastels. They are entirely different from the old-fashioned pastels—which were of a faint tint—as they have marked depth of tone, overcast, however, by the grayish or chalky cast which is characteristic of pastel. Gray greens, ranging from what is known as stone green into the various roseda shares, are strong. Shades of dull rose color. Gray in the gunmetal, smoke and castor, with mistaria in the mauve or violet tones, are also good. The staple navy blues, of course, are much in favor. Trade conditions are strong and will develop greatly with the advance of the season and my purchases have been made with the expectation of the greatest business in our history.

SCHUBERT AND SCHUMANN

Free Concert Program Will Give Opporunity to Compare Them.

The program for the eighteenth Masonic free concert, Sunday, Feb. 28, at 3:30 p. m., will be as follows:

Organ—
(a) Concerto; A Minor. Andantino-Allegro Vivace.....Schumann
(b) "Slumber Song".....Schumann
Vocal Solo—"Beloved It Is Morn".....
.....Aylward
Miss Frances Woodbridge.
Organ—
(a) "The Language of Flowers"..
.....Roberts
(b) Fifth Nocturne.....Leybach
Vocal solo—"Lullaby".....Godard
Miss Frances Woodbridge.
Organ—
(a) "Serenade".....Schubert
(b) Symphonie, in C Major;
Finale-Allegro Vivace ...Schubert

The above program presents a varied combination of the simple and the complex in musical compositions, the "Slumber Song," "Lullaby," and "Serendae" presenting the simple and exquisite sweet, while the concerto and the symphonie show the complex development of simple melodies, when woven into the higher forms of the symphonie and concert. The numbers by Schumann and Schubert, give a chanee to judge by comparison of the style of each.

As the base of every great sonata, sympony or concerto is some simple melody, most often some old folk song. Some call it a theme, a motif, the air, but by whatever name it is known, it is the dominant feature of the composition and the genius of the composer consists in weaving around it and into it, in musical language, the poetic thoughts which it develops. There is nothing repellant or uninteresting in so-called classic music, once the listener gets the melody, and is able to follow the composer in his flights of musical imagination. The lack of appreciation of classic music proceeds from lack of education in musical form and style, but those are easily picked up by frequent hearings of that kind of music, and the listener soon becomes a classic enthusiast.

ALBERTA ASKS POWER TO BUILD ELEVATOR SYSTEM.

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 26.—Premier Rutherford of Alberta, has asked the dominion government to confer power on Alberta province to enable it to build and operate a huge elevator system to store, transport and grade grain.

"Finest in America," Says Prof. F. H. Bliss.

Prof. F. H. Bliss of Saginaw, Mich., author of the Bliss System of Actual Business, who has been in the city for the past two days, has this to say of the Duluth Business University's new quarters: "I have visited every business college of note from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Gulf to the Canadian boundary, and I believe the Duluth Business University has the most elegant quarters of any school in the United States." Prof. F. H. Bliss travels continuously in the interests of his system of actual business, and is in touch with all the largest and best schools using his system. A statement of this kind means much, and certainly should be very gratifying to the proprietor of our business university.

NONE NEED STAY IDLE

Plenty of Work for Those Willing to Go to Woods.

Many Men Not Working Who Refuse to Leave Town.

To the Editor of The Herald:

If it is not presuming too much, I would like to say a word in regard to the discussion that is going on in regard to the unemployed. I have read what Mr. Walsh has said and also what my colleagues in business have said. One is as rabid as the other and there is very little sense in any of it.

Mr. Walsh would make us understand that the man with $1 in his pocket is not as good a man as the one who has none, which to any fairminded man is all wrong. He also claims there are about 2,000 idle men in Duluth. In this he is right, and he is wrong. There is no doubt there are lots of idle men in Duluth in winter, but are they men that care to go out on railroad or woods work? We have lots of dock laborers, building trades laborers and others who absolutely refuse to leave town when the slack season is on. They stay around and catch odd jobs and make enough to keep them over until things open up in the spring. These men are not loafers, although, perhaps, a casual observer might think so by seeing them walking around on the street.

The question of getting the jobless man to the job has always been a live question, and always will be. Let us look at this from a fair point of view. The free employment bureaus will not solve this question any more than the paid employment bureaus are doing, although as a citizen, I have no objection to them.

I absolutely refuse to concur in the opinion which some members of the labor department wish to convey to the public, that we employment men get our money from the laboring men by a "pay me $1 or you don't get no work, idea."

Laboring men as a rule are more than willing to pay a $1 office fee for a job; they know then they get a contract that amounts to something; their wages are set and they can collect them accordingly, as has been shown in our courts several times.

I know hundreds of men that absolutely refuse to go out to a job without a ticket. Did any of the readers ever work in a camp? Have you ever noticed how many things might turn up to make you quit, or get fired? Maybe you don't get along with the foreman; perhaps you are not feeling well; perhaps some man in the crew is a "bull dozer," and makes life miserable for you and a dozen other things. In that case an employment ticket is a cheap thing at $1. I've known cases where it was worth $3 or $4.

What do the free bureaus offer? So far they don't even guarantee work and don't pay a man's fare to the work, as we do. Suppose all paid agencies should be done away with. What then? It is absolutely certain that the free office wouldn't get the business of sending out all the laborers. The consequence would be that the large companies would keep a man hired to pick up their men. Would that be any benefit to the laboring man? Let us see. In the first place, they would have no contract showing wages to be paid, and it is a sure thing no less men would be sent to a camp, as the more sent the lower would the wages be. It would be a detriment to the small operator who could ill afford to keep a man picking up men for his work.

There are at the present time about sixteen employment offices in Duluth. Their average expense is about $5 per day, making a total expense of $80 per day. There are about 125 men sent out every day and about the same number come in. These men perhaps bring in $20 each, a total of $2,500, and which is nearly all spent here.

The saloons get about 50 per cent. We get perhaps 5 per cent, and the rest is spent with the different merchants. For that 5 per cent we get them another job, we guarantee it. Isn't that a benefit equal to the amount expended, figuring for the total amount of money spent? I think so. And the best of it is, that very few are kicking about it, except a few politicians engaged in that line of work. There are, no doubt, unscrupulous employment agents, so are there merchants and politicians and also laboring men. Our economic troubles don't start from the paltry $1 that is paid an employment agent as a fee for getting a man a position.

I have seen through this winter men hired, with employment tickets in their possession reading like this: "Thirty dollars per month, if satisfactory and competent, and stay until logging season is finished." Such a ticket is absolutely worthless. There is nothing on it that can prevent a foreman from declaring every man incompetent, and he will receive his pay accordingly. Fortunately there are very few such companies.

In conclusion, I wish to say that at the present time no man need be idle in Duluth if he is willing to go to the woods and work at whatever is offered, and the pay is not so bad, $26 per month and board being about the lowest offered. Yours truly,

E. O. OLUND.

Duluth, Feb. 25.

STEPHENSON CLAIMS IT

$250; J. W. Stone, state game warden, $2,500; L. B. Dresser, member of the state board of control, $2,100; W. G. Wheeler, United States District Attorney, $500; John T. Kelly, city attorney of Milwaukee, $500; Rock Flint, United States marshal, $80; George Gordon, an attorney, La Crosse, $1,600; Solon Perrin, attorney of Superior, $2,000; D. F. Riordan, ex-state senator, $1,200; C. C. Wellensgard, assemblyman, $250.80; Hugh Lewis, doorkeeper, United States senate, $360; T. Purtell, state fire marshal, $175. Others received smaller sums. Items described as "lunches" show that "old soldiers" and "heelers" received $2.

Speaker L. H. Bancroft appeared before the senatorial investigation committee this forenoon and asked privilege to "relieve myself of this burden as soon as possible." He said:

"I am one of these distinguished gentlemen named as receiving emoluments from Mr. Stephenson. Although I am a humble citizen myself, my position makes a difference. While I claim no privilege for myself, nor for Mr. Stephenson, nor his managers, I reserve the right to protect others not concerned." He followed with the statement that he thought the committee would go farther than it had a right to go if it went beyond his own reception of the money.

Senator Husting objected to receiving testimony from the speaker. Mr. Bancroft explained that he intended to protect his friends and he did not think it was the business of the committee to know to whom money was paid.

The speaker said the $250 was received from Puelicher and was used in organizing Richland county for Stephenson. "Every dollar of this $250, and at least $100 out of my own pocket, was disbursed," said Bancroft. "I also wish to say that in one of Mr. La Follette's campaigns I personally paid out $400 out of my own pocket."

Senator Husting thought the last statement was immaterial. The witness explained his $100 extra expenditure by saying "I want to say frankly that I had a bee in my bonnet to be appointed United States district attorney. I had some talk with Mr. Stephenson on the subject but that dream has vanished now—the bees have flown."

He said he supported Stephenson, but had refrained from "pernicious activity."

A motion was passed that the speaker be required to tell to whom he paid the money. Witness refused and the chairman said there was no way of compelling him to answer.

CONGRESS BREAKS RECORD

mittee any duty to investigate or consider whether the absorption was or was not a legal transaction. Therefore, upon that point, no opinion will be expressed except that in the judgment of the committee the determination of that question "More properly belongs to a court of competent jurisdiction in an appropriate proceeding with all of the parties before it."

It will be asserted that the direction to the judiciary committee is limited by the resolution to an opinion as to the president's authority "to permit the absorption," as is shown by his message.

It will be pointed out that the primary inquiry relates to what the president's message discloses that he did, and under what circumstances. The minority finds that there were just three things disclosed by the president's message that are important and relevant. They are that the president told the representatives of the Steel corporation he could not advise them to take the action proposed, that he felt it no public duty of his to interpose any objection under the facts and circumstances known to him, and that the president assumes all responsibility for his action in thus doing.

Acted Under the Facts.

The minority asserts that it is immaterial to determine whether the understanding which the president had as to the details and conditions of the absorption, as disclosed to him by Gary and Frick, was fully in accord with the facts. That the president acted under the facts as he then understood them to be, is the opinion of the minority and, it is declared that his action must be considered as having been taken under the facts and information he then held as stated in the resolution directing the inquiry to be made. It is declared that any other construction of this resolution would be tantamount to asking the committee to judge the president's act, not in the light of the circumstances, and the facts surrounding him at the time of his action, but of those subsequently developed. In their opinion this would manifestly be unfair and unjust.

Whatever may have developed since that time as to the details, either of the absorption itself, or the cause of reports thereof which were then unknown to the president should not, in the opinion of the minority, form proper matter for consideration. They declare that it cannot be known what the president might have regarded as his duty if facts of other, or different nature had been presented to him.

Patenting Provision Cut Out.

A prohibition in the agricultural bill against patenting by employes of the department of agriculture of devices or processes discovered by them, was stricken from the bill in the senate on a point of order. Senator Warren advocated the amendment on the ground that the government should own the inventions made by the expenditure of government time and money. Senator Gallinger declared that inventive work ought to be encouraged and not discouraged by legislative enactment, and said that the heads of departments should insist upon employes devoting their time during the hours of their employment to their usual work rather than to the perfecting of inventions.

With the elimination of this provision, which related to discovery in making paper, the senate struck out the house paragraph providing directly that discoveries in paper making by the department of agriculture shall be patented in the name of the United States.

Disagree on Navy Division.

Another partial report of the conferees on the naval appropriation bill was made, but there remains in disagreement the provision to keep half of the navy on the Pacific coast, and the amendment fixing the price that may be paid for colliers. The senate amendment providing for an investigation of the advisability and necessity of establishing a naval base on the southern coast of California was eliminated. The house accepted the senate provision requiring the assignment of the marine corps to service on battleships. A compromise was agreed upon concerning the provision that no part of the appropriation made for the purchase of powder shall be paid to any trust or combination in restraint of trade, so as to make the provision apply except in cases of "extraordinary emergency."

A virtual agreement has been reached by the conferees of the house and senate on the penal code bill. The senate conferees have accepted the house amendment incorporating into the code the Knox bill for the regulation of the interstate shipment of intoxicating liquors. The Knox bill is to be amended, however, by a provision that a shipper commits an offense only when he "knowingly" ships intoxicating liquors which have not been properly marked. The so-called "Ku-Klux" legislation is stricken from the code, according to the agreement.

RAPS ROOSEVELT

ment by Mr. Bennett of New York, striking out the provision limiting the field of operations of the secret service. A similar paragraph in the last appropriation bill is what gave rise to the president's stricture on members of congress.

Mr. Bennett entered a general defense of the secret service detectives. His remarks were listened to intently by Mr. Smith, who at their conclusion spoke of the numerous special agents, postoffice inspectors and others.

"Every one of whom," he said, "is of a higher and nobler type than the members of the so-called secret service." He vehemently declared, in speaking of the secret service that it was a matter of common knowledge that one of the requisites of a detective was that he should be a common liar.

The secret service agents, he said, were not so high and lofty that they should be the subject of admiration among a free people. Many of them, he said, work for $3 a day in hunting down land frauds, when there is not a considerable number of them that know a legal from an illegal entry."

The secret service men he charged, were worthless and he said, "nowhere except in the vain, glorious boastings of Chief Wilkie and the testimony of men who didn't know anything about it, did I find that it had done anything except in the way of jurors and the like."

Continuing, Mr. Smith suggested that if detectives were necessary to hunt down jurors they should be assigned by the department of justice and not be taken from the force in the counterfeit section of the treasury department.

"Wouldn't that," interjected Mr. Stanley of Kentucky, with sarcasm, "interfere with the mystery, sensationalism and attractiveness of the secret service."

Cook Goes the Limit.

So denunciatory of the president was Mr. Cook that he was denied the privilege of continuing his remarks, after he had spoken but a few minutes.

Referring to the attitude of the president in the matter of ferreting out fraud, Mr. Cook declared that "in all of his fuss and feathers of the whole administration, the president and his pliant attorney general have not sent a single plutocrat to the penitentiary."

"Such a keen political speculator and political and financial strenuosity," he added, "has never been seen before in this republic, and let us fervently hope that his like shall never be seen again. Look at the paragraphs of his rattled messages, and you will be startled to see and read the insinuations and abusive phrases against the legislative and judicial departments of the government." He declared that the liberty of the people was being "gradually and secretly stolen by sneaking executive encroachment, and even judicial sessions, where the freedom of speech and of the press are denied, is a most outrageous injustice to the toiling multitude." The voice of the people, he vehemently asserted, was ever above all constitutions and congress. In conclusion, he said:

"President Roosevelt seems to think that he alone is the government, and his ipse dixit must rule everywhere, including the poor and friendless black soldiers of Brownsville, who were insulted, dismissed and degraded without proof or trial, by executive order and without any warrant of reason or law.

Like the Beef Trust.

"President Roosevelt runs the government on the same principle that the beef trust runs its sausage factory, from a personal standpoint, using executive and judicial work for the crude material for his fantastic administration.

"His veto messages are made from the impulsive and ignorant information of his cabinet clerks and the vacillating attorney general is a weak legal reed of the rough rider's dependence, who even recently gave a false statement to the president upon the joint resolution passed by congress determining the question of the boundary line between the states of Colorado and Oklahoma and the territory of New Mexico.

Following a defense of the secret service by Mr. Driscoll of New York, Mr. Tawney attacked Chief Wilkie and accused him of standing practically alone in the campaign against congress restricting his activities. On the votes being taken, the amendment of Mr. Bennett was rejected, 41 to 153.

TENNESSEE IS SCOURED

night these men were in conference with the attorneys for the defense.

The decision of the defense to put Governor Patterson and Adjt.-Gen. Tully Brown upon the stand was reached late yesterday afternoon and the state's counsel at once began a consultation over this new feature of the case. At least two of counsel for the state are political enemies of Patterson and no pains will be spared to embarrass the chief executive of the state.

The crowd which attended the trial this morning was as large as ever, and lunch boxes have become the rule instead of the exception.

The old lady brought her knitting. She arrived early and passed the time busily clicking her long needles.

When court opened, Col. Cooper resumed the stand and said:

"I wish to make one statement. My testimony yesterday as to helping an old soldier with money, as I read it in the stenographers transcript this morn, was misunderstood and I am afraid it is my fault. I secured $1,050 from my farm. I gave only $50 to the old soldier, but evidently every one thought I said $1,050. That's all."

Lieut. Pilcher Testifies.

The defense called Lieut. M. B. Pilcher, U. S. A., who found the revolver near Carmack's body. He said he had just left the club a block away from the tragedy the afternoon of the killing and saw a crowd. He went up and found Senator Carmack in the gutter, face down, his left shoulder higher than his right, his feet to the south.

"Did you see a pistol?"

"Yes sir, that attracted my attention. A boy was standing on Mr. Carmack's coat. I made him get off and then picked up the revolver."

"Where was it?"

"Senator Carmack's right hand was extended and the revolver was eight inches from the hand."

"Did you pick it up?"

"I did and broke it."

"Was it loaded?"

"With four loaded shells and two empty ones."

"What did you do with it?"

"I gave it to a policeman named Vaughn."

"Is this the revolver?"

"It is, or looks like one of the same type."

"How long did you have it?"

"I held it in my hand a while, until it began to attract attention, then dropped it into my pocket and walked down to the officer."

"It was recently exploded?"

"Yes, I believe so. Two shells were empty and the chamber was smoked."

On cross-examination, Lieut. Pilcher said he had no means of knowing how long it had been since the revolver he found near the senator's body had been fired, as that was a matter of opinion.

"Call Maj. W. O. Vertrees," said Judge Anderson.

Waited For Robin.

Maj. Vertrees was of the National Guard and saw service in Cuba. He knew Robin Cooper, and was to try a suit in chancery court with Robin Cooper the day of the tragedy. He told how he went to court and waited for Robin. They were on opposite sides. Robin telephoned that he was busy, and asked a continuance until 11, which was granted. At 11 Robin was absent again and said:

"I cannot leave the matter that detains, but read my depositions to the chancery judge and I'll come when I can."

He arrived at 1 p. m. He said:

"I am sorry to have detained, but I had a matter I could not leave for any lawsuit. I will tell you about it later."

"Were you acquainted with Senator Carmack?"

"I was."

"Did you see him or talk to him on political matters Sunday night?"

"I went to Senator Carmack's office about 10:20 p. m.—in the Tennessean office."

"What did Senator Carmack ask of you?"

"He said he wanted a revolver, and I loaned him mine."

"Did that revolver have anything on it?"

"Do you mean a scabbard? Yes, it had a little rubber tip."

"Is this scabbard yours?"

"Yes, sir. It was larger and had a clasp, but I cut off part of it. The revolver is mine, too."

"Was it loaded in every chamber?"

"It was."

The witness held the revolver found near the body of Senator Carmack.

"When did you see it again?"

Identified the Gun.

"After the application for bail, in the presence of the attorney general, I had told the attorney general I had loaned my revolver to Senator Carmack and wanted to know if the revolver found near his body was mine. I met the attorney and identified the gun."

"You knew Mr. Carmack?"

"Yes, sir; I was his best man at his wedding."

At this Mrs. Carmack turned to her sister, buried her head on her shoulder and broke into tears. The state said:

"Was Mr. Marshall acting as Mr. Carmack's agent when he telephoned you that Sunday night?"

"I don't know. He said Ed Craig told him that the senator wanted to see me."

"Tell the jury what Senator Carmack said that night, and what his manner and appearances were:"

The defense objected and was sustained. Then the state's attorney said:

"I want to argue on that; will you send the jury out?"

"Take out the jury," said the court.

"Now," said the court, "let the major tell about the meeting and let me judge."

MINSTREL SHOW A HIT

Big Audience Attends the Boys' Department Y. M. C. A. Production.

Good Voices and Real Comedians Make Show a Success.

The minstrel show put on by the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., in the auditorium of their building on Sixth avenue east, last evening, contained a number of good songs, new jokes, funny stories, high-class dances and clever comedians. It will be repeated this evening, and is well worth attending. The audience last night filled every available seat, and it waxed enthusiastic over the merits of the production. The proceeds will go towards the construction of a cottage for the boys' camp at Deerwood.

The company, individually and collectively, had an easy stage presence that would have done credit to professionals, and the end men were particularly good. All their jokes and funny stories appeared new to the audience. The boys' department orchestra opened the entertainment with two selections that were very well rendered. C. A. Gregory acted as leader and Cecil Gilliland accompanist. All that the boys need is a little more snap and confidence in themselves, to make it a first-class performance.

"Our Boys at College" was the name of a skit put on by William Chadwick, Fred Ryan, Leon Cooley, Stanley Lamb and Laurence Duby. The stage settings for this scene would have passed muster in a first-class road production at the Lyceum, and the work of the boys was clever. The act contained several songs, all of which were well received by the audience.

Miss Agnes Johnson followed this with a reading, and was so enthusiastically received by the audience that she had to respond to an encore. Her work was highly creditable. George C. Cowing was next on the program, with a monologue. He came out arrayed as a Jew, and his makeup was perfection itself. He sung a song and told several funny stories in the Yiddish dialect, making a big hit with the audience, and responding to several encores. Mr. Cowing appears to better advantage than the average professional comedian who takes a part of this kind, and his audience wonders why he didn't take to the stage long ago. Bert Montgomery played a piano accompaniment to his song.

William Chadwick, Laurence Duby, Fred Ryan and Stanley Lamb appeared as end men and were exceedingly clever. Mr. Lamb and Mr. Duby went through with some dances that called for more applause than anything else attempted during the evening. There were a number of good voices in the chorus, and the vocal solos were well rendered. The chorus men were:

Harlow Tissure, Fred Ryan, Joe Lonegrin, Erling Mostue, John Hurdon, J. R. Batchelor, Caldwell Harris, Robert Dunlop, William Chadwick, Laurence Duby, John Danielson, Sidney Morterud, Gerhard Ringsred, N. D. McLeod, James Jones, Stanley Lamb, George Hathaway, Wellington Cook, Laurence Jacques, Earl McNally and William Eeklund. Walter Robinson was interlocutor.

The opening choruses were "Mandy Lee," "Cuddle Up a Little Closer," "In Panama," "Moses Andrew Jackson, Good Bye," Erling Mostue of the first edition end men sang, "I'm In the Wrong Church, But in the Right Pew;" Stanley Lamb sang "GaGrden of Dreams," James Jones "The Yama Yama Man," and Fred Ryan, "A Friend of Mine."

Sidney Morterud of the second edition end men, sang "I've Sat My Last Farewell;" William Chadwick sang, "Everything Depends on Money;" Joe Lonegren, "Love Spells Trouble;" Laurence Duby, "Let It Alone." The closing choruses were "Broke," "Way Down in Colon Town" and "In Jungle Town."

ROAD REFUSES TO SHOW PAPERS

Great Northern Withholds Documents From Washington Grand Jury.

Spokane, Wash., Feb 26.—The Great Northern has refused Prosecuting Attorney High access to important papers wanted in the investigation of the supreme court scandal. The papers are part of the company's records of letters and telegrams in the damage suit of James Sparrow vs. the Great Northern. They were to be presented to the Spokane county grand jury to uphold the state's charges that M. J. Gordon, formerly counsel for the Great Northern, had converted to his own use large sums of money entrusted to him by the company.

A deputy sent to secure the documents was notified by Mr. Armstrong, President Hill's representative, that the papers would not be furnished to the grand jury.

EARTH LIFE WILL END AS PLANET HITS SUN— BUT NOT RIGHT AWAY.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 26.—"A collision of an unknown dark planet with the sun will terminate life on the earth," said Prof. Percival Lowell, director of the Lowell observatory at Flagstaff, Ariz., in a lecture before students of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"The event will be prophesied fourteen years before the catastophe occurs," continued the astronomer, "and chaotic confusion will reign in the world during the days preceding the calamity."

The chance of the catastrophe happening in the near future was declared to be very slight by Prof Lowell, however

WILL NAME NEW NAVY COMMANDER

Roosevelt to Announce Sperry's Successor Before March 4.

Fort Monroe, Va. Feb. 26.—Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry, who brought the American battleship fleet from San Francisco to Hampton Roads, has gone to Washington and the ship's carpenters on board the flagship Connecticut have begun to box up the admiral's belongings. The impression grows that Sperry will soon haul down his flag. It is common gossip in the fleet that President Roosevelt intends to name the next commander-in-chief of the fleet before he retires from office next Thursday.

UNIFORM PARCELS POST SERVICE AFTER MARCH 1.

Washington, Feb. 26.—The parcel post service to foreign countries practically will be uniform after March 1, with a postage rate of twelve cents a pound and a weight limit of eleven pounds. Japan and Sweden, however, will not be able to adopt the eleven pound weight limit until next month, when Japan, China and Denmark are expected to conform in a short time.

GARY REPEATS: NO WAGE CUT

Says No Great Business Results From Price Reduction.

New York, Feb. 26.—Judge Gary of the United States Steel corporation has again issued a denial of persistent rumors that a cut in the wages of the corporation's 240,000 employes on or about April 1 has been decided upon. The proposition has not even been considered, he repeats.

As to the situation of trade, Gary says no considerable business has resulted so far from the price cuts. He declines to venture any predictions, and states that the corporation has no agreements of any kind with its competitors, not even as to the price of rails. If any of the manufacturers wish to reduce the price of rails, there is nothing to prevent them. He thinks the present price low enough, however.

Judge Gary declined to say whether wages would ultimately have to come down as a result of the price cuts. He said that as far as the greater part of its employes were concerned, the corporation had no agreement with them which could not be terminated at short notice.

STEALS FROM WOMAN WHO BEFRIENDED HIM.

Flint, Mich., Feb. 26.—Allen Jacklin, a young lad who was befriended by Mrs. Edna Pollard of this city, a few weeks ago, after his parents had moved to Detroit and left him behind to shift for himself, it is said was in court Tuesday for the alleged larceny of $160 from his benefactor.

Jacklin is said to have heard Mrs. Pollard, who treated him as her own child, telling another member of the family that she had placed the money in a certain portion of the house. In the night, the woman says, he got up, took the money and left. He was found the next day and was arrested. He doesn't deny the charge.

Mrs. Pollard sympathized with the boy owing to his age and begged with the officers not to prosecute him, but her efforts to prevent him from a probable term in the reform school were only met by an attack against her character from the boy, when placed on the stand.

Mrs. Pollard is a prominent church worker and is higly respected.

ARGUMENT OVER NIGHT RIDERS ENDS IN MURDER.

Paducah, Ky., Feb. 26.—An argument starting in a dining room of a boarding house here as to justification of acts charged to a band of Night Riders, terminated in the killing of the owner of the boarding house, Oscar Osborn. Louis Futrell is under arrest and his father, J. D. Futrell, and T. D. Petty are held as accessories.

TRAFFIC TO BE RESUMED AFTER THREE MONTHS.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 26.—Traffic on the railroad between Port Limon and San Jose, Costa Rica, which has been stopped for three months as a result of severe rains, will be resumed Monday. The track had been washed away in a number of places and scores of trestles wrecked. Because the fruit could not be transported to the coast, serious hindrance to the banana exporting trade has been encountered.

ASIATIC EXCLUSION FAVORED BY CALIFORNIA SENATE.

Sacramento, Cal., Feb. 26.—The senate, by a vote of 28 to 7, passed a resolution favoring the exclusion of all Asiatics from the United States. Several senators expressed surprise when the Asiatic immigration question was brought up.

The debate was upon a substitute for four joint resolutions referred to the committee on federal relations.

Senator Rosebery said the resolution was uncalled for, as everybody understood that the federal authorities were looking out for the interests of California in the matter of immigration.

Senator Stetson said he had believed such agitation had been disposed of several weeks ago.

Senators Miller and Burnett argued that no possible harm could be done by the measure, and that the people of the state had a right to express their opinion in this form upon any subject they chose.

UNKNOWN TAKES HIS LIFE.

Body Found Near Marmath, N. D., Soon After Life Became Extinct.

Marmarth, N. D., Feb. 26.—The body of an unknown suicide was found one mile east of town yesterday. It was that of a man about 35 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height, and of quite heavy build, black hair, and apparently of Irish parentage. He wore a good blue suit and light overcoat, had $20 in his pocket and a gold watch, but not a scrap of paper by which he could be identified. He had shot himself through the right temple with a 32-caliber revolver, which lay by his side. The body was about fifty feet from the railroad track and was discovered by the crew on an east-bound train. The man had apparently been dead but a few hours.

Ever stop to think that you have to wash dishes 3 times a day, 1095 times a year?

If you could save one-half the time devoted daily to dish-washing, we figure it would amount to about 15 days in a whole year. Rather startling, isn't it?

Sift a teaspoonful of GOLD DUST in a dish-pan full of hot water, and it will wash your dishes in just half the time taken by the ordinary soap method.

Better still, it will give you cleaner, sweeter dishes—dishes that are not only clean on the surface, but that are sterilized and sanitarily safe.

The reason is that GOLD DUST is a positive antiseptic vegetable oil soap in powdered form; it goes deep into hidden places and routs every germ. It instantly dissolves in hot or cold, hard or soft water, and does all the hard part of the task without your assistance

PICKLE CLUB IS ORGANIZED

With Fifty-Seven Varities of Society Girls as Members.

Carlinville, Ill., Feb. 26.—The bachelor girls of Gillespie have effected a unique organization to be known as the Pickle club, which is creating much interest in the society circles of that city. There will be fifty-seven degrees administered, each representing a different variety of bachelor girls.

The first degree begins when the candidate is just blossoming into bachelorhood, or when she is too old to be 16 and not old enough to be a full-grown girl. The degree conferred in this case will be designated as the sweet pickle. The chow chow degree is the next and the girls who have to ask their mamma are to receive it. The red-headed girls are to have the distinct honor of pickle pepper degree. The mixed pickle degree is to be reserved for the girls of the snapping turtle variety. The little girls, those of slight stature, will have the midget pickle degree bestowed upon them, while all those who assume the role of wall flowers at public gatherings will take the Indian relish degree. The bachelor girls of many, many summers will receive the degree of the sour pickle, and the man-haters will have their hair streaked with gray and also be supplied with small hatchets with which to attack the hated man. The degree just named will be the last and the fifty-seventh.

RUBBER DYED IN BLOOD.

Conditions Not Bettered by Transfer to Belgian Government.

Brussels, Feb. 26.—The cession of the Congo Free State to Belgium has not been followed by any amelioration of the conditions of life in that vast territory in mid-Africa. Transference of responsibility from King Leopold to the Belgian government has left things as they were and the natives are being terrorized as formerly. Rubber, dyed in blood, is still being gathered. This is brought out with overpowering effect in "a memorial on native rights in the land and its fruits in the Congo territories," which has been presented to Sir Edward Grey, the British minister for foreign affairs, by E. D. Morel. Mr. Morel reveals a state of things on the Congo which constitutes a grievious reproach to common humanity and a scandal to Christian civilization.

Accompanying the memorial is a letter from Mr. Morel addressed to Sir Edward Grey, in which the secretary for foreign affairs is reminded that in November last, in his representations to the government of Belgium, he (Sir E. Grey) urged as "the esential point" of the British requirements, the rights of the native population of the Congo to trade in the natural products of the soil.

BAN ON DIRECTOIRE GOWN.

Parisian Dressmakers Say It Permits Too Much Economy.

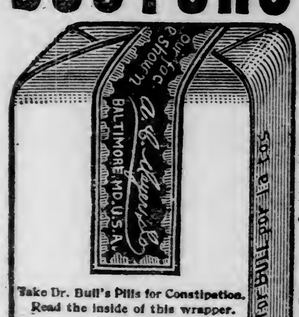

Paris, Feb. 26.—The principal reason why the Paris dressmakers have decreed the suppression of the directoire fashion is that the past season has been disastrous for the Rue de la Paix.

Directoire costumes, it is stated, can be made with half as much material as an ordinary gown. The dress, also, is easy to copy, and instead of going to leading couturiers for all their dresses many women ordered only two or three and had copies of them made by small dressmakers or by their maids.

The dressmakers in revolt were speedily joined by the lingerie dealers. The only people who made money out of directoire fashions were makers of the special under-garments worn with the dresses. After a brief trial of the directoire costume, the complaints of dressmakers, lingerie outfitters and manufacturers of cloth, silk and velvet were so loud that it was unanimously decided to abolish it.

The dressmakers of London are in agreement with those of Paris concerning the death of the directoire gown. Long, straight lines are to give way to generous curves, waists are not only to lengthen, but to be smaller, and hip measurements are to increase. Breadth, instead of attenuation, will, within reasonable limits, be admired.

CHURCH HAS NEW PLANS

Duluth Roman Catholics Have Several New Buildings in Sight.

New High School and New East End Cathedral.

The Catholic people of Duluth are interested in building on a large scale at present, and the next year or two will see some valuable additions made to the extensive holdings of the Catholic church in Duluth.

The latest project is a new high school for the Christian Brothers' school of the cathedral parish. Two lots on the southeast corner of Second avenue west and Fourth street, just opposite to the present school and diagonally across from the cathedral, have been purchased. The new high school will be built there, during the course of the present year, it is expected. The money is now being raised and the plans will be prepared and the contract let as soon as the financial end of the project is certain.

The present school of the Christian Brothers is badly crowded and more room is necessary. With the additional room to be given by the new building, the course will be enlarged, the corps of teachers increased, and there will be facilities for caring for all of the children of the parish.

The school is a parochial project of the cathedral parish, but there are several diocesan projects occupying the attention of the Catholic people of the entire Duluth diocese. The Villa Scholastica is almost completed, and it will be followed up by the erection of a new St. James' orphanage. It is expected that in the course of a year or so a start will be made on the beautiful new cathedral planned to be erected in the East end. Three lots have been purchased there, and a chapel will be first erected. The chapel will be part of the planned cathedral, and will be a wing when the big new building is erected.

IN LOVE WITH MISS SHERLEY

When She Wed, Army Officer Took His Own Life.

New York, Feb. 26.—That Lieut. John J. Moller, U. S. A., who committed suicide last Monday night at the Grand Union hotel, took his life because Miss Elizabeth Sherley, the Louisville, Ky., beauty, and sister of Congressman Swager Sherley, married Thomas Shevlin, Jr., of Minneapolis, is the belief among the friends of the dead army man. Mr. and Mrs. Shevlin are now on their honeymoon.

It is even claimed that the lieutenant and Miss Sherley were engaged to be married, and that this was terminated in consequences of charges brought against Moller when he was in the Philippines, on which he was court-martialed. The court cleared him, but his commanding officer disapproved the verdict. All the real facts in the case never reached Miss Sherley, it is believed, but at any rate, when Moller returned to this country, he learned that Miss Sherley was engaged to Shevlin.

When he came back three months ago, on a leave of absence, his friends on Governor's island and in the Army and Navy club noticed that he had aged far beyond 30 years. From a light-hearted, energetic junior officer he had become a misanthropic, sour, unfriendly recluse.

He was well supplied with money when he came East, his mother, who is the widow of a paint manufacturer of St. Louis, being wealthy and liberal with him. His money and his leave of absence ran out Monday at the same time, and his nerve ran out, too. So he killed himself.

Moller registered at the Grand Union hotel last Saturday, concealing his military rank and giving this city as his place of residence.

Assigned to Room No. 35 F, on the fourth floor of the hotel, Lieut. Moller kept to his room most of the time, and ate his meals alone at a corner table in the cafe. Monday night he went to his room at 8 o'clock.

Three hours later a chambermaid heard the muffled report of a shot coming from Moller's room, and notified the house detective. He found the door open. Moller lay in bed covered as if asleep. Blood was streaming from a wound in his forehead and a revolver lay close to his right hand. He was unconscious and barely alive, but died later.

To his close friends he confided that while he did not blame the girl for throwing him over, because there had never been any formal engagement, he felt the keenest disappointment. He did not say whether or not he had seen her after his return from the Philippines.

GOLD FIELDS IN BRAZIL.

Syndicate Acquires Property Which Gives Great Promise.

London, Feb. 26.—A group of financiers have just acquired a tract of gold-bearing land in Brazil which, it is declared, will more than equal the product of the Australian fields. Its record goes back to the early '60s, when a Rio de Janeiro syndicate put up $300,000 for the purpose of exploiting it.

They sent engineers to the scene and built a strong fort designed to hold the gold, but destined to become a hospital for the victims of a revolution in the days when Brazil did not enjoy as now the blessings of orderly and suitable government. Mismanagement ruined the syndicate, and they left behind splendid and costly machinery to rot and rust in company with the fort. Then the property was sold for what it would fetch to a Franco-German syndicate, which broke up with the war of 1870.

The property has been secured by the present group at a price which, it is stated, represents its value merely as a cattle ranch, although it is said to contain nine parallel reefs of ascertained gold-bearing character traversing the entire length of six mines.

ROSTAND'S NEW PLAY

Owl Is the Villain and the Rooster the Real Hero.

Part Written for Coquelin May be Played by His Son.

Paris, Feb. 26.—Although all the world of the stage knows of it and a dozen hypothetical parodies of it have been played and sung, not half a dozen persons besides the author know the whole of M. Edmond Rostand's "Chantecler," and these few are sworn by dreadful oaths to secrecy. One of them was Coquelin himself, who already had his part by heart, and, with that marvelous memory of his which enabled him to keep fifty-three leading parts in as many plays in his head, would often recite to a few intimate friends passages from his role, which was to have been, he persuaded, the best of all his creations.

Challenged one day to prove that he really had his fifty-three parts at his finger tips, he asked a number of persons present each to open the book of a different play at random and to read him out a cue. The test was conclusive. He followed up each one without hesitation and without one mistake. As for "Chantecler," he possibly knew that part better than any other, for he admired none more. It was obviously written for him, and one cannot help wondering whether the poet's idea of the play was not suggested by the actor himself, and whether he did not write a piece in verse round Chanteler for a hero because the player, who was known to his friends as "Coq," was there to act it.

Who Will Succeed Coquelin?

Who will be cock of the walk in the poet's play now? The dead actor had been letter perfect in his part already for months, and his dress of gorgeous feathers, with magnificent tail and imperious comb, had long been ready. Who will wear it now? From a passage in M. Edmond Rostand's moving speech at Coquelin's funeral it was gathered that his son, Jean, has as it were, been appointed heir to "Chantecler" by the poet. M. Jean Coquelin may, therefore, come into the art of Chantecler as his inheritance. He has his father's voice to an extraordinary degree, and he has already proved that he has some of his father's talent. He would not find a better opportunity of proving that he has all of it, though the honor will not be a light one to bear.

"Chantecler" is founded on the mediaeval "Roman du Renard," which Goethe, in a not much read poem, revived, and of which Brer Fox and Brer Rabbit are distant modern descendants. No more than one or two of the actors in the cast know more of the work than their own parts in the first act, the only one yet rehearsed. The rehearsals for the second were to begin on the very day that Coquelin died. The chief characters are the Rooster, the Hen, the Guinea Fowl, and Magpie, the Great Barn Owl, and the Watch Dog. No human being appears in the play. All the scenes take place in the farm yard, and one act passes entirely in the watch dog's kennel. It is not, accordingly, the most easy play to stage, and the cast at present includes Madame Simone (formerly Le Bargy), the Hen; Madame Augustine Leriche, a gorgeously good-humored actress of broad farce, the plump Guinea Fowl; Jean, and mercurial M. Baillaux, the Magpie, and solemn M. Dorival, the Great Fowl. M. Jean Coquelin was originally cast for the Watch Dog.

The story, so far as known, is that of a dark plot hatched by the moping Owl, who doth to the moon complain against the sovereignty of the Cock of the Walk. Other birds and some beasts are drawn into the conspiracy, but their machinations are defeated. The Cock has his own romance in his adoration for the Hen Golden Pheasant; but she shuns his advances for fear of losing her golden plumage. The Watch Dog is the judge and arbiter, and the Cock of the Walk comes out victorious in the end, and crows in triumph once more. How poor Coquelin would have crowed Rostand's verse with that clarion voice of his. One can imagine few better themes for the fancy of a poet like Rostand than this fairy folk lore tale, and one can understand his delighting in it. In his "Chantecler" Rostand's fancy will have free play, and his technique remains as finished and brilliant as ever. Chantecler's ode of the praise to the sun is said to be one of the most finely worked and most glittering pieces which even Rostand has written.

A Gown That Cost $800.

The revolution that has recently taken place in women's attire has necessitated a complete change in the outfit of every follower of fashion. A lady recently paid $800 to her dressmaker for one of the newest gowns and spent an additional $250 for lingerie, hosiery and boots to enable her to wear the new dress. The "Richelieu" boots which women now wear to match the rest of their attire, are frequently made with real pearl and real gold as well as silver gilt buckles. On a pair of such shoes the buckles alone cost $75.

There has been a vast increase in the number of expensive tea rooms. Hundreds of women in Paris daily spend from $2 to $2.50 on afternoon tea. The same tendency towards extravagance has spread to every class of French society.

M. Labiche bought a little piece of land in 1903 from the city. On the little piece of land was a little brick wall. This wall was useless to M. Labiche and he wanted it pulled down.

"By all means," said the executive council of the Paris parish from which he had bought the land, "by all means pull the wall down." "Yes, but at your expense," said M. Labiche. "I bought the land; I didn't buy the wall." "We sold you what we had," replied the council, and the matter went before the court.

After three years of legal argument, the court decided that the parish must pull down half the wall and M. Labiche the other half. Both parties appealed, and last week the court, after three days' deliberation, came to a decision. The decision was that an expert should be called in. When he had handed in his verdict, the court will decide, and then both parties may appeal again. The little piece of land was sold originally for $14.97. The parish has paid $1,500 into court up to date, and M. Labiche $1,820.

An ingenious house owner of Nice has found an infallible method of keeping his houses let. He owns a number of them, and once every year, on Twelfth day, or, as Frenchmen call it, the Day of Kings, he makes three of his tenants a right regal gift. A meeting of them all is held, and every tenant draws a lot. Three of these lots are marked, and those who draw the three marked papers have no rent to pay for the first quarter in the year. There is nothing a Frenchman loves so much as getting something for which he ought to pay and need not pay, and flats in M——'s houses are snapped up as soon as they fall vacant.

FOOD FOR A YEAR

This represents a fair ration for a man for one year.

MASCULINE GIRL GIVEN PERMIT TO DON TROUSERS.

Berlin, Feb. 26.—Curious circumstances have compelled the Berlin police to depart from one of their strictest regulations, and sanction the wearing of male apparel by a woman. The recipient of this permit is 24 years of age, and is so masculine in general appearance, gait and demeanor that she repeatedly was arrested on suspicion of being a man in woman's clothing.

At last she decided to adopt the attire of the sterner sex, and for a long time she was left unmolested. She came, however, once more into conflict with the police when announcing, as all Germans must do, changes of address. The discrepancy between her garments and her unmistakably feminine name led to inquiries, which resulted in disclosures.

She was repeatedly ordered to don once more the garb of the sex to which she belongs, but, as she as steadily declared that rather than subject herself to the annoyance which this would involve she would commit suicide, the police at last sought the advice of medical experts.

The latter gave it as their opinion that though the person in question was undoubtedly a woman, her features, character, and general appearance were of the masculine type, and that she was much more likely to cause a public scandal in petticoats than in trousers.

Acting on this opinion, the police issued the permit referred to. The young woman is employed in an office, where she passes for a man, only the head of the business having been let into her secret.

ASPHALT DUTY SHOULD BE CUT

Increase Would Impose Additional Burden on the Taxpayers.

New York, Feb. 26.—At the request of members of the house subcommittee on tariff revision, J. W. Howard of this city has made a lengthy statement to the committee in regard to the tariff on asphalt and its compounds. Mr. Howard is a consulting engineer whose services are engaged by cities throughout the country.

Mr. Howard says that there is a "strong movement to have the duty on asphalt increased, and an additional tax thereby imposed upon cities and taxpayers. A rise in the cost of asphalt pavements would cause a rise in the cose of other pavements."

Instead of an increase in duty, which is now $1.50 a ton on crude asphalt and $3 a ton on refined, Mr. Howard says that the crude material should be returned to the free list and the duty on refined asphalt and bitumen fixed at the difference between the cost of production here and outside of the United States. This, he points out, will encourage the labor of refining foreign products here.

"In addition to the cities," Mr. Howard says, "there are thousands of counties in many states which are endeavoring, through state and national aid, to conserve and improve their roads with asphaltic compounds—all at public expense. This means that there is a large and increasing demand for such improvements," the cost of which will be greatly increased by a higher duty.

EXAMPLE FOR OTHERS.

Tiffin, Ohio, Feb. 26.—For the first time since the establishment of the board twenty-two years ago, the soldiers' relief commission of this county has found a person who refused financial assistance. Mrs. Mary Hummer, widow of a Civil war veteran, who has been a regular beneficiary, yesterday returned her allowance of $6, explaining that she now draws a widow's government pension, and that no doubt others have more need of the board's financial assistance than she.

CONCERNING WOMAN.

"And my beau?" inquired the girl who was making arrangements to live at the new Young Women's Christian association building.

"He will be as welcome," said Mrs. Wesley Feetham, the general secretary of the association, "as the flowers of May."

The young woman heaved a sigh of relief. "I wish you would save the room on the fourth floor facing on Second street for me," she said, and turned away.

"We want to make that new building a real home for the girls who live there," said Mrs. Feetham in explanation.

"And what," asked one of the office assistants in a sprightly young voice, "is home without a beau?"

"That's it exactly," said Mrs. Feetham. "What girl wants to live where she can't entertain a man? There will be parlors for the exclusive use of the girls living in the building, and if those parlors even do not provide the necessary amount of exclusiveness, and a girl will confide in me that she is engaged, or almost engaged, or thinks she might become engaged—"

"Yes?" said the office assistant eagerly.

"You run along and hunt up those vouchers for last month," said the general secretary.

"We are going to have very few rules at that new building," said Mrs. Feetham, "and there will not be one which any self-respecting girl will not gladly observe so willingly that they will not seem like rules: It will be self-governing, I hope, and the privileges which are afforded the girls will not be abused, I know."

The new building, at the corner of Second avenue west and Second street, is one of the busiest places in the city. It is planned to have the building furnished and ready for occupancy by May 1. On the lower floors the plastering is being finished, on the fourth floor the last of the woodwork is being put in, and the work is going forward rapidly.

On the main floor is the lobby, and opening from it on Second street is the library, the offices of the general secretary and the business secretary, and other rooms for the clerical work. The dining room and kitchen are to the left of the side entrance on this floor, and the dining room facing to the east and south, with windows on both sides, receives the morning sun and is an especially light and attractive room. On the floor below are the gymnasium, the locker rooms, the shower baths, swimming pool and bowling alleys, with an office for the physical director.

On the second floor is the auditorium with a seating capacity of 350 a part of which may on occasion, be used as class rooms, other class rooms, a sewing room, a hospital room in case of illness, a rest room, and a few rooms for the servants. The third and fourth floors are devoted to the sleeping rooms, and on the third floor there are double parlors for the use of the young women living at the building.

The rooms will rent for $6, $8, $10, $12 and $16 a month. The rooms for $16 rental have two closets and two beds. The others are single rooms, but in some instances large enough to allow of two beds being placed in them. The $6 rooms face on the light courts, the others overlook the lake or face on Second street or the avenue.

The meals will be served on the cafeteria plan, and although the cost of living in this way varies with individuals, $15 a month is a good average to place for meals. With an $8 room it would make the cost of living at the association $23 a month. This would include laundry privileges once a week, when the young women would pay only for the gas and the use of the electric irons. This privilege is a great saving not only in laundry bills but in the wear on clothing.

There are in Duluth, 1,000 employed women not counting the domestic servants, and it is this class that will be very materially helped by the opening of the new building.

STRUGGLE WILL COME

Races Will Clash, Says Dr. Jackola.

"The Race Problem in World Politics" was the subject of a masterly address this morning by Dr. John Jackola at the clubroom of the library. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Twentieth Century club.

"The racial struggle has been going on in Europe for more than 4,000 years," said the lecturer, "and with all its intensity it is just starting in America, and no one knows when it will end. The struggle has gone on for centuries between the races of Europe. The recent Japanese victory over Russia has caused a peculiar awakening in Asia that is pregnant with stupendous possibilities for the future of Europe. All roads lead to America, now regarded as the haven of all people, regardless of color or race. The Japanese and Chinese are the cultured people of Asia, of the long headed race which has pushed on and dominated the other races in the century old struggle. America will make a great mistake if she admits to her Western coast this yellow race and the inevitable conflict between the white, the black and the yellow races cannot but result in chaos.

"Civilization is more than economic facts. The struggle for existence is the mainspring of life, but man is subject to laws of variation, improvement, or degeneration, no less than all other plant and animal organisms. These laws are binding on the race, the family and the individual. The student of sociology should be a deep student of biology. Society is constantly in a state of unstable equilibrium and the significance of the social currents and counter currents, we cannot afford to ignore.

"The Mongolian is of a race that has clung to custom. In the active races of the Western world we have a spirit af reedom and enterprise which induces new life, new enthusiasm, and new energy in the life of the people. A sanguine racial temperament is resulting in a new and wonderful civilization developing. We are unable to undermine the work of thousands of years of evolution, and in proportion to the problem of the little yellow men on the Pacific coast, the negro problem in America sinks into insignificance.

"The Japanese have become aware of the superiority of their navy to ours, but the recent trip of our ships may have done something to lead them not to exaggerate But with their unrestricted entrance, the Pacific coast will become the Balkan peninsula of America, the storm center of the United States. They will soon supplant the white man on the Western coast, and if the struggle must come, it would better occur in Asia than in our midst. If he comes, he will force the government to admit him to equal economic opportunity with the white man, and to equal political right, and then his equality of social position will merely depend upon financial influence. If we deny him these rights, sooner or later he will call back to his country to force the government to meet conclusions in arms with the United States. The diverging racial interests will sooner or later come to the crucial test, and let us hope that we will not be found wanting in preparedness, in initiative, in individuality, and the moral courage to meet it.

ONLY IN CHARACTER

Has the Work of Women Been Changed.

From a purely business point of view it is a good policy to put money into anything but new styles, says Mrs. Simcox in the March Delineator. Most women—women of average means—have to wear their gowns several seasons. Naturally they ought to take the styles that will last the longest. If they adopt a fashion in its third or fourth season, it stands to reason that it will have a shorter lease of life than if they had taken it when it first appeared.

A good style generally lives, with modifications, at least two years—sometimes longer. The time for women to start to wear it is at the beginning of its first year, not at the end of its second. But they don't. They condemn themselves voluntarily to the position of the trailer after the smartly dressed woman. They take up a style when she is through with it, and their clothes naturally lack distinction.

Take, for example, the high waistline, which is only just now becoming general. It was introduced a season or two ago. Smart women accepted it at once, recognizing a wonderfully graceful, artistic style. The "trailers" held back. In their eyes the Empire fashions smacked somewhat of the negligee or teagown category. The second season they began to take it up gingerly—apologetically almost. Now they have at last arrived at the fact that it is really a charmingly pretty style of dress. They will wear it with enthusiasm and you will see it everywhere. Of course it is just as pretty as when it was first introduced, but even now there is a premonition of a change. It will remain with us for some time to come, undoubtedly, but some of the best gowns this spring will show a lower waistline. In many instances the waistline will be at its normal position; in others, just above it.

THE BAR PIN.

The Most Popular Piece of Fashionable Jewelry.

Girls who know how to dress the neck have departed from the use of bar pins of the same length in size. These are all very well for the back of the stock or a jabot, although they are not often used for these purposes now.

It is not considered the correct thing to use bar pins up the back of the stock.

This should always be invisibly hooked or fastened with lace buttons and silk loops, which is the French fashion.

The new bar pins are longer than ever and come in pairs instead of triplets. In truth, they do not come in sets at all. They are usually bought singly.

The extra long bar pin, which is rarely sold in the cheap sets, is the most necessary adjunct for the neck. It is as long as the thumb at least, and usually longer. It has a good strong pin on it and a reliable catch. It goes across the extreme edge of the turnover linen collar as well as the stock when a jabot is used.

While it is sufficient to hold the cravat or a bow in place as well as to join the lower edges of the collar, it does not keep the top of the collar in position.

If this is not done, a turnover starched colar can become an instrument of torture. Its edges rise up, separate and prod the neck. This is not only uncomfortable, but decidedly unstylish.

Whatever happens to the lower edge of the collar, the upper edges must meet at the neck. They won't remain in this position unless they are held by a pin. Therefore, the need of the shorter pin to match the long one at the base. About half an inch is the proper length; if it is longer it lets the collar open again.

The shops sells these pins separately in imitation stones and gold at small prices. Possibly the best looking ones are of washed silver with tiny pearls. These go with any costume.

While blue stones, coral and green ones are stylish, one cannot wear them with every gown. They must go in with a color scheme.

What Retail Markets Offer.

Mushrooms, 50 cents a pound.
Celery, 15 and 20 cents a stalk
Grape fruit, 2 or 3 for 25 cents.
Irish potaoes, $1.10 a bushel.
Beef roast, 20 and 25 cents a pound.
Turkeys, 30 cents a pound.
Broilers, $1 each.

Home-grown mushrooms of an extremely delivate growth and taste are in the market and although they are not in so popular demand as say, wheat flour, yet each week pounds are disposed of to those whose happiness depends in part on having a mushroom sauce as an accompaniment to other edibles.

Many people are denying themselves mushrooms during Lent.

Others have given up strawberries.

Many men who do not smoke are denying themselves cigars.

And even a Unitarian, whose observance of the Lenten season marks it off not at all from the rest of the church or calendar year, might happily forswear, liver and bacon. In fact, the penance would surely be the other way. Pure agony to have to eat it.

BURIED IN ARTICHOKES.

Roman Farmer Digs Up Greek Fountain and Refuses $75,000.

New York, Feb. 26.—A Rome cablegram to the Sun says: Six months ago a Neapolitan bought for $2,000 a plot four miles outside of Rome, which was to be devoted to the growing of artichokes. While digging recently he discovered an large marble fountain, six feet high and six feet in diameter, with a frieze of dancing girls in bas-relief, evidently the product of a Greek chisel.

Despite efforts to keep the discovery a secret, the archaeological department heard of it and sent a committee to investigate. This committee valued the discovery at $100,000. The government, which is legally entitled to buy these finds at three-fourths of their value, offered the farmer $75,000, but the value of the discovery was evidently purposely underestimated.

The farmer refused to part with the discovery at the price named. He also refuses to allow any further excavating by the department. The government is waiting for the farmer to come down in his demands. Meanwhile, the fountain is deteriorating from exposure. Artichokes are growing on land which probably contains many treasurers of an ancient Roman villa.

ARRESTED AT BREAKFAST

Man Wanted at Cloquet Is Caught in Restaurant.

The good eyesight of Policeman McDonald of Cloquet was responsible for the arrest of Walter Bergbohm, wanted for larceny at Cloquet.

Bergbohm is claimed to have stolen a watch, and the officer learned that he had come to Duluth. Accompanied by one of the Duluth detectives Policeman McDonald made a search of the pawnshops this morning and located the watch. Just after leaving the pawnshop, the two officers passed a restaurant, and Officer McDonald spotted his man inside eating his breakfast. He was promptly arrested and will be taken back to Cloquet.

HANSON WAS FIEND.

Wisconsin Man Not Only Killed Offspring, But Cut His Livestock.

Eau Claire, Wis., Feb. 26.—The jury in the atrocious Hanson murder case in Strum, decided at the inquest that Hanson killed his children before committing suicide by either stabbing them or by using a hammer.

It was also decided that a pocket knife found on his body had been used in taking his own life and inflicting the horrible cuts on his stock. Twenty heads were slashed in all. A veterinary sewed up the wounds of the suffering animals. On the first day six hogs died and one horse had to be shot. Later six more hogs, three horses and six cows died.

Fourteen hogs escaped by not devouring the paris green in their troughs because kerosene oil floated over it. The house cat died from a stab in the head. Forty chickens escaped through a fire being put out.

The four children were buried in one casket at Strum yesterday afternoon.

WILL NOT QUIT BANK

Macveagh to Retain Stock When in the Cabinet.

Chicagoan Must Give Up His Grocery Business, However.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—Franklin Macveagh, Chicago merchant and financier, who will receive the treasury portfolio in the cabinet of President-elect Taft, blushingly accepted the congratulations of friends and business associates today and talked about his appointment.

Surrounded by his associate directors in the Commercial National bank, all of whom insisted on calling him "Mr. Secretary," Mr. Macveagh smiled and said "thank you," but he would not admit that he had any direct information from Mr. Taft relative to his selection for secretary of the treasury.

The Chicago merchant, who, in accepting the treasury portfolio, must dispose of his wholesale grocery business, did not appear to be worrying any about retiring from a mercantile pursuit, but he has not resigned as chairman of the board of directors of the Commercial National bank, and so far as legal requirements are concerned, it will not be necessary for him to do so in order to qualify for the cabinet.

MacVeagh appeared early at the bank to attend the directors' meeting. "I can't say a word about this," he said. "You know that Mr. Taft has said he would make his own announcement. Until he has made a formal announcement, I have nothing to say."

"Will you resign as director of the Commercial National bank when you become secretary of the treasury." Mr. MacVeagh was asked.

Mr. MacVeagh turned from his congratulation smile to a serious demeanor and spoke hypothetically.

"It is not necessary for a man to retire from the banking business to become secretary of the treasury," he said.

"He may be a director, a stockholder or even president, and still be the secretary. The law has no restrictions of that character. Lyman J. Gage retained his stock in the First National bank during his service as secretary of the treasury. It is necessary, however, under the law relating to trade and commerce for a merchant to dispose of his mercantile interests in order to qualify for secretary of the treasury."

PLEASED WITH MILFORD-UTAH

J. W. Sheridan Returns From a Visit to the Property.

J. W. Sheridan has returned from Milford, Utah, where he visited the Milford-Utah Mining company's property, in company with A. Hanfield. Mr. Sheridan was very much pleased with what he saw and with the work done so far on the property. He says that there is no doubt that the company has a fine property and that it will make a great mine. While his experience on mining is limited, it is very evident to anyone that the Beaver Lake district in Utah is going to produce some great mines. The conditions are ideal, transportation could not be better. The San Pedro & Los Angeles railroad runs right through the district.

Good paying ore is found in many places at a depth of only 100 to 200 feet. The Milford-Utah found good ore at ninety feet. Water is rarely ever found above the 500-foot level. Mr. Sheridan says that mining in the Beaver Lake district of Utah can be carried on at a very much less expense than at most other known mining camps in the country. The district is rich in lead, silver and copper.

CROWD INCENSED AT BRUTE'S ACT

Lumberjack, Alleged to Have Mistreated Girl, Escapes Lynching.

Cass Lake, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Mike Grain was arrested here today charged with assault on 7-year-old Henrietta Smith. The accused was employed at Goss' camp and was boarding at the little girl's home. When the child's mother learned from her daughter of the outrage, she had Grain arrested. Grain was given a hearing before Judge Cummings today. He pleaded not guilty, but after a short examination was bound over to the grand jury without bail.

Much indignation exists here over the affair. It was feared for a while that Grain would be attacked by a mob, but better judgment prevailed. Grain has a wife living somewhere in Minnesota.

THE LIST IS COMPLETED

Duluth Ball Club Now Has All Players Needed.

Catcher Ness Will Again Perform on Duluth Diamond.

Plans for the formation of the Duluth baseball club for 1909 are going merrily on. The list of players is now complete.

Al Kuehnow received an enthusiastic letter from Darby O'Brien this morning in which he made known the fact that he had signed Ed Alwood, an infielder who, last year played with one of the semi-professional teams of Toledo, Ohio. William Shenley, a catcher who has been hanging back for some time, has been secured, and R. Stanley, an infielder, who has been playing ball in New York state and who is said to be very fast both on the field and with the stick, has been signed up.

W. E. Hendren, a pitcher has been secured from the Sioux City club. Ness will be back with the White Sox this year. He has been dickering with the Duluth team for a long time.

The dates for the spring training trip with the exception of a few toward the latter end of the trip, have been completed. The team will play in Lima, Ohio, April 15 and 16. On April 17 and 18 they will play in Fort Wayne. South Bend people will see them in action on April 19, 20 and 21. Grand Rapids will be the scene of diamond struggles on April 22 and 23. They play at Rockford from April 24 to April 30, inclusive, at Freeport from May 1 to 5 inclusive, and at Chippewa Falls on May 6, 7, 8 and 9.

It is likely that the Duluth team will open at home on May 13.

EVELETH FANS TALK BASEBALL

Range Town to Have Another Fast Team This Year.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Talk of having another semi-professional baseball team this summer is in the air, and it looks as though Eveleth will have a good team again this year. Last year's team compared favorably with Hibbing and Virginia, and the men who were managing the team last year think a strong team can be picked up again this year.

Pitcher Gebeau has been here since the close of the baseball season, but is undecided as to where he will play this summer. He has some good offers from teams in the Wisconsin-Illinois league, and is dickering with the managers. It may be that he will be induced to stay here for the season. Pat Boyle, the star third baseman, is work as an engineer in the local mines, while Mark Frear, shortstop and fielder, is still here. Toby Farrell, centerfield, is also here, and "Butch" Keneally, last year's playing manager, is willing to accept his old position again. With these men as a nucleus those prominently interested in baseball think they can build up a good team.

A second team will be organized from members of last year's White Sox and Independents. The teams last year played some good games with surrounding town teams, and will be strengthened by the addition of a good pitcher from Hurley, Wis.

DULUTH MEN BUY A FAST HORSE

Czarina Eliza, a Chicago Trotter Bought, by Runquist and Elliot.

Another fast horse will be added to Duluth's already long string when H. R. Elliott brings to the city Czarina Eliza, a fast trotter which he purchased yesterday afternoon in Chicago for a cash consideration of $2,500.

The horse was bought for the firm of Runquist & Elliott, and will be trained on the Duluth track during the coming summer, and possibly raced at the Minnesota state fair in September. The filly has a good record in Chicago and her new owners think they have a prize. She will be raced in Wisconsin, on the range, and if she proves to be all that was claimed for her, she will make some of the fast ones already here go some.

LESTER PARK TO MEET NORTHERNS

Important Hockey Contest to be Played at Central Rink.

There will be a fast hockey game tonight at the Central rink, when the Northern Juniors and the Lester Park teams clash in a very important contest. If the Lester Park players lose this game, they will be out of the race, and the fight will be between the Bryants and the Northerns.

The friends and admirers of the Bryant team will be out in force to cheer on the Northerns to victory, for they would rather see their team wrest the championship from this team than from any team in the league.

If the Lesters win tonight, another contest will be necessary, to see which two teams shall play the series of games next week for the championship.

The teams will line up as follows:

Northern Juniors,		Lester Park.

Taylor	right wing	Wharton

HE REGRETS CRITICISM

Chairman of Chisholm Committee Writes to Mayor Haven.

Had Nothing to Do With Comments of Chisholm Paper.

Mayor Haven, chairman of the Chisholm fire relief commission, appointed by Governor Johnson, this morning received a letter from Edward Freeman of Chisholm, chairman of the local fire relief committee, expressing regret that criticism of the committee should have gotten into the newspapers, and assuring the mayor that no member of the Chisholm committee had anything whatever to do with giving the matter publicity.

Mr. Freeman says the local committee has no criticism to offer on the work of the commission, and that, in answer to the request of Mayor Haven, he prepared a list of the needs of suffering families in the range town, and turned it over to Martin Hughes of Hibbing, range representative on the commission. Mr. Hughes failed to turn the list over to the commission, and this is why needed relief money has not been forthcoming.

DOG SAVES MASTER FROM ENRAGED BULL.

Escondido, Cal., Feb. 26.—Tossed in the air by a maddened bull, butted and trampled, R. B. Borden, a rancher, would have been crushed to death but for the bravery and devotion of his dog. The attack was so sudden and vicious that Borden had no chance to save himself, and was caught on the bull's horns and flung high. He struck the ground with a thud and was partly stunned. Instantly the bull was on him, stamping him with his hoofs and butting him with his head.

Borden yelled for help. The dog heard his master and came running to his assistance. There was a moment of struggle in which the bull tried in vain to reach his new enemy, which snapped and tore madly. The bull gave up and retired, leaving Borden hardly able to crawl to his house.

The bull was later shot. The dog will get the best of everything from now on, says Borden.

OFFICERS NOT OUSTED.

Washburn, Wis., Feb. 26.—The action which was started by Chairman J. Yderstad of the town of Mason, for the purpose of ousting from office the other officers of his town for alleged illegal acts, has resulted in a victory for the officers. It was contended that they discriminated in their assessment of the town.

"In Duluth It's the Herald"

"Say, Grace, you've the dandiest position of any girl in town—how'd you get it, any way?"

"Well, it was a miracle that I struck it so lucky, but then, hundreds of others in this very town have secured just as good, in the same way. You see I came to Duluth alone, with only a few dollars in my pocket. To be sure, I had something in view, but I saw the first day that it was 'no go,' so I went to the Herald Office that night and put in a good strong want ad; received a reply from my present employer, secured the position and have stuck to it. So my nice salary is the dividend from a Herald want ad—that's the story in a nutshell. Really, it's surprising what those little things do. The Herald puts employers in touch with employees, landlords with tenants, sellers with buyers, mistresses with maids, losers with finders, and there's no end what not!

"There's mother and father, brother and myself—and there isn't one of us that feels as though we could get along without that paper. Really, it has done more to increase father's business than any other one force. It's mother's source of outside information; it keeps me informed of the social doings, and through it brother keeps tab on the stock market.

"You know it's one of the most reliable, best arranged and evenly balanced papers in the country. In short it is a precise chronicle of the world's doings in the most authentic and comprehensive form. Then there's the advertising end of it.—Why it's just wonderful to go down town some mornings and see women swarmed around bargain counters like bees around a hive! And how did they get there?—A well arranged, well written Herald ad did the trick—without it there wouldn't have been a half dozen women who knew about the bargain.

"And the reason the Herald is the best medium to bring these results is because it has the largest circulation and is therefore the strongest and most independent paper in this vicinity. This is probably due to the fact that it reaches everyone at a time of relaxation—after the day's work, when men seek home as a harbor from business storms of the day, when mothers have finished the day's work, and, in short, when concise, reliable and refreshing reading is a welcome diversion."

ON TO THE HAGUE.

If constant activity and pressure for increased preparedness for war, that great destroyer, has marked the administration of President Roosevelt on the one hand, on the other hand his administration has been even more distinguished for its attempts to conserve wealth and life. Among the bitterest enemies of the president may be counted those whose plans for piling wealth on wealth have been checked by the setting aside of vast tracts as forest reserves and by the constant agitation from the president and through the department of forestry to teach the vital principle of conservation of national resources. The individual efforts of the administration in this direction were given added impulse and a wider scope when the president called the first conservation congress, held in Washington last May. This congress was attended by the governors of most of the states and by scores of prominent men of the nation, and there was no difference of opinion as to the need of conservation. This congress led to a second, held last December and this in turn to a third, a conference between representatives of the United States, Canada and Mexico, the purposes of which have been set forth in The Herald at various times during the past few weeks. Now it is proposed, ostensibly upon the recommendation of the tri-country conference of last week, but really upon the initiative of President Roosevelt, that an international conservation conference be held at The Hague next September. That such a conference will be called has already been announced, and invitations to the nations of the world to participate in it will soon be sent out as one of the last acts of Roosevelt's administration. It is said that many nations have been sounded upon the matter and that the responses that have been received are not simply acquiescent, but even cordial and urgent that the conference be called and it is therefore believed that the attendance will be large and that the gathering will represent practically all the nations of the earth. The object of the conference is the discussion of the conservation of natural resources, a matter in which America has much to learn from the rest of the world, but also a matter in which all nations are intensely interested. It is proposed that the world's conference shall start a movement toward obtaining a "grand inventory of all the natural resources of the world, so that the human race may have as accurate an account of stock as possible, to consider questions of waste and avoidance of waste, and in general to arouse an interest throughout Christendom in favor of conserving the forests, mines, soil, fisheries and game everywhere."

The world is constantly growing smaller. The more its people act together, the more closely they are bound together, and the less is the prospect of conflict among them. If they can co-operate with each other to help each other in the ordinary affairs of life, there is less likelihood that there will be causes of difference among them sufficient to justify a resort to arms. Possibly a conservation congress at The Hague may be as effective to the world's peace as The Hague peace conference itself—maybe more so.

TYPE OF CANAL.

The present outcry for a sea level canal seems to be merely another means for some people to vent their dissatisfaction with things in general. At least it is accompanied by a lack of argument that is quite remarkable.

The principal argument against the lock type of canal seems to be that the report of the engineers which Taft took to Panama with him is simply a manufactured report to sustain the government in adhering to the lock type. Why the government should care to stick to the lock type if it is not the better plan, the critics of the lock type do not seem to consider a matter worthy of discussion. They simply allege that the recent report is "made to order." Such a statement, with no facts offered to sustain it, is not worthy of very serious consideration.

Another one of the very few arguments offered against the lock type is that the Gatun dam is liable to give way and cause enormous damage. This argument entirely overlooks the fact that with either type of canal a dam is necessary to care for the waters of the Charges river. If the sea level plan is adopted a dam will be necessary at Gamboa and the Gamboa dam will be a far greater work and will be subject to about twice the pressure of the Gatun dam.

A third reason for preferring the sea level type of canal is the consideration that locks at best are a delicate mechanism, liable at any time to get out of order or to be destroyed by the agents of a hostile government. This argument also overlooks something. It entirely neglects the fact that to take care of tidal changes in the sea, level canal locks will still be necessary and these locks will be just as subject to foreign foes or to inefficient management as the locks of the lock type of canal.

A great sea level canal through which the world's greatest ships may steam without let or hindrance is a very alluring conception. Everybody would like to see that kind of a canal, but such a canal, owing to tidal differences in the Atlantic and the Pacific, and also owing to other considerations, is said by all engineers to be impossible. A sea level canal can be dug, but it will have dams and locks, though not so many, perhaps, as the lock canal. The great question is which type is the more practicable all things considered. The government's engineers say that the lock type is, and we shall either have to be satisfied with their decision or change the government. We refused last fall to change the government so it appears that we shall have to be satisfied with the decision of the government's engineers.

It is impossible that the whole people should know positively which is the better type of canal. Experts differ practically upon the question. The sea level canal will cost more than $100,000,000 in excess of the lock canal; there seems to be general agreement as to this. The matter is not one that is of great weight, however. The consideration that it will take six years longer to complete the sea level canal is a factor of considerably more importance.

Undoubtedly congress can be induced to abandon the lock type and commit the government to the sea level canal if it can be clearly shown that the sea level plan is the more practicable. The arguments thus far advanced for abandoning one plan and substituting another are far from conclusive however.

BIG AXES AND LITTLE AXES.

The government is a grindstone. President Roosevelt has some big axes that he wants to grind on it that he may hew to the line of the country's welfare with them; congress has a lot of little axes which it wants to sharpen for certain special friends that it has. For seven years the president has compelled congress to turn the grindstone and help him grind his big axes; meantime congress has found it difficult to sharpen the little axes of its friends and many of them have grown quite dull.

Quite naturally this state of things has not pleased the special friends of congress. Their dulled little axes will not cut as big chips as they used to when they were promptly sharpened by the government. Quite naturally, too, their hearts are hot within them against the man who has roughly pushed them away from the grindstone. Hence all the clawing and the scratching and the pigmy pelting of the man at the grindstone.

Congress hasn't done anything about the secret service yet—except to stand between it and the criminal classes. Out of all the Billingsgate speeches, all the school boy "rebukes," all the ex parte investigations, all the mass of distorted figures which congress has presented, the statement of the president that the limitations placed upon the secret service by congress are in the interest of no one but the criminal classes remains unimpeached.

The attitude of congress in this matter has been one of persistent attempt to justify its protection of criminals by misleading statements of figures. This has been shown again in the report of Senator Hemenway. Hemenway said that there are more than 3,000 men employed in the government secret service; there are in fact a few more than 1,900. Debating the Hemenway report, the senate said that the secret service had been increased from 167 in McKinley's time to 3,000 men. The facts are that there were 1,200 employed in the secret service when Roosevelt became president and that he has added 700. The Hemenway report infers that all these men are engaged constantly in secret service work, whereas with nineteen-twentieths of these 1,900 men the work of the secret service is only an occasional incident to their ordinary duties. Debates in congress have constantly stated that two-thirds of the money appropriated for the department of justice was spent in criminal investigation, whereas the attorney general declares that by the most liberal construction not more than 1.7 per cent of the money appropriated to the use of the department of justice was spent in criminal investigation. It has been further alleged, and that repeatedly, that the cost of the secret service has been from $10,000,000 to $32,000,000 per year, whereas the actual amount is about $1,600,000. The Hemenway report declares that it was never the intention of congress to build up a "spy" system and condemns the president for such attempts. It then in the very next sentence recommends the establishment of such a system in connection with the department of justice, which is exactly what the president has recommended from the first. Cabinet officers and heads of bureaus were put on the stand by the house investigating committee and testified that the secret work of their departments was still being carried on, but the house committee carefully refrained from bringing out the fact that this is true, because of the efficiency of the department of justice and other departments in providing a species of secret service of its own after the use of the regular secret service was denied it by congress. These are only instances; such misrepresentations in the reports and debates of congress are unnumbered.

The secret service limitation is another of the little axes that congress has attempted to grind for its special friends. The bitterness and the misrepresentations with which the subject has been debated in congress are simply the outcroppings of exasperation at being balked in its attempts to grind hundreds of other little axes.

Think of the baseball games that Roosevelt will miss!

What will the Ananias club do for recruits while Roosevelt is in Africa?

Are you keeping Lent? And what for? For the good of your soul or the applause of the public?

The indubitable characteristic of every really truly baseball fan is his ability to rush the season.

Supposedly the business of a legislature is to make laws; practically, it is to kill bills and time.

If Taft should attempt to play golf with congress there may yet be regrets for the halcyon days of Roosevelt.

As long as we are spending $400,000,000 a year for war it seems as if we ought to get a little fight now and then.

Looks like it will take more than one normal school to restore Northern Minnesota to its normal serenity of temper.

Senator Beveridge was last night proclaimed the leader of the Republican party in Indiana, and the king is crowned at last.

Upon one thing congress and the president are perfectly agreed—that darkest Africa is the best place for Roosevelt after March 4.

It is wrong to think that all of the $56,000,000 we are spending each year for useless navy yards is wasted. Tillman, Perkins, et al are "taken care of."

President-elect Taft declares that the four great professions are the law, medicine, journalism and teaching. The teacher, however, has as yet failed to note any confirmation of this statement in her pay envelope.

Philippe Jean Baunau-Varilla, formerly in charge of the French attempt at the Panama canal, is going to have the Gatun dam go out and destroy the canal in just fifteen minutes. Perhaps the Charges river could do it, if we would let it, but Philippe should remember that somebody besides his engineers is on the job this time.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

C. R. Woods, of Chisholm, stated at the St. Louis, yesterday, that there were over eighty-five new office buildings in Chisholm at the present time. These buildings are brick, as the new ordinance provides that all of the buildings in the business district of the town shall be of brick or stone. In complying with such an ordinance as this the citizens of Chisholm are fortifying themselves against another such a fire as wiped the town all but out of existence.

Mr. Woods further says that there will be much building this summer. The building has gone on steadily this winter, despite the fact that it has not been a very good year for building. This summer the people of Chisholm expect that the town will be entirely rebuilt, and that when it is rebuilt the new Chisholm will have many points of advantage over the old town.

George Shea, city attorney of Virginia, who was at the St. Louis yesterday, says the establishment of a new court for the ranges will tend to increase the legal business of the ranges. At the present time over half of the litigation of the county originates upon the ranges. But attorneys of the ranges, and Mr. Shea agrees with this statement, say that owing to the great distance that litigants have been compelled to come for legal redress, many of the cases that would be tried, were a court nearer at hand, have been dropped for the simple reason that some of the litigants could not afford to come to Duluth.

With courts established at Virginia and Hibbing, Mr. Shea says attorneys upon the range are of the opinion that the legal business of the northern half of the county will show an increase.

Mr. Shea, who is one of the thirty-third degree fans of Virginia, says there will be a fast grade of baseball upon the range the coming season. Virginia will be represented by fully as strong a team as won the championship for that town last year, and Hibbing, smarting under the defeat that was administered to its team last fall, will endeavor to put even a better organization into the field. The range fans are certain of some very fast ball this year.

Mr. Shea, however, says that it is a question as to whether they are not playing too fast ball in the range country. Virginia and Hibbing are the only towns that are able to support the grade of baseball that was played on the range last year, and this support is only made possible by the business interests of the two towns paying for the added cost of securing such good players. Where baseball doesn't pay of itself, some of the range people are inclined to believe that it will not last. Some of the people upon the range are of the opinion that smaller salaries should be paid to permit more of the towns on the range to be represented by baseball teams. Under the present system of high salaries, this is impossible, as only Virginia and Hibbing can afford to pay for the high class of ball that was put up by those two teams last summer. Coleraine found the pace too fast, and Coleraine did not have a team as expensive as the other two towns. Marble was thinking some of having a team this year, but under no circumstances could that town afford to put a team into the field that would compare with Virginia and Hibbing. It is doubtful if Coleraine will have a team this year, that is a regularly paid team, as the experiment tried last year proved a financial loss.

The Ribenack Brothers have the latest cash register in Duluth. It is operated by electricity and when you push the right button the register will do everything but sing a song. It will register anything from a cheese sandwich to a yellow bill. It will also register the amount against each room, so there will be no chance for Lenox lodgers to claim that the item charged upon the bill was not sent to their room. The register has an individual motor, and is already for business. It doesn't require a mechanical engineer to operate it, but there are a few directions that the money handler must learn before he can operate the autoregister.

J. A. Sayre, at the McKay, came down from Grand Marais yesterday. Mr. Sayre says there is an unusually heavy fall of snow along the north shore, and that in the woods the snow is much heavier than last year. There is little logging along the north shore, according to Mr. Sayre, and but little pulpwood has been taken out this winter.

THE WEATHER.

CLOUDY

Today was another ideal winter's day, bright, clear and moderately cold. The lowest point reached last night was 10 above zero, and the thermometer is not expected to go below that mark tonight.

A year ago today it was cold, the thermometer being below zero.

The sun rose this mornign at 6:53, and will set this afternoon at 5:49, making ten hours and fifty-six minutes of sunlight.

Mr. Richardson makes the following comment on weather conditions:

"Slight barometric disturbances are central this morning over Wisconsin and Alberta. During the past few hours those disturbances caused snow in Canada and northern border states, and warmer weather over the greater portion of the lake region, Red River Mississippi, Lower Missouri and Ohio valleys and the Southwest. High pressure areas central over the South Atlantic states and the plateau region have caused colder weather in the North Atlantic states and Upper Rocky mountain districts, respectively. Indications favor generally fair weather and slight changes in temperature at the Head of the Lakes tonight and Saturday."

Careless Wisconsin.

Kansas City Journal: One of these days the soveriegn state of Wisconsin, "fairest gem of Columbia's diadem of commonwealths," etc., will get both itself and these United States into trouble. Away back in 1857 the electors of that state met a day ahead of time and cast their presidential vote, contrary to the constitution and the statutes made and provided. When the vote came to be canvassed by the federal officials delgated to perform that function, there was a great row over the irregularity, but as Wisconsin's vote was only vital and didn't elect or defeat anybody, the matter was allowed to drop.

But half a century and two years later the Wisconsin electors make another mistake and cast their ballots for "William H. Taft of New York." As before, Wisconsin's vote was numerically infinitesimal in the final showdown and no serious complications resulted, though it might have been a serious matter. If the Wisconsin vote had been necessary to the election of a candidate, the election might have been thrown into the house of representatives, and if the house of representatives had happened to be Democratic, Mr. Bryan might have been chosen president—something that would have been quite serious indeed.

While more or less comemnt has been made on the incident, nobody seems to have hit on the most probable reason for the actual error. It cannot be that Wisconsin is so geographically ignorant as to locate Mr. Taft in the Empire state. Mr. Taft is a man whose name is occasionally mentioned in the dispatches, and any good exchange editor can recall the name with a little thought, along with that of the state which is honored by his residence therein. But a state which sends La Follette to the United States senate as its representative can hardly be expected not to make other blunders. Still, Wisconsin should endeavor to be a little more careful with its electoral vote in future.

Useful Exercise.

Indianapolis Star: President Roosevelt rides horseback, plays tennis, walks, drives and engages in various other active exercises, all for the sake of his health. President-elect Taft plays golf for the same purpose. Other men go to the gymnasium and there disport themselves athletically with a like end in view. It has remained for Governor Hadley of Missouri to improve on each and all of these exercises by engaging in an occupation which ont only benefits his muscular system, but is at the same time of practical use in other ways. When Governor Hadley wants exercise he goes to the basement of his residence and saws wood vigorously. This has been his favorite exercise for years, and he finds it wholly satisfactory

Lincoln's Descendants.

Springfield Republican: The family line of Abraham Lincoln consists today of three generations, with a single member in each. Of the boys who composed his family when he went to the White House, Willie, as he is generally called, died in 1862, his death almost prostrating his father; Thomas, named for Mr. Lincoln's father, well known as "Tad," whose portrait, standing by his father's knee, is familiar, died soon after the war; Robert T. Lincoln, the oldest son, was born Aug. 1, 1843, and during most of the White House life was away from home. He graduated at Harvard college in 1864, and soon after went upon Gen. Grant's staff. He was in the cabinet of Garfield, and of Arthur as secretary of war, and during Harrison's administration was minister to Great Britain. He married a daughter of Senator Harlan. His only child, Mary, married Charles Isham, Dec. 1, 1891. Mr. Isham is a graduate of the class of 1876 at Harvard, where he was popular for his scholarly taste and refined and genial disposition. Of this marriage there is one child, Lincoln Isham, born June 8, 1892.

A Colored Picture.

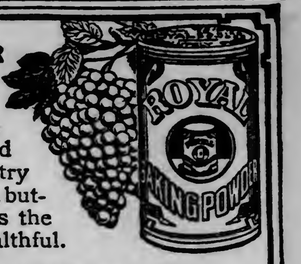

Toronto Mail and Empire: A red man leads the world's long-distance runners. A black man holds the title of heavyweight champion of the ring. DULUTH AND THE HERALD.

Eveleth Star: In Duluth, charity of the pure, unadulterated kind is running up hill with the team on the heavy load. Look out for some of the gentler sex with their bouquets of flowers and the street haranguer with his brick of salt.

Stillwater Gazette: A. J. Halsted has been owner of the Brainerd Tribune for a quarter of a century, and so far as The Herald knows, must be the dean of the country press of Minnesota. The Tribune is 37 years old and is among the very ablest and soundest of the newspapers of a state which ranks high in the character of its public press, says the Duluth Herald. The writer of the above has several guesses coming on the above proposition. Editors Todd of Hastings; McKinstry of Faribault; Pease of Anoka; MacDonald of St. Cloud, Childs of Waseca, and possibly half a dozen others in our state, as well as the writer himself, have the Brainerd Tribune man beaten several years.

Willmar Journal: The Duluth people don't think much of the tonnage tax unless it is on the other fellow. The Herald says the coal man and the ice man are the fellows that ought to pay a tonnage tax.

Hibbing Mesaba Ore: Representative Congdon of Duluth read his brief before the tax committee at the state legislature, and it proves that there is at least one strong member in the house from Northern Minnesota.

Norman County Herald: This is good logic from the Duluth Herald: Supporting the home institutions, doing business with your neighbors, buying at home, is not merely a matter of sentimental concern for those who know the best, but a hard-headed business policy that means dollars to your own pockets.

Stillwater Gazette: It is more important to find out how to increase the salaries of the teachers of the public schools than it is to determine who is to blame for their not being as high as they should be, says the Duluth Herald. The increase can be accomplished when we come to realize that, although the wages of teachers in the aggregate are our largest item of public expense, the salary paid to women as teachers is smaller than that paid to women in any other employment, even smaller, on the average, than that paid to our domestic servants.

Virginian: Thomas F. Cole of Duluth will represent Minnesota at the inaugural ball on March 4. The selection of Mr. Cole from this great state of Minnesota is a marked compliment for his achievements in the past few years. Mr. Cole is a man of action and a more fitting gentleman could not have been chosen, or one who gives more satisfaction to the general public.

Eveleth News: There is much in the statement made by A. C. Worrell to the Duluth Herald, that Northern Minnesota has the sturdiest lot of pioneers to be found in the Northwest. Those that go in to win here must be sturdy and their rewards will be in direct proportion to their determination to win and their willingness to learn.

POLICEMAN IS ELECTED

Beats Politicians in Fiercely Contested Election in Lowell, Mass.

Without Money or Influence, Chosen Mayor by Big Majority.

Lowell, Mass., Feb. 26.—Measured by all the ordinary standards—honor, power, authority—it's a wide gulf that separates the plain policeman from the mayor of a city. Yet this gulf, commonly supposed to be impassable, has been bridged successfully in the city of Lowell in the space of seven months.

One would say, offhand, that the accomplishment of such a task must have required the services of a master of the mysteries and strategems of political engineering. Those versed in the ways of modern cities would say without hesitation that he must have been a political "boss" of power and shrewdness.

But the truth is that this structure spanning a hitherto impassable chasm was designed and erected by amateurs. There was no "boss." The foreman was George H. Brown, policeman. His workmen were the common people. Brown led the way; the people followed.

Together they raised a structure that Brown believes will last for generations. It rests, he says, upon the bedrock of an awakened public conscience. And over this bridge, in his opinion, the way to the mayor's chair will be easy hereafter for the man chosen from the ranks of the common people, because he believes in honest government and has the courage and ability to enforce his views.

There are those in Lowell, it is said, who hope that Brown is wrong. These are Brown's enemies. But in their heart of hearts they would not be surprised if he were right. For, indeed, he has surprised them so often already that they are now prepared for anything.

He surprised them when, a policeman on his beat, he boldly announced his intention to be mayor. He surprised them still more when he won the nomination, and again when he carried the election; and then, most of all, when, his ambition attained, he did not get puffed up but remained—well, just plain George H. Brown, policeman.

Proud of His Calling.

Strange man, this Brown, if you would believe his enemies.

"Why," they say, "he is actually proud of his calling! He thinks it an honor to be a policeman!"

And Brown says the charge is true, and the only true one they have ever made against him. He's a policeman and proud of it. And to prove it he'd like to combine the job of policeman like to combine the job of policeman with that of mayor and live them both together!

Most men in Brown's case would be glad to doff the old and put on the new. Not so Brown. He appreciates the dignity of the office to which he has been elected. But he doesn't forget that a high dignity attaches also to the duty of protectlng life and property. He thinks the policeman's uniform has been trailed in the dust, not by the policeman, but by his superiors. He is going to change that. He is going to lift up the uniform and the policeman with it.

And so, after his inauguration he is going to see to it that the policeman has a fair show. He is going to make it an honor to be a policeman in fact as well as in theory. And, though he has resigned from the force, as, of course, he had to do, much against his will, he is still its head, and he has let it be understood that in him the man in the rank and file who is doing his duty will always have a friend.

Of course there's no precedent for all this. But then, there's no precedent for Brown!

He began life as a newsboy. Seven or eight years ago he was helping Uncle Sam quell the insurrection in the Philippines. Next, as a member of the liquor squad in Lowell, he was making it hot for violators of the law. Seven months ago his friends jokingly tapped their foreheads when he told them he was going to be mayor. The politicians laughed derisively. It was a good joke. Today they are wondering what struck them.

Fights Precedent.

Precedent! Why policeman Brown is a living, working, fighting protest against precedent! Of course he doesn't think about it in that way, but he does things that prove it.

Here was a broad, beaten, well-lighted avenue leading to the mayor's chair. None of his predecessors had thought of taking any other way. But what does Brown do? He turns his back upon it deliberately, because he believes it leads through the domain of corrupt invested interests, and with his eyes wide open he takes the unbeaten way marked by the wise ones of the city: "The Way to Political Suicide!"

And what is more, he was able to avoid all the pitfalls and to reach the goal by winner, not once, but twice, and both times by a margin unparalleled in similar contests!

After that, it's idle to talk of precedent in connection with Policeman Brown. You can't figure what he's done, or what he's going to do on the basis or what anybody else has done. There are those in Lowell today who would like to think that he will follow in the footsteps of his predecessors in office, but when they loo over his record they shake their heads sadly.

Mayor-elect Policeman Brown has a policy. His policy is "the square deal." He also has a program. His program is, "Turn out the rascals, put honest men in their places and free the city from the corrupting influences of corporate control."

Now there is nobody in Lowell who objects to Brown's policy. Everybody believevs in the square deal. Moreover, there is nobody in office or out of office who can find any decent ground of objection to this program.

"Turn Out the Rascals."

"Turn out the rascals to be sure," they say. "But who are the rascals?" Brown says he'll attend to that later. "And where are the honest men? You remember what a hard time Diogenes had—" Here they are again, talking about what some one else did. Brown says the great majority of the people of Lowell are absolutely honest and he is going to prove it. And, incidentally, he believes Diogenes was near sighted.

Still his enemies have hopes. His friends, the people, say his only enemis are those who believe in corrupt city government, and that if they think Mayor Brown will have mercy on grafters and weaklings in office they have watched his meteoric rise to no purpose.

If you ask his friends what elected Policeman Brown the answer will be: "A firm belief in himself, a confidence in the common people born of intimate association with them and a bulldog determination to do or die."

"Now that it is all over," Mr. Brown was asked the other day, "did you really have any ideas when you first announced your candidacy that you could be elected?"

"I never had any doubt of it," was the reply. "I made up my mind to win, and I said to myself, if I can't win in this way I'll put on more steam. I knew I couldn't lose if I put on steam enough, but I had a lot left in me when I finished."

He began his campaign for the Republican nomination seven months before the election by buttonholing his friends on the street corners. They told him frankly that they thought he was crazy. "Better not make a fool of yourself, Brown," they told him. "You'll lose your place on the force and you won't get twenty-five votes in the city." Brown gritted his teeth and said, in effect, that he'd show them who was crazy.

Makes Many Speeches.

On Nov. 5, twelve days before the primaries, he secured two weeks' leave of absence from the police commission. Then he took the stump. He addressed the employes of the big mills at noon, going from one gathering to another and hammering home his arguments in a way that won him friends rapidly.

Each evening he addressed several large open air meetings. He never hired a hall, for he had no money, but the people gathered to hear him, nevertheless. He had a way of getting down close to his hearers. "What kind of a speaker is he?" asked a man of one of his most ardent admirers. "Why, said the man, "he's a corker. He eats 'em alive."

He made votes constantly. And he did it alone. His three opponents for the nomination were trained politicians. They had all the support of the machine and of the leaders. They had the newspapers. Brown was the object of newspaper derision. He was a joke in their estimation.

The newspapers, however, helped him unconsciously. Brown was not a great speaker. He had never made a public speech until he entered that campaign. Sometimes in the heat of argument he might make a slip in grammar. The newspapers made fun of his English. Here was a man running for mayor, they said, who could not speak the English language correctly.

"I have yet to learn," retorted the policeman candidate, "that absolute perfection in the use of English is a necessary qualification for an honest, efficient mayor. If that were the case we might have to go to Harvard or Oxford to find a man to meet the requirements."

The newspapers had made a mistake. Every slur they cast at Brown increased for him the sympathy of the people. Here was a lone man, a man of the people, fighting against great odds, and yet the newspapers of Lowell thought it fair to make fun of him. Brown's crowd grew larger and more enthusiastic.

Aided His Cause.

Then the police commissioners made a mistake. It was reported to them that Brown in one of his speeches had said that no honest man in the department could secure promotion without political influence.

The commission issued a summons for him to appear before them at 4 o'clock one afternoon. Brown could not be found. The whole police force searched for him high and low, but the candidate had several engagements to fill in the evening, so he decided to remain out of sight until after 4 o'clock. He kept his engagements that evening, and later was summoned before the board to show cause why his leave of absence should not be withdrawn.

By this time the newspapers of Lowell and Boston and surrounding cities were full of Brown. Sympathy among the voters was increasing every hour. The policeman told the commissioners what he said, and they saw a light. His leave of absence was allowed to stand.

But the mistake had been made and the fight was already won for Brown. When the votes were counted, he was found to have snowed his opponents under.

Then came the fight for mayor against James H. Casey, the Democratic candidate, generally regarded as unbeatable. Lowell is normally Republican by only about 500, so it ought not to be a hard task to whip this ambitious policeman. Thus they reasoned. And, to complicate matters, another candidate entered the field as an independent.

They started to look up Brown's record, but after days and days of earnest search they couldn't find a thing against him. He said he was born in Waterville, Me., and it occurred to one of the sleuths to verify the statement. The sleuth came back with the announcement that Brown was born in Canada.

Won French Vote.

This was great campaign material, and his opponents used it for all they knew. Brown, they said, was a Canadian, not an American, as he claimed, and they said it in such a way as to leave the inference that it was a disgrace to be a Canadian. Brown saw that this was intelligently circulated among the French Canadian colony in Lowell, with the result that he got a bigger vote in that section of the city than any man who ever ran for office.

Of course, Brown was born in Waterville, Me., as he said, and all his ancestors as far back as he knows anything about them were Americans. His stepmother happens to be a Canadian, which caused the sleuth to jump at conclusions.

The election proved the wisdom of the policeman's methods of campaigning, for he won by a plurality of more than 2,000 votes and by a clean majority of nearly 1,900 over both his opponents.

And now he is Mayor-elect Brown, and he is looking ahead to the problem that he has to solve.

The highest suicide rate of any nation is that of Denmark.

HARRIMAN IN A TENT

Near San Antonio, Tex., the Railroad Wizard is Camped.

Says It Is Relief to Get Away From Sky-scrapers.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 26.—"A-a-h. this is a big improvement on the sky-scrapers," said E. H. Harriman, who wields greater power in the railroad world than any other living man, as he seated himself in a comfortable rocker in one of his tents at the camp which he has established in a beatiful spot on the outskirts of San Antonio. In front of his tents is a straight stretch of country, with the exception of the large buildings of the Southwest Texas asylum for the insane, a quarter of a mile away.

"What are those buildings?" Mr. Harriman inquired on the day of his arrival, as he was viewing the surroundings of his camp.

"They are an asylum," a bystander replied.

"I didn't know I was that bad off, to be brought so close to an institution of that kind," Mr. Harriman said, with a show of humor.

The magnate is delighted with his camp.

Nature is Restful, He Finds.

"I like living out of doors," he said, "out of recent years I have not had much opportunity for this sort of thing. I have lived in a tent before this, and I enjoyed it very much. It certainly is a relief to get away from the sky-crapers. Here one can get in close touch with nature, and it is restful to me. I felt better within an hour after I struck camp. The very life of the country puts new life in one. I am just drifting around trying to build myself up physically and I am unable to say how long I will remain here. I expect to live all the time in the tents and open air during my stay, and will attend only to such business as is most urgent.

"Do you know that all this talk about me being overworked is a mistake?" continued Mr. Harriman. "I don't work hard. I am not tired by the work that I do. I simply needed a change, and I came here to get it."

How He Lives in the Open.

Mr. Harriman is accompanied by his daughter, Miss Mary, and she enjoys life in camp fully as much as her father. The tents which are occupied by the Harriman party are four in number. They are situated in a grove of stately pecan trees, upon a slight eminence, which affords a clear chance for the sun to pour down its warmth-giving rays upon the little camp. The tents are all furnished and fitted up alike. That which Mr. Harriman occupies is no better than the one which minor officials of the railroad, who are with him, use.

Each tent is plainly but comfortably furnished. The furniture in each consists of two white enameled iron bedsteads, two oak finished dressers, four rocking chairs, a reading table, electric heater and electric light fixtures. The floors are of hardwood, and are raised about two feet from the ground. The canvas of the tents is of the heaviest material.

But Work Never Ceases.

The private cars of Mr. Harriman and other members of the party are parked a short distance from the tents. In one of these cars telegraph and telephone instruments are installed and a corps of operators is on hand constantly to handle the messages that come and go at almost all hours of the day and night.

"I can't quit business altogether," Mr. Harriman said, "for if I did it would soon pile up on me so much that I could never get out from under the load.'

The beautiful San Antonio river, which flows within a few rods of the tents, affords good fishing and Mr. Harriman expressed the intention of trying his hand at that sport in the course of his stay.

"I have no intention of doing any wild game hunting while down here," he said in response to a question. "There will be plenty of other things out of which I can get fun and enjoyment."

Doesn't Care for Mr Roosevelt.

"How would you like to accompany President Roosevelt on his trip to Africa after big game?" asked a newspaper correspondent.

"I would not mind making a visit to Africa, but I would prefer to exercise the right of choosing my own company on such a trip," he replied with a smile.

Mr. Harriman was asked if he brought any motor cars along.

"No," he replied, "I brought none with me. If I should want to use one while here I guess it will be no trouble to hire one."

Mr. Harriman's camp is situated in the extreme southern part of the grounds of the Hot Wells hotel and bathing resort, about three miles below the main part of San Antonio. He spends much of his time in walking over the grounds and along the banks of the river.

Mr. Harriman's table is devoid of luxuries. He eats the simplest kind of fare.

FREE RINKS WILL CLOSE

Fund for Maintaining Them Has Been Exhausted.

The Season Will End Not Later Than March 10.

The money appropriated for constructing and maintaining municipal free skating rinks in Duluth is now about exhausted, and the rinks will be closed within the next ten or twelve days, and possibly sooner, the date for shutting them down depending largely upon the weather. But whether conditions be good or bad, they will be closed not later than March 10.

Only a certain amount is appropriated each year for the maintenance of rinks, and when this is exhausted, there is no means of providing additional money, and it becomes necessary to allow the ice to take care of itself, and a day or two is sufficient to make it unfit for skating. This season the fund available was larger than usual, owing to the fact that the general public became interested in the project, and private subscriptions were made towards the free rinks. Enough cash was raised to construct five rinks, and it was expected that there would be sufficient to keep them going through the winter, but expenses have been somewhat heavier than anticipated, and the fund is now practically exhausted.

All the rinks have been a big success, and have been very largely patronized. The one situated at the corner of Twelfth avenue east and London road has drawn the biggest crowds, as being accessible to the biggest populated district, but all the others have also been well patronized. Crowds have turned out every evening in the week, and on Saturday and Sunday afternoons the attendance has been big.

The free rinks have made such a hit in Duluth that they will be a permanent institution, and every winter provision will be made for maintaining them. Probably next year the city will be able to make a larger appropriation for the purpose than it did this season, and there will be enough money to carry the rinks through to the end of the season.

ADMITTED MEN

To Women's Department of Jail, Is Charge Against Officials.

Uniontown, Pa., Feb. 26.—A sensation which threatens to involve some of the supposed good people of Fayette county is now being aired in an investigation being held in the courthouse, in which two former jail employes are being investigated.

It is claimed that they were in the habit of carrying contraband articles to women inmates, and that men of the town were admitted to the women's department at night.

Criminal suits have already been filed against them by former women inmates of the jail. About a dozen women have given testimony as to their treatment.

The Stomach of the Child

Is The Organ All Parents Should Protect and Keep Normal.

The stomach of a child is the organ above all others upon which the future of a child depends. Bodily development is fast in children, and the nourishment necessary to meet such development is the one essential demanded from a parent. Most mothers and fathers, jealously guard a child from the formation of bad habits, yet in this age our children early become the victims of wrong food, over eating and irregular meals.

It is most appalling to know the effect of stomach troubles among our children.

Most children who are nervous, irritable and cross, who dream, sleep restlessly, who tire easily and have no desire for child exercise, generally have stomach trouble, indigestion and dyspepsia.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are intended to thoroughly digest food and to place the system in shape to obtain all the nourishment it needs from such food.

These tablets mix with the juices of the system, enriching them and giving to the body the ingredients necessary to build up the rapidly forming brain and body of the young.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should be given to children after each meal and at bed time. They are made from pure vegetable and fruit essences and contain no harmful chemicals whatever. The use of these tablets will give greater vim to a child in its school work or at its play. They will produce appetite and soothe nerves, destroy abnormal cravings and will allay the bad effects of sweets and such improper foods as most children enjoy and will eat no matter what is done to prevent it.

It is due the child that his stomach be protected by the parent, and if Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are given after meals, the habits of the child will not tear down the stomach and destroy the digestive juices nearly so rapidly. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are given to each and every degree of life. Any condition of the stomach welcomes them, from the strongest to the weakest. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents. GOVERNOR FREES PAPER UNDER INDICTMENT FOR CRITICISING THE COURT

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 26.—One of the strongest defenses of the freedom of the press in criticism of public officials ever delivered in the South is that written by Governor Augustus E. Willson in granting a pardon ot the Herald Publishing company of Lousville, publishers of the Louisville Herald for an indictment in the Galloway and the Trigg circuit courts of Western Kentucky, charging the paper with criminally libelling Judge Thomas P. Cook and Commonwealth Attorney Denny P. Smith. The two officials presiding in the district in which the greater part of the Night Rider trials in Western Kentucky occurred and the paper vigorously scored them for failure to perform their duty in prosecution of the lawless element. Governor Willson wrote upon the pardons to the newspaper company this reason:

"Because the long series of crimes in this district, which have not been punished under this officer's administration, make it necessary for the press to criticise all who can be held responsible.

"If the courts do not put an end to the rule of crime in the counties in which the judge and commonwealth attorney are elected to uphold the law and order, the only hope of permanent relief from such conditions is an enlightened public sentiment aroused by the press of the country, and instead of punishing the newspapers, which make a fight against such conditons, it should be regarded as fulfilling its duty."

RABBITS ARE TOO THICK.

Kansas Legislature Has a Bill Aiming at Their Extermination.

Topeka, Kan., Feb. 26.—Indirectly the establishment of jackrabbit canneries in Western Kansas will be encouraged if a bill now pending in the legislature becomes a law. It provides for a bounty of 5 cents on jackrabbit scalps. The bounty is to be paid out of public funds. The author of the bill says that jackrabbits have become so thick in Western Kansas that they are a pest and that something must be done to kill them off. A 5-cent bounty, he says, will accomplish that result.

Kansas now has three jackrabbit canneries, where the long-eared animals are worked up for the Eastern market. The rabbits are now bought outright from hunters. The price demanded has been such as to discourage the development of the industry. The canneries couldn't pay prevailing prices and make much money. At least the three industrial ventures of that kind have not paid sufficient dividends to attract the investment of capital in other similar plants.

But if the various counties pay a bounty on rabbit scalps, it will be an incentive for people to make jackrabbit hunting a regular vocation. The hunters can afford to dispose of the carcasses of the rabbits to canneries at reduced rates and still make a good profit out of the additional money they receive in bounties.

Knowledge is Power

There is one kind of knowledge that is power and prestige in the hands of a woman. It is the knowledge of her own nature, her own physical make-up and the home-treatment of diseases peculiar to her sex. There is a great home medical book that teaches all this. It is Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, a book of 1008 pages and over 700 wood-cuts and colored plates. Over 2,300,000 American homes contain copies of this work. It used to cost $1.50; now it is free. For a paper covered copy send 21 one-cent stamps, to cover mailing only, to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.; French cloth binding, 31 stamps. A new, revised up-to-date Edition, now ready.

This great book tells all about a medicine that is a cure for all weakness and disease of the delicate organs distinctly feminine. That medicine is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. During the past 40 years many thousands of women have used it with marvelous results.

It imparts health, vigor, virility, strength and elasticity to the organs that bear the burdens of maternity. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Taken during the period of gestation, it makes the coming of baby easy and almost painless. It completely banishes the pain and misery that are the result of a woman's neglecting her womanly health.

An honest medicine dealer will give you what you ask for, and not try to persuade you to take some inferior-secret-nostrum substitute for the little added profit he may make thereon.

"Favorite Prescription" is so perfect and so good in its make-up that its makers feel warranted to print its every ingredient on its bottle-wrappers. Is that not a significant fact? As will be seen from its list of ingredients, it contains neither alcohol nor habit-forming drugs.

MONTRAIL COUNTY VOTE WILL NOT BE RECOUNTED

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The efforts to have a recount of the vote cast for the creation of Montrail county, the new county in the western part of the state, over whose coming into existence a squabble has come to naught, so far as proceedings in the lower court are concerned, as Judge Templeton of this district has denied the application for a writ of mandamus to compel the Ward county canvassing board to recount the vote cast in the county creating proposition. Unless the parties back of the proceedings appeal to the supreme court, the case is at an end.

The application was made with a view of upsetting Montrail county's aspirations. The result of the canvass of the returns showed the vote to have been 1,297 in favor of the proposition and 1,024 against. The decision is most important, as it is believed that it marks the end of the litigation over Montrail county. As a result of the supreme court decision some time ago, the governor appointed county commissioners and they have since met and appointed county officers.

COURT TERM ENDS.

Judge Wright Disposes of Cases at International Falls.

International Falls, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The general term of district court for Koochiching county, which convened Feb. 9, was brought to a close Tuesday, after two weeks of hard work. The Maher arson case took up nearly as much time as all the others combined. The last case to be tried was that of Carl L. Hillstead vs. J. J. Ratcliffe, in which the complainant brought suit to recover on account claimed to be due, and defendant presented a counter claim to more than offset the account. Decision has not yet been rendered. Judge B. F. Wright has returned to his home in Park Rapids.

PROMINENT MEN IN OPEN LETTER DISPUTE ROOSEVELT'S STATEMENTS LAUDING BRITISH RULE IN INDIA

New York, Feb. 26.—An open letter has been addressed to President Roosevelt in protest against his recent laudatory characterization of British rule in India, at the Metropolitan Memorial Methodist church in Washington. The protest has seventeen signers, members of the Society of the Advancement of India and others, including Rev. Dr. J. T. Sunderland, Hartford; Moorfield Storey, Boston; Erving Winslow, Boston; Dr. Leslie Willis Sprague, New York; Rev. Dr. Heber Newton, New York; J. Collins Pumpelly, New York; John J. Murphy, New York; Dr. John H. Girdner, New York; Dr. John Milton Dexter, New York; J. H. Postlethwaite, New York; Myron H. Phelps, New York; Rev. Dr. Frank O. Hall, New York; Rev. Dr. Merle St. Croix Wright, New York; Charles B. Soutter, Aiken, S. C.; Charles H. Aldrich of Chicago, formerly solicitor general of the United States; Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones of Chicago and Louis F. Post of Chicago.

In refutation of the president's assertion that British rule in India is a "colossal success," the letter declares that, on the contrary, it is a despotism worse than that of Russia, as far as possible removed from the ideal of the government at the head of which he stands and which he is supposed to believe in and represent.

Imprisonment Without Trial.

"Not only," it is alleged, "are the Indian people allowed no part in shaping the destiny of their own country, but even freedom of speech and of assembly are permitted only under the severest limitations and the most galling espionage, and freedom of the press has been taken away. Today fully 100 editors are serving term of from three to ten years in prison, many of them without trial, without having had opportunity to defend themselves, in not a few cases without even having been informed of the nature of their offense. The crime almost invariably charged is 'sedition.' In India the mere discussion of reforms is punished by open or secret imprisonment. There is no Indian home that is not liable at any hour of the day or night to be forcibly entered and searched at the instigation of spying police. There is no Indian gentleman, however high his standing or unpeachable his character, who may not at any moment be arrested and hurried away to an unknown prison. Nine such arrests and incarcerations took place recently in a single week.

"All telegraphic and other news from India is closely censored," it is said, "in the English interest." What is learned by the world is for the most part only the English view, but one in Mr. Roosevelt's position, the protest formed himself before undertaking to speak on a subject affecting the interests of some three hundred millions of people.

Self-Government Practicable.

The letter insists that to assert, as the president did, that India is incapable of governing herself is to "fly in the face of history. India governed herself for thousands of years. In the history of India we find empires as illustrious and well ordered as any in Europe." The same objections were made by the supporters of Lord North's government regarding the American colonies—that "if left to their own direction they would speedily fall into mutual strife, anarchy and ruin."

In like manner, when Japan began her modern career it was generally predicted that she could not carry on a government under modern conditions. At the time England first entered India, 300 years ago, the old Mogul empire was breaking up, new political and military adjustments were forming and the country was in a state of unusual turmoil, which gave the English their opportunity. But this was a temporary condition, and would have passed as similar periods in other countries have passed. For 2,000 years India has been far more peaceful than Europe. There is no record of Indian wars worse than the Wars of the Roses in England or so bad as the Thirty Years war in Germany, and none that compare at all in loss of life with the wars of Napoleon; neither does Indian history show anything that in anarchy and violence equals the Reign of Terror in France."

As to disturbances between Hindus and Mohammedans, they have lived side by side without conflict for hundreds of years at a time, it is asserted, under both Hindu and Mohammedan rulers, and there has at no time been any greater hostility between them than between Catholics and Protestants in Europe.

The letter goes on to flatly contradict the president's claim that England does not draw a penny from India for English purposes, and likens the presence of Englishmen in India to that of the "carpet-baggers" in the South.

lowed out logically, would provide a just representation of all parts of the state, according to population.

Second, to redistrict the state on a basis of 40,000 to the district, which would make a senate of about fifty-one members, which would still be above the average for the country at large.

Third, to redistrict with a larger membership than at present, giving Northern Minnesota a better representation without taking any away from Southern Minnesota. This last scheme is a makeshift, of course, only to be adopted if all other measures fail.

From some members of the senate, including a few Democrats who fear that the Republican legislature might add Republican territory to their districts, thus imperiling the size of the Democratic minority, there have been evidences of rather determined opposition to reapportionment. However, the senators are few in number, and there is growing upon the senate a belief that if the Republican legislature refuses to fight the enormous injustice of the present representation, Northern Minnesota might take notice and rebuke the failure with its votes.

It is believed that there will be less difficulty in getting a reapportionment bill through the house than there will be in getting by the senate.

In spite of a protest from the partially developed water powers of the state presented by Oscar Mitchell and A. M. Marshall of Duluth, the house committee on taxes and tax laws yesterday afternoon voted to recommend for passage the Wells bill taxing developed water powers for state purposes.

The bill has been amended since it was introduced, changing slightly the form of the tax. Originally it provided for a state tax of 25 cents per horse power, in addition to all other taxes. It seeming probable that this would constitute double taxation, being added to the present state tax, the bill was amended by a subcommittee so as to provide that the 25 cent tax shall be in lieu of all other state taxes.

Oscar Mitchell of Duluth told the committee about the Great Northern Power company, which is developing the water power of the St. Louis river for the use of the industries in Duluth and Superior. He said that while it has developed only 30,000 horse-power, it is probable that it will ultimately develop about 80,000 horse-power. This is the largest waterpower in the state, with the possible exception of the Minneapolis waterpower, and in time it will be the largest. The plant is new, and the machinery is not yet finally adjusted, the water wheels being still in the hands of the builders. It cannot be on a paying basis within two or three years. It pays the city of Duluth one-tenth of 1 per cent upon its gross earnings, and for that purpose makes complete and accurate public reports, which are open to everybody. From July to January last year its operations produced a deficit of $44,000. It has outstanding bonds of $5,000,000, and it has in its treasury $500,000 in bonds besides this, to be used to secure additional reservoir sites. It has been hard to raise the necessary money for the work, because it has been partly experimental, and additional special taxes will make it more difficult still.

On Feb. 1 the bondholders returned bonds to the amount of $2,000,000 to the trustees for two years, practically loaning the company the interest on these bonds for that time, and the stockholders have also contributed additional money. This will, it is believed, finance the plant, and if new industries that are expected come into Duluth, it is believed that a few years will find it upon a paying basis. At the present time, however, it is not in a position to stand an additional tax burden.

"I am unable to see," said Mr. Mitchell, "why waterpower should be assessed upon a different basis than any other property, and I can see many reasons why it should not be thus discriminated against. It is important to the state that its waterpowers should be developed, and the task ought not to be made more difficult than it is.

"Above Minneapolis, on the Mississippi river, there are potential waterpowers which it is said are capable of producing 100,000 horsepower. I am informed by those who are seeking to develop this power that the enactment of such a law as this, indicating hostility to this particular interest, would prevent the sale of a single bond on this waterpower."

Representative Robert J. Wells of Breckenridge, author of the bill, said that the case of the Duluth waterpower is not the case of other waterpowers in this state. In Minneapolis, for instance, there is a rich and prosperous waterpower which is not paying the taxes it should. It has had government aid in great amounts, has command of greater reservoirs on the Upper Mississippi river built by the government, and its net earnings are $300,000 a year. On that basis, it ought to be paying taxes on a valuation of $7,000,000, and it is paying taxes on a little over $500,000. "It is such waterpowers as this that we are trying to reach," said Mr. Wells, "and I would be the last man to impose any unnecessary burden on the newer waterpowers."

However, the committee recommended the bill to pass with few dissenting votes.

The tax committee also approved the L. H. Johnson bill, taxing street railways upon their gross earnings, with the understanding that the committee will frame an amendment, to be offered upon the floor of the house, making a change in the rates of taxation that will give St. Paul more taxes from the street railways of that city than it now gets.

The alm of the sub-committee which fixed the rates of taxation—Mr. Johnson left the rates blank in the bill, to be filled in by the committee—was to provide each community in the state with more taxes than it gets now out of its street railways. To this end considerable figuring was done, but it happened, so City Comptroller Betz of St. Paul declared before the committee, that the proposed rate would give St. Paul a little less than it is now getting. The bill was recommended to pass with the understanding that a sub-committee of five, to be appointed by Chairman Dalzell, should get ready an amendment that will prevent the bill reducing St. Paul's tax revenue from its street railway.

The taxes are to be apportioned just as any other taxes are distributed, and the gross earnings tax is to be in lieu of all other taxes except special taxes fixed by charter contracts, and assessments for local improvements, which the street railways will have to pay, as before.

It was argued for the bill by Mr. Johnson that the assessment method is difficult and unreliable, owing to the fact that much of the street railway property is intangible personal property, and that there are many criticisms to the effect that in some communities the street-car companies control the actions of the city council and the assessing officers. The gross earnings method would get the whole matter above these things, and would give the cities a fair share of the profits of the companies in the form of taxes.

The rates run from 2 to 6 per cent, according to earnings, and the rates provided in the amended bill are as follows: On earnings of $25,000 or less, 2 per cent; $25,000 to $50,000, 2 per cent upon the first $25,000 and 3 per cent upon the excess; from $50,000 to $100,000, 2½ per cent on the first $50,000 and 3½ per cent upon the excess; from $100,000 to $200,000, 3 per cent upon the first $100,000 and 4 per cent upon the excess; from $200,000 to $400,000 to $800,000, 4 per cent on the first $400,000 and 5 per cent upon the excess; from $800,000 to $1,600,000, 4½ per cent upon the first $800,000 and 5½ per cent upon the excess; from $1,600,000 to $3,200,000, 5 per cent on the first half and 6 per cent upon the excess; from $3,200,000 up, 6 per cent upon the whole.

The bill was opposed by Representative Carl L. Wallace of Minneapolis, who moved its indefinite postponement. His amendment was defeated, 14 to 5.

The members of the tax commission were called in, and Samuel Lord, speaking for the commission, approved the principle of the tax, though he said he could say nothing about the rates. He did say, however, that it was well that the rates would yield a larger tax than is now paid, because the communities affected would hardly welcome a reduction in the taxes.

The tri-county delegation, including the members from St. Louis, Ramsey and Hennepin counties, yesterday afternoon voted to recommend for passage the bill of Representative O'Brien of St. Paul, providing the "midnight lid" in Duluth, St. Paul and Minneapolis. The bill provides that the legal closing hour for saloons in such cities shall be midnight instead of 11 o'clock, but that the city councils, if they desire, can provide by ordinance for earlier closing hours.

Owing to the many wrangles upon the committee reports, the house has passed two days without getting to the introduction of bills, and with a special order on for this morning, and another committee report fight looming upon the normal school bills, the chances were good that the pile of new bills awaiting introduction would be increased today. If it keeps on it may be necessary to set aside a session for the introduction of bills.

The matter of final adjournment is still in the air. The house has voted to finish April 6, and the resolution is still before the senate rules committee. The committee is understood to favor it, but it has not acted. The senate is divided between those who approve this date, those who object to it because that is the day when village elections are held, those who wish to use up the full constitutional period, and those who wish a date still earlier, say March 31 or April 2, to be adopted.

As stated yesterday, the house committee has arranged to vote on the Ejorge tonnage tax bill next Wednesday afternoon at 2 p. m. Should the committee recommend the bill for indefinite postponement, and the house adopt the report, that will be the end of it. If the committee should favor the bill—which is not now deemed probable—it will either go through the regular order, to be considered when reached, or it would be made a special order for some day latter, probably within a week or two.

The house tax committee, which has been meeting daily this week, will have a hearing this afternoon on the Thayer bill to restore the state board of equalization, which was abolished by the bill creating the state tax commission.

The delegation of iron range citizens which has been here for several days on the Austin bill, allowing cities and villages to take in surrounding territory on the vote of the people living in the territory affected, secured action according to its wishes from the senate committee on municipal corporations yesterday afternoon. As originally introduced, the bill provided no limit on the territory that might be taken in. The house added an amendment limiting it to half a mile. This was not enough, and the delegation asked the senate committee to make the limit a mile and a half instead of half a mile. This the committee did, after which it recommended the bill to pass.

Not quite all of St. Paul and Minneapolis attended the hearing on the Armour packing plant location before the house committee on public health and pure food yesterday afternoon, but there were just as many of the population of the Twin Cities as could crowd into the house chamber and galleries, and a pretty fair proportion of those present spoke before the hearing was concluded.

Armour wants to put a big packing plant into the Twin Cities, and has bought a site at New Brighton, which is a couple of miles or so from the state university and the state fair grounds. St. Paul put in a bill prohibiting the location of such a plant within five miles of the university or the state fair, and this is the basis for the fight.

The mayors of both cities, representatives of the commercial clubs and business organizations, and just plain citizens, appeared before the committee to have their say. St. Paul said the plant would be a menace to public health and public comfort, and Minneapolis said it wouldn't. Minneapolis said that St. Paul's action is a case of "sour grapes," because it failed to land the plant, and St. Paul denied it. Indeed, the St. Paul folks said that if the plant could be put somewhere farther off, even if it was in Minneapolis, they would help land it. That was the substance of the controversy, as nearly as could be gathered. No action was taken by the committee.

The senate finance committee yesterday afternoon introduced a bill as a substitute for the bills for the relief of the Rat Portage Lumber company and the Lesure Lumber company, introduced in the senate recently by Senator Pugh.

These companies bought state timber in Northern Minnesota a few years ago, and were unable to get it out before the period of their permits elapsed. The state auditor told them that if they would cut the timber, even if it remained on the ground, it would be all right. They did so, and paid the stumpage price of the timber, later removing it. They were sued for trespass, and the state supreme court gave judgment against them for. $8,200 against the Rat Portage company, and for $6,000 against the Le Sueur company. They considered that they had not been treated fairly, because they got no credit for what they had paid for the stumpage, and because the value of the logs for which they are called upon to pay by the judgments arose out of their own investments of labor and capital in cutting the logs.

The judiciary committee compromised the matter by providing that in such cases the governor may appoint a tribunal to consider a compromise, to consist of the attorney general and two justices of the supreme court.

Senator Coller yesterday afternoon offered in the senate a bill providing that nobody may be admitted to the bar in this state without taking the regular examinations. This would cut out graduates of the state university and other schools, who are admitted on their diplomas.

BABY'S TERRIBLE WATERY ECZEMA

Itching Humor Broke Out on Tiny Mite's Cheeks—Would Tear His Face Till Blood Streamed Down Unless Hands were Bandaged—Spent $50 on Useless Treatments.

CURED BY CUTICURA AT COST OF BUT $1.50

"When my little boy was two and a half months old he broke out on both cheeks with eczema. It was the itchy, watery kind and we had to keep his little hands wrapped up all the time, and if he would happen to get them uncovered he would claw his face till the blood streamed down on his clothing. We called in a physician at once, but he gave an ointment which was so severe that my babe would scream when it was put on. We changed doctors and medicines until we had spent fifty dollars or more and baby was getting worse. I was so worn out watching and caring for him night and day that I almost felt sure the disease was incurable. But finally reading of the good results of the Cuticura Remedies, I determined to try them. I can truthfully say I was more than surprised, for I bought only a dollar and a half's worth of the Cuticura Remedies (Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills), and they did more good than all my doctors' medicines I had tried, and in fact entirely cured him. I will send you a photograph taken when he was fifteen months old and you can see his face is perfectly clear of the least spot or scar of anything. If I ever have this trouble again, I will never think of doctoring but will send for the Cuticura Remedies at once. As it is, I would never think of using any other than Cuticura Soap for my babe. You are at liberty to publish this, it may help some distressed mother as I was helped. Mrs. W. M. Comerer, Burnt Cabins, Pa. Sept. 15, 1908."

JUDGE ANDERSON OBDURATE AS TO SMALLER FINE IF THE STANDARD OIL IS GUILTY

Chicago, Feb. 26.—In broadly intimating, as told in yesterday afternoon's dispatches, that the maximum fine he might impose on Standard Oil would be $720,000. Instead of $29,240,000, as imposed by Judge Landis, Judge Anderson delivered a severe blow to District Attorney Sims. He and his assistant, James H. Wilkerson, had argued that each shipment, of which there were 500, making possible a maximum fine of $10,000,000, constituted an offense. This view Judge Anderson declared he could not understand. He said that it had not been made plain what comprised a shipment—a train load, a car lot or a gallon. He saw no reason why, if a train load, or a car lot, were regarded as a separate offense, the matter might not be further divided, making a hundred weight the unit, or a gallon, greatly increasing the number of offenses, and magnifying the punishment. The division of alleged offenses, he said, seemed to fall naturally into thirty-six parts, or counts, each marked off by a money settlement. It was the settlements that rebates, if any, were made, and received.

Mr. Wilkerson argued that the fine which would be possible under the court's ruling would serve merely as a license to a great corporation. On this point Judge Anderson said, in effect:

"That is a consideration which has no weight with me whatever. I am not concerned with the effectiveness of the statutes, but with their interpretation and application. If the view that I have taken has the effect that was stated, it is a matter for lawmakers to consider. If their laws are inadequate, let them supply a remedy."

NEW TRIAL IS ASKED.

Attorneys for Mrs. Wright Refuse to Accept Verdict.

Devils Lake, N. D., Feb. 26.—Attorneys Samsen and McClory in behalf of Mrs. Mary Wright, recently convicted of manslaughter in the first degree and sentenced to five years' imprisonment in the state penitentiary, have filed a motion asking for a new trial on five grounds of error.

The motion avers, first, that the judge did not instruct the jury as to second degree manslaughter, and that this should have been done as he instructed them as to first degree manslaughter, and they brought in a verdict finding the defendant guilty on that charge.

Second, it is claimed that the life insurance policies were introduced, but they were not shown by the prosecution to have been in effect at the time of the girl's death.

Third, it is charged that the hypothetical question as propounded by the state was not supported by the evidence in the case.

Fourth, it is claimed that the court refused to give certain instructions asked by the defense, and, fifth, that the state failed to prove that theer was any crime committed.

RESIGNS SECRETARYSHIP.

Grand Forks Commercial Club Regrets to Lose Good Man.

Grand Forks, N. D., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The resignation of M. C. Bacheller, as secretary of the Grand Forks Commercial club, was presented at the meeting of the board of directors Wednesday afternoon and accepted. The board received the resignation with a good deal of regret, as Mr. Bacheller has made a most efficient secretary.

Mr. Bacheller will devote a large share of his time to the disposition of the large McCanna estate, located at McCanna, in the western part of Grand Forks county. There are 5,600 acres in the tract and it will require a year or so to dispose of the holdings.

TELLS HOW CANAL COULD BE DESTROYED IN QAURTER-HOUR.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 26.—A sweeping denunciation of the lock system for the Panama canal was made by Phillippe Bunau-Varilla, formerly in charge of the old French canal, to the members of the Commercial club in this city. The club, two years ago, formally approved the lock system of construction. It was declared by the speaker that the giving way of the Gatun dam would destroy the canal in fifteen minutes and prove one of the most dramatic catastrophes in the history of public works.

ONLY ONE CANDIDATE.

Prospects of Lively Campaign in Ashland Not Very Good.

Ashland, Wis., Feb. 26.—(Special to The erald.)—This spring's municipal campaign will be as tame as a church sociable, unless the present plans miscarry, as one of the candidates for mayor has withdrawn in the interest of the other known candidate, hoping thereby to remove any element of friction. After a confidential talk between Dr. J. M. Dodd, who was a candidate two years ago, and John Joyce, a well known lumberman, both avowed candidates, the man of medicine decided to get out of the race, leaving the other a clear field. This will remove a mayoralty fight, leaving the campaign to be made for aldermen and supervisors. Judge McCully will probably be re-elected probate judge.

TIMBERMAN KILLED.

Andrew Lutinen Fatally Hurt in South Hecla Mine.

Calumet, Mich., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Andrew Lutinen, timber boss at the South Hecla branch of the Calumet & Hecla mine, is dead, of the injuries he sustained a few days ago.

Lutinen was engaged with a gang at the sixty-first level, north of No. 9 shaft, South Hecla branch, in putting in wedges at the foot of the pole, when the large piece of timber gave away, catching the unfortunate man over the back and head before he could get out of the way. It was found that he was seriously injured internally, and he was taken to the Calumet & Hecla hospital, where he lingered for six days.

The deceased met with a very bad accident about a year ago, having a close call for his life at that time. He was about 50 years of age, and is survived by his wife, a married daughter, Mrs. O. Kokonen, and one son.

THE ICE BLEW AWAY.

Marquette, Mich., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is presumable that no one in this city suffered more heavily because of Wednesday's storm than the Lake Superior Ice company. This company has been watching with eagle eyes the field of ice which has been slowly but surely forming outside the breakwater during the last two weeks. On Tuesday the ice was about six inches thick, and when the weather bureau forecasted colder weather Tuesday, the members of the company thought that within a day or two, it would freeze to eight inches in thickness, when cutting for next summer's use could be started.

The high wind that accompanied Wednesday's blizzard, however, stirred up the waves in Lake Superior, and the ice field was broken up and taken out into the lake. In consequence, all hope of getting ice from Lake Superior this winter has been abandoned, and arrangements are being made to begin cutting on Dead river the first of next week.

NEWS OF THE NORTHWEST

ORE UNDER TOWNSITE

May Delay Platting Town of Crosby on Cuyuna Range.

Rogers-Brown Drills Said to Have Struck Large Body.

Brainerd, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—There is liable to be a delay in the platting of the new town of Crosby, for which land has been cleared on section 12-46-29, about three miles northwest of Deerwood.

According to reports received here, the Rogers-Brown Ore company, which has been drilling union holes with the owners of the townsite along the line between sections 11 and 12, has discovered such a valuable ore body that the platting will be delayed until the townsite is drilled, lest it be found that there is ore under the town. It is not intended by the townsite owners that this town shall meet the fate of some towns on the Mesaba, which have been moved to permit mining their sites.

The Dakota Mining Company of Fargo has been formed, and has purchased 700 acres of land in townships 46-28 and 46-29, on the Cuyuna range.

A shaft will be started in a short time by the Crosby interests on section 11-46-29, and will be known as the Keating mine. Several other shafts will probably be sunk the coming summer, including one on the same section as the Rogers-Brown shaft, near Rabbit lake.

WILL DEVELOP CUYUNA MINES

Company Formed at Moorhead to Work Deerwood Iron Lands.

Moorhead, Minn., Feb. 26.—The Dakota Iron company was incorporated under the laws of Minnesota at a meeting in Moorhead this week. The company has a capital stock of $100,000. Following are the officers: President, J. P. Lamb, Michigan, N. D.; vice president, James T. McCulloch, Washburn, N. D.; secretary-treasurer, G. F. Lamb, Michigan, N. D.; directors, H. R. Turner, Fargo, and George Lamb of Michigan, N. D.

The company has taken over as a holding company 700 acres of iron land on the Cuyuna iron range at Deerwood, Minn. These lands are located in townships 46-28 and 46-29.

No exploration will be undertaken by the company for the present at least, but the lands will be leased to iron furnace men on a royalty basis.

NORTH DAKOTA LAD TOUGH ONE

Only 15 Shoots Man Who Caught Him in Act of Looting.

Minot, N. D., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Sheriff Sorenson is making a determined effort to capture Joe Dewette, who shot and wounded John Larson at Coteau, last Saturday, but as it was twenty-four hours after the crime before the officer was notified, the youth may not be taken very soon. Dewette is only 15, but he appears to have been a bad egg at that age.

At the age of 13, Dewette was arrested on a most serious charge, but owing to his extreme youth at that time it is said that leniency was granted him.

Sheriff Sorenson was not called to the scene of Saturday's shooting until nearly twenty-four hours after it had occurred and as the young fellow had plenty of time to make his escape, it may be possible that he will not be captured for some time.

The nature of the charge for which Dewette is wanted is the shooting of and robbing of John Larson. Dewette, who lived a short distance from the Larson claim, went to that place Saturday night and after being surprised while looting the place by Larson, turned upon him and fired three shots, one of which took effect in Larson's neck. Immediately after the shooting Dewette turned and left the place and made his way over the prairie and thus made his escape. He took with him quite a lot of goods belonging to Larson, one of the articles being a fur-lined coat, valued at $90.

CLOQUET CASE MYSTERY.

Just Why Identity of Suicide Was Not Disclosed, Baffling.

Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body of the man who committed suicide at the St. Louis hotel here Feb. 3 was buried yesterday afternoon at the county's expense, no trace of any such person as A. Estranger, the name he registered, having been found. Several clues which might have lead to identification were followed out, but the one which lead the search to Toronto, Can., was stopped by the interested parties themselves and Chief of Police MesSweeney would like to know what the trouble is.

A man by the name of Somerville who disappeared from his home ten years ago bears a strong resemblance to the suicide and an insurance company, which has offered a reward of $500 for proof of Somerville's death wrote that diligent search was being made to complete the proof and that everything looked favorable. There the matter was dropped and word has been received that the relatives of Somerville have settled with the insurance company and refused to do anything more in the matter. It is more than probable that the photograph of Estranger had much to do in bringing the insurance company to a favorable settlement without paying a reward. Chief of Police MesSweeney wonders where he is coming in.

HAD SEMI-WEEKLY DRUNK.

One of Charges Against Menominee Maa Sued for Divorce.

Menominee, Mich., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Coming as a sensational climax to a series of lurid charges made against Frank Blondin, a prominent Menominee resident, Mrs. Carolina Blondin has started suit for divorce.

Few actions of its kind, started in Menominee during the last decade, have stirred up as much comment. The complaint reeks with charges of adultery, drunkenness, cruelty, failure to support and periodical abandonment. Mr. Blondin has not made answer.

A nervous wreck, she claims through beating ands cruel treatment received at the hands of her husband, Mrs. Blondin asks for the custody of her five children and a generous slice of her husband's real estate, he being quite wealthy. She claims that during the last twenty years of married life her husband has come home drunk on an average of twice a week and each drunk usually resulted in a severe beating.

DEER ARE EXPENSIVE.

Costs Hunter $100 for Killing Two Out of Season.

Bemidji, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Game Wardens Munch of Crookston and Bailey of this city have returned from Tenstrike, where they secured the conviction of Stephen Kunz on a charge of killing deer out of season.

Kunz lives in the town of Taylor. He pleaded guilty before Justice Charles Gustafson of Tenstrike to killing two deer on Feb. 10. He was fined $100 and costs and paid the money.

RELATIVES WILL CONTEST.

Canadian Heirs of Owatonna Man to Fight in Courts.

Owatonna, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the relatives of the late James Dean, consisting of a brother, sister, and nephew, all living in Canada, will contest the will of the solitary old man, by which he bequeathed all his property to the domestic and foreign missionary society of the Protestant Episcopal church in the United States, was made evident at the hearing on proof of will Tuesday. Local attorneys had been retained by the relatives and appeared to make objection to the admission of the will to probate. It was finally decided to adjourn the hearing until March 16, to give representatives of the beneficiary named in the will an opportunity to appear.

MELLEN MINER INJURED.

Skull Fractured in Ironbelt Mine and in Serious Condition.

Ashland, Wis., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—While working in one of the mines at Ironbelt Tuesday afternoon, John Sheron, a miner, who resides at Mellen, had the misfortune of having his skull fractured. He was brought to the city in an unconscious condition and still remains in such a condition. He is at Rinehart's hospital and is in a very critical condition.

Peter Kuntz, while working in one of the camps of the Gogebic Lumber company at Marineseo, Mich., sustained injuries to both of his feet and back. He was decking logs at the time when one fell on him. He was brought to a local hospital in this city.

AITKIN MAN'S CLOSE CALL.

Was Caught Under Collapsed Hotel Portico at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—W. B. Marr of Aitkin, Minn., narrowly escaped death in the collapse of the portico of the Vendome hotel Wednesday night. One of the iron supporters was knocked down by a city snow plow in passing, and when the structure went down with a crash, that could be heard for several blocks, Mr. Marr was underneath.

"Boys," said Mr. Marr as he crawled from under the wreckage, "I held it up. Otherwise the whole whole business would have gone slam-bang to the sidewalk."

That no one was injured is considered marvelous, for besides the portico, two big electric signs fell and the entire mass was full of live wires. One of the plate glass windows in the hotel was smashed, but no other damage was done. The loss is estimated at several hundred dollars.

SHOULD RAISE MORE STOCK.

That is James J. Hill's Advice to Farmers of Minnesota.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 26.—"The trouble with the people in the cities is that they take no interest in the farm life whatever," declared James J. Hill in an address to the Retail Grocers' and Merchants' Association of Minnesota in session here. "How many of the residents of Minneapolis or St. Paul have visited the agricultural college and know what is being taught? And the young men and women attending the agricultural school. Do they form any of the social life of the state university? No, they are entirely ignorant and are considered outsiders, hayseeds. This is not right. The students of the state university would not be of any use whatever if it were not for the farmers.

"One of the errors of the Minnesota farmer is in not raising more livestock. A number of years ago corn brought a price of 10 cents and 12 cents a bushel. Now it is bringing 60 cents. It takes about 100 bushels of corn to raise a 3-year-old steer which will bring $105. The profit on this steer is $45, and after $20 is added for the fertilizing value of the manure the steer will furnish it is easily seen that this is a profitable business.

SPORTING NEWS OF THE DAY

LOCAL SKI TOURNEY

Now More Than Thirty Entries for Big Event.

Bernt Hanson, Coleraine, Will Give Barrel Stave Exhibition.

More than thirty men will compete in the ski tournament, to be given under the auspices of the Duluth Ski club at Chester hill, Sunday afternoon.

At first it was planned to make the affair a strictly local one, but so many of the range riders have asked permission to enter, that the officials of the club have decided to allow them to compete as well as the Superior riders.

The affair, which started in a small way, looks now like a big event. The hill is in first class shape and if the weather continues as pleasant as it has for the past few days, the conditions will be ideal and good sport will be furnished.

As an additional attraction, the club has secured the services of Bernt Hansen, the 14-year-old Coleraine barrel-stave wonder. A few weeks ago this lad astonished the big crowd at the Coleraine meet by jumping seventy-five feet on his home-made skis and keeping his feet. The boy is said to be a wonder and it is expected that a large crowd will turn out especially to see this unusual feature of the entertainment.

ALFRED SHRUBB DEFEATS PIETRI

Englishman Leads in Long Race From Crack of Pistol.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 26.—Leading his opponent from the crack of the pistol to the finish, Alfred Shrubb, the English distance runner, defeated Dorando Pietri, the Italian, in a fifteen-mile race at the Seventy-Fourth regiment armory last night. Every American indoor record from the first to the fifteenth mile was smashed. In the first mile Shrubb took a commanding lead, which he gradually increased to three laps in the tenth mile. Dorando made several game efforts to regain the lost ground in the twelfth and thirteenth miles, but Shrubb never allowed him to get within more than fifteen yards of him.

The time for the fifteen miles was as follows:

	Time.
First mile	4:49 2-5
Second mile	10:05 4-5
Third mile	15:47 1-5
Fourth mile	21:17 1-5
Fifth mile	26:43
Sixth mile	32:17 2-5
Seventh mile	37:58 3-5
Eighth mile	43:36 2-5
Ninth mile	49:09 2-5
Tenth mile	54:50 3-5
Eleventh mile	1:00:27 2-5
Twelfth mile	1:06:28 2-5
Thirteenth mile	1:12:21 2-5
Fourteenth mile	1:18:18
Fifteenth mile	1:24:06 4-5

Shrubb's lead at the finish was two and three-quarter laps.

Doranda completed the fifteen miles, finishing in a sprint that brought applause.

HUGO KELLY WINS IN FIVE ROUNDS

Joe Thomas of San Francisco Easy for Chicago Middleweight.

New York, Feb. 26.—Hugo Kelly of Chicago defeated Joe Thomas of San Francisco in five rounds before the Fairmont A. C. last night. The referee stopped the fight when Thomas was helpless. The men are middleweights, and the winner is expected to meet Stanley Ketchell, the middleweight champion.

Kelly forced the fighting from start to finish and had a decided advantage at every stage. In the fourth round he knocked Thomas down three times and the bell saved Thomas from being counted out. After being put down twice in the fifth round, Referee Johns sent the men to their corners, as Thomas was practically helpless.

SPEARS TAKES BILLIARD GAME

William F. Hatley Loses to Fancy Shot Artist, 300 to 271.

In a well-played billiard match last night at the St. Louis billiard hall, George Spears, one of the most widely known billiard experts in the country, defeated William F. Hatley, the local player, by a score of 300 to 271.

Spears played in beatiful form, and made runs of 55 and 57. The best Hatley could do was 41 and 42. Spears' average was 10 and Hatley's was 9.

Hatley was right after his man all the time, and was in the lead a number of times. He was 80 ahead up to the time that Spears passed the 200-mark. Spears then ran out in six innings, making 110 points in that length of time.

Spears is one of the prettiest players ever seen in Duluth. He has a beautiful stroke, and his work seems to be a part of his personality, so easy and graceful is he in his play.

After the game he gave an exhibition of fancy shots, some of which seemed to be impossible to the fans who looked on and had only a fair knowledge of the game. There was a large crowd present.

In the afternoon, Ron Smith defeated T. Simonds of Superior by a score of 13 to 10, and McLennan, Duluth, played a tie game with Maxfield, Superior.

In the evening, Dinham, Duluth, defeated Tipton of Superior by a score of 10 to 6, and Bradley downed Stephenson by a 12 to 8 score.

A number of match games are being arranged, to take place on the Duluth ice, with rinks from the other clubs at the Head of the Lakes.

WOULD MEET MIKE SHRECK

George Gunther Would Enjoy Taking on Whitehead's Opponent.

George Gunther, the Australian Kangaroo, wants to meet Mike Shreck. The shifty colored man says that lying around killing time does not make a hit with him, and he wants to be up and doing.

He will meet Trembie Monday night, but he says if he could only hook up a match for every day in the week, he would be happy.

Gunther is a well built man. His bout with Ulrich the other night proved him to be fast, and he is clever with the footwork. He is not afraid to tell what he has done, neither is he bashful about telling what he is going to do.

He is making his headquarters at the gymnasium recently opened up by Curley Ulrich on lower Lake avenue.

ANOTHER MATCH FOR THE RANGE

Jimmy Potts and Curley Ulrich to Mix Things in March.

On the evening of March 5 Curley Ulrich of Superior will meet Jimmy Potts in a 20-round bout on the range.

This will be good news to the fans, for there are many who believe that Curley is the better man. When they fought before in Minneapolis, Ulrich was knocked out. There was always quite a question in the minds of the fans present at that time whether the knockout was a legitimate one or not.

It is on this account that the men have been matched to meet again. Both men are fast and neither of them is afraid to mix things. Ulrich is confident that he can go the limit, while Potts, thinking of his knockout in Minneapolis, believes the match will be easy money. Both are clever, strong men, and the bout should be a good one.

HAVE PATIENTS FOR WARDENS

J. H. Hearding Would Employ Those Afflicted With Tuberculosis.

G. H. Hearding of Eveleth has a very interesting suggestion to make regarding the employes of the proposed international game and fish preserve, which would be located upon the boundary line of Minnesota and Ontario. The suggestion is decidedly a novel one, even if it should not prove to be practical in its working out.

Mr. Hearding proposes that all of the employes of the game preserve shall be people affected with tuberculosis. He says there are many applicants for rooms in the new sanitarium at Walker, and that many other people afflicted with the disease are prevented from applying by the knowledge that there are many ahead of them.

The Eveleth man contends that more than 200 employes will be needed in the game preserve, if it is established. Why not, he suggests, have only those who have tuberculosis as employes of the preserve?

This would give them the necessary outdoor treatment, would enable many men to get well who are under ordinary circumstances would not be able to take the cure, and would cost the state but little. Mr. Hearding says he will present his plan to Secretary Eva of the Commercial club.

Soldier Balks Death Plot.

It seemed to J. A. Stone, a Civil war veteran of Kemp, Tex., that a plot existed between a desperate lung trouble and the grave to cause his death. "I contracted a stubborn cold," he writes, "that developed a cough that stuck to me, in spite of all remedies, for years. My weight ran down to 130 pounds. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, which restored my health completely. I now weigh 178 pounds." For severe colds, obstinate coughs, hemorrhages, asthma, and to prevent pneumonia, it's unrivaled. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all druggists.

When the accident occurred skin was grafted on the child's face in a crude way, but Tuesday a second operation was made and physicians now declare that with the new grafting process the child will soon be free from scars.

BLACKMAIL WAS LEVIED

Upon New York Liverymen and Horses Were Poisoned.

How the Fourth of July Will Be Tamed This Year.

New York, Feb 26.—That a poison gang for months has been levying blackmail on stable owners throughout the city, and where it was refused administering fatal drugs to the animals, came to light when two youths were arrested charged with attempting to kill two horses belonging to Fried & Gelles, big truck owners.

The gang, it is said, go to liverymen and others owning horses and demand a certain sum weekly according to the number of horses owned by the individual or firm. Fried & Gelles refused to be victimized and have lost two horses a week

Six of their horses died in one night and an autopsy showed all were poisoned. Unable to catch the prisoners at work, Fried & Gelles appealed to the police, and disguised themselves as hostlers and went to work in the stable.

The detcetives who were on watch declare they saw the two men enter the stalls of two horses and place arsenic in the feed parts. It is said that arsenic was the poison used in all the cases where this and other firms have lost horses.

"Denatured" Fourth of July.

There will be no Fourth of July this year. Of course, July 4 will come around, but it will be strangely silent. It will be a day of sorrow instead of a day of celebration as before, and hundreds of thousands of children will march the streets in tears.

The Fourth of July has been run through a selve, thoroughly denatured, deodorized, refined and the noise strained off. Fire Commissioner Nicholas J. Hayes did the job. He said the operation would save inflammable property.

When the edict putting a ban on the sale of fireworks from June 10 to July 10 reached the children, there was wailing and gnashing of teeth. Visions of hot-air balloons and cannon crackers, and skyrockets and torpedoes, and sizzers and bombs and things went up in thin blue smoke that wasn't visible. The children were broken-hearted.

Commissioner Hayes thought it would be a good thing to put out the thousands of Fourth of July fires before they began. He planned to to obviate the death and injury of some hundreds of persons who annually blow off their own or somebody else's head or fingers. All of which shows that said commissioner believes that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure And Mayor McClellan has aproved of the edict.

Commissioner Hayes thinks that by stopping the sale of fireworks after June 10 he will induce most youngsters to lay in a supply of ammunition long before that day, and knowing the psychology of the youthful mind, he is certain that before the glorious Fourth all the little boys will have squandered their noisy substance by driblets. He don't mind the driblets; it's the great culmination on a single day that he fears.

Trouble for a Vanderbilt.

Although abroad, and for the time, at least, out of the jurisdiction of the court, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt will have to pay a fine and may have further trouble when he returns as the result of failing to answer a jury subpoena served upon him before he sailed.

The attention of Justice Gay of the supreme court was called to the fact that young Mr. Vanderbilt had failed to put in an appearance during the present term. Affidavits were submitted by lawyers for the millionaire, attesting that Mr. Vanderbilt had departed for Europe and therefore was unable to be present for service as a juror.

Justice Gay said that his absence was no excuse, as a juror bound to answer the summons of the court, after he had been served with a subpoena, unless he could satisfy the court that it would be impossible for him to serve. If he could show that his business interests would suffer by his attendance at one term of court, then he could be requested to serve at another term.

But to ignore a subpoena and sail away to Europe, and then put forward the excuse that he was out of the country, the court said, was a matter requiring action. He imposed a fine of $250 on Mr. Vanderbilt.

Mr. Vanderbilt's offense constituting a contempt of court, Justice Gay, had he wished to administer a severe penalty, could have ordered the millionaire's commitment to jail.

Who Has Her Picture?

Who has a photograph of a little 2-year-old Spanish girl, dressed all in red, with dark eyes and raven hair? Some American citizen made such a picture. It is the only one in existence, and the little girl is dead.

Jose Miranda Cadrelo, an officer in the Spanish navy, is the father of the child, Lolita. Last February Cadrelo with Lolita in red and her baby brother, Jose, were in Cadiz at the time the White Star liner Arabic entered port, with 650 tourists on a cruise of the Mediterranean.

Senora Cadrelo and her two little ones were at a bathing establishment, called Balneario Victoria, just outside Cadiz, when a man and a woman, both Americans, noticed the children's beauty, and photographed them.

The two parties returned to Cadiz on a car, the American gentleman carrying the child into the train in his arms, where he continued to chat with her. Not many months later the child died.

That snapshot photograph was the only one ever made of the child. The mother and father, believing that the Americans who took the picture were members of the Arabic's passenger list, have obtained the names of every one of her passengers—650 in all—and the father has written to each in an endeavor to ascertain who took the picture, and begging just one copy.

Women Demand It.

"Money sits enthroned in America, and dress—woman's dress—is the power behind the throne."

This was one of the statements of Grace George—actress—in a general knock she took at her own sex while discussing the mania for fine clothes that has enthralled American women.

In her new play Miss George is compelled to wear many luxurious gowns, and the subject of her remarks was a sore of apology for being forced to appear opposed to her convictions.

"Woman's mania for fine apparel is responsible for man's mania for money making," continued Miss George.

"I honestly think the average man would gladly lessen the grind if it were possible for him to do so and still pay his wife's bills. The average man has a normal longing for the simple life. It is the woman who makes necessities of luxuries.

"The cost of woman's apparel, if the wearer wishes to keep up to date, is undoubtedly extravagant.

"When a woman can pay $1,500 for a single gown and declares that she has nothing to wear if her wardrobe does not contain at least twenty to thirty; when boots cost $18 a pair; when an equipment of lingerie can run into the thousands, and hats cost from $50 to $100, it naturally follows that the man who provides them must work overtime or go into bankruptcy. Sometimes he does both."

REMOVAL OF PROSECUTOR.

Demanded by Woman Who Makes Charge Against Smart Set.

Butler, Pa., Feb. 26.—Alleging that District Attorney A. C. Troutman is prejudiced and will not see that justice is done in presenting to the grand jury on March 2 the case of the sixteen young men and three young women of Butler's smart set, charged with disorderly conduct and malicious mischief, Mrs. Ruth Spencer has petitioned Judge James M. Galbreath for the naming of special counsel. Mr. Troutman, it was charged, refused to permit the issuing of subpoenas to a number of young women, and it was also alleged that he had made disparaging remarks about the case and the prosecutrix; that he had spoken of the case as a dragnet and had threatened private counsel for the prosecutrix.

District Attorney Troutman replied briefly to the petition. "I will not permit innocent girls to be brought before this court," said he, "nor to have the criminal court made an advertising medium or a sensation bureau while I am district attorney."

It is claimed by Mrs. Spencer that the young people, who are among the best in the town, got permission to hold a decent little party in her house during her absence, and then made a night of it.

PRICE OF CIGARETTES TO BE RAISED BY DEALERS.

New York, Feb. 26.—As a result of conferences by the cigarette dealers throughout the country, the price of cigarettes is to be raised. The increase will be only in the sense that standard prices are to be restored on brands that during the last few years have been selling in nearly all cigar stores under the regular price. Dealers have found there is no money in cigarette sales, at cut prices and as manufacturers are threatening an advance, owing to the increased price of the short crop of Turkish tobacco, the cigar store keepers have agreed to restore all cut priced brands to the standard figures.

Don't think that piles can't be cured. Thousands of obstinate cases have been cured by Doan's Ointment. 50 cents at any drug soore.

S.S.S. RIDS THE SYSTEM OF CATARRH

Catarrh is a blood disease which causes a general inflammation of the inner linings or mucous membranes of the body. The diseasing of these delicate surfaces and tissues produces all the well known symptoms of the trouble, such as ringing noises in the head and ears, tight, stuffy feeling in the nose, pains above the eyes, irritation of the throat, sometimes slight fever, and a general feeling of weakness and ill health. Even the lungs become affected by the continual passage of impure blood through them, and there is danger of consumption if the disease is allowed to remain in the system. S. S. S. cures Catarrh because it purifies the blood. It goes into the circulation and removes every particle of the catarrhal matter, making this vital fluid pure, rich and healthy. Then the inflamed membranes begin to heal, every symptom disappears, the constitution is built up and health restored. S. S. S. rids the system of catarrh by attacking the trouble at its head and entirely removing the cause from the blood, thus making a permanent and lasting cure. S. S. S. is made entirely from health-giving roots, herbs and barks, and for this reason is an especially safe and desirable medicine. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free to all who write.

ILLEGAL HUNTER KILLED.

Said to Have Accidentally Shot Himself in Itasca Park.

Grand Rapids, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fate seems to have contrived recently to make the punishment fit the crime in the case of an illegal hunter in Itasca park after he had killed a deer. The park is a game preserve and according to the report a man named Gardner recently killed a deer in that place. He then reloaded his automatic rifle and hung it in the branches of a near-by tree to keep it from the snow while he cut up the animal.

As he was taking down the weapon from the tree the trigger caught in a twig and the charge entered his heart, killing him instantly.

THEY VIOLATED PURE FOOD LAW

Eveleth Saloonman and Grocer Haled Into Court and Fined.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Matt Martilla, a saloonkeeper, and L. C. Samlico, a grocer, ran afoul of the pure food laws of the state today, and were haled into court by Deputy Pure Food Inspector Harris Bennett of Duluth, who has been quietly looking about these parts for persons violating the laws designed to preserve the public health.

Martilla was charged with selling an imitation blackberry brandy. When arraigned before Judge Prince he acknowledged the corn and paid a fine of $25 and costs.

The grocer, L. C. Samlico, was accused of selling catsup containing benzoate of soda in excess of the amount prescribed by law. He also pleaded guilty and was fined $15 and costs.

It is possible other arrests in this section may result in a few days.

FUN FOR SPORTSMEN.

Horse Racing and Boxing at Eveleth on Taft's Big Day.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Eveleth will be the mecca for all lovers of sports on the range, March 4. In the afternoon there will be horse races at Ely lake, while it is the intention to have a boxing exhibition in the evening. In the afternoon, Mark Eddy's horse, and Mayor Smith's mare will race for a large side bet. The owners of both animals are confident, and have had their steeds out exercising daily. Besides this one, there will be many other trotting and pacing races between the best horses on the range. A number of Hibbing horses will be over, and probably some from Duluth. The races this year have been postponed a couple of times because of the snow, but the races March 4 will certainly be pulled off.

GILBERT TELEPHONES ARE TO HAVE SWITCHBOARD.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Mesaba Telephone company's new line between here and Gilbert is completed, and the service is so much better. Quite a number of 'phones have been installed at Gilbert, making the new line almost a necessity as well as needed to take care for new business. The Gilbert telephones are connected from the Eveleth office and switchboard, but a separate exchange board will probably be put in at Gilbert in the near future.

The Genoa mine location, between here and Gilbert, will soon be used as a residence spot, if, as is reported, the Steel corporation will put in a water system for the Genoa. The location is near to Gilbert and is also close to Cedar Island lake, so that it is a very attractive place for residences.

PUZZLER FOR JUDGE.

Litigation Over Note and Counter-Claim for Keeping Hogs.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Judge Prince has a difficult problem to solve in the case of W. P. Vietch against Grace & Kaner heard yesterday. Vieth is suing on a note, and the defendants claim that Vietch owes them for keeping some hogs. Mr. Vietch sold out his slaughter house to Kaner & Wildes, and Grace & Kaner have succeeded them. At that time a number of hogs were left by Mr. Vietch with the new owners and they now claim $140 for the keep of the hogs, while the hogs are only valued at $70. The amount of the note is a few hundred dollars so that if Mr. Vietch were to pay the amount of the keep he would not be receiving much on his note. Grace & Kaner are willing to settle the note, but they demand the $140 for the keep of the hogs. Judge Prince reserved his decision until next Tuesday.

RAILROAD NEWS

IN SEATTLE BY JUNE 1.

The Milwaukee Extension May be Completed by That Time.

St. Paul Man May Have Charge of Western Division.

Latest information from the Pacific coast extension of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, states that the rails are completed to Seattle, with the exception of two gaps in the line, one west of Butte, Mont., and the other east of Seattle. The completion of the bridge, near Seattle, and the completion of the tunnel west of Butte, will mark the practical completion of the new coast line, for which the people of the Northwest are anxiously waiting.

Work upon the tunnel through the base of the mountain is progressing very rapidly, and as the bridge is almost completed, it will be but a short time before trains are running from west of the Missouri river to Seattle. It is believed now that trains will be running into Seattle by the first of June, if not before that time, and that the Milwaukee will be able to reap some of the advantages of the heavy traffic that will soon be moving in the direction of the Pacific coast, for the Seattle exposition.

In connection with the progress of the Milwaukee's Pacific coast extension, there are rumors of some changes that may occur. The division west of the Missouri river is now known as the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound railroad. It is rumored in railroad circles, that the Western headquarters of this railroad will be established in Seattle, and that W. B. Dixon, assistant general passenger agent, with headquarters at St. Paul, and who is well known to railroad men of this city, may be in charge of the passenger department of the Puget Sound division of the road.

The completion of the Pacific coast extension of the Milwaukee will make the Duluth office of that road of greater importance, both as a freight and passenger agency. The Pacific coast extension will open up new territory to the Duluth shippers, through the new western country that is settling up very rapidly.

It is said that the officials of the Milwaukee regard Duluth as a very strong freight territory, for the reason that a great deal of freight originates here, and also because Duluth is the gateway for so much through freight. In light of the recent growth of Duluth as a railroad center, it would not be surprising if the Milwaukee made Duluth one of their strong Northwestern freight and passenger agencies.

Injured Man Improving.

W. G. Wright, one of the employes of the Northern Pacific railroad, who was injured by an explosion, is still confined at St. Luke's hospital. One of the other men that was injured has left the hospital, the other one being taken to the Northern Pacific hospital at Brainerd. Mr. Wright is improving steadily, and it is believed that he will be able to leave the hospital in a few days.

Railway Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Northern Railway club will be held tomorrow evening, in the rooms of the Commercial club. There will be a discussion of the paper on boiler repairs, from the standpoint of the boiler maker, and of engine repairs in the roundhouse, from the standpoint of the machinist. A paper, "Dispatching of Trains by Telegraph or Otherwise," will be read by W. H. Siedel, train dispatcher of the Great Northern railroad. The meeting will be called at 8:30 p. m. A special train will be run from Two Harbors. It is expected that some of the Superior railroad men will be present at the meeting.

RECRUITS NO LONGER WANTED

Only Old Soldiers Can Get Job With Uncle Sam.

Lieut. Arthur Watts, in charge of the Duluth recruiting station, is in receipt of a communication from the war department at Washington, stating that for the time being no recruits that have not seen previous service in the United States army, will be accepted for any army duty whatever. This order shuts out applicants for the coast artillery service of the army.

It is the first time in years that this branch of the service has been filled, and it is also the first time since the reorganization of the army that all branches of the service have been closed to all except former soldiers. Even the foreign service branches of the army are closed.

CALUMET CONTROVERSY IS SETTLED BY AGREEMENT.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 26.—A settlement of the Calumet-Osceola mining controversy by agreement was announced here today.

TWO HUSBANDS SEEK FREEDOM

Two deserted husbands sought freedom from marital bonds in the district court this afternoon.

Harry Melcher, aged 41, claims that his wife, Jennie, deserted him in 1894. They were married in Bryan, Ohio, in 1892 and have no children.

Frank Petrik, aged 51, wants a legal separation from his wife, Madeline. They were married in Austria in 1879, and she is claimed to have deserted him Aug. 1, 1903. They have four children, two of whom are minors.

WHEAT HAS BIG ADVANCE DURING ACTIVE SESSION

Potter Says Trade Does Not Realize Big Shortage.

Flax Also Closes Higher In the American Markets.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 26.—Sensational advances in wheat marked a lively session in Duluth and the other American markets today. Except for receipts in the Northwest, which were liberal, as the country houses are rushing grain to market to take advantage of the high cash wheat prices, all of the news was bullish and wheat was advancing nearly every minute of the day.

The Modern Miller's report on winter wheat condition was bullish and Argentine shipments were light. Liverpool closed more than a point higher than yesterday.

Chicago bulls were as active as ever. James A. Patten came out with the following signed statement:

"My opinion is still unchanged. I do not believe the grain trade yet realized the world's shortage in wheat and they will not for thirty days yet. After the first of April it is my opinion we will see such small receipts of wheat at primary points that it will astonish everybody. The price now is so attractive to farmers that they are cleaning themselves out. We sold hard winter wheat here this morning at May price for the interior mills. Wheat will be a purchase on every break for some time yet."

Every American market was up more than a point in both options, and Winnipeg, which has been behind the other markets for several days, bulged more than 2 points.

The Modern Miller says:

"The crop outlook is rather bullish. Frequent changes from mild to freezing temperatures are reported as unforabe, affecting to some extent the late sown wheat in the soft winter wheat states. Few complaints come from he hard winter wheat territory. Otherwise, the general prospects are satisfactory."

Argentine shipments of wheat were 4,96,000 bu, against 6,912,00 bu last week ,and 5,880,000 bu a year ago.

Liverpool closed 1d to 1⅜d higher, Berlin ½c higher, Budapest ⅝c lower, and Antwerp unchanged.

The May option closed 1⅜c higher in Duluth and Minneapolis, 1⅜c higher in Chicago, 1⅞c higher in New York, 1⅛@¼c higher in St. Louis, 1¼@⅜c higher in Kansas City, and 2c higher in Winnipeg. The July option closed 1⅝c higher in Duluth, Minneapolis and New York, 1@⅛c higher in Chicago, 1c higher in St. Louis, 1¼c higher in Kansas City, and 2¼@⅜c higher in Winnipeg.

May corn closed ⅜@½c higher in Chicago, and ⅛d to ⅜d higher in Liverpool. May oats closed ¼c higher in Chicago.

Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat—The market here opened strong and ½d higher. Offerings were light and shorts nervous owing to the strength in America yesterday and light exports, both from Argentina and Auftralia. Following the opening there was a slight recession on the larger La Plata arrivals at Liverpool. This decline was followed by a sharp advance in prices, gaining an additional ½d to ¾d over the opening. America was reported as a buyer in this market and shorts were excited. Spot markets were strong and country markets generally ½d higher. The continent continues to show great strength, and a good demand from there caused general firmness. At mid-day the market was still strong and from ⅞d to 1¼d higher than Thursday.

"Corn was steady and irregular. After opening ¼d higher March declined on a poor demand for spot, while May further advanced ¼d, due to the higher La Plata offerigs."

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 41, against 25 last year, and at Minneapolis, 124 against 193 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 165, against 218 last year. Chicago received 57, against 6 last year. Winnipeg received 142, against 110 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 389,000 bu, last year, 324,000 bu. Shipments, 290,000 bu, last year, 325,000 bu. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 58,700 bu.

Primary receipts of corn weer 646,000 bu, last year, 392,000 bu. Shipments, 37,000 bu, last year, 433,000 bu. Clearances of corn were 140,400 bu.

Wheat was active during the session in the Duluth market. May wheat opened ⅝c higher at $1.14½, advanced to $1.15, declined to $1.14¾, rallied to $1.15¼, declined to $1.15, rallied to $1.15⅜, declined to $1.15½ and closed at $1.15¼, a gain of 1⅜c over yesterday. July wheat opened 1c higher at $1.15½, advanced to $1.16⅛ and closed at $1.15⅞, a gain of 1⅜c over yesterday.

Durum wheat closed 1¼c higher than yesterday. Durum sold higher today than at any other time in the history of the local market except two years ago, when it was traded in at $1.04.

Cash spring wheat was very strong, selling on a basis of 1c over May for No. 1 Northern.

May flax was active and closed stronger. It opened unchanged at $1.69, advanced to $1.70 and ranged between that and $1.69½ during the rest of the session, closing at $1.69⅞, a gain of ⅞c over yesterday. July flax was inactive and closed ¾c higher at $1.67¾. October flax sold at $1.29 and $1.39½ and closed at $1.39½, a gain of ½c.

Oats closed ⅜c higher, rye 2c higher and barley unchanged.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Renewed buying of the July delivery caused a firm tone in the wheat market today following a somewhat irregular opening, when prices ranged from ⅛@¼c lower to ⅛@¼c higher, compared with the previous close. Pit traders and commission houses were the principal buyers, the leading longs showing little inclination to trade either way. A moderate decline at Liverpool tended to quench bullish enthusiasm here. July opened at $1.03@1.03¾, and advanced to $1.03⅝@¾, while May, which opened at $1.15⅝@1.15⅞ sold up to $1.16¼.

Trading became more active later in the session, and the July delivery advanced to a new high record mark for the season, the top being reached at $1.04⅝@1.04½. The market closed strong, with July up 1⅛c at $1.04¼@1.04¾. May closed at a net gain of ⅜c at $1.16⅝.

Cold weather in the corn belt induced considerable realizing sales of that grain at the opening resulting in declines of a shade to ¼@¼c, but buying by shorts soon caused a mild rally. May opened at 65½@⅝c to 65⅝c and sold up to 65¾c.

The bulge in wheat imparted strength to the corn market during the last half of the session. May advanced to 66¼c. The close was firm, with May up ⅜c to ⅝@½c at 66⅛c to 66⅛@66¼c.

Oats were firm in sympathy with wheat and corn, but the volume of trade was small. Prices at the opening were a shade lower to ¼c higher, with May at 52½ to 54⅝c. Later May sold at 54⅝@54¾c.

Provisions were firm because of a falling off in receipts of live hogs at Western packing centers. Trade was quiet. At the opening prices were 2½c to 5c higher than yesterday's closing quotations.

THE MINNEAPOLIS MARKET.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 25.—News was bullish, both foreign and domestic. In spite of this the local market showed strength at the opening, advancing half a cent. This advance was independent of any movement in the Chicago May. Activity also helped boost the market. Minneapolis wheat elevator stocks showed a decrease of 150,000 bushels for the day. An electric spark is the luminous effect produced when a sudden disruptive electrical discharge takes place between two charged conductors, or between two conductors at different electric potentials. The length of the spark depends primarily upon the difference of potential of the two charged bodies; it is, hence, in general a conspicuous phenomenon, with high potential frictional electricity, and not with ordinary voltaic currents.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Market Opened Lower and Attempts to Cause Rallies Failed.

Disinclination Shown to Follow Prices Far in Either Direction.

New York, Feb. 25.—The stock market showed renewed unsettlement today, influenced by the first declines in the London market. The majority of stocks were lower, but there was a mixture of gains. Anaconda ran off 1⅝, Union Pacific, Norfolk & Western and American Smelting and St. Paul, Reading and Amalgamated Copper big fractions. Pacific Mail sold at an advance of 1¾, and Denver & Rio Grande preferred 1.

Attempts to rally prices did not meet with success, and there were violent declines after the effort was abandoned. The copper stocks, United States Steel, Reading, St. Paul and Union Pacific were notably weak Pittsburg Coal preferred declined 5½, Amalgamated Copper ⅝, American Smelting 3, National Lead 2⅝, Louisville & Nashville 2½, St. Paul, Reading and Anaconda 2¼, and Delaware & Hudson, Union Pacific Coast Line, Bethlehem Steel preferred, United States Steel and Utah Copper 2.

A slump in the coppers prolonged the weakness elsewhere. Amalgamated Copper broke 4¾, Anaconda 4, American Smelting 3⅝, Reading 3⅛ and New York Central and Norfolk & Western 2. The room shorts covered and the resulting rally ran to a point where declines had been greatest. The demand died down again at the rally and threw the market into dullness. Bonds were irregular.

The market closed heavy and dull. Disinclination to follow prices far in either direction showed the growing professionalism of the market. There was a corresponding shrinkage in business.

New York stock quotations furnished by Fred H. Merritt, 328 West Superior street. Closing prices are bid.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 25.—Barrett & Zimmerman report: Today's sale was not as well attended as it would have been on account of yesterday's storm, but there were enough buyers on hand to make the bidding brisk in the general purpose classes. The Cotton Market.

New York, Feb. 25.—The cotton market opened steady at an advance of 2 points on March on covering, but generally unchanged to 3 points lower in response to disappointing cables. Some of the leading interests supported the market early, particularly new crop months which were brought here against sales abroad and prices rallied to a net advance of about 2 to 5 points, but the general sentiment remained very nervous and remained very nervous and during the middle of the morning prices eased back to about the closing figures of last night.

Futures closed steady. Closing bids: February, 9.27; March, 9.28; April, 9.26; May, June, July and August, 9.27; September, 9.21; October, 9.23; November, 9.19; December, 9.19; January, 9.16. Spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9.65; middling gulf, 9.90; sales, 500 bales.

To the average mind the conception of the atom, or electron, as a sort of whirlpool in the ether, renders it difficult to understand how matter can be rigid. Rigidity is explained as due to the enormous velocity of these etherial vortices. It has been shown that water moving with sufficient velocity through a tube can not be broken into by a violent blow from a sabre. "A layer of water a few centimeters thick," says M. le Bon, "animated by a sufficient velocity, would be as impenetrable to shells as the steel plates of an ironclad."

NEW HIGH MARKS MADE IN WHEAT

May Delivery Sells at $1.17 3-4; July at $1.05 1-4.

Chicago, Feb. 26.—New high record marks for the season were established today in the wheat pit when the May delivery sold at $1.17¾ per bushel and the July at $1.05¼. This price for the May delivery is within four cents of the best mark reached during the memorable Gates campaign in 1905, when the price touched $1.21½.

The high prices prevailing for the future delivery are due to a large extent to the constantly advancing tendency in the price of the cash grain, which is being eaggerly sought by millers at all the leading grain centers in this country. Congestion in the May delivery brought about by manipulation by several leading operators on the board here, however, is partly responsible, also.

WHITE BILL IS BURIED

Another Primary Election Fight in North Dakota Legislature.

Anti-Pass Bill Recommended for Passage by House.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Another round of the primary election fight was fought Thursday afternoon with the result that the White bill, once buried but reconsidered, was killed, the vote being 62 to 29. This measure had been voted for indefinite postponement

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR R. S. LEWIS, Presiding Officer of the North Dakota Senate.

Wednesday afternoon, but a motion to reconsider carried, and it was taken up again. Fully two hours time was devoted to discussing the bill, which was for the second time laid low.

Thoreson's initiative and referendum bill met a like fate by a vote of 49 to 43. This measure made the principle applicable to the constitution only.

After adding an emergency clause the committee of the whole recommended the anti-pass bill for passage.

The bill prohibiting unfair discrimination in purchasing of grain was passed at the evening session, but on a showing that the measure would result in the repeal of a section of the existing anti-trust law, a reconsideration was secured and the bill sent back to the judiciary committee.

The Schull bill, calling for a constitutional convention to amend the state constitution was also killed at last evening's session. An attempt was made today to secure reconsideration, which also failed, and the bill is now buried beyond recall.

The first result of the legislative investigation into the administration of affairs at the state penitentiary is a bill introduced Thursday in the house by the investigating committee asking for an appropriation of $2,500 to be used by the state auditor in setting up a new and complete system of bookkeeping. The committee shows the bookkeeping system in vogue at the institution to be very lax. It was shown that there was no correct record of the brick manufactured or sold, no account being kept with the state to show what portion of the output was used in that manner. In conducting the penitentiary farm the same condition exists, there being no records to, show what portion of the grain harvested was used at the prison or what portion of it was marketed. With reference to the twine plant, the committee states that it will be impossible o make any report as to the conditions because of the limited amount of time.

There will be no more new bills introduced in the house as a result of a resolution introduced by Representative Ployhar of Barnes county, making it necessary hereafter that unanimous consent be secured before any bill can be introduced.

Senator Koffel has introduced a bill which provides for the establishment of a legislation commission to work in conjunction with the legislative reference library. This commission would have as its duties the drafting of bills that various members of the legislature might want; passing upon various bills and determining whether there is any cause for their being introduced, as well as making recommendations with reference to various bills that may be present. The commission would first approve all bills before they could be introduced, and it is argued that a large number of useless bills now introduced would never be heard of, thus doing away with a great amount of work.

Before the bill passed the house giving women the right to vote on questions involving the liquor traffic, becomes law, it will be necessary under the constitution that it shall be submitted to the people at the next general election, as well as well as pass the senate, to which body it has gone for consideration.

* * *

It now appears that the house will not accept the entire report of the senate committee on appropriations, but will have a few amendments to offer in the way of increases. In the university and the Valley City normal school appropriations, the house has raised the senate by several thousand dollars in committee, and there is a probability of a conference committee being necessary before an agreement will be reached.

COMPARED TO PRAYER.

Wireless Telegraphy Subject of a Talk by Rev. R. J. Mooney.

Comparing wireless telegraphy with prayer, Rev. R. J. Mooney, last night spoke on "Man's Connection With the Unseen," before the Park Point Improvement club at Park Point.

Mr. Mooney devoted his talk to the wonders of wireless telegraphy, extolling it as a mysterious, yet sure, means of communication. He drew a parallel between the science of wireless communication and prayer, pointing out that as sure as wireless telegraphy is a means of communication between man and man, prayer is a means of communication between man and God.

The meeting was well attended and, as Mr. Mooney is always an entertaining talker, his discourse on the timely subject was enjoyed.

Cloquet to Play Aitkin.
Cloquet, Minn., Feb. 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The high school basketball team leave today to play the high school basket ball team at Aitkin. Cloquet has a victory over this team to her credit, but if Aitkin wins today a third game will be necessary to complete the series.

AGRICULTURAL LECTURE.

Prof. Leroy Cady Will Speak at Central Y. M. C. A.

Tonight Prof. Leroy Cady of the state school of agriculture will speak in the lecture room of the Central Y. M. C. A. on "Home and Market Gardening and Horticulture."

It will be another of the interesting farm lectures planned by the Commercial club and the Y. M. C. A. The talks up to date have been very well attended and interest in the subject seems to increase with each lecture.

On the occasion of the last lecture, the largest crowd of the season attended, and as Mr. Cady has devoted years to study and has spent much time doing practical work, his talk will no doubt be interesting. A large attendance is anticipated.

VALUATION OF PROPERTY FOR TAXATION PURPOSES UNEQUAL THROUGH STATE

Dalzell Bill to Secure Uniformity Favored by House Committee.

Accurate Valuation of Stocks of Merchandise Also Sought.

Both Branches of Legislature Adjourned Over Saturday and Sunday.

(From a Staff Correspondent.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The house committee on taxes and tax laws yesterday afternoon turned out three more bills, which with the tax measures already reported will give the house plenty to do along that line in the coming few weeks.

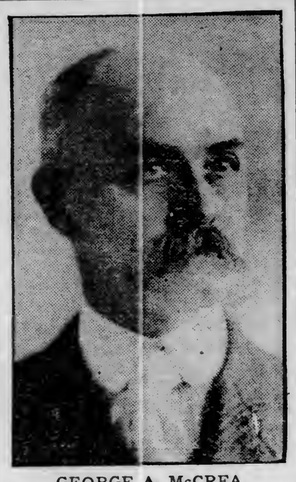

The bill of chief interest is that suggested by the tax commission, and introduced by Representative Dalzell, chairman of the committee, providing that all property shall be valued at its actual worth and then assessed for purposes of taxation at 40 per cent of that figure.

The bill as introduced provided for a 50 per cent assessment, but on motion of Representative Thayer this was reduced to 40 per cent. This figure is not satisfactory to some members of the committee, and an amendment will be offered when the measure is considered in the house restoring the original figure of 50 per cent.

The tax commission asks the passage of this bill because of an interesting and complicated situation in which it finds itself in supervising assessments.

The law says that property shall be assessed at its full value, but from time immemorial it has been the prac-

TWO ARE KILLED BY FALLING ROCK

Accidental Explosion of Powder in Red Jacket Shaft Blamed.

Calumet, Mich., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Charles Zersjisa, age 35 and John Murphy, age 50, were instantly killed this morning while underground at the Red Jacket shaft, by the accidental explosion of forty pounds of powder, which had been left on a car under the rock chute being struck by falling rock, following the explosion.

Stanley Stewart was badly injured and will lose his eyesight.

STOCKS ARE DISTURBED

Slashing of Steel Prices Causes Wall Street Confusion.

Copper is Affected---Court Decision Also Proves Factor.

New York, Feb. 27.—The stock market was much disturbed today by the unsettlement in the metal trades.

The slashing of steel prices caused fears of grave consequences in various directions, besides the effect on earnings of the steel companies themselves. The copper stocks were affected in sympathy from fears of the effect of parallel conditions in that industry.

The weakness of railroad stocks was more directly attributable to government prosecutions. The supreme court decision in the New York Central rebating case was the nominal motive, together with infences drawn of other unfavorable decisions to come, including that in the commodities clause test case.

EVELATOR AT DULUTH

Bill to Permit Construction by North Dakota Passes Senate.

Grand Forks Gas Fight Figures in Another Senate Bill.

Bismarck, N. D., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Senator Duis' bill amending the senate constitution bill allowing the construction of state elevators at Duluth and other terminals in Minnesota passed the senate on Friday afternoon after a brief debate. This measure also provides for representation on the Minnesota board of appeals.

Another bill passed by the senate gives cities the power of controlling the prices of gas. The measure is the outcome of the long Grand Forks fight against the company there, which is controlled by W. J. Murphy of Minneapolis. An amendment to the original bill excepts natural gas.

The congressional apportionment was also taken up with the result that the majority report of the committee, which favored two districts, one of the western and one of the eastern portion of the state, was victorious. If such a measure should pass the assembly, it would serve to legislate either Congressman Hanna or Gronna out of office, as both would be in one district.

• • •

The White anti-pass measure was passed by the house, but the majority given it was not large enough to carry the emergency clause.

The bill placing reformatory, penal and charitable institutions under the

PUMP KEEPING THE MOHAWK DRY

United States Revenue Cutter Stranded in Hell Gate.

New York, Feb 27.—The United States revenue cutter Mohawk, which ran aground on the rocks in Hell Gate while coming in from New London, is fast on the reef off Ward's island. Immediately after the vessel went ashore, wireless messages brought several tugs, which tried to float the cutter. Fears that the sharp rocks on which the vessel's bow rested would tear a hole in the hull have been dispelled. In the attempt at 4 this morning to float the Mohawk the hawsers snapped.

Water was found coming into the Mohawk, but the pumps kept the interior dry.

ROSY FOR VENEZUELA

Buchanan, Home, Takes Hopeful View of Country's Future.

Arbitration Treaty to Be Negotiated When Minister Comes.

Washington, Feb. 27.—A general arbitration treaty will be negotiated between the United States and Venezuela as soon as the minister to be appointed by that country arrives in Washington. Under its terms a compromise containing the questions in the disputed claims between the two countries, which are to be referred to The Hague court, will be drawn up and sent to the senate for ratification. There are three disputed claims to be arbitrated.

American Special Minister W. I. Buchanan has arrived here from Venezuela. He takes a hopeful view of the future of Venezuela, says economic conditions there are improving and that the changed conditions will result in the opening of the mines and the development of the natural resources of the country. President Gomez' position, he says, is a trying one, but he has the co-operation of the Venezuelan people and ultimately, according to Mr. Buchanan, will succeed in bringing order out of the conditions following the recent evolution.

"Gomez is a competent, honest official," says Buchanan, "and he is trying to undo the wrong of his predecessors. Already he has abolished the tobacco monopoly so that any one now can manufacture that article. Generally, the people were ignorant of the disputes with foreign countries, their only source of information being the publication in the official newspaper, Ei-constitutional, which published only what President Castro desired to make public."

Venezuela will send a minister to the United States as soon as Mr. Russell leaves for Caracas.

CUTS HIMSELF TO CIRCULATE BLOOD

Drastic Efforts of Freezing Man to Keep From Dying.

Menominee, Mich., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Partly concealed in a snow drift, his arms, hands and limbs frozen, his body encased in a crust of blood-smeared ice and the temperature 20 degs. below zero, Edward Chism, watchman for the Holt Lumber company, near Bruce's crossing, was found by a searching party three miles from camp.

The senseless form was hurried to the village, where Chism died without regaining consciousness. Crazed by the fear that he was freezing, the desperate man, lost in Wednesday night's fierce blizzard, slashed his hands and arms in a dozen places, in an effort to keep the blood in circulation, and the thin stream of crimson, dyeing the snow in the road for a quarter of a mile, brought the searchers to the body.

Chism left Bruce's Crossing late on Wednesday night in the blizzard with the camp mail. The sack full of letters was found a mile nearer the camp than his body, indicating that he turned about in an attempt to reach the village.

HOUSE VOTES DOWN MOVE AIMED AT STEEL MERGER BY A DECISIVE MAJORITY

Amendments Calling for Prosecution Are Defeated.

Bartlett and Hitchcock Try to Get After Combination.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Another twenty-four hours' trial of time finds congress somewhat nearer the conclusion of its work and with the Steel corporation "atop" after a strenuous move to administer to it a hard whack in connection of the merger of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company.

The house bill for protection of surface rights of agricultural entrymen on lands which have been withdrawn as coal land, has been passed by the senate with an amendment offered by Senator McCumber of North Dakota, which especially appeals to lands in the lignite district.

Reorganization Bill Doomed.

Such bitter differences have arisen between members of the house committee on postoffices and post roads over the reorganization bill for the postoffice department that that measure is probably doomed. After an unsatisfactory attempt to consider the bill in the full committee it was referred to a sub-committee, which has been unable to agree.

News was received by James E. Watson of Indiana, recent candidate for governor, of the death of his father, William Watson, in his home in Winchester, Ind. Representative Watson was presiding over the house in committee of the whole when he received the telegram, but left immediately for Indiana.

Supplementing and defining the general principles laid down in its preliminary plans for the reorganization of the navy which the president sent to congress, the naval reorganization commission, at what probably was its last meeting, has adopted its final plans, to be submitted to the president

BURIED ALIVE IN CHARLOTTE MINE

Two Miners Caught By Cave-in, One Mangled Body Rescued.

Negaunee, Mich., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Owing to a sudden cave-in at the Mary Charlotte iron mine, owned and operated by Breitung & Kaufman, wealthy mine owners of Marquette, Matthew Makki and Matt Heikkala, miners, were buried alive, the disaster occurring about 4:15 last evening.

Great excitement prevailed in the city and at the mine, while a large force worked in the hope of rescuing them from an awful death.

One body was recovered five hours later, crushed and mangled almost beyond recognition.

SCORE HURT IN COLLISION

Trolley Cars Crash in Ohio—Five Serious Injuries.

Misinformation as to Telephone Reports Cause of Accident.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 27.—Five persons were severely injured and a score shaken up, bruised and cut when a car on the Ohio Electric railway dashed around a curve one mile east of West Jefferson and crashed into a car from Springfield filled with passengers. No one was killed. Misinformation through making reports over the telephone caused the collision. The injured:

E. G. Sliger, motorman, Columbus, injured about back; taken to Columbus hospital; Martin Murray, broom manufacturer, West Jefferson, injured about head and finger cut, brought to Columbus hospital; Mrs. James Aikmen, West Jefferson, cut about face and head, brought to Columbus hospital; Joseph Webb, West Jefferson, scalp wound; John Alderman, conductor on passenger car, scalp and face wounds, taken to West Jefferson.

THREE FIREMEN GET INJURIES

Seven-Story Philadelphia Building Suffers Loss of $100,000.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 27.—A large seven-story building at 529 Arch street, occupied by the Paxson & Comfort company, undertakers' supplies, and several other firms were badly damaged by fire today entailing a loss of $100,000. Three firemen were slightly injured.

For a time it was feared the flames would sweep the entire block.

Among the other firms that suffered damage are F. W. Maurer & Sons, upholsters; Oxford Bindey, Thomas J. Potter & Co., straw goods; A. Shabenson & Co., dress goods; Isadavor, Cohan & Schmidt, silk waists, and Sporben Bros. & Co., suits.

BUTTERINE PLANT IS DESTROYED BY FLAMES.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Fire today destroyed the butterine plant and storage warehouse of Swift & Co., at the stockyards, and despite hours of fighting by firemen, attacked the neutral lard house across the alley. A general call for engines was sent out, to prevent further spread of the flames.

STATE TRIES TO SHOW CARMACK ARMED HIMSELF TO PLEASE HIS FRIENDS

Struggle to Get Evidence Before the Cooper Jury.

Defense Says Dead Ex-Senator Did Not Anticipate Trouble.

Judge Forgets Himself and Raps With a Revolver.

Nashille, Tenn., Feb. 27.—It was with considerable expectancy and anxiety that counsel in the Cooper-Sharp trial for the killing of Former United States Senator E. W. Carmack took their places on opposite sides of the court room today. The state is making its last fight to get before the jury the fact that Senator Carmack did not anticipate trouble, laughed at the idea and only armed himself to satisfy or humor his alarmed friends. If the court sustains the state and permits the testimony to go in, it will lengthen the trial by at least a week, as the prosecution has a score of witnesses on this point alone.

During one of the arguments an amusing incident occurred. Judge Hart was listlessly and with a bored air toying with the revolver said to have been taken from Col. Cooper on the night of the killing. All at once Gen. Gardner and Gen. Washington began to indulge in personalities. The court sat up quickly, and, thinking he held the judicial gavel in his hand, proceeded to pound the table vigorously with the butt of the weapon.

Everybody tittered, the court blushed, dropped the revolver and remarked:

"Now proceed with the lawsuit."

Thompson Is Again Queried.

Attorney General Garner asked that the further cross examination of T. Leigh Thompson, on the subject in dispute, be postponed until later.

"We have some authorities to cite and will prepare a brief. We will furnish the defense a copy. In the meantime we will ask Mr. Thompson a few questions not connected with his visit to Senator Carmack. I ask that the jury be brought in."

"Mr. Thompson, when you reached

LADY COOK.

New York, Feb. 27.—Lady Cook, prominent in the advocacy of the cause of woman suffrage, has arrived here from England. Lady Cook, who was formerly Miss Tennessee Claflin, declared that woman's battle for the suffrage was already won. Only minor details are left, she asserted, the principle having been established. She said her work here would be principally to give advice to the suffragette movement.

RIOT, HIDE INSIDE CARS

City Marshal Injured Trying to Quell Foreign Disturbers.

Two Men Are Arrested Following Trouble in Nebraska.

Uehling, Neb., Feb. 27.—Laborers who were last night concerned in rioting at this place have locked themselves in their cars on the side track and it is believed they are cowed.

George Helneman, the city marshal and George Stamm, both injured in the fight last night, will recover. It was first believed they had been fatally injured.

The laborers who caused the trouble are Greeks and Italians and the fight resulted when the marshal tried to quiet a disturbance among the men. Two of the foreigners were arrested at Scribner, where they were attempting to take a train early today.

NO STATEHOOD THIS SESSION

Congressmen in Stormy Session Abandon New Mexico-Arizona Bill.

Washington, Feb. 27.—There will be no statehood legislation for New Mexico and Arizona at the present session of congress. At a meeting of the committee on territories today all members, regardless of party, in a sensational scene, abandoned consideration of the house bill.

HUMANE SOCIETY SAVES STARVING CATTLE HERD.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Feb. 27.—The local Humane society was forced to extend its jurisdiction beyond the city limits when a herd of cattle belonging to a Denver corporation was discovered blocked in the snow near New Castle. The cattle were slowly starving to death, as the ranchers were unable to get food to them. Hay was transported at large expense to the Humane society, and the herd will be saved unless an exceptionally sold snap ensues.

MOB MOCKS THE MURDERS

Lisbon Rioters at Carnival Carry Coffins With Skeletons.

Women in Masked Throng Mimic Assassinations of Rulers.

Lisbon, Feb 27.—The carnival celebrations this week resulted in serious rioting and a number of encounters with the police, during which many persons were more or less injured and 200 arrests were made.

The precautions taken by the authorities were successful in preventing any demonstrations early in the month on first anniversary of the assassinations of King Carlos and the crown prince, but the population took advantage of the carnival tome to indulge in the manifestations they wanted to hold three weeks ago. The assassinations of Feb. 1, 1908, were repeatedly enacted at various points throughout Lisbon by persons made up to represent King Carlos, the crown prince, Queen Amelie, Prince Manuel and the regicides, Costa and Buissa, as they were attired on the day of the tragedy, while other groups carrying coffins containing skeletons to represent King Carlos and the crown prince gave representations of the funeral procession to an accompaniment of blasphemous songs.

The police were taken by surprise, and when they attempted to stop the proceedings the lower classes sided with the masqueraders and received the police with volleys of stones. Women aided the rioters by throwing missiles from windows. The police finally had to make free use of their revolvers and swords. They charged right and left and a panic followed. The situation was such that the police could not control it, and troops had to be summoned. The streets finally were cleared by the military, who made arrests wholesale.

CHLOROFORMED.

SUFFRAGETTES PROMISE TO RAID THE LAWMAKERS AGAIN

London, Feb. 27.—The woman suffragists gathered in force this morning outside of Holloway jail to welcome three of their members who had just completed one month's imprisonment for trying to interview Premier Asquith. In spite of the fact that snow was falling, they formed in a procession and marched to Holborn, where a breakfast of welcome was given for the "martyrs."

Miss Christabel Parkhurst in addressing the gathering, complained that while Mrs. Lawrence and the other leaders of their organization had been sentenced to two months' imprisonment, for their raid on the house of commons, Mrs. Despard, the leader of a rival society, had got off with one month. The speaker promised another raid on the house of commons March 30, when the London women will be joined by delegates from Lancashire.

WHEAT MARKET CONTINUES ITS RECORD BREAKING PERFORMANCE

Chicago, Feb. 27.—The wheat market continued its record-breaking ascent today, May selling at $1.19 and the July delivery at $1.05⅞ shortly after the session of the board of trade opened. The pit was in a ferment of excitement. The demand for May and July seemed unlimited, and in the rapid fire of bidding, the pit clerk had great difficulty in properly recording quotations. The nervousness of the market is indicated by opening quotations, which in an instant covered a range of seven-eighths of a cent. Enormous realizing of sales followed the advance, May dropping a full cent from the top. The leading holder is credited with a line of wheat twice as large as the amount in local warehouses. He is admitted to be in complete control of the situation. At $1.19 today, May wheat was within a cent of the price which this speculator prophesied several months ago.

TEN NIGHTS IN BARROOM

Scanlon Man Also Lodged One Night in Jail.

Home Made a Diphtheria Hospital Without His Consent.

Because, he claims, Mr. and Mrs. William Hunter were responsible for his being driven from his home with his family, being rejected from a hotel, living one night in a common jail and ten nights more in a barroom, Gilbert Baker is suing them for $1,320 in the district court of Carlton county.

Baker lives at Scanlon, and the Hunters conduct the West hotel at Cloquet. Baker claims that without any knowledge on his part of the nature of her disease, Helga Aronson, a servant employed by the Hunters, was placed in his house against her remonstrances, and, in consequence, his house was quarantined.

The complaint charges that the girl was taken ill with diptheria at the West hotel in Cloquet, Dec. 20, last. Dec. 28, he says, she was removed to his home, under what conditions he does not say. He says the defendants then caused the health officer of Scanlon to investigate the case and, in consequence, the house was quarantined and he, his wife and two children were forced to vacate, leaving their clothing and groceries behind.

He says he first went to a hotel at Scanlon with his family, but they were driven out on account of the fear of the contagious disease. An attempt to find rooms was ineffectual and he and his family were forced to spend another night in the common jail of Scanlon for want of other quarters, he says. After coming to Duluth to look for rooms, he says, he was forced to take his family to his saloon, in his own building, where they lived until Jan. 9. The weather was cold and the family was scantily clad, he says, so that they suffered considerably.

He asks $1,000 general damages, $200 for loss of business, and the remainder for cleaning the clothing and rooms after the lifting of the quarantine.

The matter was brought before the court in Duluth today on a demurrer by the defendant to the complaint. After hearing the argument of the defendants' attorney, Judge Dibell overruled the demurrer and left the matter open for an amendment of the pleadings.

Tom Wak-ah-nah-bo, one of them, seized a heavy sled stake and beat Joseph Wannigan, the other, into insensibility. Wannigan's condition is quite serious, recovery being doubtful.

USED MAILS TO DEFRAUD

M. L. Britton, Alleged Jewelry Thief, Caught in Duluth.

Said to Have Operated Extensively Through the West.

M. L. Britton, wanted by the United States government on a charge of using the United States mail to defraud, has been arrested in Duluth by Postoffice Inspector Fraser of Wisconsin, and taken to Kansas City, Mo., where he will be tried for the alleged fleecing of several wholesale jewelry firms.

Two years ago Britton was a watchman in the Denver, Colo., railroad yards, earning on an average of $100 a month. Last year he is said to have made $15,000 without any manual labor. The government has seen fit to question his financial methods, however, and the man was arrested in Duluth by Inspector Fraser after the latter had cleverly traced him here.

It is claimed that Britton fleeced W. W. Hamilton and the Lewis Jewelry & Supply company, both of Denver, out of $2,000 worth of fancy jewelry a year ago. On the Denver charge he was traced all over the country by Postoffice Inspectors E. P. Smith and Frank Fraser, and finally was arrested in New Mexico, at Raton. He was tried at Las Vegas last May by a jury of Mexicans and was acquitted.

Britton used the names of some of the biggest jewelry firms in the country, it is claimed, and ordered goods shipped to various parts of the country under those names, stating that he was opening branch stores. The last time he was arrested it was alleged that he obtained goods under the name of E. M. Lipka, and then shipped them to Grand Island, Neb., and other Western cities. He is charged by the Denver jewelers of using the names of Allen & Allen of Los Angeles, E. M. Lipka of San Francisco, M. Bloom of Tacoma, Wash., and other names equally well known.

It is asserted that Britton is one of the most daring mail-order fakers in the country. Auction sales were his favorite methods of disposing of jewelry. He is to be tried in Kansas City in April, and Denver and Kansas City jewelers will be among those testifying against him.

FELIX GERIOUX A "CHEERFUL"

So Says Chief Troyer About Man Telling of Third Degree.

Felix Gerioux, on the witness stand in a St. Paul court yesterday, charged the Duluth police with having administered the "third degree" to him in a manner so effective that he made a false statement implicating Charles Acker in a bribery charge. He claims the strain under the "third degree" was so great that he had to confess something to obtain relief.

According to Chief of Police Troyer and deputies in the sheriff's office, Gerioux is lying, and there is absolutely no foundation for his story of the administering of the "third degree." Chief Troyer states most emphatically that the man was not even questioned in Duluth in regard to the charge lodged against him. He was arrested on a forgery charge and taken to St. Paul, where he was wanted. He was arrested, lodged in the county jail, and held until the arrival of an officer from St. Paul, and no attempt was made to question him, let alone administering the "third degree."

Gerioux and Acker are both accused of having attempted to bribe witnesses to testify falsely in a personal injury suit brought by Charles Acker against the Northwestern line.

SAYS COMPANY FAILED TO PAY

Miner Seeks to Recover on Accident Insurance Policy.

Martin Vukodanovich has brought suit in district court against the United States Health & Accident Insurance company to recover $140 he claims to be due under an accident insurance policy.

Vukodanovitch claims that he took out a policy with the company in November, 1907, under which he was to receive $30 a month for a period not to exceed six months, if totally disabled on account of injuries.

June 18 of last year, he claims, while he was employed at the Isle Royale mine at Houghton, Mich., he fell, breaking two ribs and the right ankle, so that he has still been unable to work. He claims the company has paid him nothing under the policy, despite the fact that he gave prompt notice of the injury.

THREE HUNDRED EIGHTY SALOONS OUT OF BUSINESS.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 27.—Rush county is holding a local option election today and the temperance forces say it will go dry by 1,500. During the week elections have been held in eleven counties and all have declared against the saloon. Within the last few weeks elections have been held in twenty-five counties in the state under the local option law, and only one of that rumber has voted in favor of the saloon. Three hundred and eighty saloons will be put out of business as a result of these elections.

Notice to the Public

In line with our policy to give the people of Duluth the best service at a fair price, we have been installing in our plant since Nov. 1st, 1908, a ten-panel feeder board, for the control and distribution of all lighting current.

We have in this work placed in the individual lighting circuits, regulators, by means of which the voltage of each circuit may be regulated independently, thus being able to give a heavily loaded circuit a voltage higher than one with a light load.

This work has been carried on for months without interrupting the service, but to make the final connections it will be necessary to shut off the current for a few hours Sunday, Feb. 28th.

We hope by giving due notice to reduce the inconvenience to a minimum, and you may be assured we will rush the work with all possible dispatch. Yours very truly,

Duluth Edison Electric Co.

BACK FROM SOUTHWEST.

C. H. Meyers of Grand Rapids, who is interested in iron lands in the northern part of Minnesota, returned today from Colorado, where he has been looking over copper lands in the northeastern part of that state. This is in the undeveloped part of the mining section of the state, according to Mr. Meyers, who says that there is a good deal of promise in the copper deposits there.

"Capital is being interested," says Mr. Meyers, "and I believe that this section of Colorado has a very bright future. The copper is of low grade, but it is very easy of access and will not cost much to mine. They have sunk several shafts and have struck very good veins."

Mr. Meyers says many people are going to New Mexico and the Western states, and that irrigation and dry farming is reclaiming many thousands of acres of land. But after looking over the prospects for farming in the Southwestern states, Mr. Meyers says that prospects in Northern Minnesota are, after all, the best he has seen.

COUGHING BURST

BLOOD VESSEL

Says Danger Avoided and Cures Coughs in 5 Hours.

A writer for the medical press states that coughing is responsible for the bursting of blood vessels quite frequently. A cough or cold means inflammation (fever) and congestion, and these in turn indicate that the body is full of poisons and waste matter. Simple relief, as found in patent cough medicines, and whisky, often result in more harm than good; as they cause more congestion. A tonic-laxative cough syrup will work marvels and here follows a prescription which is becoming famous for its prompt relief and thorough cures. It rids the system of the cause, except it be consumption. Don't wait for consumption to grasp its victim, but begin this treatment which cures some in five hours. Mix in a bottle, one-half ounce fluid wild cherry bark, one ounce compound essence cardiol and three ounces syrup white pine compound. Take twenty drops every half hour for four hours. Then one-half to one teaspoonful three or four times a day. Give children less according to age.

SUPERIOR NEWS

WOMAN DIED OF FRIGHT

Mrs. J. W. Samways, 53 years old, died suddenly of fright yesterday at her home, 2719 Twenty-second avenue west, on finding that she sad taken a teaspoonful of carbolic acid by mistake.

It was at first thought that she might have committed suicide, but upon investigation it was proven that this could not have been possible. No one was at home when Mrs. Samways took the acid, but she was found a few minutes later by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frank Samways, prostrate on the floor of her bed room.

Mrs. Samways had been troubled for some time with a weak heart and for the last two weeks had had a severe cold which confined her to her bed. Beside her bed on a table were two bottles, one medicine and the other acid. She could not have taken more than a teaspoonful of acid, as the bottle was found to be almost full.

The physicians are positive that the small amount of acid which she took could not have resulted in death. Dr. John G. Barnesdale, who attended Mrs. Samways during her illness, states on the death certificate that death was caused by heart trouble. Mrs. Samways is survived by a husband and six children.

Her Son is Alive.

The story printed in The Herald a few evenings ago that the relatives of Carl Frykdahl who live at 3818 Magellan street, feared he had been attacked and killed by wolves in the wild country between Stony river and Ely brought good results. The young man saw it and promptly sent word to his mother that he was very much alive and was working in a cedar camp at Knife River. Mrs. Frykdahl, his mother, is naturally much relieved as the original story in this paper about finding the remains of a human being, combined with the failure of her son, who had gone to that section looking for work, to write, had distressed her very much.

WOMEN'S WOES

Duluth Woemn Are Finding Relief at Last.

It does seem that women have more than a fair share of the aches and pains that afflict humanity; they must "keep up," must attend to duties in site of constantly aching backs, or headaches, dizzy spells, bearing-down pains; they must stoop over, when to stoop means torture. They must walk and bend and work with racking pains and many aches from kidney ills. Kidneys cause more suffering than any other organ of the body. Keep the kidneys well and health is easily maintained. Read of a remedy for kidneys only that helps and cures the kidneys and is endorsed by people you know.

Mrs. W. F. Humerichous, 109 Twenty-seventh Ave., Duluth, Minn., says: "For several years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and the medicines I used did not help me. My back often ached severely and when I stooped dizzy spells seized me. When I had taken the contents of one box of Doan's Kidney Pills, I felt so much better that I procured a further supply. I am now free from backache and feel better in every way. I do not hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills in return for the good they did for me."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo New York, sole agents for the United States.

RESULTS ARE FAR REACHING

Effects of Plans of Commercial Club in Other Places.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I want to say a word to show the far-reaching effect which some of the plans of the Commercial club are having in other parts of the country.

Some time ago I sent a copy of the booklet entitled "Cows in Clover," to Charles W. Garfield of Grand Rapids, Mich., who is interested in every public improvement, and he afterward told me in a personal interview that this little publication presented to him a new idea, and that is, that commercial clubs of cities should take an interest in the development of the country tributary to those cities, not only commercially, but as to agricultural development.

He sent the book to some organization at Rochester, N. Y., engaged in constructive work. The idea took root there and it was sent on to Denison, Tex., and, acting upon the suggestion, the Denison Commercial club took immediate steps to interest the farmers in that vicinity in its work and incorporated them in some degree into its management.

In a late address delivered by Mr. Garfield before the Western New York Horticultural society at Rochester, in referring to the means employed to better conditions in both town and cuntry, he uses this language:

"This work is accomplished largely through boards of trade and this leads me to call your attention to the fact that these boards in many places are not limiting their functions to the commercial side of urban life, but they are recognizing the importance of the inseparable relationship between city life and the country life bordering on the cities, and are making themselves factors in awakening a more intimate companionship between the commercial life of the city and the commercial life of the country. In cities like Duluth, Minn., and Dennison, Tex., through their boards of trade, they have been calling the attention of citizens to the tremendous importance connected with the betterment of farm methods in the vicinity of the towns and have appropriated money liberally to assist in the perfection of better dairying processes, of increasing the range of products grown for the cities' consumption and assisting in the adoption of better marketing processes on the part of husbandmen."

The results which have flowed from this little work in the direction above indicated may not have been foreseen by those who compiled it, but enough has been said to show that the germinal idea involved in its production has merit and has been appreciated and adopted elsewhere.

FORECAST OF COUNCIL

Carpenter Brothers Will Appear to Defend Their License.

Democrats Have Not Yet Agreed Upon a President.

The feature of greatest interest at next Monday night's council meeting will be the appearance of the Carpenter Brothers, proprietors of a saloon at Oneota, to show cause why their license should not be revoked, as a result of the case brought against them in municipal court, charging them with selling liquor to minors, in which a conviction was secured.

The six boys who testified in municipal court that Patrick Carpenter had sold liquor as charged, will appear before the council, and repeat their testimony. The Carpenters will put up the defense that if the boys secured any intoxicants in the place, it was entirely without the knowledge of the bartender. The new aldermen will be in their seats when the question of revocation is put to vote, and the general public is interested to know which way they will vote.

The city attorney probably will be ready with a report on the ordinance proposed by Alderman Shartel, making it an offense, punishable by fine or imprisonment, for a minor to purchase drinks in a saloon, the idea being that in many cases it is hard for the bartender to tell whether a youth is 21 years of age or less. There is some opposition to such an ordinance, on the ground that it will afford absolute protection to saloon men, if adoted, in the sale of liquor to minors, and the charge is made that the liquor interests are behind the move to have it adopted. The argument is set forth that, with the proposed ordinance in effect, all bartenders who were so inclined could sell liquor in any amount to minors, and rest safe in the knowledge that the minors in question would not testify against them on the witness stand in court, for, by so doing, they would be incriminating and convicting themselves of an offense equally as great as that charged against the bartender.

The new council will not perfect its organization until a week from next Tuesday evening. At that time a president and clerk will be elected. It is understood that the question of who shall be president has not yet been decided. Alderman Shartel is making a fight for the place, and has six Democratic votes lined up. There are nine Democrats in the council, enough to land a Democrat in the place if all the aldermen of that party line up for him. It is said that at least two of the remaining three Democrats absolutely refuse to vote for Mr. Shartel, and it is strongly hinted that the seven Republicans will line up with the three backward Democrats and again elect Mr. Getchell president of the council. If this isn't done, it is possible that a Republican will be elected.

AN INCOME TAX.

Claim That Proper Allowance for All Conditions Should be Made.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I see by your paper that an income tax measure has been introduced for passage in the state legislature at St. Paul. It is proposed to tax the excess over $1,000. It is, perhaps, thought that anyone getting $1,000 or more can afford to pay the tax.

There are persons who get $1,200 a year by reason of their brain capacity, acquired by study and experience. So the proponent of the law intends to penalize the $1,200 a year people for trying harder to make themselves more valuable to their employers, themselves and the community in which they live. They, in nearly every case, spend every dollar they earn. The grocer, the butcher, the tailor, the dressmaker, all get a part.

A $1,200 man in a store or office cannot, in justice to his employer and himself, appear at his post in patched garments. His demeanor and appearance must be appropriate to his business. True, the tax on $200 excess would be very small. It is not the amount, but the principle or the policy that is questioned.

Let us suppose a $1,200 man has six children, in addition to his wife and self, to support. Eight persons consume his income, an average of $150 to each, a little over 41 cents a day per capita. For a $1,500 man, add one-fourth. Can such afford to have any of their income taken away?

I think an income tax law ought to take into account how many persons live off the income in each case, and a proper deduction made. If a man has only a wife and an income of $5,000 per year, he can stand a larger share of burden than a $1,200 man, who may have an invalid, or aged mother, a sickly wife and a half dozen youngsters looking to him for the necessaries of life.

The cost of living varies in different places. Health conditions also vary. Proper allowance for all conditions should be made.

Encourage the fathers of large families. Encourage those who care for the sick and aged, rather than send them to a hospital or asylum.

The cost of living is increasing—why add to it? If a man uses the wole of his income for the necessaries of life, or to increase his business, to benefit his community, why handicap him with the income tax? The man whose income exceeds his needs, say $2,000 a year, and spends most of the excess in luxuries that may be demoralizing, ought to stand the tax. Punish the spendthrift. Reward the thrifty.

There ought to be an income tax, I believe, but it should be beneficial in its operations, and not detrimental to the best interests of the individual or the state.

A tax commissioner ought to study the subject and suggest proper legislation.

DANUBE OUTLOOK MUCH BRIGHTER

Situation Between Servia and Austria Viewed More Hopefully.

Berlin, Feb. 27.—The situation between Austria-Hungary and Servia is viewed much more hopefully today in the foreign office. Inasmuch as Russia has agreed to participate in a joint note at Belgrade, it is believed Servia will see that she is completely isolated and without any prospect of foreign assistance should she go to war.

It is said in the war office that the collective note to Belgrade, the wording of which is still under consideration will be mild in form for the purpose of sparing Servian sensibilities, but will leave no doubt that Servia must relinquish the idea of territorial expansion. It is assumed here that Servia will accept this advice, particularly as Austria-Hungary has declared her willingness to make trade concessions to compensate for the abandonment of the claim for a portion of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The brighter outlook along the Danube resulted today in a firm rise in prices on the bourse.

SURPRISED GUARDIAN

Cuthbert J. Petre Married Without Consent of Mr. Tyler.

Some Action May Be Taken in the Probate Court.

A fine question has come up as to the effect and status of the marriage of Cuthbert J. Petre of Duluth and Mrs Flo Shaver Rogers of Superior, in the Wisconsin city Thursday afternoon. For several years past, Mr. Petre has been under the guardianship of George L. Tyler as an incompetent by action of the probate court, and the fact of his marriage, which was not known to his guardian until he read the newspaper announcement, was brought to the attention of the probate court this morning.

Years ago, fearing that Mr. Petre would squander a fortune of about $160,000, which was bequeather to him by his uncle, Lord Petre of England, friends made application for a guardian and Mr. Tyler was appointed. Since that time, Mr. Tyler has managed Mr. Petre's affairs, and Mr. Petre's abnormal desires to spend money have been curbed.

The Petre brothers, D. A. and Cuthbert, are well known in Duluth, D. A. Petre attracting much attention some time ago on account of his matrimonial troubles. Now his brother has broken into the limelight by the same route. D. A. Petre is now a resident of Minneapolis.

Cuthbert Petre is the younger of the two brothers. He is supported by a maintenance of $60 a month from his estate and he has consistently regarded the allowance as too small. His money is invested in property which draws a large rental, from which his maintenance is paid. Mr. Petre is the owner of the old Yager apartments on Second avenue east.

Nothing has been done in the matter by the probate court and whether anything will be done is not yet known. Judge Middlecoff was too busy this morning to attend to the matter, and Mr. Tyler would not say what action may be taken.

Character and Food.

Eaten to excess, or constantly, mutton will cause melancholy, veal causes loss of appetitite and energy. Too much mustard causes loss of memory, and salt causes indigestion. Eggs, grains, ripe fruit and golden grain belt beer are good for vivacity and health. This delicious beverage is produced with scientific care and epicurean judgment and should have a place on your home table. CUT STIMULATES AMID CONFUSION

Dun Notes Effect of Steel Corporation's Action on Trade.

New York, Feb. 27.—R. G. Dun's Weekly Review of Trade today says:

Although the cuts in steel added some confusion to the existing weakness in the iron and copper trades, and have brought about a sharp decline in the security market, yet the reasserting of the law of supply and demand, with its inevitable readjustments of prices and perhaps of wages, must prove ultimately helpful to the business situation, however disturbing the immediate effects. The lower prices stimulated inquiries and some orders for structural material were placed at Pittsburg at revised prices. Outside of the area of disturbance caused by this development, the movement of general trade continues practically unchanged. The movement is large, but still entirely lacking the buoyancy hoped for. The reports from the West indicates that that section is further advanced toward the point of normal activity than the East.

Transactions in the local dry goods market are only for absolutely known requirements. Reports from the West, however, indicate a house trade that seems fully up to normal. Cotton goods prices remain stationary, and the market is more or less uneven, certain lines being sold ahead for months to come, while others can be had for comparatively near-by delivery.

Export trade is light, with absolutely no inquiry at present from China, although fair orders are received from South America. Print cloth, yarn goods, are less active, and prices are generally weaker. In men's wear, woolen goods, Jerseys and Thibets are not in demand, but in fancy goods, especially overcoatings, a large business has been done, more than was expected; fancy waistcoats continue to lead in strength. Woolen and worsted yarns are strong and active, while linen and jute are firm, with the demand moderate, although in all divisions of the yarn market prices are more favorable to buyers than for some time past.

Boston shows shoe shipments for the year are 20 per cent over the corresponding period of 1908, but deliveries on spring contracts are not nearly completed, and the outlook for the future is less encouraging. The weakness in the domestic hide market is still more pronounced, and such sales as have been made are at a further reduction in prices. The leather market is decidedly inactive, with prices weaker on all lines, although supplies on hand are light.

THE COST OF POLITICS

Candidates at Recent Election File Their Expense Accounts.

F. J. Voss Spent $202 to Be Re-Elected City Treasuer.

Thirteen candidates for office at the recent municipal election have filed their election expense accounts with City Clerk Cheadle.

F. J. Voss, successful candidate for the office if city treasurer, spent more money than any of the others. His total was $202.50, of which $138.50 was spent for printing and the distribution of election literature; $54 for canvassing votes and $10 filing fee.

Lucien Merritt, successful candidate for alderman in the Seventh ward, spent more money than any of the other aldermanic candidates who have been heard from. His bill amounted to $166.76. The biggest item was $53 for printing.

Other expense accounts were as follows: Ben F. Howard, defeated candidate for city treasurer, $51.50; W. L. Windom, elected municipal judge, $15, of which $10 was filing fee, and $5 a contribution to the West End Republican club; Watson S. Moore, elected alderman in the First ward, $10 filing fee; T. J. Storey, declared elected alderman in the Second ward, $132.70, of which $70 went to canvassing for votes; C. J. Hector, elected alderman from the Third ward, $68.25; Joseph Shartel, elected alderman in the Fourth ward, $109.85; J. A. MacDonnell, elected alderman in the Fifth ward, $55.50; A. C. Parsons, defeated for alderman in the Fifth ward, $46.25; C. R. Hoar, elected alderman in the Sixth ward, $107; J. B. Flack, justice of the peace in West Duluth, $10 filing fee; W. B. Getchell, elected alderman in the Eighth ward, $10 filing fee.

THIS IS NOT A NATURE FAKE

Pair of Evening Grosbeaks Make Home at Lester Park.

Evening grosbeaks are spending a few days in Lester park.

For the uninitiated, it may be stated that the evening grosbeaks are not members of an outing society or Brooklyn's first families, but a species of bird which is seen in the north country and seldom gets as far south as Duluth.

Two of the birds have been seen in Lester park recently and folks who know, declare them to be the real evening grosbeaks.

The grosbeak resembles a robin in general contour, although it is a little larger than Mr. Redbreast. The grosbeak wears a fetching canary yellow waistcoat, swagger black-edged wings, and a white coat with a dark tail. It has a wide beak, about an inch long and an inch wide.

KIRTLEY GIVES A TALK ON BOYS

Baptist Pastor Talks Entertainingly of Youthful Likes and Dislikes.

At the First Baptist church last night, the pastor, Rev. J. S. Kirtley, delivered his lecture, "In the Barefoot Kingdom."

Mr. Kirtley said that boys and girls of the country are being neglected. He mentioned the fabulous sums being spent on horses and other animals and told how much good the money would do if distributed in the proper channels.

Mr. Kirtley told his audience last night of a boys' habits, how he forms likes and dislikes, his pleasures, his cares, his longings and his future. He referred humorously to the characteristics of the boy, his appetite, his inclination to get into mischief, his multiplicity of pockets and their contents, his lung power and his constant activity.

He told how a boy loves fair treatment, how he despises hypocrisy, how he remembers his friends and his enemies, and how he resents unfair treatment.

The speaker said that up to 6 years of age the boy's life is a series of automatic impulses, from 6 to 12 he is forming habits, and after that he develops his consclence and his social proclivities.

Mr. Kirtley emphasized the importance of environment saying that a boy absorbs the atmosphere of conditions about him.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the brotherhood of the church. There will be two more lectures and the proceeds of all three entertainments will go to the music fund of the church.

Plan to Combine Yacht and Boat Clubs Widely Discussed.

Yacht Club Members Will Vote on the Plan, March 8.

The brief announcement made in The Herald last evening, that a meeting of the Yacht club members would be held March 8, at the Y. M. C. A. assembly hall, for the purpose of considering joining forces with the Boat club, has created no little interest among members of both clubs.

The plan is not a new one. It was seriously considered for a time last fall. The Yacht club was in rather serious straits for ready money, and it was thought for a time that the club would either have to close, or join forces with the Boat club. Some of the members came to the rescue, however, and advanced the ready cash to pay pressing bills, and the club finished out the year.

This year, while the club owns valuable property, it is in none too good a position as far as ready money is concerned, and the members who have stood behind it and paid the bills are unwilling to continue in the role. It is proposed to join forces with the Boat club, and turn over the property of the Yacht club to the older organization, the Boat club also taking over the life memberships of the Yacht club. The Boat club is in a most flourishing condition. Its membership list was full last season, and there was a waiting list. It has been steadily paying off its indebtedness, in spite of the rapid way in which it has been forced to increase its facilities. If it took over the Yacht club membership, some big additions would be needed to its facilities. The dance hall and cafe at the main clubhouse would be inadequate, although they would probably be made to do for this year. The club will probably pay more attention to its branch houses at Oatka and Spirit Lake this summer, and this will relieve the situation at the main house. If there were dances at these branch houses at the same time that the dances are being held at the main house, it would relieve the situation materially.

If the two clubs do decide to combine, and that seems very probable, it will give Duluth the largest Boat club in the Northwest. There will be no organization to compare with it in any of the large cities west of Chicago. The rivalry between the two clubs has built up both organizations, and done much to increase interest in aquatic sports, but it looks as if the combining of the two clubs would be decided upon at this time. An anchorage would be provided by the Boat club for the members with sailboats, and the one club would then father all branches of acqatic sports, including canoeing, sailing, rowing, swimming and motor boat racing, not forgetting lawn tennis, which is now featured at both the main house and the Spirit Lake branch.

THE LOCAL SKI TOURNAMENT

Duluth Club Promises Good Sport at Chester Hill Sunday.

The ski tournament, to be held Sunday afternoon, at Chester Hill, under the auspices of the Duluth Ski club, will be fully as interesting as the one held two weeks ago and which proved to be such a success.

The hill is in the best of shape, and if the present weather continues, the conditions under which the riders will perform could not be improved upon. At the time of the last jump, the weather was cold, there was quite a wind and the snow on the landing was packed too hard for the best results. The Duluth riders still firmly believe that the new hill will allow new records, and with the conditions so favorable for tomorrow, they have hopes of breaking the old records.

Bernt Hanson, the 14-year-old lad from Coleraine, who makes the entire slide on barrel staves, and has jumped as far as seventy-five feet, will be on hand and will give an exhibition of his skill.

There is much interest in the tournament, for which there are now more than thirty entries. A number of the Superior riders have entered, some of the range riders are on deck, and when the entertainment begins there will undoubtedly be a large crowd at the hill to enjoy the sport.

WRESTLERS IN A GOOD MATCH

Beell and Mahmout Will Furnish Excitement in Plenty.

When Yusiff Mahmout steps upon the mat at the athletic carnival, to be given at the Temple roller rink, Thursday evening, Duluth fans will see one of the most perfect specimens of physical manhood ever enlisted in the ranks of professional athletes.

Unlike the former Turks that have come to this country, Mahmout is not merely a bulky giant, who depends upon beef alone. He is said to be as well built a man as Champion Gotch, and with his wonderful strength combines a quickness that has led many critics of the wrestling game to believe that he is the only man who can take the measure of the Humbolt wonder.

People in this city, who have seen Frank Gotch in some of his matches, will be loath to admit that there is any living wrestler who knows as much about the fine points of the catch-as-catch-can game as does the Iowa man. He defeated Hackenschmidt by his thorough knowledge of the wrestling game, and his endurance. Mahmout, in his matches in this country, in which he has defeated every man met, has shown a knowledge of the fine points of the game that has surprised not only his opponents, but also the wise ones who believed that the Bulgarian was merely a giant possessing wonderful strength.

In meeting Beell, the Turk will encounter an opponent who knows the wrestling game from A to Z. He will meet the fastest little man in the world, the man who once defeated Frank Gotch for the world's championship, and the only man that Gotch believes, outside of himself, stands a chance of defeating the Turk.

Walter Whitehead, Northwestern champion heavyweight, and Jimmy Potts, who fought a draw in Philadelphia with "Unk" Russell, the great Eastern middleweight, will box an exhibition of six rounds. There will be an additional boxing card that is being arranged, which will make the program one of the best ever arranged for a Duluth show.

IMPROVEMENTS IN MAIL SERVICE

Car Will Be Added to the Early Omaha Train.

Acting on the recommendations of Chief Clerk Newton De Forest, some needed improvements are about to be made in the railway mail service in and out of Duluth.

Commencing March 4, a mail car will be added to the equipment of Omaha trains No. 94 and 95, arriving in Duluth at 8:40 a. m. and leaving at 3:30 p. m. This will provide a local service to the offices between Duluth and Eau Claire, which have been supplied only by the 5:15 p. m. train, and allow earlier connections to be made out of Chicago.

Commencing March 15, the clerk on the Canadian Northern train leaving here at 7:10 p. m. will run through to Warroad instead of concluding his run at Ranier, as at present. This will facilitate local service to the offices on the Canadian Northern between Fort Frances and Warroad, and in addition insure the delivery of mail leaving Duluth Saturday evening to the Canadian Northern offices on Sunday morning. Instead of laying over in Fort Francis until Monday morning, which is now the case.

Notice to the Public

In line with our policy to give the people of Duluth the best service at a fair price, we have been installing in our plant since Nov. 1st, 1908, a ten-panel feeder board, for the control and distribution of all lighting current.

We have in this work placed in the individual lighting circuits, regulators, by means of which the voltage of each circuit may be regulated independently, thus being able to give a heavily loaded circuit a voltage higher than one with a light load.

This work has been carried on for months without interrupting the service, but to make the final connections it will be necessary to shut off the current for a few hours Sunday, Feb. 28th.

We hope by giving due notice to reduce the inconvenience to a minimum, and you may be assured we will rush the work with all possible dispatch. Yours very truly,

Duluth Edison Electric Co.

SCHOOL IN NEW HOME.

Duluth Business University Has Commodious Quarters in New Building.

The Duluth Business university is now comfortably located in its new quarters in the Christie building, on Fourth avenue west.

Yesterday afternoon from 2 to 5, and last evening from 7 to 9, hundreds of interested people visited the school's new quarters and inspected the excellent facilities which will aid the school in conducting its work in the future. The rooms are commodious, perfectly lighted and ventilated, and specially adapted to the use of the school. The rooms are beautifully tinted, each room having a different color effect, a careful study having been made in order to secure the best lighting advantages. It would seem that everything has been done to give to the students of this institution the very best facilities possible. The equipment is practically all new and includes an adding machine and printograph, the first of their kind to be introduced in Duluth.

Flaaten's orchestra played for the reception during both the afternoon and evening. The school staff acted as guides to show the guests through the rooms, and explain, where possible, the nature of the work done in each department.

FULL INVESTIGATION

May be Made Into Affairs of the Crow Indians.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Mrs. Helen Pierce Gray, formerly of St. Paul, has won in her long fight in behalf of the Crew Indians of Montana.

She succeeded first in having the appointment of Special Indian Inspector Dalby hung up in the senate, and now Senator Clapp has agreed to put through a resolution for a full investigation of Crow affairs by the senate committee on Indian affairs, which is to be given authority to administer oaths, send for persons and papers and to sit in Washington or out in Montana, as an investigating body.

A Common Cold.
We claim that if catching cold could be avoided some of the most dangerous and fatal diseases would never be heard of. A cold often forms a culture bed for germs of infectious diseases. Consumption, pneumonia, diphtheria and scarlet fever, four of the most dangerous and fatal diseases, are of this class. The culture bed formed by the cold favors the development of the germs of these diseases, that would not otherwise find lodgment. There is little danger, however, of any of these diseases being contracted when a good expectorant cough medicine like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It cleans out these culture beds that favor the development of the germs of these diseases. That is why this remedy has proved so universally successful in preventing pneumonia. It not only cures your cold quickly but minimizes the risk of contracting these dangerous diseases. For sale by all druggists.

NOBOBY CAN MARRY THIS BOY WHEN HIS FATHER ISN'T LOOKING

Charles Hamilton of Rice Lake, Wis., believes that prevention is better than attempted cure in the case of a boy who would marry without his parents' consent. To forestall a possible elopement, Hamilton has written to the clerk of the St. Louis county court, notifying him not to issue a marriage license to the boy. It is presumed he has done the same by other counties in the vicinity, and if Ralph Hamilton would wed his blushing sweetheart he must elope to some far-off Gretna Green.

The letter to the St. Louis county clerk follows:

"Dear Sir: Will you please tell me if there has been any application for a marriage license by a man, or rather a boy, by the name of Ralph Hamilton at your office within the last two days. I would say that if not, he is liable to make application for one, and I, being his father, and he being only 17 years old, refuse to give my consent to the marriage.

"I would also state that I will prosecute anyone who makes affidavit that he is over the age that I stated. I tell you this that you may be on the lookout for a party that would like to marry a boy against his parents' wishes. Please be kind enough to keep me posted.

"CHARLES HAMILTON."

BOARD LETS CONTRACT

General Electric Company to Furnish Pump for Middle System.

Capt. Thompson Reports Outlet Pipe in Perfect Condition.

The board of water and light commissioners has let the contract for furnishing a double acting triplex pump for the new station of the middle system at Fifteenth avenue east and Sixth street, to the General Electric company. The contract provides for the furnishing of a Dean double acting triplex pump manufactured by Henry Worthington & Co., with all necessary appliances, equipment and installation for $6,400.

Four bids were considered in all, two on double acting triplex pumps and two on centrifugal pumps. One bid on each kind of pump was received from the General Electric company and from the Power Equipment company. The bid of the Power Equipment company on the double acting triplex pump was $7,339. There was a wide difference in price and efficiency of the preferred double acting triplex pump and the preferred centrifugal pump. The former cost $6,400 with an efficiency over all of 92.8 per cent, while the latter would cost $7,100 with an efficiency of but 57.87 per cent.

The plans for the new pumping station are being prepared by Bray & Nystrom and will be ready for the consideration of the board soon. They call for a reinforced concrete and brick building, 30 by 72 feet in size and 24 feet high. The station will be modern and substantial and will be good for many years to come. The two gas pumps now at the middle system station will be installed in the new building to be used in cases of emergencies.

The board this week received the report of H. H. Thompson, the diver engaged to examine the inlet pipe at Lakewood. Capt. Thompson reported that he had examined every inch of the pipe, every joint being given a thorough examination, and no defects of any kind were found. The pipe was examined some time ago by the chairman of the board and the manager and the report of Capt. Thompson confirms the conclusion then reached, that the pipe was in perfect condition.

BACK FROM THE REVIEW

Duluth Man Tells of Reception to American Fleet.

Sight Was Inspiring in Spite of Dense Fog.

H. R. Spencer, whose son, Herbert Lee Spencer, is an ensign upon the battleship Illinois, returned today from the scene of the return of the battleship fleet which made the tour of the world. Mr. Spencer saw the great naval review at Hampton roads, and says that despite the foggy weather, which made it difficult at times to see the ships, it was one of the most inspiring sights he ever witnessed.

Mr. Spencer was upon one of the chartered steamers, which, stationed inside the capes, commanded an excellent view of the flotilla of war vessels as they steamed by the president's yacht, the Mayflower. There were sixteen war vessels in the parade, and as each vessel passed the president's yacht it fired a salute of twenty-one guns.

Following the parade of the ships that made the trip of the world were the ships that have been placed in commission since the start of the cruise, and other ships that remained at home during the cruise.

"In the dull, hazy fog that hung over the water, the huge boats looked like specter ships as they crept up between the capes," said Mr. Spencer. "The fog was so dense that it was impossible to see the men on board the ships. You could catch the huge white outlines of the war vessels, could distinguish the sheets of flame as they fired their salute to the Mayflower, but could not get the detail of the parade. The thundering roar of the guns was deafening, as each vessel passed in review of the president on board the Mayflower. Despite the unfavorable weather, it was one of the most inspiring sights that an American citizen could see. It filled one with a pride in being an American, and it made you feel that America's place among the nations of the world is a great one, despite the fact that our rise among the world's powers has been very rapid.

"My son informed me that the reception the Japanese officers paid to the officers of the American fleet was a most cordial one, and that there is no desire or thought of war.

"The thing that most touched the American officers and sailors was the sight that greeted them as they entered the harbor at Yokohoma. Three vessels steamed out to meet the fleet. They were loaded with Japanese school children. In their hands they held American and Japanese national flags. And what do you think they were singing? American national songs in the English language.

"These children have been taught these songs for months, in honor of the coming of the American fleet. The sight was one that deeply touched the American men, and made them believe that after all has been said of the secret ambition of Japan, there is a deep regard for the friendship that this country has often shown for Japan.

"The fleet divided at Japan, part of the fleet going to China and some of the ships sailing to Manila. My son was upon the Illinois, which went to China. Later the Illinois went to Messiana, to attempt to rescue the bodies of the American counsel and his wife.

"The men of the American fleet seem to have had a wonderful voyage. They were entertained royally everywhere, and at every port they landed the greatest respect was shown for the American officers.

Mr. Spencer says one of the most brilliant assemblages of official Washington life ever gathered together greeted the return of the American officers and men. The brilliant reception was held after the ships had landed, and the home-coming of the officers and men will long be remembered by every officer and sailor who made the trip around the world.

Mrs. Livingston Returns From East.

Mrs. L. B. Livingston of the Livingston Glove shop has just returned from an extended trip to New York, where together with looking after her direct import business from France and Germany she also paid special attention to a line of new Easter gloves, which in point of novelty and variety of assortments will be an entirely new feature to Duluthians. Mrs. Livingston, through the agents of one of the largest glove manufacturers of the world has secured an exclusive line, which includes the new Apricot, Wistaria, Amethyst, Peach and champagne colors in all the new embroidered back effects and a line which will be second to none in America.

The Livingston Glove shop enjoys the distinction of being the largest exclusive establishment of its kind west of Chicago.

HORSES WERE OVERLOADED

Duluth Visitor Calls Attention to Two Instances of Cruelty.

"To the stranger who visits Duluth for the first time, one of the most touching spectacles which is seen on the Duluth streets, is the brutal manner in which the old, fat, honest, hard-working animals of many of the teamsters are cruelly overloaded," said Parker B. Howard of St. Paul this morning.

"In this respect nothing can be said in regard to the drivers of these teams, as my observations, which have covered a period of some time, have been particularly directed to the drivers, and in no instance has the driver done otherwise than offer to his team all his help and encouragement possible.

"On the other hand, it seems to be the fault of the 'man behind the guns' somewhere, who puts on the load for the driver to take care of, loading the wagon until it is beyond the power of the poor beasts.

"Two instances were noticed in the vicinity of the freight houses this morning on the Fifth avenue hill. One team had a load of iron bars, and another fine nut coal. The hill was icy, the horses were shod with shoes that no doubt had been used for some time and were not what is called sharp, and in the instance of the coal team, the wagon had extended sides, and the load was built up some eighteen inches above the wing of the wagon, which no doubt had been built for the purpose of carrying about the capacity of any ordinary pair of horses.

"It seemed to the crowd of onlookers that there was an evident intention of crowding on that particular load an extra amount which occasioned all the difficulty. It was plainly evident to all who noticed the incident that the load was beyond the power of the animals, which tried their best to do their part.

"In the case of the wagon loaded with iron, the conditions were the same exactly. The teams overcame the difficulty and mastered their loads with the help of a number of spectators who came to the rescue.

"But this does not cover up the seeming lack of intelligence of the man behind the gun, and it seems as if some action should be taken so that such conditions shall not exist, especially at this season of the year when our streets are icy."

The following poems were given:

The freshman class entertained at a "Poverty Party" yesterday afternoon in the drawing room. Every one coming in the oldest clothes she could find, made a rather comical-looking party. They had a very entertaining time, however.

* * *

The girls who will take part in the senior play this year have been chosen. A committee selected by the president of the class and Miss Long, chose the play and selected the girls to take part in it, instead of having the class vote on it, as has formerly been done. The girls are: Myrtle King, Alta Merritt, Clara Hanson, Zeta Dunn, Sadie Stevens, Margaret McLennan, Angela Fitzgerald and Hazel McKay. The play this year will be a light and pretty Japanese piece.

FILL POSITIONS IN RAILROAD OFFICES

During the week ten students of the Central Business college were selected to fill positions as stenographers and typewriters in the offices of the Canadian Northern railroad. Before receiving their appointments each student was given a severe test in typewriting on the L. C. Smith typewriter, which all passed successfully, in competition with students from other business colleges.

Owing to the ease with which Chartier Shorthand is acquired, students have much more time for typewriting, penmanship, etc., and this is one of the reasons why the graduates of the Central Business college are always preferred by the business men.

Besides the above, other graduates of the college left school during the past few days to fill positions as follows:

Edward Molasky, clerk for Canadian Northern railroad.
Roy Murnian, stenographer and assistant clerk for the Northwestern Fuel company.
Floretta Bujold, stenographer and assistant bookkeeper for John Wahl Candy company.
Warren Crosby, stenographer and bookkeeper for Earle & Bend, sugar merchants.
Emily Scharabon, stenographer for Whiting Lumber company.
Signe Olin, stenographer for Marshall-Wells Hardware company.
Ida Saltwick, stenographer for White Sewing Machine company.
Annie Peterson, stenographer for Bradley Advertising company.
Wilbur Magnussen, stenographer for First National bank, Hibbing, Minn.
Beatrice Brophy, stenographer for Canadian Northern railroad.

New classes will be organized on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week—March 1, 2 and 3; also on the Monday following, March 8.

The college offices will be open for students desiring to enroll, on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, from 8 a. m. till 9 p. m.

On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays the office will be open from 8 a. m. until 6 p. m.

NIGHT SCHOOL WILL CONTINUE UNTIL JUNE 1ST.

Day and Night Sessions. Central Business College, 30 East Superior street.

NOTE: The Central Business college is the only Commercial school on Superior street.

THE CARPENTER SALOON.

Oneota Woman Protests Against It Being Permitted to Run.

To the Editor of The Herald:

I want to call your attention to the Carpenter saloon case. Two years ago a petition was brought up before the council by more than two-thirds of the people living out here, protesting against the renewal of this man's license. It was overruled and the will of the people who live out here set to naught. Now this man has openly and wantonly broken the laws of the state by serving liquor to minors, not only once, but many times, and is making it his business to create an appetite for liquor among our boys in Oneota. We do not want any saloon out here, either Carpenter's or anyone else's. It is a breeding place for drunkards. Mr. Carpenter is surely ont to his business. He knows the old drunkard will die and business is business, so Mr. Carpenter cunningly invites the boys to become his patrons. The boy always imitates the man, and some boys don't know any better—have probably not been taught any better. We don't want any saloon out here in Oneota, more than we do at the East end or Lakeside. The Carpenter saloon is placed very conveniently near the coal docks, ore docks and lumber yards, and when pay night comes, many men who would not go to West Duluth or uptown to get a drink, find this saloon so handy they go in and get one drink and maybe end by leaving a good part of their week's pay, which ought by right go to their wives and children. But Mr. Carpenter must live; and you remember his statement to the mayor, that it was pay night and the saloon was crowded. The council should give this man, Carpenter, a chance to go out and earn his living by the sweat of his brow, and revoke his license and not let any other man come in here and plant his nefarious business and ruin our boys. We women protest with all our might, and we have a right to, for it concerns our children. I ask all the people living out here in this community to help rid Oneota of this place, and protest against any other man coming in here and opening up a saloon. ONEOTA.

ON THE IRON RANGES

VIRGINIA'S HOME RULE CHARTER IS COMPLETED

Commission of Fifteen After Six Months Finishes Its Work.

Gives Initiative and Referendum, Recall and Other Features.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The charter commission, appointed by the district court, has turned over the proposed charter to Mayor Hawkinson.

The new charter is called a home rule one and it is designed to meet the special needs of this city better than the charters which are drawn for cities of various sizes in different parts of the state.

It is proposed to divide the city into six wards, the First and Second wards to have their present boundaries, the Third ward to comprise that portion of the city bounded by Chestnut street on the north, Wyoming avenue on the west, Hemlock street on the south, and the city limits on the east. The Fourth ward will comprise the territory bounded by Chestnut street on the north, Central avenue on the west, Hemlock street on the south, and Wyoming avenue on the east. The Fifth ward will comprise that portion of the city bounded by Central avenue on the east, the city limits on the west, Chestnut street on the north and Hemlock street on the south. The Sixth ward will comprise all that portion south of Hemlock street.

To Have Nine Aldermen.

The council will be composed of one alderman from each ward and three at large, making nine in all.

If the charter is adopted by four-sevenths of those voting upon the question, it will go into effect, and the first city election will be in February, 1910, at which time the aldermen at large will be elected for two years, the ward aldermen for four years, and thereafter each alderman will be elected for four years. In this manner, the council will not change its entire membership at one time.

The initiative, referendum and recall have been adopted practicdally the same as now in the Two Harbors charter, and under this, any proposed ordinance can be put into effect by a vote of the people without the approval of the council and mayor. Also any ordinance proposed by the council and mayor must be submitted to the people for their approval or rejection, if a proper petition is filed to that effect. The recall permits any elective officer to be removed at any time in the following manner: When a petition, signed by 25 per cent of the votes cast for such office at the last election is filed with the city clerk, the clerk must then call a special election. If at such election the incumbent receives the highest vote cast, he remains in office, but if some other person receives the highest number of votes, that other person is thereby chosen, and the incumbent is removed. It would be impossible to secure such petition of 25 per cent of the votes at any time except in a very extreme case.

Police and Fire Commissioner.

In order to remove the police and fire departments from politics, a police and fire commission of five members is established; one to be appointed each year and each to hold office for five years. This commission is given the control and management of these departments. The city clerk is made the clerk of the commission, and it can purchase such apparatus and supplies as are needed for the maintenance of the departments, but the appropriation of money for the use of these departments is entirely under the control of the council, and, it is a duty of the council, in its discretion, to provide necessary real estate and buildings for the use of these departments.

As to public improvements, it is proposed to have lots assessed for all sidewalks and later sanitary sewers, and not more than 40 per cent of the cost of grading, paving and curbing any street in front of such lots. The balance of these improvements, and all other improvements to be paid out of the "permanent improvement fund" of this city. Some range cities pay all expenses without any special assignments. Some cities in other parts of the state go to the other extreme and pay all by local assessment. Here it is proposed to follow a middle course, as above outlined.

If the charter is adopted, the city engineer will have complete supervision of the streets, and the street commission will act under and with him, quite similar to the way the health officer and his assistant now work.

No Perpetual Franchises.

As to franchise, a provision is made that no perpetual franchise can be granted, and that no exclusive franchise can be granted except after a vote of the people, and in that event for not more than twenty-five years. This follows the present state law.

The commission recommends that a special election be called to pass upon the proposed charter. This will probably be held in about four weeks. The members of the board who prepared this charter have given their time and energy to this work for six months without any pay, each being anxious and willing to do his best, with the assistance of Louis M. Osborn, attorney for the commission.

The members of the commission are M. E. Fanning, Otto A. Poirier, John Costin, D. E. Cuppernull, W. E. Hannaford, C. C. Butler, Edw. C. A. Johnson, Thomas Gill, C. E. Moore, B. F. Britts, Gust Johnson, Dr. C. B. Lenont, H. J. George, W. H. Eaton, D. B. McDonald.

SEEK SITE FOR A COURTHOUSE

Many Virginians Favor Proposed Park Site for Such a Propose.

Virginia, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The commission composed of Edward C. A. Johnson, Alexander Reid, E. M. Tredway, J. A. Kennedy and William Rooney, recently appointed by the city council to appraise the lots in block 43 to be acquired for a park site, will meet at the city clerk's office Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of organization. Later a public meeting will be held, an examination of the land made and a report as to its value to be awarded the owners of the lots will be made to the council.

The park board is very anxious to have this site acquired, so that improvements may be started early in the spring and work on an attractive park for the city commenced.

"Many citizens are strongly in favor of the city acquiring this site," said Attorney Otto A. Poirier, secretary of the park board, today, "as it is almost certain that Virginia will have a county courthouse in the not far distant future, and that a suitable site for it ought to be acquired at once. This block would be an ideal site for a courthouse, and the park board feels that the property should be owned by the city to offer to the county when the time is ripe."

EVELETH HIGH IS GETTING ON

Walls of Second Story of Structure Are Nearly Completed.

Eveleth, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The new high school building is approaching completion, the walls of the second story being almost up.

Along both ends there will be wings, so that the building when complete will form an H with the cross pieces running parallel to Jones street, on which street the building will face. There will be about seventeen large rooms, a couple of laboratories, a wood-turning room, a manual training room, a domestic science room, and a sewing room. The last four rooms will be in the basement. A change may be made in the plans to allow of a gymnasium, which has been promised the pupils if they would attend the gymnasium classes in the M. E. church that are going on now regularly.

In the center part of the second floor will be a large auditorium, similar to the one in the old building, with a stage. There is a report that a separate building will be built for the manual training department, in which a gymnasium will be located, but this has not been verified.

"There's a Reason"

TWO BAD FIRES ON SAME NIGHT

"Dry" at Meadow Mine Burns and Aurora Store Destroyed.

Aurora, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Aurora was visited by two fires last evening, one of which for a time threatened to sweep the business portion of the town.

About 7 o'clock the "dry" at the Meadow mine was discovered to be on fire, and the department made the mile run in quick time. The fire was a stubborn one, but after two hours of fighting the flames were subdued. The "dry" was practically ruined, although a new addition to it was saved. The clothes of the men down in the mine on the night shift were all burned, or so badly soaked with water, to be useless. The fire started from a candle left by one of the miners.

About 11 o'clock a gasoline lamp in August Toriatti's jewelry store exploded, and the building was immediately a mass of flames. The firemen, after a stubborn fight, quenched the flames, but not before the structure was badly gutted.

The fire was a one-story affair, situated in the center of the business part of the town. Toriatti had no time to place his jewelry in the safe and will suffer a loss of about $3,000, with practically no insurance. The building was owned by John Mattson.

HOUSE VOTES DOWN MOVE AIMED AT STEEL MERGER

immediately. This final report the president will transmit to congress before the end of the present session.

Conservation Again.

The declaration of principles adopted by the North American conservation conference, which has just concluded its work here, in which certain recommendations are made for the conservation of the natural resources of the United States, Canada and Mexico, has been transmitted by President Roosevelt to congress.

The declaration points out that natural resources are not confined by the boundary lines that separate nations. "We agree that no nation acting alone can adequately conserve them, and we recommend the adoption of concurrent measures for conserving the material foundations of the welfare of all the nations concerned, and for ascertaining their location and extent.

The president acknowledges "with sincere gratification," the prompt and courteous response of the governments invited to participate in the conference and the "broad, statesmanlike and productive attitude and action of the conference itself." After pointing out that the conference not only performed with marked efficiency and entire unaminity, the important duties which evolved upon it, he declares that "it has suggested a still wider field of usefulness." The president then refers to the suggestion made by the conference for an international conference on conservation and says that, acting upon this suggestion, he has addressed such an invitation to the nations of the world "in the confident belief that such a meeting will foster the interests of every nation, will injure those of none, and will confirm and strengthen in us all the belief that the good of each is likewise the common good of all."

Agriculutre Bill Passes.

The passage of the agricultural appropriation bill by the senate followed an extended debate on the forestry service, which occupied the entire session. As passed the measure appropriates $13,075,716, which is an increase of $191,890 over the bill as passed by the house.

The senate rejected the increase of $500,000 in the appropriation for the forestry service as recommended by the committee and a curious parliamentary situation arose Mr. Heyburn had offered an amendment directing the secretary of agriculture to eliminate from all forest reserves the public lands not timbered, and to restore such public lands to location and purchase under the land laws of the United States and the amendment had been accepted by Senator Warren, in charge of the bill.

When the amendment was laid before the senate, Mr. Flint of California made a point of order against it, which was sustained by the vice president.

"If I had known that the amendment would not be voted on, I would have never concurred to the unanimous consent agreement,' declared Mr. Heyburn, whereupon the vice president put the question to the senate, which by a vote of 17 to 35, declared the amendment out of order.

Senator Carter's amendment to reduce the appropriation for the general maintenance of the forestry service, from $2,986,000, as passed by the house, to $3,160,000, was laid on the table by a vote of 32 to 36.

Democratic Caucus Called.

A call for a caucus of the Democrats of the next house for 10 o'clock next Tuesday forenoon, March 15, was issued today by Representative Clayton, chairman of the present Democratic organization. This caucus will select a Democratic candidate for speaker to be voted on two hours later, and also candidates for other offices of the house. "A full and prompt attendance will be a good way to begin our work in the new congress," the call concludes.

The provision in the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill that there shall be no ambassadorship created unless it has been provided for by act of congress, has been agreed to by the conferees. A full agreements on all of the amendments was reported and the report was adopted by both houses.

Calling attention to denunciations that have been directed toward men who have cut timber on the public lands in mining districts, Senator Teller of Colorado, in the senate yesterday declared that this timber had been cut legally and had yielded the government in the precious minerals many times the value of the timber used. He said he had drafted and procured the passage of the act of 1878, which allowed the people of the West to do what they had been doing without any law in the cutting of timber on public land for the use of the mining camps.

Sundry Civil Bill Passed.

After having dragged along for a week, the sundry civil appropriation bill, carrying in the aggregate $137,000,000 was passed by the house with numerous material amendments. The debate waxed warm when Bartlett of Pennsylvania, and Hitchcock of Nebraska offered amendments which, had they been adopted, would have forced the attorney general to prosecute the United States Steel corporation for absorbing the Tennesee Coal & Iron company upon the ground that the merger was in violation of the anti-trust law.

A resolution was adopted appointing a committee of four to report whether the remarks of Mr. Cook of Colorado, delivered Thursday, attacking the president, should be expunged from the record.

The ship subsidy bill was reported, the conference reports on the penal code and the diplomatic and consular appropriation bills were presented, the conference reports on the District of Columbia, and Indian appropriation bills were agreed to and the naval bill again was returned to conference.

Merger Is Scored.

In speaking to his amendment, Mr. Hitchcock declared that the absorption of the Tennessee Coal & Iron company was a "gigantic merger, spectacular and far-reaching in its character, which practically accomplishes the purpose of creating a monopoly in the steel interests of the United States." He said that investigation had showed that the panic was not stayed by the merger, but that the Morgan banks forced the Tennessee Coal & Iron company to the wall in order to secure the interests of a rival concern.

An assertion by Mr. Tawney that the amendment was offered simply to provide opportunity for political speeches brought a reply from Mr. Sherley of Kentucky. He said that if there was any politics in the proposition "the politics gets into it by virtue of the action of an executive without warrant of law." If there was one indictment that lay against the government, he said, it was that the laws were not enforced impartially against violators. Whether the action of the president was in good or bad faith, he argued, it was taken without right, and the facts developed had shown that the action was not a wise one. "We have heard a good deal about the 'square deal,' he said, "but have seen less of it."

The provision to pay the Catholic church in Porto Rico $120,000 in settlement of all property matters in dispute between the church and the United States was stricken out on a point of order by Mr. Garrett of Tennessee.

On a similar point by Mr. Douglas of Ohio, the paragraph authorizing proposals for raising the battleship Maine in Havana harbor went out of the bill, against the appeals of Mr. Sulzer of New York, who said it was a national disgrace to continue to allow the wreck to remain and not to take out the sixty-three bodies still in the hulk.

"We would better quit remembering the Maine," exclaimed Mr. Douglas. The bodies that were not taken out, he said, were not nowadays, but food for fishes. To bring their ghastly remains home, he said, would simply be the reopening in the hearts of their families a sore which, "thank God, is now substantially removed."

PROMISED MEASURES FAIL TO BE PASSED.

Keep Those Little Soldiers Healthy and Strong

— Those little soldiers in your blood, known to scientists as white corpuscles, whose important duty is to defend you against disease germs that attack the red corpuscles and the bodily tissues.

You are helpless unless they are in condition to fight for you. This fact is fully established.

Nothing is more important than to make and keep them healthy and strong, especially when there is exposure to such diseases as the grip, typhoid fever, spotted fever, smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria, cholera, malaria, tuberculosis or consumption;—and when is there not more or less exposure to such diseases?

How shall you know whether they are healthy and strong?—

By your looks and feelings.

Eruptions, scrofula, eczema, catarrh, rheumatism, anemia, languor, that tired feeling, loss of appetite, nervousness, general debility, are all indications that the little soldiers in your blood are not in condition to fight for you.

They are just as surely indications that you should begin taking Hood's Sarsaparilla at once—the medicine whose great distinction is that it makes and keeps the blood of the right quality and quantity.

And you should take it faithfully, according to the directions.

"By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla my blood has been purified, my strength has been built up, and with the general improvement in health, my nerves are steady and under good control. I would not be placed back where I was before I began taking this medicine for $500." ARTHUR F. WILSON, 1 Perkins St., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

Hood's Sarsaparilla effects its wonderful cures, not simply because it contains sarsaparilla, but because it combines the utmost remedial values of more than 20 different ingredients, each greatly strengthened and enriched by this peculiar combination. These ingredients are the very remedies that successful physicians prescribe for the same diseases and ailments. There is no real substitute for Hood's Sarsaparilla. If urged to buy any preparation said to be "just as good," you may be sure it is inferior, costs less to make, and yields the dealer a larger profit.

Telephone Talks

Believing that exact knowledge promotes co-operation, The Duluth Telephone Company is publishing a series of brief expositions of some phases of telephony for the benefit of itself, and as it hopes, for the benefit of its Subscribers and Patrons.

"TROUBLE" GREAT AND SMALL

Telephone "trouble" is sometimes disconcerting and always annoying. Generally it is unavoidable, though a telephone system is no more absolutely perfect than any other human undertaking, and faults are bound to crop out once in a while. What makes telephone "trouble" a peculiarly difficult thing for the company to deal with, though, is that in very many cases there is no way of knowing that it exists until it is reported by the telephone user who runs against it.

The mechanical equipment and outside plant of the telephone system is extremely intricate and sensitive. The switchboard and its accompanying apparatus in the central office contain hundreds, and in large exchanges thousands of miles of wire; there are thousands, and in the bigger type of modern equipment millions of soldered connections; each circuit has anywhere from a dozen to 500 or 600 ramifications; and some of the auxiliary mechanisms are extremely delicate in adjustment. Most troubles arise somewhere in this maze of equipment—which is fortunate in one way, because a great majority of them are thus detected and remedied not only without inconveniencing the subscriber, but without his even knowing that they ever occurred. But some of them, as has been said, cannot very well be discovered by any one but the telephone user, since they may appear to the operator simply as a subscriber's failure to answer or, if they affect the signalling devices, for instance, may not appear to her at all.

The sturdy looking pole lines and solidly built underground system would not seem, perhaps, to offer many chances for "trouble." As a matter of fact, though, they necessarily have many vulnerable points. Every time the limb of a tree, or any stray object that may have been caught in the foliage, touches a telephone wire it interferes with transmission; and if the interference is sufficient it absolutely cuts off service for the time being. Yet with the restrictions many towns and cities place on trimming trees this difficulty is unavoidable.

Though cables are naturally less susceptible to interference than open wire, still they cannot be absolutely protected whether they are overhead or underground. If the lead sheath of a cable is pierced by a hole no bigger than a pin would make, and moisture gets in, the whole bunch of wires enclosed, which many number from a dozen to 1,200, will be put out of business sooner or later. The curiosity of squirrels and rats, the carelessness of laborers working on other underground construction—indeed, a score of unpreventable causes—may instantly ruin a telephone cable containing a large number of circuits. Besides, here and there cables must be brought to points, and the junctions in cable boxes on pole lines or in conduit manholes afford other opportunities for things going wrong.

This gives an idea of a few—a very few—of the chances for trouble in a complicated plant of vast extent. The wonder is, really, that interruptions are as few as they are. With all the difficulties to be met, the telephone company has so organized its work of maintenance and repair that the records show that even in large telephone centers, where the plant is most complicated, the individual subscriber's service is not interrupted, even momentarily, oftener than once in six months on the average.

Whenever there is "trouble" of any sort the Duluth company, for its own sake as well as for the sake of its subscribers, is anxious to get right after it. The longer "trouble" exists, the more difficult and expensive it is to repair and the greater the loss of business to the company. So it is a distinct favor to the Duluth company to have "trouble" reported promptly, and for making such reports the manager of any exchange may be called without charge from any subscriber's "station" or from any public pay station.

UNION LABOR

FORGOTTEN STATUTE

Trades Assembly Considers Arbitration Law Passed in 1895.

The Delegates Are Given Roast for Lack of Patriotism.

That among the labor laws of Minnesota there has been a law in existence since 1895 authorizing the governor to appoint a state board of arbitration, which shall have in its power to settle all strikes and lockouts between employers and employes, was brought to light at the meeting of the Federated Trades' assembly last evening by Richard Jones.

Mr. Jones said that he believed that very few knew that such a law existed, and if it had been known during the Duluth lockout it might have been of great benefit to the labor organizations engaged in the struggle in bringing about a meeting and agreement.

Mr. Jones read the law which, he said, he believed to be still unrepealed. The law provides that the governor may appoint a state arbitration board, to consist of three members, one from the ranks of the employers, one from the employes, and the other to be a disinterested party from neither side. Each member of the board should serve on it for two years. For the support of such a board, an appropriation of $2,000 was allowed. It should be the duty of this board to investigate all labor disputes, and report within ten days to the clerk of the district court.

Mr. Jones said that he believed that if such a law exists, it is the right of organized labor to know about it, and get the benefit of it. He said it might hav been of great use in the recent lockout.

The delegates to the assembly from the Carpenters' and the Painters' unions said that their unions are still fighting the lockout, and that the law might still be of use to them.

Henry Perrault suggested that the matter be taken up by the executive committee and its merits invesaigated. Edward Blackwood stated he had known of the law during the lockout and had referred it to the board of governors of the Structural alliance, who had failed to appreciate what benefits might be derived from it.

Thomas O'Mara told a hard-luck story concerning the effects of the lockout on the local building laborers' union and of the difficulties they are now in.

He said that the national organization had promised each of the members a strike benefit of $4 a week during the lockout, but had failed to keep its promise. As a result of this breach of faith with the local, a large number of the local's members had deserted the ranks of the union, so that only a small part of a once large and prosorganization now remains. They are very much back in dues to the national organization and are not in good standing. The deserters are now anxious to get a new charter and make a new start. To get this, the national organization asks $1.50 a head, or a total of $150 from the local. Mr. O'Mara said he did not think this right, as the national organization had failed to aid them as they had promised during the lockout, and thus had been the direct means of their present difficulties. The following committee was appointed to look into the charges brought by Delegate O'Mara: P. Morandow, H. Perrault and W. Perry.

This brought up the matter of union cards and how they could be obtained, since the Building Trades' alliance had gone out of existence. One of the delegates stated that he believed the American Federation of Labor is planning on installing at Duluth a building trades section, which will correspond with the alliance.

Last evening's meeting was the first since the so-called labor mass meeting at Eagle's hall on Feb. 12, in memory of the birth of Abraham Lincoln, and so was the first opportunity for the executive committee, which was in charge of that meeting, to bring down their wrath on the delegates for their lack of patriotism in not turning out to the meeting in a body.

Edward Blackwood, of the committee, soundly scored the delegates in a report on the meeting to the assembly, for the manner in which they failed to attend the meeting. The report was full of biting sarcasm. He said where they had expected a crowd that would make necessary an overflow meeting, there had only been about 100 in the audience, and of these only about twelve were delegates. The committee had expended $33 on the celebration, which was at the rate of about $3 for every delegate who attended. Next year, said Mr. Blackwood, if any celebration is held on Lincoln's birthday it will be held in the office of the secretary, which is about fourteen by eight feet, and no attempts will be made as there were this year, to get the armory for the meeting.

A vote of thanks was extended to the men who spoke at the Lincoln birthday meeting.

Ex-Warden N. F. Boucher of the North Dakota penitentiary has been before the investigating committee during the present week giving testimony concerning the operations of the institution during the years he was at its head. The hearings are being held behind closed doors, and it is expected that they will be concluded this evening. The committee has given out nothing as to its findings, except the report made several days ago, but it is understood that there will be some interesting disclosures. The committee will, in its next report, which is expected on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, either recommend that the present committee be continued, or that another committee be named to take up the work.

The senate committee which investigated the office of Superintendent of Schools Stockwell will report on Monday. The accountant employed by the committee has made a thorough examination of the office, with especial reference to the disposition of fees collected during the last six years. The accounts are said to be in poor shape in some instances, and the report of the committee is expected to be somewhat sensational.

This investigation grew out of certain newspaper articles bearing upon the report of Supt. Stockwell. This document fails to show any account of the collection or disbursement of the funds, which totals about $5,000 per year, being turned into the office on various kinds of teachers' certificates.

The house and the senate appropriation committees, after having practically reached an agreement as to the appropriations, fell out on three items and as a result a conference committee will likely be named to settle the differences. It is on the appropriations for the state university, the state scientific school and the Valley City normal that the differences have arisen. The house committee would give the university $189,000 as against $181,000 allowed by the senate committee. For the Valley City normal, the house allows $155,000 as against $135,000 by the senate, while on the state science school there is a difference of $5,000, the house giving $60,000 and the senate $55,000.

Grassick, secretary of the state board of health; Dr. Fannie Dunn Quain of Bismarck; C. J. Lord of Cando and Governor Burke.

Senator Carmack's body, did you see a hat?"

"Not until after we put the body in the dead-wagon, when some one handed me a green hat and said it was his."

"What did you do with it?"

"I do not recall. I gave it to someone."

"Was it Carmack's hat?"

"I understand it was not the senator's."

"How do you know?"

"I never saw him wear a green hat, and the hat he wore a few hours before was different. It was a brown derby."

The witness told, upon hearing Senator Carmack had been shot, he ran from the capitol, a block away, to the scene of the tragedy.

"You came down Seventh avenue on the same side of the street that John Sharpe, one of the defendants, claims he went up, toward the capitol?"

There was a chorus of objections from the defense, but the court ruled that he could tell upon which side of the street he walked, and that the jury could deside on what side John Sharpe had walked. The state then took the plat of the scene of the murder and had the witness point out which side he traversed on his way. "Was it a smoky afternoon?"

"It was a most unusually smoky day. Forest fires had been burning."

"Could you see a blue steel pistol half a block away?"

"I could not."

For Those Pains

"Cardui Did Wonders"

"I am getting along fine and feel splendid, since taking Cardui," writes Mrs. Stella Halquist, of Laporte, Minn. "I am not troubled, like I used to be, with backache, headache, and those pains and that tired-out feeling. I had other female troubles too, but they have almost disappeared now. I cannot praise Cardui enough, for it did wonders for me."

Cardui can be depended upon to help you, too, if you will give it a fair trial. Consisting only of pure, vegetable ingredients, it has nothing harmful in its composition, but acts gently, and in a natural way, upon the womanly organs, which it has been found, in thousands of cases, to restore to health, after other medicines had failed.

Women who need strength, should find it in Cardui, for Cardui is a strength-building female tonic.

Women who need health, should find it in Cardui, for Cardui has been found to cure female disorders, by its curative action on the female organs.

Pain, weakness and disease should all disappear, when you take Cardui persistently, until it has had a chance to thoroughly act upon your entire system.

Try Cardui.

FIRE FOLLOWS EAGLES' SMOKER

Lighted Cigar Stub Starts Blaze After Smoldering All Night.

Fire damaged the Eagles' hall, West Superior street, to the amount of about $150, at 7 o'clock this morning. An informal smoker and musical entertainment was held at the clubrooms of the lodge last evening, and it is believed that the fire started from a lighted cigar stub that was thrown upon the floor of the hall, which was covered with sawdust. But little damage was done by the blaze.

RECOUNT VOTE IN SECOND WARD

Storey as alderman from that ward. The recount was asked for by N. J. Mueller, the unsuccessful candidate, who, according to the first official count, received seven votes less than Mr. Storey. The commissioners will begin the recounting of the votes at once.

WORK MAY GO FOR NAUGHT

Gilpin Wants Exemption From New Agricultural School Bill.

S. W. Gilpin, county superintendent of schools, has gone to St. Paul to urge the representatives in the legislature from this section of the state to secure an amendmnt to the Johnson agricultural school bill, which has already passed the house.

The bill provides for state aid for six agricultural schools and repeals the law of 1905, under which plans have already been made for an agricultural school for St. Louis county. The vote of the people at the last election and the action of the county board authorizing the erection of the school would go for naught under the bill, and Supt. Gilpin will try to secure an amendment exempting from the provisions of the bill those counties, which have already taken action under the enactment of 1905.

If the amendment is not secured, a delay of two years will be necessary in establishing the proposed school in St. Louis county and it will be necessary to submit the question to the voters again in 1910.

SAYS HE LIVES WITH AFFINITY

Mrs. Emma Fischer Asks Divorce From Erring Husband.

In a complaint filed yesterday with the clerk of the district court, Mrs. Emma Fischer claims that her husband, William Fischer, is leading a dual life. She claims that he deserted her May 10, 1906, and in July of the same year married a woman in Superior. Since that time, she says he has been living with his "affinity" and neglecting her. She asks for a divorce and the restoration of her maiden name, Emma LeVigne.

WAS TIRED OF LIVING

Mrs. Hilma Gramross Fires Two Bullets Into Body.

Is Not Expected to Recover From Her Wounds.

Mrs. Hilma Gramross, a Finnish woman, 24 years of age, shot herself yesterday at her home, 21 West Fifth street. Late in the afternoon she was taken to St. Mary's hospital, and was still alive this morning, but attending physicians expressed the belief that she could not recover. The bullet from a 32-caliber revolver penetrated her liver.

"I've shot myself," said Mrs. Gramross to the woman who found her, Miss Lema Mieme, "and I am very weak. I wish you would tell Hjalmar Mattson that I am tired of life." Mattson is an employe at the Spalding hotel.

The woman attempted suicide about noon, and nothing was known of it until 3 o'clock, when Miss Mieme, a roomer at the same house, went to Mrs. Gramross' room and found her suffering great pain. Mrs. Kunnelkus, who resides in the same building, says she heard two pistol shots before noon, but thought nothing of them.

Miss Mieme called an ambulance and had Mrs. Gramross conveyed to St. Marys' hospital. Doctors Hamel and Lovell were summoned, and did everything possible to relieve the woman, but said that in spite of any assistance rendered, she would die.

Friends of the attempted suicide could give little information about her. They said she had relatives in Finland, but none in America. She was married while a mere girl, and her husband was killed in a mine disaster at Chisholm two years ago. They had no children.

Mrs. Gramross went to a dance Thursday night, and seemed in her usual good spirits up to the time of the shooting. Some of her friends express the belief that disappointment in love was the cause of the woman's attempt upon her life.

BREATH ODORS REMOVED BY CHARCOAL

Onions, Tobacco, Decaying Food, Alcohol, Stomach Gases and Impurities Foul the Breath, Charcoal Purifies It.

A Trial Package of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges Sent Free By Mail.

The stomach and digestive canal of man fills with gases from fermenting and decaying food. Such gases impregnate the breath, filter through the sytem, spread disease and in large quantities extend the stomach so that it shuts off heart action and death sometimes results.

Pure, simple willow charcoal absorbs gas at once and stops impure food fermentation. It sweetens the stomach, kills the effect of all odors such as liquor, tobacco, onions, etc., or at least prevents them from causing impurities to arise.

The willow is renowed for its curative properties and ancient legendary lore is filled wits its use by barbarians and civilized men. As early as 500 B. C., the ancient Chaldeans were sagely curing disease by charcoal and every monastery of the Old World healed the sick and cured the drunkard by using powdered willow charcoal.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are pure willow charcoal, compressed with honey into a delicious lozenge. They contain nothing but sweet willow charcoal and honey. One may eat a box of them and feel only benefit from so doing. Two or three after a meal will be a sufficient guard against bad breath and the same amount eaten just before bedtime will insure a pure breath upon arising the next morning.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges tone up the blood, the liver and the stomach. They are great laxatives also, but eating large numbers of them does not increase their effect in a painful manner upon the bowels.

They are gentle, powerful and pure and their popularity and tremendous sale give them the stamp of public approval. Go to your druggist today and buy a box, price 25 cents, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 200 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

PROTESTS AGAINST AWARD TO THE TOBACCO TRUST.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Representative Lamb of Virginia, representing independent tobacco men, has protested to President Roosevelt against the award to the American Tobacco company of a contract to supply the navy with 220,000 pounds of chewing tobacco for the next fiscal year. The protest is based on the ground that the government has just been engaged in exposing the doings of this big trust. The American Tobacco company, which holds this year's contract, was the lowest bidder.

tice of taxing officials, from local assessors up to the state board of equalization, to violate this law. Various percentages have been used, running from a very small one up to a few that are very large. The average for the state is estimated by the tax commission at 43 per cent. In the cities, where there is need for increased expenditures and for bonds, the amount of which is based upon assessed valuation, the ratio is often very high. In the country it is often very low, and farming property is let off about as lightly as anything in the state.

The tax commission is determined that it will obey the law, and if the law says property is to be assessed at full value, that mandate will be obeyed. So far as the distribution of the tax burden is concerned, this would do no harm, and it would right many of the present injustices. But there are complications.

For instance, such an increase in valuation would add very largely to the possibilities of issuing bonds in many of the communities. Bond issues are limited by law to a certain percentage of assessed valuation, and Duluth and many other communities keep pretty well up to the limit. A large increase in assessed valuation would allow large increases in bonds, and that is something many taxpayers regard with apprehension.

Again, many salaries of county officers are based upon assessed valuation, and with a sudden jump of the valuations from their present percentages up to their full worth, there would be automatic increases in the pay of public officers, adding unnecessarily to the burden of taxation.

So the tax commission, wishing to establish a uniform and honest system of assessment, without bringing about such objectionable revolutions, proposed a valuation at full worth, with an assessment at 50 per cent. This would bring about some reductions, but many more increases. These increases, however, would not be great enough to affect salaries and bond issues materially.

The fear of such results, however, and the knowledge that the proposed plan would bring up the assessments of farm property in many sections, led to the adoption of the amendment which made the prescribed percentage 40 per cent instead of 50 per cent. With this amendment, the bill was recommended to pass.

The fact that this will lead to many decreases in valuation, as in the case of banks, which are now valued at half their actual worth, and of city property, some of which is valued well over 50 per cent, will make ample material on which to base a fight to restore the original figure of 50 per cent.

During the discussion it developed that the average assessed valuation of lands in some of the farming counties of Southern Minnesota is less than 33 1-3 per cent of the lowest price at which lands can be bought in those counties. Representative Dorsey of McLeod county, for instance, pointed out that in his own county the average assessed value of land is about $16 an acre, and he said that none could be bought for less than $45. Pine county's average is a little over $4, and Mr. Dorsey said that on that basis, considering actual conditions, Pine county is assessed ten times the rate in vogue in his own county. He recognized that there was great injustice in this, and thought it ought to be corrected.

Another bill recommended by the tax committee was that by Representative Dorsey, designed to insure accurate valuation of stocks of merchandise. It provides that every merchant, while making his return to the assessor, shall file a sworn statement of the amount of insurance carried on his stock. Obviously, if a merchant makes a return of a valuation of $1,000 on his stock, and it appears that it is insured for $10,000, the assessor will see that somethig is wrong with the return.

A third measure, made possible by the adoption of the tax amendments, recently placed in the Constitution by the supreme court of this state after the people had twice rejected it, was that by Representative Dalzell, increasing the exemption on household goods from $100 to $200. This change is based upon the excellent theory that household goods should be touched lightly by the taxing officials, and that the burden now borne by them should be shifted to property better able to bear it

The house committee on railroads yesterday afternoon had a hearing on the bill requiring railroads to install 1,000-candle power headlights on their locomotives, a measure in the interests of the safety of the railroad employes and patrons. The bill passed the senate after a hard fight, and a similar fight is being made against it by the railroads before the house committee. Dennis J. Hayes of Two Harbors, legislative agent of the locomotive engineers, who was responsible for putting the bill through the senate, appeared before the house committee. No action was taken, and the committee will witness a demonstration of this particular kind of light in the railroad yards here Monday night. Prominent in the opposition to the bill are the makers of acetylene lights, who claim theirs to be as good as the electric headlights.

The house committee on appropriations has recommended for passage the bill by the house committee on roads and bridges increasing the annual appropriation for state aid to roads. Two years ago the legislature, for the first time, tried a direct appropriation in addition to the amount produced by the state road tax. This was fixed at $200,000 a year, which was distributed by the legislature.

This year the house road committee fixed the appropriation at $400,000 a year, and presented a bill to that end. The appropriations committee, to which it was referred, fixed it at $300,000 a year, and recommended it to pass as amended.

Senator Hackney introduced in the senate yesterday afternoon a second bill, changed somewhat from his previous measure, providing for a correspondence school of agriculture under the state agricultural school.

This project is attracting much favorable interest, and its author has a commendatory letter from Prof. W. M. Hays, assistant secretary of agriculture, formerly of Minnesota. The bill provides for the creation of a division of agricultural extension and home education in the state agricultural school, and appropriates $74,000 for that purpose, a third of which is to be used in distributing prizes calculated to attract widespread interest in the course. There is to be a correspondence school of agriculture open to all residents of the state, and bulletins of useful information are to be prepared and distributed to everybody interested. To help the school, county treasurers are required to furnish names and addresses of all farmers in their respective counties.

Senator Dunn yesterday afternoon introduced in the senate a bill giving physicians called to make autopsies for coroners $6 a day and mileage, and providing that county boards can pay more where unusual conditions make it proper.

Under the provisions of a bill by Senator Elwell of Minneapolis, introduced yesterday, cities of the first class are allowed to issue bonds to the amount of $400,000, a quarter of which is to be devoted to buying land for park purposes.

Broader powers for the state tax commission in looking after property which has escaped assessment or has been under-assessed, are provided in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator Hardy of St. Paul. The commission is empowered to appoint special assessors and deputies to conduct this work.

The senate committee on forestry received a communication yesterday afternoon from ex-Governor Van Sant, urging the adoption of a resolution asking congress to abolish the tariff on lumber in the interests of forest preservation in this state. Resolutions from the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs approving the plan of having a state tax of three-tenths of a mill for forestry purposes, were received.

The senate game and fish committee approved a bill forbidding the killing of game in national forests reserves. It is already forbidden in state forest reserves.

The senate judiciary committee had a hearing yesterday afternoon on the bill prohibiting trading stamps. A similar bill has been approved by the house committee on commerce and retail trade

The Robertson bill providing for the selection of county superintendents of schools by county school boards, empowered to impose educational qualifications, which was a special order for yesterday afternoon in the house, was postponed until 2 p. m. March 5.

The state railroad and warehouse commission yesterday sent to the legislature a letter recommending a law which will allow North Dakota grain raisers representation on the boards of grain appeals at Minneapolis and Duluth. As the Constitution stands in the way, the state cannot give these representatives votes or salaries, but one man on each board will be given a chance to oversee the work and to participate in deliberations over appeals from grain grading.

Neither house is in session today, both having adjourned until Monday morning. There was opposition to the adjournment in the house, many members believing that they ought to be at work today, but the motion to adjourn prevailed, and nearly everybody went home.

By the way, the pre-session theory that the lack of free passes would stop long week-end adjournments and keep most of the members here over Sunday has not worked out as expected. There are about as many week-end adjournments as ever, and fully as many members who go home regularly as there were when the going home could be done on passes.

MR. AND MRS. DAVID THOMPSON.

Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson, of Peekskill, N. Y., praise Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as the "best tonic" for the old. Mr. Thompson is 76 years old and Mrs. Thompson is 73. Both are strong and vigorous, thanks to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, which cured Mrs. Thompson of dyspepsia, after years of intense suffering.

"Mrs. Thompson and myself have used Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey the last year or more and find it the best tonic for the aged. We are in the best of health, and I myself can do a good day's work every day. I am in my 76th year and take the tonic twice a day.

"My wife had suffered from stomach trouble for years and tried many kinds of medicine, until two years ago, when she thought she would try Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. She was relieved at once. She still continues to take it and says there is nothing like it for dyspepsia.

"Mrs. Thompson is 73 years old and boasts of the best of health since taking your medicinal whiskey."—Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

Many men and women, who have almost reached the fourscore mark, tell the same story as Mr. and Mrs. Thompson about what Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done toward renewing their youth and keeping them vigorous, hale and hearty and in possession of all their faculties. As a leading doctor says, the secret of the whole thing is that Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, if taken as prescribed, drives out all disease germs, invigorates the brain, enriches the blood, quickens the circulation and prevents decay and old age.

This wonderful remedy has been extolled throughout the world for what it has done for suffering humanity. The success of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey in curing disease has caused many unreliable dealers to put up substitutes and imitations with which to fool the people, claiming that their substitutes are just as good as Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

CAUTION.—When you ask your druggist, grocer or dealer for Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey be sure you get the genuine. It's the only absolutely pure medicinal malt whiskey and is sold in large sealed bottles only; never in bulk. Price $1.00. Look for the trade-mark, the "Old Chemist," on the label, and make sure the seal over the cork is unbroken. Write Consulting Physician, Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. THE GOSPEL OF LARGE NAVY

Field Secretary of the Navy League Visits Duluth.

Arthur H. Dadmun, field secretary of the Navy League of the United States, is in Duluth upon the mission of interesting the business men, the members of the naval militia and others in the needs of the country, both as to an increased navy and a merchant marine.

Mr. Dadmun holds the theory that a strong navy is the best assurance this country can have that it will not be forced into war. The members of the Navy League of America are in favor of an increased navy, a navy that will rank with that of any other great power, and they believe that this will be the very best policy that the United States can adopt to safeguard itself against any international trouble.

The members of the Navy League hold in equal importance the increase of the American merchant marine. Mr. Dadmun pointed out that American vessels carry 100,000 tons less marine today than they did in 1810.

The secretary of the league points out that through subsidies the foreign nations, England, Germany and France, have driven the American commerce from the seas. America has no direct steamship line with Brazil.

If this country does not encourage American vessels, Mr. Dadmun points out that the South American trade will be captured by the vessels of other countries.

Horace Porter is president of the league. The late Thomas Lowry of Minneapolis was vice president. The league has over 5,000 members. Mr. Dadmun is visiting every large city in the country, establishing branches of the league, and interesting business men in the serious problem of the lack of a merchant marine.

NORTHERNS ARE VICTORS

Defeat Lester Park Hockey Team in Decisive Game.

Will Now Play the Bryants for the Pennant.

How They Stand.

Clubs.	W.	L.	Pct.
Bryants	4	1	.800
Northern Juniors	4	1	.800
Lester Parks	3	3	.500
Adams	1	3	.250
Fairmounts	0	4	.000

The fight for the pennant in the Amateur Hockey league is now between the Northern Juniors and the Bryants. The Lester Park team was put out of the race last night by the Northerns. The score was 4 to 0.

The fact that they are to play the Juniors for the championship, pleases the Bryants. The Northerns defeated the West end team in a game at the beginning of the season and since that time the two teams have not met. The Bryants would sooner win the championship from the Northern team than any other team in the league, and they had a crowd at the rink last night rooting for the Hardware nine.

The two teams will meet Tuesday evening at the Central rink on West Third street.

The Lester park team was handicapped in its game last night by the absence of Ostergren. The lineup had to be shifted, and as the boys were not familiar with their positions, they lacked ginger in their play and their team work at times went to pieces.

The lineup:

Northern Juniors.	Lester Park.

Taylor	r. w. Wharton
McFadden	c. Bartlett
Steinbeck	r. Cummings
A. McRea	c. p. Gunderson
Caulkins	p. Wood

GLEANS in the SPORTING FOG.

A man who tops a batting list and can work the opposing pitcher for a pass of some kind, either a base on balls or have his ribs tickled with the horsehide, once in each game on an average would be of inestimable value. He would be just about worth his weight in gold. Such men in the minors would be gobbled up by the major league scouts in a jiffy.

There are no such men in the American league. "Topsy" Hartsel, the cotton-top outfielder of the Athletics, comes closer to the mark than any other American league player. Josh Clarke runs him a close second.

Naturally most fans will jump at the conclusion that these two are the most valuable men to top a batting list, as a result of getting to first most time without the aid of a hit or a misplay of some kind. Matty McIntyre of the pennant-winning Detroit Tigers, looms up as the best man that heads an American league batting list, for he follows Josh Clarke, and, coupled with his efficiency to work the pitcher for some sort of pass, McIntyre also clouted the pill for a .295 average the past season. Hartsel, on the other hand, batted only .243, and Josh Clarke .242.

This fellow Hartsel led off in 126 games and worked the opposing pitchers for just two shy of the 100 mark in passes. This gives him an average of .078 gifts to each game. He was exceptionally strong against the New York and St. Louis pitchers, working the former for twenty-one and the latter for twenty free rides to first. Cleveland twirlers coughed up seventeen gifts to "Topsy." Detroit and Chicago flingers each eleven, and Boston and Washington pitchers nine.

Josh Clarke was close behind the Athletic left fielder, securing ninety-two gifts in 131 games, an average of .070. Strangely enough, Clarke worked Hartsel's team-mate pitchers for the largest number of passes, they sending him to first twenty-two times on four balls or by hitting him with a pitched ball. New York twirlers let loose with sixteen, Washington and Boston each thirteen, St. Louis eleven, Detroit ten and Chicago seven.

Pitcher Christy Mathewson has had an interesting career. Some years ago Cincinnati reached out languidly, gathered him in, delayed a try-out and finally traded him to New York for a second-hand belt, or something of that sort. The rangey novice was sent into two games in the fall of 1900 and came out plastered with defeat each time. He managed to hold over, however, and in the spring of 1901 handed the annual opener to Yale by a slump in the ninth inning. Then the curtain rose on the regular league season, and, without warning, a great transformation scene was sprung upon the public. The crude proposition heeled the slab and walloped the big clubs one after the other. The heaviest sluggers were like infants in his hands. He had the speed of a Rusie, the control of a Young, the endurance of a Nichols and curves that were beyond any other pitcher. His decisive victories, his perfect style and the romance of his career fastened the attention of the entire sporting world on New York's representative in the old National league.

That ancient body was facing, perhaps, what threatened to be the gloomiest season in its history, but the exploits of the handsome college boy lightened the sky for the time being and put an end to all worry concerning the loyalty of the metropolis.

It will be recalled that New York finished in seventh place in 1901, after a grand start. The following season was still more dismal, the luckless Giants bringing up the extreme rear without a struggle. Mathewson held up his end, but internal affairs were so rotten that real endeavor found no reward. With things at their worst McGraw and Brush came to the rescue. The air was disinfected; the dead wood replaced with sound timber. In 1903 the New Yorks jumped seven notches into second place and Mathewson began his climb to the highest pinnacle of pitching fame.

The announcement made during the week that Yousiff Mahmout, the great Turkish wrestler, would appear at the Temple Roller rink Thursday evening in a match with Fred Beel, was hailed with pleasure by those who like this sort of sport.

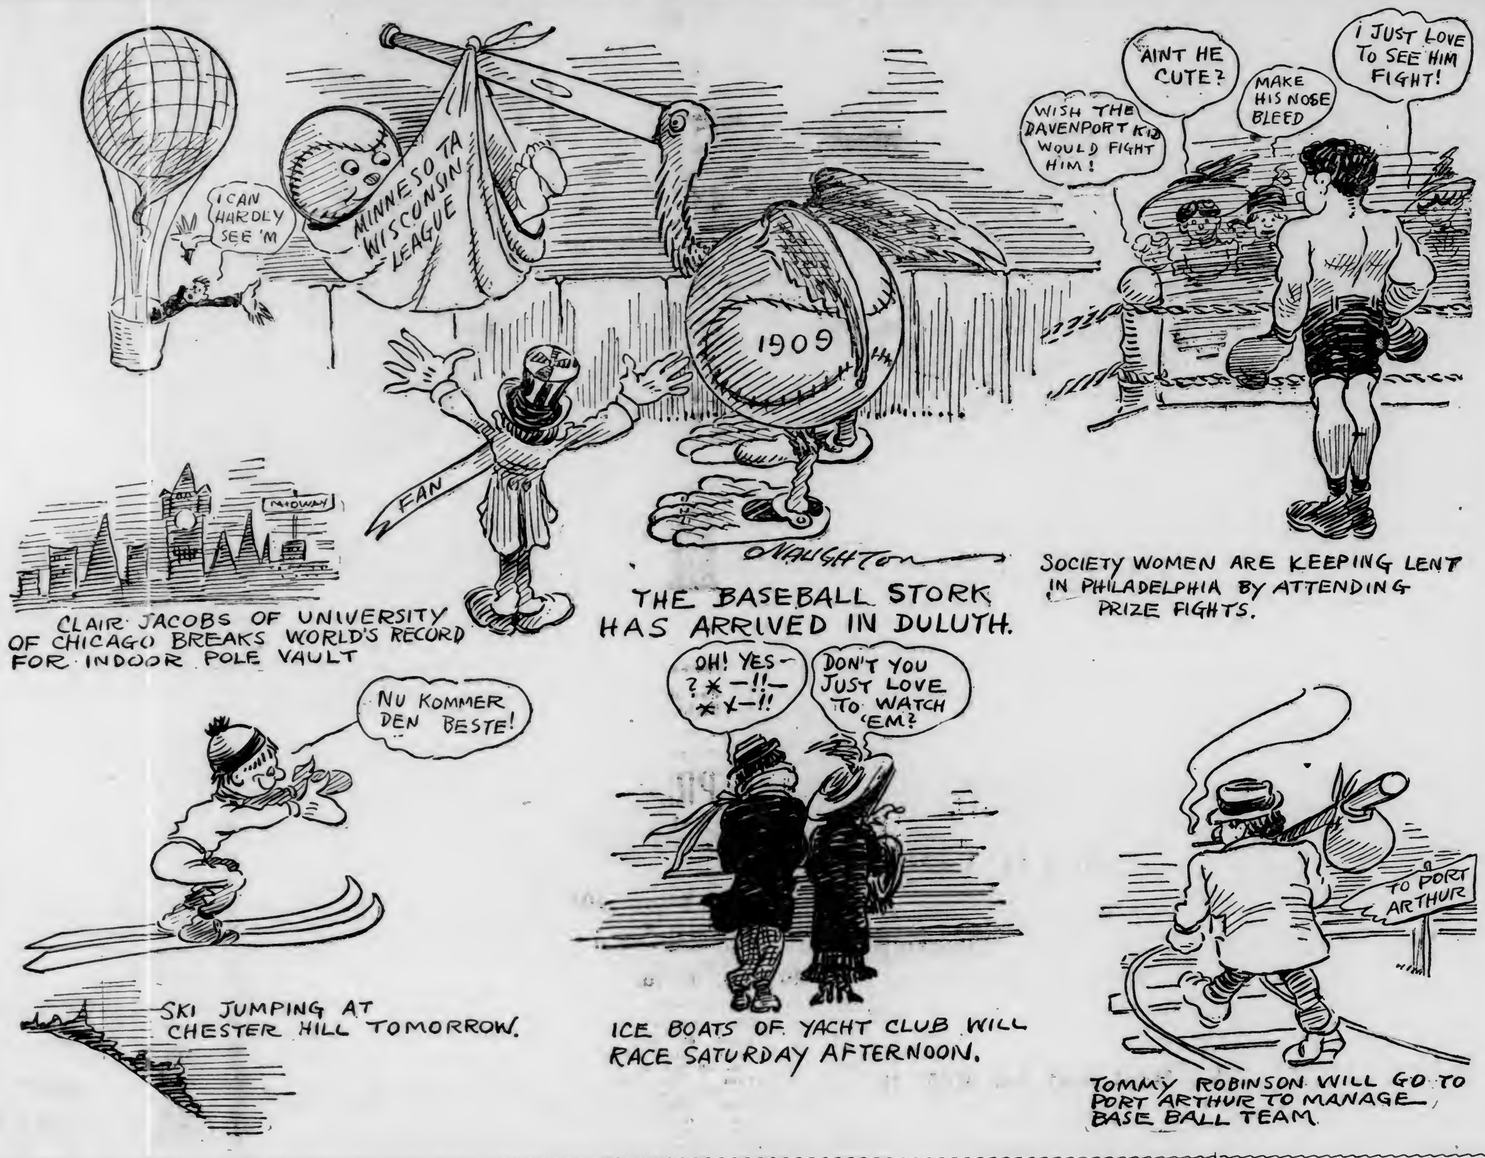

It is so long since Duluth has had a real, live sporting event of this kind that the surprise was an agreeable one. The big Turk has never been this far north, and while Duluth admirers of the mat game have read with interest of his doings down East, they had hardly hoped that he would be brought to Duluth.

The Whitehead-Schreck bout March 23 should be a good mix-up.

It is likely that Schreck will be matched with a number of Duluth and range pugilists before he gets away, and from present indications the ring game should thrive during the next month or six weeks.

By the way, Duluth is getting to be quite a center in the pugilistic world. A gymnasium has been opened, a number of brand new rugs were received durlog the week, and they all expressed a willingness to fight as soon as they were unpacked.

YANKEES HAVE STRONG PITCHERS

The New York American League Magnates Land Some New Ones.

New York, Feb. 27.—The pitching staff of the New York American league club has been augmented by the acquisition of two new twirlers. Despite the fact that at this season of the year most of the big league managers are trying to cut down their playing squads, George Stallings, leader of the hilltop clan, still believes that he can use any player who appeared strong enough to help his Yankees next season. As a consequence Pitchers Young Tom Hughes and Brockett have been purchased from the Boston Americans will be taken South with the rest of the squad.

Stallings realized that if his troupe upon the hilltop is to make any kind of an impression in the league race during 1909 he must have box men sufficiently strong to pitch real ball for a full nine innings. The other departments of the team, while not yet definitely decided upon, have a wealth of promising material for all of the various positions. The pitching staff, however, is none too well stocked with veteran material of first-class caliber, and these two new men may materially strengthen the club in this respect.

MATHEWSON WANTS BIG SUM.

Great Pitcher Believes He is Team's Best Player.

New York, Feb. 27.—Pitcher Christy Mathewson, the greatest twirler the Giants ever had, has decided to quit baseball forever unless given $8,000 for the coming season.

Hearing that the demand of Mike Donlin for $7,000 for the season is likely to be acceded to by the Giants, Mathewson declared in a letter to John T. Brush that he considers himself the best player on the team, and that he will not take a salary less than any other player. To make this point clear, Matty insists that he be given $8,000 for the season.

It is understood that the great player has made up his mind on this matter and that he will not change. So it is possible that the diamond will lose one of its brightest stars at any moment. Christy began his work as coach for Harvard pitchers yesterday.

GIANTS TO MEET POP ANSON'S TEAM

"Muggsy" McGraw Gives Old Diamond Star a Date.

New York, Feb. 27.—"Cap" Anson, the famous old first baseman and manager of the old Chicago champions of twenty years ago, will redon the spangles and appear in a game against the Giants at the Polo grounds on April 13. At least McGraw is holding this dae for Anson, who is trying to place his Chicago semi-professional team in good standing with the powers of organized baseball. Once this protection is granted him, Anson will book dates through this part of the country and play exhibition games in all the big cities until the regular season opens.

Though Anson has passed the half-century milestone he can still play ball. He calls his team the Colts, which was the name of the old Chicago team. "Cap" will play first base in the New York game, he says, and guarantees to hit any pitcher McGraw may send in.

PENNSYLVANIA TO RACE YALE

Followers of Old Eli's Rowing Squad Feel Trifle Gloomy.

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 27.—Nothing has changed Yale's rowing policy more in recent years than the arrangement of a race with the University of Pennsylvania, and the change may be permanent. In case the race is made an annual affair, the question of Yale's Easter week training will be solved and a fine preliminary contest to the Harvard regatta will be assured.

There are Yale men who think that the program outlined under the present arrangement is ideal. Yale has had nothing but high winds and rough water at home in her annual Easter recess rowing, and the coaches and directors have realized consistently that there was little to be gained from a stay here to train during that week.

This year the fortnight's vacation gave a chance for a change, and the crew will not only get a two-mile race with the Quakers, but will have a ten-day training spell on the Schuylkill, where the weather is a fortnight ahead of that of New Haven as far as earliness of the season is concerned.

A thorough canvass of the university has been made to get out every promising candidate. For the first time in many years more than 100 were registered. There are not accommodations for this number, even on the rowing machines in the gymnasium, and not more than sixty of the varsity can be taken to the harbor. The reduction of candidates has been already begun.

Capt. Howe of the Yale crew says:

"The greatest athletic need that Yale has today is new and adequate equipment in this department of athletics. I am not looking at the question solely in the light of producing a winning crew, although there is no doubt that, unless something is done, Yale is going to be more and more handicapped in competition with other institutions with better equipment. I do, however, want to let the alumni know what a good effect a house large enough to accommodate as many men as care to take the training would have on the physical development of men at Yale."

HARVARD CREW MAY GO ABROAD

Crimson Oarsmen May Row With the Oxford-Cambridge Winner.

New York, Feb. 27.—Harvard expects to send over a crew to row against the winner in the Oxford-Cambridge race, providing that the Harvard eight wins from Yale next June. As the Crimson has a lot of sturdy material and Yale appears to be hard put to it, there is some reason for believing that Harvard may achieve the first step of the program. However, a lot of folks believe the impression is abroad that when an American college crew comes to row against an English university, the American crew is the college champion. Although Harvard tried to make it clear in 1906 that no such pretension was made, the English did express the opinion that Harvard, having beaten Yale, must be the leader.

Many folks over here would like, because of that feeling, to have a real race between the Poughkeepsie and New London winners that would really establish which was the best college crew here before any one goes abroad. That might not fit in with the plans of the Harvard folks, and there is small chance that it ever will be held, but it surely would be a much better thing for the sake of the sport.

TY COBB WANTS TO WEAR HANS WAGNER'S CROWN

Cobb is now considered the fleetest footed man playing baseball. Bearing in mind the fact that his career has but begun, he has a right to expect that his batting record will compare favorably with anything in history. He is commonly accorded the palm when it comes to play in the outfield. Solely in versatility and ability to play other position than the one which he has occupied in the Detroit outfield ever since his big league service began is he unquestionably second to the great Hans Wagner of the Pirates, who while playing shortstop has shown himself amply able to handle, to everyone's perfect satisfaction, any position in either outfield or infield as well as being able to do a right able turn in the box when it is necessary.

The average baseball player would be content to secure and retain such distinctions as have fallen to Cobb's lot, but not the "Georgia Peach." Second place in anything is always irksome to him. He is one of the few professional baseball players who play more for the fun and glory than they do for the dollars they receive in their semi-monthly envelope. It is the ability of Wagner to play any position with equal facility that has caused the baseball world to turn over to him the big crown, and that crown is obviously the one on which Tyrus has his eye right now.

The Detroit public, and, in fact, every other American league city, is familiar with the fact that Cobb employs every possible opportunity to practice at odd times in other positions than the one which he regularly occupies. Especially has he been giving attention to first and second base and the pitching department. In the hot weather, when the practice before the daily game was cut short by Manager Hugh Jennings, Cobb and a couple of substitutes would invariably trot out on the field, Ty with a catcher's mitt on his left paw, and the stunts which the Southern wonder pulled off straightway were little short of amazing.

In the warming up of the Tigers Cobb invariably took a place with the pitchers and practiced all sorts of curves, including several varieties of "spitter" and Summers' "knuckle ball." His speed was terrific, though his control was usually the butt of jests from the real twirlers who were there with him on the firing line.

"Never mind," Cobb told "Wild Bill" Donovan one day, "you'll see the time when I can split the plate with three in a row, and it will be my turn to laugh."

TRACK MEET IN SPRING

Duluth High School Will be Represented at Minneapolis Event.

Candidates Are Already Working Out at the Gymnasium.

The Duluth Central high school will be represented at the interscholastic track meet to be held in Minneapolis about the first of June under the auspices of the university.

This has been practically decided at the Duluth school. There is more interest in track sports than ever before. The talk given before the students some time ago by Richard Grant, coach at the university, did much to arouse interest, and the boys can hardly wait until the snow goes off the ground, so anxious are they to begin their outdoor training.

The candidates are working out every day in the gymnasium of the Boys' department Y. M. C. A., and they are fast rounding into shape. There is material in plenty for a team of the best. In fact, the students claim that they have the best track material in the history of the school.

Mr. Grant is trying to arouse more interest in track athletics in the schools and academies of the state, and to this end he is giving them all personal talks, and will later arrange for the big meet to be held in Minneapolis in the early spring.

The matter of a baseball team still seems to be unsettled. A number of the men announced during the week that they would not play the game this year, as they had decided to devote their attention to the track.

It is possible that a scrub team will be picked, and a series of games played with the Blaine high school of Superior, in the hope of keeping the cup on this side of the water. These few games, will, however, be the limit of the baseball aspirations. No time will be devoted to practice and it will be sort of a makeshift affair.

The Athletic association will have a meeting in about two weeks and at that time a number of things that are hanging fire will be brought up and finally disposed of.

The conditions under which the boys will work this year will be simplified greatly. Although a student taking part in the meet will have to be a regularly listed student at the school he represents, he will not be required to have more than an ordinary standing in his class rooms. This will get many out that might be otherwise ineligible, and make the team much stronger. The requirements are waived at this time so that the interest will be greater and the big meet made an established fact in the regular athletic calendar of the Duluth school.

CUE EXPERTS TO MEET IN SPRING

Practically All Billiardists Will Enter Big Tourney in Gotham.

New York, Feb. 17.—In preparation for the Class A amateur championship billiard tournament, to be held this spring, invitations have been extended to practically all of the well-known amateurs, and in many cases assurances have been given of positive entries as soon as the club holding the tournament can be announced. Requests have been sent to about twenty clubs in the country asking that applications for sanctions from such clubs as have facilities for conducting a big amateur billiard contest be sent at an early date to the tournament committee of the National Associations of Amateur Billiard Players, so that full details for the event may be made before March 1, when the entries close. The tournament will probably open toward the end of March and close in April. The championship play will be at 18-balk line, two shots in, anchor barred, each game to be of 400 points.

Among the prominent Class A amateurs to whom invitations to compete have been sent, are Wilson P. Foss, Martin Mullen, H. S. Wright, C. F. Conklin, J. De Mun Smith, T. M. S. Rolls, E. W. Gardner, Charles Treshie, J. Byron Stark, J. F. Peggenburg, Dr. L. L. Mial, Dr. A. B. Miller, C. S. Norris, L. Jackson, J. E. Cope Morton, Joseph Mayer, Morris B. Brown and C. E. Van Vleck.

The tournament committee, which was elected to conduct the championship, consists of Robert C. Kammerer, chairman; C. D. Colman, James M. Heatherton, Lincoln Brunn, William H. Klenke and Dr. H. D. Jennings.

MOTOR BOATS IN A BIG RACE

Annual Event Will be Held on Lake Worth, Florida.

New York, Feb. 27.—Entries for the fifth annual power boat races and carnival on Lake Worth, Fla., are being received by Leland Sterry, secretary, and Theodore D. Wells, regatta committee chairman, in this city.

Among the latest are two from George Gingras of Rockledge, Fla., who is a well-known East coast speed boat builder. O. J. Mulford of Detroit, Mich., will undoubtedly enter two boats that are famous on the lakes, the Grayling and the Rainmaker. The first named boat is called after Mr. Gray, and the latter is so named because of its habit of making a shower when going at full speed.

It is said that a Cleveland man will enter a boat entirely new to motor boat speed contests, that has a fast hull, in which has been installed a steam power plant, the engine being the product of Rollin White, the well-known steam automobile builder.

It is extremely doubtful if either of the Dixies will go to Florida this year, and the owners of boats not quite as fast are congratulating themselves that Commodore Schroeder will not again carry from Florida large trunks filled with cups and plates. Commodore Schroeder will go to Monaco and carry the American flag to the pick of Europe's best speed boats. Judging from what he did to them on Long Island sound last summer, it is quite possible that the big European trophies will be seen here sooner or later.

CHICAGO WILL MEET COLUMBIA

Basketball Teams Play for Championship of East and West.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—The first game of the series for national intercollegiate basketball championship between the University of Chicago, certain winners of the Western honors, and Columbia university, Eastern champions, will be played at the Bartlett gymnasium here March 19 or 20. The second game will be played in the Columbia gymnasium at New York March 27. The date of the third contest, if necessary, will be decided later. It will probably be played on neutral ground. The Chicago team won the title from the University of Pennsylvania last year. The Chicago team is practically the same this year, and they have not lost a game out of ten championship contests played.

GATHERING MUCH COIN

Fight Fans Wondering What Big Jim Is Going to Do.

Stage Does Not Seem to be Very Good Training Ground.

New York, Feb. 27.—Whether James J. Jeffries really intends to return to the ring, or whether the chatter which comes from California as to his improved physical condition is the well-meant good wishes of the men who usually attach themselves to a pugilistic idol, it seems certain enough that he means to visit the East and tour around the vaudeville circuit.

Touring a vaudeville circuit is not very conducive to severe training. If Jeffries were poor and his friends as few as an unmade reputation might be scant, perhaps the vaudeville circuit would be just the thing for him, for there would be little to spend and no surplus to be idled away.

For a fighter of his reputation to return to the East, where he would meet many old cronies, and find plenty of others who would attach themselves to his retinue of "hangers-on," would necessarily make it incumbent upon him to be more or less a hospitable host.

None of the boxers of the United States who have essayed to be a hospitable host ever has emerged from the conflict without being a little the worse for wear. It did not matter whether they were heavyweights or featherweights, they were unable to lead the dance and still be in condition to meet their rivals.

Jeffries has a great many friends in New York. He always had the faculty of making friends in his easy, good-natured way. Some of them are his friends because they knew him well enough when he was in the East to be sociable with them. Others are his friends because they won money on him betting on fights in which he was one of the principals.

His friends who are friends for reasons of sentiment have a great deal of faith in his pugilistic ability. Perhaps it would be more correct to say that they have faith that he has ability left as a boxer. His friends who are more largely his friends because he found a successful medium of speculation through his efforts in the ring are not so certain that he can get in condition again to fight.

It is doubtful if he will be permitted to take part in any six-round or ten-round bouts, which are considered permissible under the laws in the East. Not that the managers of athletic clubs would prevent it, but the authorities would be likely to shut down at all hazards on a match in which a real world's champion was entered.

If Jeffries is to undertake to make a fight again with the idea of capturing the championship, which he gave away when he was willing to quit the business, there will have to be some preliminary fighting before he will be ready to take on whoever happens to be claimant of the championship at that time.

If a limited round bout could be arranged in this city, promoters stand ready to make it possible for him to earn one of the largest sums ever paid over to a past grand champion.

TEST PRIZE FIGHT LAW.

Tommy Devlin and Eddie Kenny Are Placed Under Arrest.

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 27.—Following the action of the sheriff in stopping the sparring match in this city Thursday night, between Tommy Devlin of Philadelphia and Eddie Kenney of Chicago, both fighters and Manager Heinger were arrested by city detectives, charged with engaging in a prize fight. All were released on bonds when the cases were called in the city police court yesterday, and the trials were continued. The cases will be a test of the anti-prize fight law. The minimum fine on conviction is $1,000.

OFF ON SPRING TRAINING TRIP

The Chicago White Sox Have a Special Train to California.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—The Chicago American league baseball club left here at 6 o'clock last night on a special train, over the Chicago & Northwestern, on its spring training trip to California. The train will take the party, which will number seventy-five persons, to San Francisco, which will be the headquarters of the party while in California.

This will be the only baseball club in the country to use a special train to carry it to its training camp. President Charles Comiskey has arranged every detail that will make the train up-to-date in every respect. There will be a complete Turkish bath outfit, which will aid the players in getting in condition on the long trip across the continent. Stock quotations and every other kind of news will be supplied the travelers.

Twenty-eight Chicago players were in the party. These will be divided into two teams and will play about seventy-five games in California and on the way east. Several members of the Pacific Coast teams, who have been spending the winter in the East, were in the party.

The remainder was composed of prominent baseball men and other friends of President Comiskey.

Baptie Regains Title.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb 27.—Norval Baptie of North Dakota last night regained his title as world's skating champion, which he lost through accident two weeks ago. Baptie defeated John Nilsson of Minneapolis in two straight events. The time in the half-mile, won by Baptie, was 1:15. Baptie also took the mile by half a lap, in 2:35½.

Beell Stays the Limit.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Yusiff Mahmout, the Turkish wrestler, who is scheduled to meet Frank Gotch for the world's championship in the spring, lost a handicap match to Fred Beell here last night. Mahmout agreed to throw Beell in thirty minutes, but failed to do so. Beell more than held his own.

Chicago Beats Illinois.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—The University of Chicago basketball team clinched the Western collegiate championship last night by defeating the University of Illinois, by a score of 23 to 11, at Bartlett gymnasium here.

Aeronants Enter Contest.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 27.—Albert Bold Lambert and H. Eugene Honeywell, St. Louis aeronauts, today filed their entry fee as a team in the first annual championship balloon race of the Aero Club of America. The race is to start from Indianapolis, June 5. They will use a balloon of 80,000 cubic feet.

Skating Exhibition.

Miss Gladys Lamb of Chicago will give three exhibitions of fancy roller skating at the Temple roller rink, beginning Tuesday evening and continuing Wednesday afternoon and evening.

Miss Lamb is said to be one of the best of the fancy roller skaters now touring the country, and there are, according to her managers, a number of unusual stunts on her program that have never before been attempted by a woman skater.

Little is Knocked Out.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 27.—Al Wolgast of Milwaukee knocked out Walter Little of Chicago in the fourth round of a scheduled 20-round bout here last night. Little never had a chance. All bets were declared off previous to the contest. Tommy Walsh was referee.

FANATIC BRUISES REV. "BILLY" SUNDAY.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 27.—"Billy" Sunday, the ex-baseball player and present evangelist, was horse-whipped by a religious fanatic at the Sunday Tabernacle, where, in the presence of 8,000, he was conducting a revival meeting.

The evangelist was leaning against the pulpit when a powerful man, who said his name is Sherman Potts, sprang forward with a buggy whip and struck Sunday several blows.

Sunday leaped from the platform and dashed at his assailant, whom he knocked down. The choir leader directed the choir to sing, and in a few moments the crowd was calmed. Potts was arrested.

Sunday suffered several painful bruises. The prisoner said his home is one mile east of Lovington, Ill. According to his statements, he was once declared insane and committed to the Jacksonville asylum, where after a brief confinement he was released as cured. He made the attack, he said, in defense of the virtue of women whom he declared had been criticised by the evangelist.

INAUGURAL BALL DECORATIONS WILL COST OVER $20,000.

Washington, Feb. 27. — In preparation for the inaugural ball on the evening of March 4, the transformation has begun of the big barn-like court of the pension building, the largest brick building, it is said, in the world, into a veritable fairyland. The decorations for the ball alone will cost about $20,000 and this does not include the framework on which the decorations will be hung, which makes several thousand more.

MINNESOTANS AMONG THE VICTIMS OF FAKE WRESTLING PROMOTERS

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Feb. 27.—Postoffice Inspector Swenson, who has returned from Little Rock, Ark., has information collected while there of the monumental swindle perpetrated by an organization, the head of which he believes is under arrest in that city in the person of J. C. Maybray. More than a hundred persons in various parts of the country were fleeced out of amounts ranging from $5,000 to $37,000. Among the documents secured by Inspector Swenson, in his search of Maybray's effects was a diary containing such information concerning the operations of the organization. A complete record was kept with each man dealt with. More than 100 records were found and these showed that foot races, wrestling matches and horse races were the principal methods used for the fleecing of victims. Among these records were the following:

Adolph Yeske, Hardin, Mont., horse race; Thomas Cole, Fond du Lac., Wis., wrestle; R. W. C. Shull, Minneapolis, fight; A. Harrington, Minneapolis, horse race; C. E. Haygood, Garden City, S. D., horse race; M. Meur, Bristol, S. D., wrestle; R. B. Shores, Blue Earth, Minn. unfinished; F. X. Roethele, Neenah, Wis., wrestle; C. A. Nelson, Alma, Mich., horse race; John Bieder, Sioux Falls, S. D., horse race; George F. Castle, Britt, Ia., horse race; D. C. IN A GOOD CAUSE.

Frank Folsom Successfully Impersonates Chief of Police Troyer.

Frank Folsom, a printer, pretended to be the chief of police last night, when he saw Albert Boline, an employment agent, try to get out of paying for a meal in a Superior street restaurant, and arrested the man, later turning him over to a real policeman.

Boline, it is claimed, was under the influence of liquor, and refused to pay for his meal, although he had $20 on his person. To help out the girl cashier, Folsom told Boline he was the chief of police, and that unless he paid he would have to go to the police station. The man still refused to pay, and Folsom made his bluff good by taking him by the arm and turning him over to a real policeman just outside the door. The man was taken to the police station for the night.

FRANCIS WILSON IN "WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD," MONDAY AND TUESDAY—RETURN OF "THE ALASKAN" — EMMA EAMES FOR ONE NIGHT. : : : : : : : : :

Charles Marlow in writing "When Knights Were Bold," the greatest success Francis Wilson has had since he left the comic opera stage, the author has cunningly contrived to put in but a single farcical figure, that of the hero. Every one else in the cast is serious and by the sharp contrast the popular comedian's comedy work has never been seen, to better advantage. His opportunities for funmaking are almost unlimited and of them Mr. Wilson takes every possible advantage. It is a matter of history that for five months last season, the farce was seen on Broadway, New York city, and that Mr. Wilson has been appearing in it ever since; also that in England it is now in its third year. Few, if any of the comedians of the present time are as popular with theatergoers as Francis Wilson and few have succeeded in attracting the large following which is his. Sir Guy de Vere, the central character of the play is an up-to-date jolly fellow who cares little for his ancestors their prowess or their dignity. He is a most compatinable sort of a young person who has recently come into possession of the title and family estates and he is very much in love with a cousin who is his antithesis in everything pertaining to family traditions and she harps upon the subject from morning until night. A severe cold in the head compels the young baronet to forego dining with his guests. Instead, he reverts to steaming hot foot baths and copious draughts of spiritual liquors, slightly diluted with water. The overdose of his "medicine" results in his falling asleep and being shunted back a trifle over 700 years. In his modern garb Sir Guy encounters medieval men, manners and customs and discovers that there was a good deal of nonsense and inconvenience about the life and times in "the days of old when knights were bold," especially when compared with the advantages of the present day. His dream is a vivid one and while he possesses all of his twentieth century notions as well as the vernacular, the young man is forced to do certain things after the manner of the twelfth century and among others to fight for his lady love and the protection of his castle. Mr. Wilson in armor is about as funny a personage as can be imagined and in this scene where he fights the audience most thoroughly enjoy his amusing byplay, and, when he drops his sword and armor and goes after his antagonist bare-handed and puts him "down and out" there is so much laughter that there are many aching sides in front of the footlights. In the last act, when he awakes, Sir Guy makes it very lively for everyone and very unpleasant for some, but he wins the hand of his fair cousin, whose opinion regarding heroes of the good old times have become very much modified, and the promise from his friends that they will be "good" from henceforth and not worry him with the time of when knights were bold. Charles Frohman has surrounded Mr. Wilson with a strong supporting company and a very large one. In its entirety there are some forty people in the organization. There is singing too in "When Knights Were Bold," for the last act ends and the second act opens with a big choral number. Charles Frohman will present Francis Wilson in his merry play at the Lyceum on Monday and Tuesday nights.

"THE ALASKAN."

John Cort's Comic Opera Will Play Return Engagement.

John Cort's novel musical presentation, "The Alaskan," with its many artistic principals, beautiful chorus and its wealth of scenic equipment, returns to the Lyceum on March 5 and 6. On its last appearance it scored one of the most positive successes attributed to a musical organization this season. Since the time musical offerings became the vogue, authors and managers have vied with each other in their ambition to give something new, but it remained for Joseph Blethen, Max Figman and Harry Girard to take their imaginations to the cold fields of far-off Alaska, for their story of local color. That they struck upon a happy combination, with any amount of material at hand for originality, was fully exemplified last week when this tuneful, bright and original opera was received with every mark of approval by Duluth theater-goers. The possibilities for costuming, scenic pictures and other stage attributes, with Alaska as the central point, are unlimited, and that the authors accepted every advantage for such has been proven. From the standpoint of music the score is exceptionally brilliant, with many tuneful melodies and high-class numbers introduced. Among those that have become exceedingly popular are the famous "My Totem Pole," "Arlee," "The Trouble Tree," "Baa Baa Black Sheep," "Mother Did," "Party of the Second Part," "Good, Better, Best," "Naughty Little Lady O" and others equally as well liked.

FRANCIS WILSON,
As "Sir Guy De Vere," in "When Knights Were Bold."

"EINE MUTTER'S LIEBE."

Jewish Opera Will be Presented at Lyceum for Hospital Fund.

Madam Bertha DeWolf who has the title in "Eine Mutter's Liebe," the Yiddish play to be presented at the Lyceum theater Sunday evening, under the auspices of the Chevra Bickur Chaulim, is probably one of the most talented and accomplished actresses upon the Yiddish stage today.

Graduated from a Russian seminary, when barely in her teens, Madam DeWolf numbers among her accomplishments, beside histrionic ability, a splendidly cultivated voice. Madam DeWolf is prima donna of the M. Silverman Oriental Opera company, St. Paul, the company which is to present the charity play, Sunday, for the benefit of the Jewish hospital fund. She is an excellent musician, playing delightfully upon the piano, and is also a graduated professional nurse.

It was only a little time after leaving the seminary that Madam DeWolf's steps first wandered toward the footlights.

It all came about through attending a rich theatrical man. When he recovered from his illness, his gratitude manifested itself by offering the nurse an opportunity with one of his troupes.

Of course, it was a hard struggle at first, but Madam DeWolf made good and some years later migrated to the United States, where she is winning a name for herself among the Yiddish players.

Madam DeWolf has a very pleasing and graceful personality and is one of the school who does not believe that magnificent gowns are more than half the show. She takes a firm stand for simplicity for the stage.

Lyceum Notes.

"The Devil's Auction" will be the attraction at the Lyceum this evening.

This old favorite was the first of the spectacular extravaganzas, and it is kept right up to the minute, improvements being made in it every year. In fact, the show can scarcely be recognized from year to year.

"Brewster's Millions" has the distinction of being the only American play ever written that has scored an absolute and unqualified success in England and on the continent.

In the new offering, "When Old New York Was Dutch," written by Sidney R. Ellis, Al H. Wilson will be seen at the Lyceum soon.

Corinne, the bright particular star in "The Girls From Berlin," the latest work from the pens of John J. McNally. William Jerome and Jean Schwartz, was last seen here in George M. Cohan's "Forty-five Minutes From Broadway," in which she scored a big hit. Corinne's tour in the Cohan play was one of the most successful, both financially and artistically, yet recorded. The profits are said to have been $100,000 for the season.

The costumes of Messrs. Martin and Emery's production of "Parsifal" (in English), which comes to the Lyceum soon, are kept in charge by an old German wardrobe woman who was present at the first performance of the famous Wagner festival play at Bayreuth. Mrs. Leiter is her name, and she was wardrobe woman for the production when produced by Wagner himself. She was sent over to this country by the costumers, who dressed Messrs. Martin and Emery's production, and she now has been with that firm for four years.

"A Stubborn Cinderella" the successful musical comedy which scored for nearly 500 performances at the new Princess theater, Chicago, is making new records on the road, with Homer B. Mason, the well known comedian, in the feature role as "Mac." Mr. Mason has made a decided hit since his initiation in musical comedy. He has always been a popular favorite in vaudeville and was known as Mason and Keeler, his act always being a headliner. "A Stubborn Cinderella" comes here soon.

AT THE BIJOU

FAMOUS ENGLISH ACTOR, V. L. GRANVILLE, AND THE QUAKER CITY FOUR ARE THE FEATURES OF NEXT WEEK'S VAUDEVILLE BILL. ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴

MANAGER MAITLAND offers his patrons for the coming week's feature V. L. Granville, who is one of Europe's most famous actors. Mr. Granville is a special importation by Sullivan Considine to play the United Theaters circuit and could be engaged for only a limited number of weeks, as he is to return to England in June to fill a two years' contract. Mr. Granville is presenting his big vaudeville playlet entitled "Twixt Dawn and Daylight." The action of the playlet is presumed to take place at early morn, and has five different characters, all played by this clever and talented actor. The playlet is in three scenes with special scenery and lighting effects for each scene. The act is the most pretentious that has ever appeared at the Bijou in the program line. The scenes are "The Sleep," "The Dream" and "The Awakening."

An act that offers a laugh every second will be Manning and Dixon in the roaring comedy novelty, "A Smash-up in Chinatown," showing Manning and Dixon as the Hebrew passenger and the dope fiend cabman. This act is considered one of the best and funniest acts in vaudeville.

Leon Miller and Miss Grace Tempest have an excellent act entitled "Trix and Kix," a singing, dancing and acrobatic novelty that has been a big hit over the entire circuit. Miss Tempest has the reputation of having the most perfect form of any woman in the country, having won the $1,000 prize in Chicago last year in the contest given by the Chicago Tribune. Another very interesting novelty will be Kalacratus and Robinson, who are novelty artists of much ability. As an added feature, the Quaker City Four will be seen as the "Singing Blacksmiths" in vocal imitations and bright comedy. The act carries a complete set of scenery for its production.

Isadore Silver will sing a new illustrated song, entitled "Under the Maples With Molly-O." A complete set of Edison's best motion pictures will be shown.

Matinees are given daily at 2:45 and evening performances at 8 and 9:30. Seats may be reserved by either telephone. A school children's matinee will be given Saturday afternoon at 2:30 and performances Sunday afternoon and night.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

JULIA MARLOWE PRAISED IN "THE GODDESS OF REASON," BUT PLAY CONDEMNED — "HAVANA" LIKELY TO BE BIG MUSICAL COMEDY SUCCESS. : : : : :

New York, Feb. 27.—Julia Marlowe has met with a warm reception in Mary Johnston's metrical drama of the French revolution, "The Goddess of Reason," which she presented at Daly's theater to one of the most brilliant first-night audiences of the season. The extreme favor shown, however, is to be attributed more to Miss Marlowe than the play. It was her remarkably fine acting that made unanimously for success. The play is variously judged by the critics, although it pleased the audience, and in general terms is considered a very excellent vehicle for the actress. Some of the papers praise the dramatic interest which it maintains and picks flaws with the poetry; others find fault with the theme as recalling too vividly "Tale of Two Cities," "Robespierre" and other well-remembered revolutionary plays. That which the critics and the public agreed upon without dissension was that it was splendidly produced and marvelously well acted by Miss Marlowe. The Shuberts laid themselves out to make the production a notable one, and succeeded in filling the stage with an augmented and exceptionally well-drilled mob in the great market place scene of the third act, in which the heroine Yvette, is drawn through the streets as the Goddess of Reason; and in the court scene of the fifth act, in which Rene de Vardes, the nobleman hero, is condemned to die in the Loire, and Yvette casts away her tricolor and madly denounces the republic in order to die with her lover. It is in the street scene of the third act, when the eternal femininity of the Goddess of Reason proclaims itself, and Yvette, yielding to a sudden impulse of jealous rage against the Marquise de Blanchforet, denounces both Rene and the marquise to the sans culottes and tricoleuse and gives them up to destruction, that Miss Marlowe is generally conceded to strike the high note of her artistic career. Her work in this episode has won her the universal esteem of metropolitan playgoers and the critics, and on all hands are heard expressions praising her acting beyond any bestowed on an American actress in twenty years or more.

At the Casino the Shuberts have another success to their credit in "Havana," a musical comedy composed by Leslie Stuart, of "Floradora" fame. This was one of George Edwardes' productions in London, where it seems to have been well received. James T. Powers was picked out for this piece. But before the little comedian made up his mind what he would do, after "The Blue Moon" was relegated to the rear, he determined to look at the piece himself, and his managers sent him to London. He promptly cabled back his enthusiastic approval, after which he set to work to revise it.

I fancy that he was not deterred by conscientious scruples from taking liberties with the plot, which is now only suggested. But it is evident that the revision resulted in the successful elimination of anything that smacked of English humor and the substitution of a breezy wit of his own. It hits the mark, and the piece is likely to become extremely popular. In the part of the bo'sun of Mr. Jackson's American yacht in the harbor of Havana, Powers has a role to his liking.

Seven years before, he married a Cuban beauty during a state of protracted inebriety. He left Havana before he could muster his befuddled brain to tell whether she was 18 or 80, but he has a lock of her hair by which he hopes to identify her. The humor grows out of his efforts to trace his wife without betraying himself. When he discovers that she is Anita, the beautiful cigar vender, he is in rapture. Anita, however, is to be married that day to another, his claim having been outlawed and he having been declared dead in the eyes of the law. This aids him in a critical moment, for, when he is about to be executed for participating in a rebellion, Anita confronts the commander of the firing squad with the startling reminder that the victim is already dead. The execution is suspended and Sam Nix and Anita are happily reunited.

The piece is sumptuously staged and the music has much of the charm that made "Florodora" popular. Powers has a topical song, "How Did the Birds Know That?" which is one of the hits of the season as he sings it in his whimsical way, and there is a song by an octet of dainty maidens, described in the bill as the "Newspaper Girlies," under the chaperonage of Ernest Lambart, entitled, "Hello People," that will be hummed and whistled as freely as the "Florodora" sextet was in in its own day. Powers is supported by a good cast, which includes William Pruette, Ernest Lambart, Edith Decker, Eva Davenport and Clara Palmer.

MADAM BERTHA DE WOLF,
Prima Donna With the Oriental Opera Company.

Fast on the heels of the news that Marietta Olly, the distinguished German actress, now playing at the Irving Place theater, is to pass under the management of the Shuberts to become an English-speaking star next October, when she will make her first appearance at the Maxine Elliott theater, comes the announcement that other foreign actresses are to make their debuts on Broadway in English plays. One is Mme. Mimi Aguglia, the Sicilian actress, who played an engagement at the Broadway theater in her native tongue some months ago, and the other is Hedwig Relcher of the New German theater, and formerly leading woman of the Irving Place.

Aguglia, who is hardly out of her 'teens, and is an actress of remarkable power, made a sensational hit in London by her epileptic style of portraying Sicilian peasant women. Her success at the Broadway was less pronounced, and she was preferred in one of Angel Guimera's plays, in which she portrayed with marked vivacity the unhappy love affair of a young dancer attached to a metropolitan theater. This part showed that she has unusual gifts, which Charles Frohman was quick to realize. As soon as he could arrange to cancel a series of European engagements he announced that he would present her in English next season, and the actress is now studying the language to fit her for her new departure.

Miss Relcher is a tall, slender young woman, who is admirable in heroic parts, and has been the mainstay of the German theater here for several seasons. Her father, Emanuel Reicher, is the leading Ibsen player in Germany, and it is said that Ibsen used to travel Leipzig especially to see him in some of his plays. She has a brother, Frank Relcher, who has been for a number of years the leading man in E. H. Sothern's company, and speaks English quite as well as any actor on the American stage. Miss Relcher will be seen in a famous play by Dr. Leopold Wampf, "On the Eve," in which she created the leading role in Germany, and she will be under the management of Henry B. Harris, who directs the affairs of Robert Edeson, and is owner and manager of the Hudson theater.

Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian, has said farewell to the United States and sailed for Europe. Before his departure he was given an enthusiastic send-off at the Lincoln theater by as many of his admirers as could crowd into the playhouse and find room to sit or stand up. For upward of two hours he entertained the audience with selections from his repertoire, singing all his best songs, telling all his funniest stories and giving all his best characterizations. He was in prime humor, as was the audience, and made a farewell speech, in which he bade an affectionate farewell to his American friends, wiping the tears out of his eyes as he spoke of the kindness shown him professionally and socially. Finally he was presented with a number of mementos, including a silver loving cup, a $600 solid silver service, a large bronze placque of Bobby Burns and a Scotch and American flag. He wrapped the flags around him and sang "Auld Lang Syne," in which the audience joined heartily.

Mrs. Leslie Carter gave the special performance in honor of Miss Mary Garden which she had promised the prima donna at the Liberty, playing "Zaza" for the benefit of the emotional Salome, who sent her a basket of orchids and wrote her an extravagant note of praise, in which she called her the greatest living actress and other pet names.

In the evening Marietta Olly was seen in the original version of "Zaza," as played by Rejane, at the Irving Place theater.

Col. Savage, one afternoon last week, invited all the ministers in the New York churches to the Garden theater to see Henry Dixey in "Mary Jane's Pa," announcing his purpose in doing so that he wanted to show them that the indiscriminate condemnation of the stage should not include plays dealing cleanly with home life, and generally that the stage was not as black as it was painted. A large number of ministers availed themselves of the invitation, and no doubt came away with a good impression, as was proper.

Not to give Henry W. Savage a complete corner on the Viennese operatta market, Charles Frohman will next season produce in this country "The Dollar Princess," which has already been running for two seasons on the continent. The central figures of this work are Americans, seen from the German point of view. To still further enter into the Savage sphere Mr. Frohman has succeeded in engaging Donald Brian for the leading role. Judging from such advance word as has already been vouchsafed it is ap-

Acting upon her physician's orders Fritzi Scheff abruptly interrupted her tour in "The Prima Donna" at Philadelphia last week and left for Aiken, S. C. Miss Scheff has not been in the best of health for some time. Her indisposition is not serious, but a rest was regarded as advisable. Miss Scheff's physician is of the opinion that after a rest at Aitken, she will be able to complete her season without another interruption. John Fox, Jr., Miss Scheff's husband, will accompany her on the trip South. She is to resume her engagements in Boston on March 1.

Maude Fealy is to be starred by a new theatrical firm, composed of R. E. Forrester and C. M. Pope. They have engaged her services for five years and two new plays are now under consideration for her use.

After a service of fifteen years as leading man in various Charles Frohman companies, Bruce McRae is to be promoted to the principal part in "The Flag Lieutenant," the next comedy that Charles Frohman will produce in America. It was fifteen years ago that Mr. McRae, who is a nephew of Sir Charles Wyndham and as an actor greatly resembles his uncle, obtained his first part in America in Charles Frohman's production of "Aristocracy" at Wallack's theater. "The Flag Lieutenant" is a naval comedy, by Maj. W. P. Drury and Leo Trevor. It is a sea romance, with its principal act taking place on H. M. S. Royal Edward. It is partly spirited melodrama and partly capital comedy. London greeted "The Flag Lieutenant" as the best of its kind that it had seen, either artistically or technically, since Capt. Marshall's "The Second in Command."

Prominent among the players in the company engaged to support Mary Mannering in "Step by Step," her new play, by Landon Mitchell, are Marion Ballou, Frank Sylvester, Helen Macbeth, Arthur Maitland, Austin Webb, Addison Pitt, A. W. Ellis, Mark Smith, Pauline Dufield and Josephine Brown. Final rehearsals are now in progress, and the Messrs. Shubert will open the production out of town before bringing it into New York at one of their leading theaters.

Charles Frohman has engaged William Hawtrey to appear in the role of Mr. Brown in the production of Guy du Maurier's "An Englishman's Home."

A contract has been made by Gavault & Morton to write a new play for Marie Doro, which she is to use the next season. Her present vehicle, "The Richest Girl," is also from their pen, and is to get its first metropolitan hearing on March 1.

George Brennan and Thomas Dixon, Jr., have formed a partnership to produce Eugene Presbrey's dramatic version of the "The Coast of Chance," by Seton Merriman.

It is reported that Rose Coghlan is to be a member of the company to play at the New theater in New York. She is an actress of wide experience, and is regarded as peculiarly fit for the new organization.

The end of "Cameo Kirby" has not come, even though Nat Goodwin will not play in it. It has been considerably rewritten, and the owners, Liebler & Co., intend to start Dustin Farnum in it. He is to appear in the title role at Chicago, most likely after Viola Allen has completed her run at the Studebaker in her new play, "The White Nun."

The condition of Blanche Walsh, who was stricken in Kansas City, is improving, but she will be compelled to remain in the hospital for some time. As soon as possible she will be removed to her home in Massachusetts, but no attempt to resume her tour this season is contemplated. In the fall, however, "The Test" will be revived, with Miss Walsh and many of the same players that have been appearing in her support.

Klaw & Erlanger have in preparation for Guy Standing and Theodore Roberts a new play which will keep these two actors together for another season. The characters to be assumed in the proposed offering are as widely at variance as the roles of Charles Steele and Joe Portugais. Mr. Standing will play the part of a young American, the forerunner of an era of law in a wild country, and Mr. Roberts will represent a rapidly disappearing type of the French Canadian. Both Mr. Standing and Mr. Roberts are anxious to play "Othello," alternating in the roles of the Moor of Venice and Iago. It is likely their ambitions will be gratified.

Madame Alvano & Co., prima donna soprano, boy operatic tenor and lyric tenor, have returned after almost a year's successful tour on the road, appearing in a high-class singing act in vaudeville. Her singing act includes her husband, Signor Alvano, and son Donald, which makes the Alvano trio of unusual interest. The company is now resting, preparatory for heavier work, which will be given to the public at a future date.

The death of the famous English actor, Charles Warner, recently, necessitated the withdrawal of his son, H. B. Warner, from the cast. The young man was playing in the role of the son in Lackaye's production of "The Battle." This led to an occurrence of quick study which is little short of remarkable. At 1 o'clock on Friday morning Mr. Lackaye summoned William J. Kelley by telephone, to come to the rescue. The part he was asked him to assume covered seventy-five typewritten pages, and unless an actor of experience and of remarkably retentive memory could be found willing to assume the difficult role, the theater would have to remain closed for the two holiday performances on Lincoln's birthday and the two on Saturday.

Mr. Kelley had made an engagement to go out of the city for several days, but at Mr. Lackeye's request postponed his visit and undertook the role. He began studying about 2 o'clock Friday morning, refused to sleep or eat until he had mastered the role, and reported at the theater at 11 o'clock that same morning for rehearsal.

In nine hours he had memorized seventy-five pages of manuscript and was letter-perfect in his lines for rehearsal. He played his first performance that same afternoon and did not miss an "if," "but" or an "and," as the saying goes.

Well-informed actors and managers are pointing to this as the most remarkable quick-study achievement which has ever come to their knowledge.

David Belasco has heeded the call of the play-goers—the New York and the visiting theater patrons who have been persistently demanding a continuation of David Warfield's run in "The Music Master" at the Academy of Music. This is the fifth season of the Klein play in New York, and the sixth week of the present engagement at the Academy. Mr. Belasco's contract with the Academy management requires Mr. Warfield's appearances in "The Music Master" for five weeks, to be followed by "A Grand Army Man." Consequently, the latter play was announced and advertised for revival last week, but as the business for "The Music Master" had not been less than capacity at any performance the Academy management and Mr. Belasco acceded to the popular requests, and "The Music Master" was continued for two additional weeks. This necessitated the postponement of "A Grand Army Man" until Monday, March 1, when Mr. Warfield will positively appear as Wes Bigelow in the Indiana idyl.

Frances Starr's unqualified triumph in Eugene Walter's play, "The Easiest Way," is attested by the overwhelming demand for seats at the Belasco Stuyvesant theater. Miss Starr's vivid portrayal of the vascillating heroine has created wide-spread discussion, and judging by the unprecedented crush at the box office, everybody in New York is anxious to see the Belasco star and play during the first weeks of presentation.

Blanche Bates has settled down to as prosperous a career at the Belasco theater as that at Mr. Belasco's Fortieth street playhouse. In the leading role of "The Fighting Hope" Miss Bates presents a portrayal that appeals with unusual force on account of its naturalness; a womanly woman whose heart is torn between two great big conflicting loves—the love of the mother and the love of the wife. Patronage remains at the capacity mark.

Henry B. Harris, accompanied by his wife, sailed last week on the steamship Caronia for London, via the Azore islands, Gibraltar, Spain, Nice, Monte Carlo and Paris. Mr. Harris will arrive in London in time to take active charge of the arrangements for the forthcoming presentation in that city, on April 19, of Rose Stahl in James Forbes' comedy, "The Chorus Lady," at the Vaudeville theater. Miss Stahl, accompanied by her original company, will sail from New York on March 25, arriving in London on April 2. Inasmuch as "The Chorus Lady" had been seen in London when it was a one-act sketch, and was received with enormous success, it would appear that it should score as big as has been its experience in the United States and Canada.

The business done by Charles Klein's latest play, "The Third Degree," at the Hudson theater during the first week of its engagement was over $4,000 in excess of that done by "The Lion and the Mouse" during its first week in New York. Henry B. Harris, under whose management "The Third Degree" is playing, is firm in the belief that it will have a longer stay in New York than did Mr. Klein's "The Lion and the Mouse." So strongly intrenched in the minds of the play-going public of New York is that "The Third Degree" is "the play of the year," that they are now buying seats four months ahead.

Fannie Ward, in the Jerome K. Jerome comedy, "The New Lady Bantock," now running at Wallack's theater, has made as big a hit in Manhattan as she did in London, Chicago and Boston. The play was praised for its cleanliness and humor. Audiences and critics alike speak in the highest terms of Miss Ward's naturalness and spontaneity. Miss Ward is rapidly assuming the leadership of the younger stars of the American stage. London has seen her in "The Marriage of William Ashe," "The Three of Us," "In the Bishop's Carriage" and "The Flag Station." This variety of parts has given London audiences a more comprehensive appreciation of her ability and charm, a treat in store for New York. While she is playing at Wallack's, a benefit will be given for Mrs. Lester Wallack. At this entertainment Miss Ward will be seen in Eugene Walter's "The Flag Station." Several playwrights have asked permission to submit plys for Miss Ward for next season. It is likely that Miss Ward will use "The New Lady Bantock" for a brief road tour next fall, and come into New York city early with a new play.

Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks will feature Maclyn Arbuckle next season in a play called "The Circus Man," by Eugene W. Presbrey. The first production will be made at McVicker's theater, Chicago, Aug. 28. Maclyn Arbuckle is playing the role of the fat sheriff, "Slim" Hoover, in "The Round Up." It is a source of satisfaction to herald the success of this clean American play of the Arizona desert. Here is a story told by his closest friend. Mr. Arbuckle always has an eye to the future, and he well appreciates that with a show like "The Circus Man" it would be greatly to his advantage to have his picture taken with some lions as a background. Mr. Arbuckle remembered Cy Du Vry of Lincoln Park, Chicago, about this time and called upon the gentleman. Mr. Du Vry was able to accommodate him with two lions who were manicured and marcelled years ago, and recently have been using their old teeth as playthings. Mr. Du Vry feeds them on cold boiled mush. All this looked nice for Mr. Arbuckle, and he said "Me for the lions." The pictures were taken. The gate was left open as Mr. Arbuckle stepped inside the cage and two keepers with pikes stood handy, but the lions were as docile as blind kittens. All went well until the flashlight powder went off. That frightened the poor lions, who thought Arbuckle was trying to do away with them. They beat it for the gate. Arbuckle thought the lions were after him, and he beat it for the gate. The squeeze of the gate occurred and Arbuckle lost some of his clothing at important anatomical points, while the lions got off scared nearly to death.

Lillian Russell in "Wildfire," the Hobart and Broadhurst comedy, in which she clinched her right to the title of "princess of comediennes," rejecting that of "queen of comic opera," will start next week on her Pacific coast tour, traveling in her private car until June 14, Miss Russell will be seen in every city of importance on the Pacific coast from San Diego to Vancouver. "Wildfire" is running this year like its name. The Widow's Might," by Edmund Day, author of "The Round Up," is the play which Klaw & Erlanger and Joseph Brooks have in preparation for her for next season.

So great has been the success of Klaw & Erlanger's great Biblical production, "Ben Hur," on the Pacific coast, that negotiations have been opened for the play to run for a long season at the Moore theater, Seattle, during the Alaska-Yukon exposition, next year. This is the third trip of the play to the coast. Since its opening night, ten years ago in New York, Klaw & Erlanger have never permitted the completeness of its equipment, or the strength of the company, to be lowered. If anything, "Ben-Hur" is a bigger play today than it was on the night of its first production. This season the surprise and gratification of the management lies in the interest taken in the play by the school children of America. Klaw & Erlanger are not only filling their houses at present, but are educating the children of the United States to expect nothing but the biggest productions under the firm's name.

"Little Nemo," Klaw & Erlanger's gorgeous comedy, by Harry B. Smith and Victor Herbert, made a great hit at the Colonial theater, Boston. Capacity attendance has been the record for each performance. "Little Nemo" can stay in Boston only five weeks. Seven performances have been booked for the Nixon theater, Pittsburg. It is necessary to cut out the Saturday evening performance, in order to open at the Colonial theater, Chicago, on time. A special train, with six baggage cars, is required for the transportation of the "Little Nemo" company and production.

"Little Nemo" is the strongest and best attraction of the season. Its comedians, Joseph Cawthorn, Billy Van and Harry Kelly are unequaled as funmakers. Elphye Snowden is delightful in her role, and the rest of the company is of similar high standing. Record business was played to in Boston. "Little Nemo" is an entertainment that all theater-goers want to see more than once.

Maclyn Arbukle, who is playing the role of the fat sheriff in "The Round Up," was "touched" by "panhandlers" in St. Louis, one evening. A third, who was well dressed, approached him.

"Friend, can you give a stranger money for a bed?"

"Sure," said Arbukle, reaching into his pocket. "Have you change for a half?"

"I think I have," the mendicant replied, diving into his pocket. Then he realized his mistake and took to his heels.

"The White Sister" has succeeded "The Renegade" at the Studebaker, Chicago, and this has permitted a strenthening of the cast not originally contemplated by Liebler & Co., managers of the attraction. When "The White Sister" opened this week, William Farnum was drafted to the position of leading man for Miss Viola Allen, and the combining of these two favorite players has produced the most gratifying results. "The White Sister" is accepted by Chicagoans as the strongest work yet turned out by F. Marion Crawford, and the assistance the author has been given by Walter Hackett has emphasized the artistiisness of the production. The problem that the play develops is already being eagerly discussed by audiences, and is simply this—a young woman finds herself parted by war from the man she is to marry, and on the announcement of his death, she becomes a nun. When this report is found to be falsc—what is se to do? Shall she renounce her religion or her sweetheart? What should you do under similar circumstances? The answer that Miss Allen, in the role of "The White Sister" gives, has been considered eminently satisfactory by the Studebaker's following.

Edward W. Townsend used to write the "Chimmie Fadden" stories, and the country generally allowed that if there was another writer in America capable of turning out such delightful character studies as these—well, he hadn't shown, at all events. Frank O'Mally has for several years been doing the "fireworks" for a New York paper, famous for its unique handling of current happenings. Arthur Brisbane got up, not long ago, at a dinner given by the Friars at the Hotel Astor, in New York, and in the course of his speech said—"Certain kind friends have referred to me as the best newspaper man in New York today. I wish to deny it. The best newspaper man in New York today is Frank O'Mally." A short time ago, Townsend and O'Mally got together on the broad, ancestral acres of a Jersey estate, and told each other they would write a play. When they got back to Broadway, they carried the play with them to the office of Liebler & Co. When that firm had read the manuscript, they said, as promptly as you like—"This is our play; go and have your pictures taken, young men, and prepare to become even more famous." Here are contracts. Sign on the dotted lines, please." And that's the foreword to the production of "The Head of the House." It is an original comedy of domestic life, with a love story to be sure, and a side-light on district politics, and a central character who runs everything in the house by the force of her strong personality. This title role will be played by Miss Ada Lewis, when that comedy has its start, on March 10. Miss Lewis has done a great many things that audiences have a right to thank her for, and among the lot is, of course, the ever-to-be-remembered tough girl, who made her hit with Harrigan.

Henry B. Stanford, the English actor, who came to this country as Sir Henry Irving's leading man, on the occasion of that great actor's last visit here, and who is now playing the part of Dandy in Eleanor Robson's support in "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," at the Lyceum theater, tells of an amusing encounter with a talkative little Italian bootblack. While "shining" Stanford's shoes, the boy asked him whether he was English, and, receiving an affirmative reply, grinned broadly and chuckled: "Inglees, ha, ha! Dey no spic no good, dey droppa da haich!"

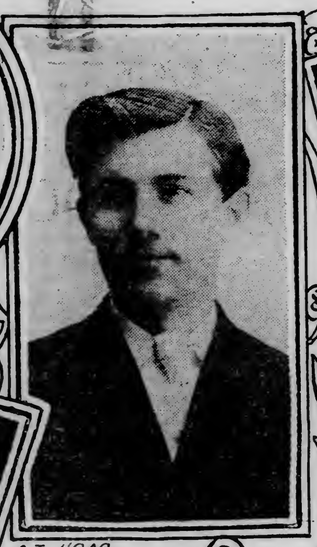

WEST DULUTH MASONS WILL SOON DEDICATE THEIR HANDSOME NEW TEMPLE ON NORTH CENTRAL AVENUE

Some time before the end of March the members of Euclid lodge, No. 198 A. F. & A. M., will throw open their fine new temple on North Central avenue and hold dedication exercises in celebration of the completion of the building.

While the building was under construction it was found inconvenient to hold corner stone laying ceremonies, so it was decided that when every detail had been completed and all the furniture and fixtures had been installed, the lodge would hold suitable public dedication ceremonies.

At a recent lodge meeting a committee was appointed to make arrangements for the house warming, but as yet the arrangements are not very far advanced, thought the committee hopes to set the date before long.

For many years it had been the ambition of the Euclid lodge to have a temple of its own, a suitable place in which to hold its rites. A committee composed of the following was eventually appointed to have charge of the construction: E. G. Wallinder, L. Ramsted, C. S. Weaver, A. Dunleavy, J. J. Schinlaub, James Maghan, L. R. Clark and W. B. Getchell, secretary and treasurer.

The lodge is now meeting in its temple, which is arranged for Blue lodge, Royal Arch chapter and commandery. Duluth chapter, N. 59, R. A. M., hold their meetings in the building. They are an active body with a membership of 107. W. B. Getchell is the present H. P., and A. Dunleavy secretary. They hold stated meetings on the first and third Wednesdays of each month. The rooms set apart for a commandery of Knights Templar will not be fitted up until circumstances demand the organization of such a body in the western part of the city.

The temple, which faces on North Central avenue, is two stories high and 100 by 42 feet. It is built of brick and stone, and is an imposing structure. Inside it is attractively finished in hardwood, and the arrangements of the rooms has been planned with much care. The cost of construction was about $15,000, which is said to be unusually cheap for the material and work put into the building.

The Euclid lodge was organized Oct. 17, 1890, with forty-two charter members, and was granted a charter Feb. 3, 1891. The first officers were M. C. Burnside, W. M.; C. J. Mallory, S. W.; G. H. Wright, J. W.; E. D. Home, secretary; H P. Smith, treasurer. The books show an increase in membership each year since then, with the one exception of 1898. The present membership is 174.

The present officers are: M. J. Murray, W. M.; M. M. Meldahl, S. W.; A. J. Hoag, J. W.; L. A. Barnes, treasurere; A. Dunleavy, secretary; W. B. Getchell, S. D.; F. R. Zimmerman, J. D.; J. W. Lundgren, S. S.; W. M. Anderson, J. S.; Thomas Grice, chaplain, and C. T. Johnson, tyler.

The present secretary, Andrew Dunleavy, has held office since 1897, and Treasurer Barnes since 1900. The lodge meets on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month. The lodge's first meeting in the new temple was held Wednesday evening, Feb. 10, last.

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week anti-tuberculosis exhibits will be displayed in the rotunda of the library, and lectures will be given explaining them. Morning lectures will be held in chapel at 10:30 and afternoon lectures at 4 o'clock in the chemistry lecture room. Among the many speakers will be Prof. McVay, Prof. Gray, Prof. Phelan and Mr. Lees of the Associated Charities. Christopher Eaton, executive secretary of the Minnesota Association for the Prevention and Relief of Tuberculosis, will give a series of stereopticon lectures. Tuberculosis has proved the most deadly disease in Minnesota, 1,936 of the 18,110 deaths in 1905 being due to it. The purpose of the exhibit is to enlighten the public mind concerning the disease, and to secure concerted action toward cutting down its great mortality.

Before the expiration of the present college year notice will be given by the board of regents of a change in the requirements for entrance to the university law college. This change wil come into force two years hence and thereafter, two full years of academic work will be necessary when a law degree is sought. This will make a five-year course imperative in order to secure a degree in the law department. President Northrop said: "This will make the Minnesota law college equalled by few university law departments in the country.

Friday evening, March 5, has been named as the occasion of the first informal given by the senior class.

Yesterday afternoon the famous French speaker, M. Marcel Poete, lectured in chapel. President Northrop introduced him. Stereopticon views were used to illustrate the talk, which was in the French language. M. Marcel Poete is a man of considerable note and learning, and has been well received throughout the country.

Forty-five students were summoned before the students' work committee to show why they failed in 60 per cent of their university work.

GLOBE MINES QUITE ACTIVE

Sale of Warrior Company's Property Rumored---Preliminary Work on the Live Oak Satisfactory---Miami is Working a Large Force.

Globe, Ariz., Feb. 27.—The local companies are all busy, and there is more systematic development being done in the mines district than in any other district in the Southwest. The sale of the Warrior company's property is rumored, but cannot be confirmed, in the absence of Supt. White, who has not yet returned from Philadelphia, where he went some time ago to confer with the Eastern directors. The rumor of the sale probably sprung from the publication in an Eastern paper that engineers had recently examined and sampled the company's mine for the Smelting & Refining company, from which it was inferred that the latter company was desirous of securing an entrance into the Globe camp. The Warrior company has one of the most promising ore bodies in the district, opened to a depth of 225 feet, nearly 500 feet along the strike of the vein, and averaging about forty feet in width. Shipments from the Warrior to the Old Dominion smelter have recently been increased to more than 100 tons of 10 per cent ore daily.

The preliminary work on the Live Oak is very satisfactory. An old tunnel that has been restored, was found to be in sulphide its entire length of upwards of 500 feet, and while the values indicated are small—from one-half per cent to 2 per cent, with occasional seams going 5 per cent copper—the fact that the formation is mineralized for so great a width is considered very important, and at greater depth the percentage of copper is almost certain to be higher, as it is in the shaft at a depth of less than 300 feet. By many local mining men Live Oak is regarded with most favor among the new properties floated.

WILL SHIP ORE TO GERMANY

Litigation Over the Germania Tungsten Mine Settled and the Company Plans Big Improvements---Contract With German Steel Makers.

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 27.—The Germania tungsten mine, situated four miles from Deertrail in Stevens county, and which has been closed for almost a year, owing to litigation, is to reopen as soon as the roads are in condition for the hauling of ore, according to a statement made by J. R. Brown, a mining engineer of this city, who has just returned after making an expert examination of the mine.

"The litigation in which the mine has been involved is now ended," states Mr. Brown, "and as soon as possible a large force of men will be put at work." At present about half a dozen men are employed, and this force will be increased to fifty.

"A forty-ton mill was installed on the property about a year ago, and this will now be operated to full capacity. About 3,000 feet of development work has been done, and a high grade body of ore has been found. The ore will run high, and it is, in my opinion, one of the largest bodies of tungsten ore in the world.

"The company owns about 2,000 acres of land and has its own electric plant, generating power for its drills and other machinery, as well as lighting the entire camp.

"William Scheck, the manager of the property, has made a contract with German steel manufacturers for the entire output of the property. Most of the stockholders are Germans, and a few Eastern capitalists have recently taken an interest in the property and have advanced a large sum of money to keep the work going now that the litigation has ended.

"It is the intention of the company in a short time to increase the capacity of the present mill and also to build a new road to Springdale, the nearest shipping point. This proposed new road will shorten the distance and reduce the grade for hauling. At present there is a twenty-mile haul, but it is expected that this will be reduced to about twelve miles."

MONTE CRISTO MINES SOLD

Washington State Property That Was Once Operated on Big Scale—New Owners Will Drive Large Main Outlet Tunnel.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 27.—The event of the month in Washington mines is the sale of the Monte Cristo Mines & Metals company's propertie in Snohomish county and the announcement that new owners will resume work on the famous Monte Cristo properties on an enlarged scale. The Monte Cristo mines were operated on a big scale once, in the days of the Rockefeller ownership. The plans embody the building of reduction works and a smelter on the ground.

A large main outlet tunnel for all the properties will be driven. A similar tunnel was planned by the Colby-Hoyt syndicate in the early '90s, but the plan was abandoned after $100,000 had been appropriated for starting the work.

The Monte Cristo Mines & Metals company, which is now in the hands of a receiver, was organized in 1906 by Samuel Silverman, a mining "plunger," well known throughout the Northwest and Alaska. After purchasing and consolidating the Pride-Mystery, Justice and Williams properties, Silverman undertook to float bonds to carry on his extensive improvements, which included construction of an arsenic plant, but the money famine interfered with his plans and he was unable to meet his financial obligations.

Judgment has been entered in the superior court against the Sunset Copper Mining company in favor of Frank M. Bell of Glens Falls, N. Y., the mortgagee, for $37,501. The company has been declared insolvent, the temporary receivership of John B. Fogarty made permanent and a decree entered to the effect that Bell is entitled to all the property involved, or enough of it to pay his judgment, with interest and costs. The property consists of thirty-six mining claims, several water rights and mill sites, water-power plant, electric light plant, compressor plant, machine drills and other mining machinery and equipment. Stockholders say that an agreement has been reached, under which the company is to be reorganized and that those holding stock in the insolvent company may participate in the proportion of the indebtedness, which amounts to a little more than 2½ cents a share.

The capital of the old company was $2,600,000 and the indebtedness is about $60,000. Mr. Bell is the heaviest individual stockholder, having acquired the interests of the W. H. Baldwin estate. Mr. Baldwin financed the company in 1903, and held a controlling interest. A large tonnage of high grade copper ore is exposed in the workings, and the mine could have been an extensive and profitable producer but for friction between Eastern and Western stockholders.

An eighty-foot drift of rich bornite copper ore has just been completed in the Sunset mine. It lies along the foot wall, runs six to twenty inches in width and assays about 30 per cent copper. The depth from the surface is 600 feet. Shipping to the smelter will be started early in the season.

Litigation over the Germania tungsten mine, near Deertrail, has ended and the property will soon resume active operations.

MINING IN THE BLACK HILLS

Exploitation of Quartzite in Dakota Shaft of Imperial Company—Hailstorm Property in Two Bit District May Become a Producer.

Deadwood, S. D., Feb. 27.—The management of the Imperial Gold Mining company expresses itself as well satisfied with the work on the 500-foot level of the Dakota shaft. As this work lies principally on the quartzite formation, and former work in the Bald Mountain district has been in the flat formation of the upper levels, the exploitation of the quartzite is of great interest. To the south of the shaft the company has located a fine body of siliceous ore, which gives every indication of being permanent. Large quantities have been shipped to the mill here, and god results obtained. While the exact dimensions of the shoot have not been ascertained, yet it is of sufficient size to insure work for some time to come.

Some encouraging work has been done recently on the Hailstorm property in the Two Bit district, and mining men interested in that section now look to see it become a producer. Development has opened up a vertical vein lying in the porphyry, which appears to be one of the best ore bodies in that district. It is eight feet in width, and of good grade, showing free gold in the pan.

In the same district rich plans are making for the leasing of the old Monarch ground by George Bachman, to Easterners, who are financially equipped to handle the property on a large scale. For more than ten years the property has been producing ore of a good grade, and if worked to its capacity, would prove a good mine. Experts who examined the ground made a flattering report.

One of the most promising properties in the Maitland district at the present time is the Fortunate Mining company's ground, which adjoins the North Homestake Mining company. One shoot of silicious ore found assays on an average of $16 a ton gold. The main shaft has been sunk 250 feet, and it is thought that another fifty feet at the utmost will disclose the quartzite formation that is sought. This shaft is comparatively dry and little difficulty has been encountered in the sinking. When the sinaft has reached the quartzite, an effort will be made to prospect under that formation for the vertical veins usually found there. Both the North Homesteak and the Minnesota Mines company have done sufficient prospecting with the diamond drill in the lower levels to determine the existence of these veins. The formations are identical with those found on the Fortunate ground.

The Homestake is figuring on a further increase of the capacity of its slime plant here by the addition of more filter presses, as well as other improvements in operating them. The plant is now handling about 1,500 tons of slimes daily, but with the proposed addition, would be capable of treating something over 2,500 tons daily. A new sluicing plant is being put in operation by which all the presses can be washed at once in the cleanup, saving time and labor. Twenty-six presses are now operating, and it is planned to build a new wing and add fifteen more.

SHIPMENTS SHOW A DECLINE

Less Than Fifty Per Cent of Lake Copper Production Moved This Month—Developments at the Ojibway Attracting Attention—Superior Continues to Show Remarkable Results.

Houghton, Mich., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—With a tendency toward curtailment noted in the operations of several of the larger copper producers of other districts, the Lake Superior companies continue to pursue to even tenor of their several ways and manifest no intentions to restrict outputs, in spite of an apparently decreasing demand for the metal.

There are no large stocks of copper at the local smelters, the visible supply being under 10 per cent of annual production. The most unfavorable feature in the local retail situation is the movement of the metal itself, which at the present time, is almost at a standstill. Shipments during January were somewhat in excess of the month's production, in comparison with which the present month makes rather a sorry showing, for less than 50 per cent of its production has been moved.

Ojibway.

Recent developments at the Ojibway mine on the northern extension of the Kearsarge lode are attracting no little attention to this property. The company owns 1,440 acres of mineral lands, carrying the underlie of the Kearsarge lode in addition to one-half mile of outcropping, all of which can be mined to almost unlimited depth. Operations began about eighteen months ago, in which time two shafts have been sunk to a depth of more than 700 feet. The lode is already disclosed at four points and with the exception of the first disclosure at a depth of 350 feet in the No. 2 shaft, a very fine showing of copper rock is in evidence, the ground tributary to the No. 1 shaft being especially rich in sharp rock and "barrel work." The surface equipment is complete in every particular and includes a central steam hoisting plant, machine shop and small compressor plant.

Superior.

Superior continues development work with the same remarkable results obtained in the past. The number of machine drills was recently increased to eight, and a new hoist, with a capacity to hoist from a depth of 2,500 feet, installed. No stoping is in progress, all acticity being confined to opening work. The shaft is sinking well below the tenth level. At No. 2 shaft, operations have been suspended temporarily awaiting the installation of a steam hoist, which is expected to be in commission within sixty days. The shaft was recently enlarged to two compartment size and equipped with a small temporary shafthouse of the regular Calumet & Hecla development stage type. A depth of about 200 feet has been attained and a limited amount of lateral work done without revealing anything of value. The company is mining and milling about 120 tons of rock daily, averaging 2 per cent mineral.

Isle Royale.

Isle Royale's new compressor at No. 6 shaft was turned over a few days ago and will be regularly in service early in March. The addition will give the company compressor capacity of 110 drills or about double the number now in use. Conditions underground at this point were never better, and a creditable amount of opening work has been done with the facilities available. The shaft is sinking below the sixth level, and there is apparently no diminution in copper content of the ground as depth is gained. Nos. 4 and 5 shafts, sinking below the fifth and fourth levels, respectively, are opening into ground not quite the equal of that tributary to No. 6 shaft. The No. 2 shaft, approaching the twenty-fifth level, continues to furnish approximately two-thirds of the total rock tonnage milled though of a uniformly lower grade than that produced by the newer shafts to the southward. Sinking has temporarily ceased in shaft "A" on the Baltic lode at a depth of about 130 feet, and a diamond drill outfit installed is engaged in exploring the formation at that depth.

Victoria.

Eastern parties, working in conjunction with a former director of the Victoria company, are soliciting proxies for Victoria shareholders with the intention of ousting the present management, whom they charge with lack of progressiveness. The news comes as a surprise to local mining men in touch with the situation at the mine, and unless the proposed new management is able to put copper in the ground, where none exists, it is not easy to understand just how the stockholders will benefit by a change in management. The present management has been severely handicapped by conditions beyond the control of ordinary man, and aside from a possible mistake made in sinking a single compartment shaft instead of one of double capacity, there is really nothing else for which it can reasonably be criticised. For the success of a low grade proposition, such as the Victoria is, an almost unlimited volume of rock output is abso-

READY TO EXPEND MILLIONS

Amalgamated Company Still Looking for Efficient Method of Reducing Smoke Trouble at Washoe Smelter—The Reorganization of the Butte-Montana—Comet Mine Closed Down.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—F. J. Falding of New York, an eminent chemical engineer, who installed the arsenic eliminating device at the smelter of the Tennessee Copper company at Ducktown, Tenn., is now engaged in making an investigation of conditions at the Washoe smelter of the Amalgamated Copper company. He is working in the interest of the government and the Amalgamated company in an effort to ascertain if the smoke trouble there can be further reduced. He was brought to Montana by the company after President Roosevelt expressed the opinion that the Ducktown process might be introduced at Anaconda and eliminate the arsenic from the smoke. After an investigation of conditions Mr. Falding satisfied himself that the Ducktown process could not be applied at the Washoe smelter, and he so testified before Judge Hunt of the United States court during a supplemental proceeding in the smoke litigation. He finds that the problems at Anaconda are not at all like those at Ducktown, and the Anaconda plant is at least six times larger than that of the Tennessee company. Mr. Falding is at present engaged in experimenting to see if it is possible to manufacture sulphuric acid and thus utilize a portion of the fumes. He said it would be impossible to manufacture acid from the fumes leaving the stack, for the reason that it is of too low grade in sulphur oxide, so his tests are being applied to the gases coming from the different branches of the smelter. Mr. Falding said that the flue and furnace method of extracting the arsenic used at the Washoe smelter is the most complete and efficient of which he has any knowledge and is the one generally used where any attempt is made to eliminate the arsenic. Mr. Falding told the court that he saw great difficulties in the way of taking care of the deleterious emanations, but that those difficulties might act as a stimulant to him and others in their efforts to solve the problems. E. P. Mahewson, general manager of the Washoe, testified that the company had spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in the search for a solution of the smoke problems, and that the method now used was installed on the recommendation of Mr. Crowsdale of Denver and Mr. Brunton, the company's consulting engineer, who made a tour of Europe studying smelter problems. While the best known to science has been employed by the company, the latter has been constant in its experiments and investigations and is ready to substitute any new system for the one in use, if demonstrated to be better, although the change may mean an added expense of millions of dollars.

Offered $200,000.

The company has been interested in the electrical experiments being carried on by Prof. Cottrell of Berkeley, Cal., at Selby, Cal., and has offered him $200,000 if he would perfect a method that would successfully eliminate the arsenic from the smoke. Prof. Cottrell was brought to Montana and he made an examination of the Amalgamated smelters, but he could make no promises or guarantees. He said that during his experiments at Selby he encountered mechanical difficulties of so serious a nature that he doubted very much if the system could be applied at the Washoe smelter. Mr. Mathewson said all other systems have been found impractical for use at the big Washoe plant, these systems including the cooling process either by spraying, by the admission of air, by radiation or by freezing; the bag process, friction, by filtering the gases, by decreasing the velocity of the gases, and by centrifugal gas cleaners. The installation of either of these systems would cost from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 or more, and their operation would cost from $1,800 to $10,800 per day, while the arsenic recovered would be worth several hundred dollars per day only. At the Great Falls smelter of the Amalgamated company friction method is being installed in connection with the new high stack, which was recently completed and is the highest in the world. If the system proves a success there it will be substituted for the present system at the Washoe, although it will cost between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. In the course of his testimony Mr. Mathewson made the statement that 90 per cent of all ore received at the Washoe smelter is concentrating ore, and only 10 per cent goes direct to the furnaces. The arsenic in the ore varies from a mere trace to 2½ per cent. The highest percentage of ar-

LAKE SUPERIOR IRON MINES

Expected That Movement of Ore Will be Started Late and Mining Managers Still Uninformed as to the Amount They Will be Called Upon to Furnish.

Notwithstanding the general understanding in the trade that materially more ore will be forwarded from the Lake Superior iron region than last year, when approximately 26,000,000 tons measured the outgo, there is much uncertainty as to just what will be the situation the coming season of navigation. In this respect the conditions are much the same as twelve months ago at this time. It is the belief the movement of ore will be started late, and not until the season is well advanced will the shipments approximate their maximum.

At the present time the mining managers are all at sea as to the amount of ore their properties will be called upon to furnish. They have prepared for big outputs and are in position to forward a larger production than was ever sent down the lakes, but just what will be the demands upon them is a matter concerning which they are reluctant to pass an opinion. The agitation with respect to revision of the tariff is considered to play prominent part in the present uncertainty, and there is a strong feeling that not until the business horizon is cleared of this disturbing factor will the situation permit of close estimates of probable ore needs.

That it is expectation of the lake marine interests that shipments will not greatly exceed those of last year is shown by the fact the carrying charges will be continued at last season's reduced basis. These rates are 65 cents per gross ton from Two Harbors, Duluth and Ashland, at the head of Lake Superior; 60 cents from Marquette, and 50 cents from Escanaba, Lake Michigan. The action of the vessel interests is significant as it is considered that at the charges agreed upon the smaller class of boats will find it extremely hard to make both ends meet, while no more than a fair return need be expected from the larger bulk carriers, and then only if cargoes are plentiful and delays infrequent. The rates are 10 cents a ton lower than prevailed in 1907, 1906 and 1905.

Great Northern's Extension.

The Great Northern railroad's proposed extension on the western portion of the Mesaba range is expected to go into commission the latter part of the coming summer. The route has been selected and the right-of-way is being secured. The line will extend from Nashwauk to Grand Rapids, on the Mississippi river, touching the mining towns of Marble, Calumet, Bovey and Coleraine, and will serve a territory from which a very large ore traffic will be secured in accordance with the terms of the contract under which the Steel corporation is developing the Hill ore lands. The distance is approximately twenty miles. Unless considerable shipments are made from the new Hill mine, now being stripped as a big open pit by the Steel corporation, the Great Northern extension will not be called upon to handle much traffic this year. This also will be true of the western Mesaba extension of the Steel corporation's Duluth, Missabe & Northern railroad. In large part it is the mission of the latter to serve the Canisteo-Walker and Holman mines, yet in both the seasons of 1908 and 1907 there were shipped from the properties an aggregate of but 17,866 tons of ore and concentrates, this product representing an expenditure of more than $11,000,000. It will not be until the latter part of 1910 at least that the Canisteo district will be fully developed, and with the big washery in commission will be prepared to ship upwards of a 1,000,000 tons in one season. Very large tonnages of ore will come from the western Mesaba in future and both the Great Northern and Missabe extensions will be most important feeders of the repective railroad systems.

Adding to Equipment.

The Chicago & Northwestern company is making a notable addition to the equipment of its line between the Gogebic iron range and the docks at Ashland. The rolling stock is being increased to the extent of 1,000 steel ore cars. Five hundred cars of this improved type were in commission on the division last season and gave excellent satisfaction. Now all the ore cars are to be of steel and the hundreds of wooden cars that they will replace are to be sent to the Menominee range for service between that region and the port of Escanaba. The Soo line is transporting 10,000 tons of ore from the Cleveland Cliffs Iron & Chemical company's blast furnace at Manistique. Shipments of ore from Michigan, are also being made to the Algoma Steel Works at the Canadian Sault. The Algoma interests, operating the property under the name of the Dessau Mining company, control the Millie mine at Iron Mountain, Menominee range, and it is understood that this mine will be restored to the active list shortly.

The Soo Furnaces.

The annual meeting of the Dessau company, held recently, resulted in the election of the following directors, all of whom are identified with the Lake Superior corporation: H. S. Fleming and J. D. Terry, New York; H. I. Underhill, Orange, N. Y.; Warren Moore, Richmond, Va., and John H. Moore, Sault Ste. Marie, Mich. A third open hearth furnace is to be installed at the Sault, but, contrary to published reports, an additional blast furnace is not to be erected nor are the steel mills to be enlarged, for the present at least. The new open hearth furnace will be under the same roof as the other two and it will be put in at once, the foundation already being in readiness. At the Jones "step-process" iron-making plant at Iron Mountain, the balling furnace is now being erected and will, it is expected, be prepared to go into service the coming week. This furnace is known as the second step in the Jones method of producing steel billets from crude ore and is of the familiar type in use in iron centers generally.

IN CHIRICAHUA MOUNTAINS

Expected That the Properties in This District Will Become Big Producers---Calumet & Arizona People Have Large Interests There.

Bisbee, Ariz., Feb. 27.—There are not wanting those of reputation in mining affairs, who predict in the ensuing few months at the outside within the next two years, there will be opened to the copper world, just as Courtland is at present being developed, a district in the Chiricahua mountains which will be second to none in the territory These mountains, which parallel the eastern boundary of Cachise county for a distance of fifty or more miles, have been placed in the forest reserve because of the valuable timber on their giant peaks, but they have also been known for years as the depository of rich mineral.

There is proof practically positive that the big Calumet & Arizona company, which has taken the lead in the development of Courtland, is fully aware of the gemarkable copper deposits in the Chirichauas and is only biding its time until the proper time to open up this virgin field. The story of their developments in the region of Paradise where under the name of the San Simon Development company they spent in the neighborhood of $400,000, is well known. There is practically little denial also of the fact that they ran into a body of ore, through which they ran a drift ninety feet before reaching the lime on the other side.

Subsequent proceedings of the Calumet & Arizona people are convincing that they found enough to convince them that they had opened up a great copper region. They allowed the bond they had on the property to lapse and let the mines fill with water. And yet they turned around and bought in the same property and today have the claims patented. Not only did they do this, but they acquired under the name of the Manhattan Development company, the Manhattan group, the company being composed of representatives of the Cole-Ryan interests and Duluth parties. They have patented the ground. The purchase price is said to have been in the neighborhood of $160,000.

The Sullivan group, near the Manhattan, consisting of four claims, owned by Duluth parties, who paid $25,000 for the property. Some of the best ore in the district has been encountered here, but no active development work has been done on this property for some time past. This company has $27,000 in the treasury for development purposes.

Situated between the Manhattan and the Sullivan properties is the Bisbee Sonora property, consisting of a group of about thirty claims, comprising nearly 600 acres.

COBALT TO DOUBLE OUTPUT

Believed That Past Year's Records Will be Increased 100 Per Cent for Coming Year—More Concentrators Coming In.

Cobalt, Ont., Feb. 27.—Cobalt's output during 1909 will be double that of 1909, both in tonnage and in ounces of silver produced.

The concentration of the low grade ore by the local mine and customs concentrators will be responsible for the higher silver average and the increased plants and genuine development at the big mines, backed by new shippers, will make the output double of last year.

The Coniagas, Cobalt Central Buffalo and King Edward concentrators, and the Muggley Customs mill have been running steadily for some time.

During 1908 both Cobalt Central and the Coniagas shipped nothing but high grade ore and concentrates. They are now both on a regular dividend-paying basis. Mr. Hardinge, the consulting engineer at the former mine, has always predicted that every Cobalt mine would have its own concentrator.

The O'Brien has always been one of the biggest producers in Colbalt camp. Last year it shipped to the smelters 3,423 tons of ore, or more than one-eighth of the camp's total output. Henceforward, this mine will ship nothing but high grade ore and concentrates. Its new mill is about completed, and the plant will be installed and in operation by April. Its capacity will be 100 tons per day, and the O'Brien is one of the few mines in the camp that can keep from its own dumps a mill of this capacity steadily at work.

The new concentrating plant at the McKinley-Darragh started operations last week. It has a capacity of 100 tons per day and the McKinley & Savage will keep the mill working steadily.

The mills now in operation in Cobalt camp have a maximum capacity of 600 tons per day and 400 tons will be daily concentrated.

The veins in the camp are frequently narrow, but rich, with a wall rock on either side charged with native silver. This wall rock makes good milling ore. Later discoveries underground reveal in some sections of the camp veins of width with a few inches of solid ore in the center of the vein. The rest of the vein matter frequently carries up to 500 ounces of silver. This means great milling ore. Again, where the fracturing has been very severe, an immense body of ore, carrying low values, is found, and in the southern part of Coleman township, work for many mills will be forthcoming.

The Temiskaming mine has the largest veins at depth of any of the Cobalt mines and an immense amount of milling ore is ready here for a mill. The plans have been drawn and work will be started early in the spring. This mill will have a capacity of probably 150 tons per day and it will treat the low grade ores of the Temiskaming and the Pan-Silver.

MITCHELL IS AGAIN ON TOP

President of Mitchell Mining Company of Guerrero, Mex., Has Just Completed Smelter at Bouse, Ariz.---Once Went "Broke."

New York, Feb. 27.—George Mitchell, the copper and smelter promoter, who went "broke" backing the mines of the Mitchell Mining company in Guerrero, Mex., by reason of the almost overwhelming costs of building transportation facilities to the mines, is again on top, says the Mining Age. News to this effect has leaked to the East from the fact that he has constructed a 300-ton furnace at Bouse, Ariz., to treat the ores from his Swansea mine, which is a part of the properties belonging to the Clara Consolidated Gold & Copper company in Arizona.

Two years ago George Mitchell, who had spent money and time erecting a big plant to handle ores from his copper mines in Guerrero, Mex., found out that the ores were too low to go directly into a smelter, but would have to be concentrated instead. This meant a long delay, and when the difficult transportation features of the venture became known the entire plan faltered, and when soon after the treasury gave out the project collapsed.

Mitchell, while temporarily embarrassed, returned to his old native heath in Swansea, Wales, and before long was dickering for another property in Arizona. The people who knew him abroad again joined him in the new venture, and are understood to have raised $1,000,000 within two weeks. Mitchell quietly and unostentatiously came back to the United States, and has again come out ahead.

George Mitchell has had the usual spectacular career that follows the footsteps of one who is either on the high wave of prosperity or else on the other side of the medal. At one time he was associated with Col. Greene. In the early days of the colonel's Cananea experiment George Mitchell constructed the first furnaces erected at that plant. These, however, were found to be inadequate to the character of the ores handled, and were at later date removed and others substituted. Mitchell then decided that he would operate for himself, with the result that Mitchell Mining company was launched on the market. For months there has been no quotation for the stock, but it may be that some resurrection of it may be attempted later.

NEW RICH PLACER DIGGINGS

Located on Tributaries of the Stewart River in the Yukon---Still Richer Finds of Gold on Haggart Creek.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 27.—New placer diggings which promise to enormously increase the gold output of the Yukon district this year will soon loom large in the public eye, according to Dr. Macfarlane, inspector of public works, with headquarters at Dawson. The finds were made last fall, too late in the season to carry on any extensive work. They are located on tributaries of the Stewart river. Miles of ground have been located by pioneer prospectors, who have made and lost fortunes since the early days of Klondike discoveries. Barker creek, a tributary of the Stewart, forty miles above its confluence with the Yukon, will be the scene of one of the spring rushes. Gold is expected to be extracted in abundance, as the little development already done was of the most encouraging character. Miners secured as high as $2.50 a pan.

Better results, however, are expected from Mayo river, a branch of the upper Stewart. The richest diggings, where the surface has scarcely been scratched, are located on Haggart creek, which empties into the Mayo. Here the gold is coarser than on its new rival and prospecting gave results up to $3.50 a pan.

Twenty-four miles of wagon road will be built by the Yukon government this summer to the new camp.

The United States assay, office last week received a fifty-pound bar of gold from Nome, worth nearly $11,000. The bar came overland by dog team to Fairbanks and thence to Valdez, in charge of the owner. The trip from Nome to Seattle occupied sixty-three days. The brick left Nome Dec. 1. Gold shipments from Nome are unusual during the sealed winter season, and few consignments reach the assay office during this period. The MINNESOTA.

GOOD MAN IS CALLED

Rev. Father Greene of East Grand Forks to His Reward.

Once Was Assistant at Sacred Heart Cathedral in Duluth.

East Grand Forks, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Rev. Father Frederick Greene, pastor of the Sacred Heart church here, at one time assistant at the Cathedral of the Sacred Heart in Duluth, and a man beloved by all, regardless of religious beliefs, died at the parochial residence yesterday, after a lingering illness, of consumption.

Requiem high mass will be celebrated at the Sacred Heart church, at 10 a. m. Monday, and the body will be taken to Connecticut for burial.

Out of respect for the high standing of the deceased, it is expected the public schools of the city will be closed Monday.

James Frederick Greene was born on Easter Sunday, April 9, 1871, in Kilgarif county, Ireland. He was educated in the national school at Avra, pursued his classical studies at Moyne, county Longford, Ireland, and later completed his theological studies at All Hallows college, Drumcondra, Dublin. He wos ordained to the priesthood at Dublin, June 24, 1894, being but little more than 23 years of age.

Comes to Duluth

He came to the United States in the fall of 1894, and entered upon his duties as assistant at the Sacred Heart cathedral at Duluth, with which he was affiliated at the time of his ordination. He remained at Duluth a year, and was then transferred to Aitkin, Minn., as pastor, and remained there for three years. From this point he was transferred on Oct. 5, 1898, to East Grand Forks, and from that time to the time of his death he was one of the moving spirits in everything that went to make the spiritual progress of the community greater, and the lives of the people happier.

He leaves a mother, two brothers and four sisters. His father, Patrick Greene, died in 1891, and is buried in the Moyne church yard, Longford county, Ireland. His mother, Ellen Greene, is still living at Kilgarif, and is 80 years of age. His brother, John, and sisters, Mary and Ellen, are now residing at Nanuxatik, Conn., where the body will be shipped for interment. His brother, Francis, is living in Scotland, while Thomas and Katherine reside in the old home of Kilgarif. His eldest sister, Mrs. Rose Illey, is a resident of Drumbaldray, Ireland. Of these his brother, John, and sister, Mary, were at his bedside when he died, as were his two cousins, May McLoughlin and Patrick Murphy.

BIG MACHINES ORDERED.

By Backus-Brooks Company for International Falls Plant.

Minneapolis, Minn., Feb. 27.—The Backus-Brooks company has bought from the Pusey & Jones company of Wilmington, Del., four paper-making machines of the largest type for installation by July next in the enormous plant that that company is constructing at International Falls and Fort Frances. The machinery will fill fifty cars and will cost $250,000.

Contracts will shortly be let for 1,500 tons of structural steel. The Backus-Brooks management had expected to let the steel contract earlier but by waiting will be able to put its order in with the inflow of other business to steel-making centers resulting from recent reduction of prices.

FARMERS' NEW CREAMERY.

Co-operative Concern Has Just Been Organized at Pease.

Milaca, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The enterprising farmers living in the vicinity of Pease have formed a co-operative creamery association and will erect a large butter making plant at that place with the opening of spring.

The capital stock of the new company is $5,000, and the corporation will be known as the Farmers' Co-operative Creamery of Pease. Officers have ben elected as follows: Harry Van de Relt, president; Lester Kempton, vice president; Gerald Straiting, secretary; John Larson, treasurer; William Jones, Ben Van Roekel and Christ Modin, directors.

An ice house has been erected near the site of the proposed plant and is being filled with ice for the use of the creamery. The success of the other co-operative creameries in the county was an inducement for the farmers of Pease to get together and unite in this industry as they are most of them engaged in the production of butter fat.

ALLEGED ELOPERS MAY BE IN SIOUX CITY, IOWA.

Meadowlands, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The whereabouts of Dane Waddington and Miss Mabel Wadington, cousins, who disappeared from their homes here last week, and are alleged to have eloped, remains a mystery, although it is reported they have gone to Sioux City, Iowa, where the girl formerly lived. Waddington is 21 and the girl is under 16, and although the law of Minnesota does not forbid first cousins marrying, the girl's mother was very much opposed to the idea. The poor woman is nearly frantic over the action of her daughter.

The couple are said to have left Tuesday evening of last week for Colraine, after walking to Elmer, then the next day went to Duluth. Whether they have been married has not been learned.

Has Mammoth Smoker.

Little Falls, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Simon B. Brick, clerk of court, is glorying over a fine pipe he received as a present from Herman Wendlund of Culdrum, who only recently returned from a visit to Germany. The pipe has a stem four feet long with a four-inch bowl. Mr. Brick christened it with a whole sack of tobacco.

MACALESTER IS RAISING FUNDS

Has $50,000 Pledge From Frederick Weyerhaeuser —More Promised.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The trustees of Macalester college announce that Frederick Weyerhaeuser of St. Paul has pledged $50,000 for the endowment fund.

Mr. Weyerhaeuser gave $15,000 two years ago for the new dormitory and has been a liberal contributor to the current expenses, but this present gift is his emphatic indorsement of the work of the trustees and the religious influence of Macalester college.

The trustees also announce with gratitude and pleasure gifts of $10,000 from each of two friends of the college who have previously given liberally to the building fund and current expenses.

The indorsement of these generous contributors of recognized integrity and business standing brings confidence and satisfaction to the college.

Macalester college will soon complete a remarkable campaign. Last April the general education board made a pledge of $75,000—its first pledge in the Northwest. This pledge was conditioned upon the raising of a total of $450,000, of which $300,000 was for endowment and $150,000 for new buildings. A New York man offered $50,000 and O. A. Robertson, a trusttee in Merriam Park, who had already given $5,000, added $20,000 more—all for endowment.

The $70,000 now announced encourages the trustees to pledge with confidence the completion of the $450,000 total well within the time limit (July 1, 1909), set by the general education board.

Within the past ten months Macalester college has raised $175,000—a remarkable achievement considering the financial stringency. On the completion of this $450,000, the trustees will begin the Carnegie Science hall and push it with the utmost speed.

MAY INOCULATE WOLVES.

Scheme Tried in Montana May be Used in Minnesota.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Minnesota may try Montana's experiment for exterminating wolves. The state game and fish commission is investigating, and has secured a report from M. E. Knowles, state veterinarian of Montana, claiming success for the method of inoculating wolves with sarcoptic mange, a disease fatal to dogs and easily transmitted. It is done by obtaining an infected dog, inoculating wolves by contact with the animal and turning them loose to spread the disease among their fellows.

Timber wolves kill more deer in Minnesota each year than the hunters, and the authorities are anxious to kill them off. Senator Works of Mankato has become interested and may bring the matter before the legislature.

WISCONSIN

CAN TREAT, ALSO EAT FREE LUNCH

Two Bills in Wisconsin Legislature Against Practice Beaten.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 27.—After a stormy debate in executive session the assembly committee on state affairs decided to recommend for indefinite postponement the Jones bill abolishing free lunches in saloons, and the bill by Mr. Ingram prohibiting treating in saloons. Two members of the committee, it is understood, will dissent.

No opposition to the bills developed in the public hearing of the committee. Mr. Jones spoke briefly, stating his bill was introduced at the request of citizens of Toham, 95 per cent of whom had signed petitions favoring the plan to abolish the free lunches in the seventeen saloons of that city. A telegram was read from Secretary Fitzgibbon of the Wisconsin Retail Liquor Dealers' association, in which he voiced the indorsement of 3,700 saloonkeepers to the bill.

W. H. Austin, legislative agent of the Wisconsin Brewers' association, said the bill had merit and his interests had nothing to offer in opposition to its provision. Mr. Austin pointed out, however, that one section of the bill was unconstitutional because it would prohibit saloonkeepers who reside above his saloon entertaining a guest at dinner.

SEEKS HEAVY DAMAGES.

Ashland Man Sues Waupaca Company for Wife's Death.

Ashland, Wis., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. F. Fisher, the agent of the Wisconsin Central railway, has started a suit against the Waupaca Electric Light company for $25,000 damages for the death of his wife.

Mrs. Fisher was almost instantly killed by being thrown from a carriage and struck by a street car on April 16, 1908. Mrs. Fisher had gone to Waupaca on account of the serious illness of her mother and on the date mentioned above, drove with her sister, out into the country to get a nurse. It was while returning near the outskirts of the town, that the horse became balky, throwing Mrs. Fisher onto the ground in front of the car which ran over her.

Mr. Fisher alleges that her death resulted through carelessness on the part of the company's employes.

LIFE FOR MURDER.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., Feb. 27.—John J. McDonald has been sentenced to life imprisonment in the Waupon state prison for the murder of Mrs. Oscar Lenox and her daughter last Wednesday near Clayton. Chippewa Falls, Wis., Feb. 27.—The Dells Paper & Pulp company has decided to erect a $200,000 paper and pulp plant at Jim Falls, near here, where it owns a splendid waterpower. It was the intention of the company to make this investment at Eau Claire, but the continued litigation over the water power there, it is said, caused it to abandon the idea. The company's old pulp and paper mill at Eau Claire probably will be abandoned within a year or so.

UPPER MICHIGAN

LARGE DEAL IN HANCOCK REALTY

One-Third of City on Portage Lake Has Changed Hands.

Hancock, Mich., Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The largest deal of real estate in the Portage Lake district has just been closed.

Edward Ulseth of Calumet and J. H. Jasberg of this city have acquired 223 acres of land in the western portion of the city, immediately west of the present residential section, from the E. I. Du Pont-DeNemours Powder company of Wilmington, Del. The consideration has not been made known but it was unquestionably very large.

The deal was under consideration and option for some little time, and the option was finally taken up this week. The transaction is one that will undoubtedly result in a big building boom for the western portion of Hancock and one whose effects should be far reaching.

The property involved in the deal is ideally situated for town lots, it being a practically level spot, with the exception of a small hilly plat, south of the Hancock Driving park. The territory extends from a point just west of the old Hancock grove, west to Swedetown creek, which is normally the western limits of the village, and from the lake front back to the hillside. Some idea of the immensity of the deal may be realized when it is stated that the tract just purchased is about one-third of the entire city of Hancock.

Messrs. Ulseth and Jasberg have announced no plans as to what they propose doing, beyond that they will plat the purchase into lots for residences and manufacturing industries.

The Du Pont company has owned the property for a term of years, and all of the local powder houses are now located thereon on the lake front. When the Du Pont people a short time ago concluded a deal for the purchase of property near Grosse Point, whereon to erect a modern powder manufactory, Messrs. Ulseth and Jasberg secured an option to purchase the Hancock property, for which the company would have no further use.

The surprise was in the nature of a farewell previous to the departure of Mrs. Warman to Butte, Mont., where she will join her husband, who left for that city some weeks ago.

Houghton—One of the teamsters for Martin Bros., the local ice dealers, narrowly escaped death Thursday by drowning in the frigid waters of Portage lake. He fell into a hole that had frozen over. A companion standing near heard his cry, and on turning saw the predicament and lost no time in getting to the edge of the solid ice and grasping the man's clothing. With their combined efforts the teamster was soon in a position of safety on the firm ice.

GRAND FORKS MAN ON CROOKS' LIST

W. B. Wood Caught in Fake Fight and Wrestling Game.

Grand Forks, N. D. Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.—A dispatch from St. Louis includes in the list of victims of the gigantic fake fight and wrestling syndicate W. B. Wood of Grand Forks.

Wood died three years ago, less than a year after he was swindled. He was persuaded to go to Seattle by the swindler and bet $10,000 on a fake fight he was assured was to be framed up to have the man bet and win. The syndicate made a successful getaway after the fight and swindled many other persons at Seattle. The disclosures which followed soon after the swindling of Wood resulted in the band being obliged to leave Seattle.

The fights were pulled off in an old barnlike houseboat and were skilfully planned. In Wood's case it is stated that the fighter he bet on was supposed to have been knocked out and perhaps fatally injured by a blow from his opponent. There was a hurried getaway in order to escape the police.

It was openly charged in Seattle that the police knew about the fake fights and tolerated them.

Minot, N. D.—An interscolastic debate that is looked forward to with marked interest is that to be held between the Valley City high school and the Minot high school in Minot, on April 16.

SPEAKING US FAIR.

Canon Falls Beacon: The temper shown by the the Duluth and the iron range papers toward the balance of the state on the tonnage tax proposition is not justified by the facts. These papers assume that the state outside of St. Louis county is in conspiracy against the mines. There is not an atom of truth in this and our St. Louis county contemporaries would much more surely serve the interest of their region if they would eliminate the spitefulness and rancor that is becoming often frequent with them. Let us have this matter of a tonnge tax settled on its merits and without either spite or resentment. It is not as so many of our friends in that region seem to think, a local question. Every section of the state has an interest in it and there should be no feeling in the settlement of it.

It is a pleasure to read such sentiments in the Southern Minnesota press. The Cannon Falls Beacon is not the only paper of the state, outside the iron country, that is voicing such sentiments. They are quite generally spoken, in fact; and Northeastern Minnesota is happy to note the change in sentiment that they indicate. There is now the spirit of fair play, the indication of a desire to get at the truth. The Cannon Falls Beacon and other Southern Minnesota newspapers will readily admit, that only a few months ago there was quite a different tone to the editorial expressions throughout the state upon the subject of the tonnage tax, and two years ago the editorial sentiment of the rest of the state was pretty violently expressed to the effect that anyone who opposed the tonnage tax was no better than a bribe-taker from the steel trust.

The Herald has all along been confident of fair play from the rest of the state in this matter—provided only that the state would take time to consider the proposition. The proposition for a tonnage tax was at first sight so alluring and so apparently just, that the state outside the iron country. was determined to have it at once and that without discussion. The feeling of hostility to trusts in general was the animus of practically every editorial expression upon the subject of the tonnage tax from other sections of the state two years ago. Today it is very different. The state has taken time to think about the matter, has discovered that there are two sides to it, and the editorial expression from Southern Minnesota now is that we must first be right and then we will go ahead.

Doubtless there has been intemperance of expression on the part of some papers in the iron country. But the Beacon and others will acknowledge that it was no more violent than expressions favoring the tonnage tax from other parts of the state. Besides, the iron country had the greater provocation. When a man thinks that his business, his schools and his home is threatened he is apt to be vigorous and even violent in his denunciation of that which threatens.

There is now in Minnesota every indication of a disposition to find out the truth about this tonnage tax matter and to settle it on the basis of a square deal for all. The Cannon Falls Beacon hits the nail squarely on the head when it says that the matter is one in which the whole state has an interest. The interest of the state is not so immediate as the interest of the iron country, but it is a matter of great and grave concern nevertheless. That the rest of the state is now determined not only to speak us fair, but to treat us fairly, The Herald is convinced. Any thoughtful consideration of the matter demonstrates that the state has much more at stake in the matter than the actual money involved, and that it cannot afford to do otherwise than to weigh the proposition very carefully.

THE USEFUL ALARMIST.

The farmer is not the only man that needs to be stirred to an attempt to get more out of the soil. The Commercial club of Duluth has recognized this fact in the series of talks and lectures which it has provided for the people of Duluth and vicinity upon agriculture, dairy raising, home gardening, etc. The man who lives in town has got to quit wasting his soil—there is urgent need for him to think about this matter as well as for the farmer.

Mr. James J. Hill is almost as well known to fame as the "useful alarmist" as a railroad man. Mr. Hill recently gave voice to some startling statements to the effect that within forty years we shall have 200,000,000 of people in this country. and that we shall not be able to feed them. It may be doubted if there is any real danger of actual starvation, but Mr. Hill's note of alarm serves a useful purpose if it arouses us to the need of making use of the land that we have. The farmer needs intensive methods of farming and the city resident needs to know how to make use of the little plot of ground back of his house. If China can support 600,000,000 of people, it is quite probable that American can feed 200,000,00. But we have got to quit our wasteful methods.

The Kansas City Star calls to mind the way they used to do it "back yonder" in Ohio. "The lots as originally platted were 66 feet wide and 264 feet deep—a little more than a quarter of an acre in extent. Occasionally a family was found living by sufference on a half lot, but neither the parents nor the children wore the same look of confidence and proprietary satisfaction on their faces that was seen on the countenances of folks who had full lots." Off from these quarter-acre lots hundreds of families raised the greater part of their food supply. In this great, wide West we havn't got room for quarter-acre city lots but by right methods of using what we have got, even if it is nothing more than a twenty-five foot lot, we can get an astonishing amount of food for the daily table.

Why should we let all this rich productive land go to waste just because it lies in a "city." The time is coming when we shall quit such waste. The economic saving will be tremendous. Think what a garden on every city lot would mean to any city. Not only thousands of dollars saved, life made more healthful, but men made more contented by their contact with mother earth.

The farmer is not the only one who needs to listen to the cry of the alarmist. Our prodigal wealth of land has made us wasteful in the extreme. We have been content to garner that fraction that is most easily harvested and to allow all the rest to go to waste. When we quit such methods and take to tilling the soil in earnest we shall hear less about bread lines, and selling one self for bread, and when we get 200,000,000 people we shall have plenty for them to eat and some left over to sell to the rest of the world.

INCOME TAX.

The Herald today publishes the views of a correspondent who comments unfavorably upon the proposed income tax measure now before the state legislature. The burden of his complaint is that it is wrong in principle to levy an income tax upon a man whose income is from $1,200 to $2,000, such income being barely enough to support a family decently without bearing any further burdens of taxation than those now imposed.

The basic theory upon which all proposals for an income tax are made is that a man ought to pay a tax that is proportioned to his ability to pay, and that, in particular, a means of levying a larger tax upon swollen fortunes should be secured. In fact, nearly every income tax plan has been evolved with the idea of making accumulated wealth bear a larger share of the burden of taxation. For this reason the income tax of the Wilson tariff act provided for no tax until incomes reached the amount of $4,000 per annum, the rate being 2 per cent on all incomes above that amount.

If the theory of the income tax could be enforced in practice, the tax would be a most desirable thing. No country and no state has ever been very successful in enforcing such a law, however. It is sad to admit it, but it is the fact that the dishonesty of the citizens of a state make the law ineffective and in some ways undesirable. It is certain to make perjurers of some citizens. It is related of the operation of a New York statute for an income tax that in 1870 two maiden ladies in a certain village paid a larger income tax than did all the men in a large city near by.

The point raised by The Herald's correspondent that some exception or relief ought to be afforded heads of families, especially of large families, is a good one; but like every other suggestion looking toward making an income tax law equitable, it complicates the machinery of the law to an extent which makes the law inefficient.

An income tax law, if one can be devised that will not put a premium on perjury, is very desirable, and the man with a small income ought to be the last one to raise an objection to the law, even though it included small incomes as well as large. There has never yet been an income law that did not provide for some exemptions in favor of the man with a small income, and there have been very few income laws proposed that did not provide for a graduated rate, thereby compelling the man of greater wealth to pay the great bulk of the tax. If the man with an income of $50,000 per year can be made to pay a tax of 5 per cent, for instance, the man with an income of $1,000 certainly ought to be glad to pay a tax of 1 per cent. Such a system, properly enforced, would in time practically relieve the man of small income from taxation.

TO HIM THAT OVERCOMETH.

He that ruleth his own spirit, says the Bible, is greater than he that taketh a city.

Here is the one thing in the world worth striving for. This is the thing that distinguishes the man from the jellyfish. It is out of the eternal struggle between the flesh and the spirit that man grows. Leaving aside all purely spiritual speculations, that man whose spirit is too weak to overcome in its conflicts with the world, the flesh and the devil, is a man of no character.

The observance of Lent is said to be a religious custom. So it is, but not so much in the sense of an established custom of the church, but in the sense that it is a means by which the deepest spiritual instincts of man seek to lay hold of that by which the flesh may fortify itself against its own weaknesses.

Lent is a perfunctory performance with many. Others observe it that their self denial may be known of men. The soul gets no strength but only added weakness from such vain observance.

The true observer of Lent takes advantage of an appointed occasion, when others are doing likewise, to exercise the soul with restraint to the end that it may have health and life and strength. That the Lenten season has its good effects even upon the careless and the thoughtless cannot be doubted. Even such must take notice that there is such a thing as a period of fasting and must inevitably wonder in some slight measure that such a thing should be and be somewhat moved, however sightly, to imitate a thing which the best part of the world has ordained as a fixed custom. We may be busy with the things of the world the other 325 days of the year, but in these forty days we must take some note of the things of the spirit. It is a wise thing, too, that there should be an appointed time when earnest men and women may turn their thoughts more earnestly within, to consider that "it is in ourselves that we are thus or thus," to take stock of our motives in life, to weigh the worth of our purposes and to measure what progress we have made.

But while a special time in which to mortify the flesh has its undoubted uses, he that makes every day a day of Lent is he that is making the truest progress. That there are thousands of such, not long-faced ascetics, but cheerful, everyday people, is evidenced by the fact that we have among us so many thousands of good and great men and women. The ruling of one's spirit does not mean the torturing of it but simply the keeping of it in control. There were those in other days who thought it necessary to cut and hack their bodies and even to destroy their lives, in order to mortify the flesh, and there have been those who deemed it necessary to keep the soul constantly on the rack in order that it might grow. The soul does not grow in beauty or in strength that way. It has need of control but not of torture.

Ruling one's spirit is not such a doleful business if you look at it aright. Where is the man who does not joy in the overcoming of difficulties? Where is the pleasure comparable to a hard-earned victory? To him that overcometh there is strength and beauty and infinite pleasure both in this world and in the world to come.

LITTLE CHILDREN LOVED HIM.

A man died in Louisville, Ken., a few days ago. He was a good man, but many good men die in that great city. This man was different. He loved little children. Ah, you say, what of that? so do we all. It may be true, indeed; but do the little children know it? This man loved little children and now it is said of him that little children loved him.

Sale was his name—John M. Sale, a native of Germany, but an American by right of a life spent in the Blue Grass state. A very huble sort of man was John M. Sale. He kept a grocery store and sold coffee and sugar and potatoes over its counters himself. He built him a home in time and took a young wife to it, but no children came to bless the union. John M. Sale, however, resolved to play the man's part. He went out into the highways and byways and found homeless, fatherless little ones and brought them home with him and made them his children. He spent his substance, the profits of his little grocery store, upon them and taught them and helped them to become men and women. Nine times he went forth and nine times he came back with some fatherless and motherless little one, fatherless and motherless and homeless no longer by reason of the love that was in the heart of John M. Sale and his good wife.

"All these years," says the Louisville Herald, "this man's little grocery store has been one of the really great things in Louisville, but we had not realized it."

Now he is gone, and who can doubt that it is to his reward? Inasmuch as he did it unto one of the least of these he did it unto Him. No St. Peter met him at the gate of heaven; a little child opened it for him, and if there are any children in heaven we believe that every one of them was there to meet him.

Thank God there are other John M. Sales in this world. In our hurry we perchance pass by each day their humble little grocery store and know it not for one of the really great places of the city. But it matters not; of our poor praise they have no need, for little children love them.

Such a silence what it is in Germany.

If that chill Mankato, Minn., could only experience Duluth's delightfully mild weather it might have occasion to think that the seasons are changing.

Northern Minnesota representatives in the legislature should not be so busy playing politics as to forget the urgent needs of their section of the state.

The daily newspaper deals with thousands of things in a day. It makes mistakes, but if you will stop to think about it you will discover that the mistakes are the exception. The comparative accuracy of the newspaper service of the county is marvelous and is constantly growing more nearly perfect.

Sympathy goes out these slippery days to the horses of Duluth whose struggles to pull even a moderate load up some of our steep grades bring passers-by to their aid on almost every street. Many of the hills are a solid sheet of ice and it gives one an uneasy feeling to see four great draft horses struggling vainly with an ordinary load.

There can be little doubt that the underlying purpose of the steel merger investigation is solely to discredit the president. The senate committee might have better success in this attempt, however, if it would base its findings upon what the president knew at the time he made his decision, instead upon information that has developed since that time.

HOTEL GOSSIP.

P. A. Smith of International Falls stated at the St. Louis Hotel last night that the lumber industries in the neighborhood of International Falls and Fort Frances would supply the railroads of the Dominion with over 4,000,000 ties during the present season. This is more than the number supplied to the three railroads of the Dominion, the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern, last year. This year, according to Mr. Smith, who is one of the big lumber operators at International Falls, the railroads across the international boundary line are using more ties than they used last year, for the reason that there is more railroad construction in Canada this year than was the case last year.

Practically all of the lumber that is cut upon the Canadian side of the line is shipped west into Manitoba and the eastern provinces of Canada. Practically none of this lumber is shipped into this country. The Canadian industries can use all of the lumber that is being cut in the International Falls and Fort Frances district, but if the tariff upon lumber were removed, lumbermen up there believe that there would be a tremendous business done with the United States.

Mr. Smith says the total cut this year will compare favorably with the lumber cut out last year. The total cut will probably exceed that of last year. The operators has been fairly busy all winter and there has been a steady shipment of lumber all year. Mr. Smith says the timber resources in Ontario, just across the Canadian line, are immense, and that there is sufficient timber to keep operators busy for years to come. The timber is mostly pine, and some of the finest pine in the country, too.

Mayor H. R. Weirick of Hibbing and Supt. Robert Godfrey of the school board of Hibbing were at the St. Louis yesterday enroute to Washington, where they will be the guests of J. Adam Bede during the inauguration ceremonies. The gentlemen will visit Philadelphia and New York during their Eastern trip.

Anent Mr. Weirick's name, a Hibbing man at the St. Louis last evening stated that the mayoralty race, which comes off around the first part of March, is a kind of Alphonse and Gaston affair of extreme politeness and consideration. It is said that Mayor Weirick has stated that he will not be a candidate for reelection if Candidate Ansley really cares for the job. Mr. Ansley, it is said, has expressed the same sentiments in regard to Mr. Weirick. With this sentiment upon the part of the two men the people of Hibbing are wondering who will really decide to become the candidate at the last moment. The attitude of the two gentlemen is something so rare in politics that it is worthy of mention.

G. B. Driesbock of Washington, an official of the federal department, was at the St. Louis yesterday. Mr. Driesbock says Washington is all a bustle at the present time over the approaching inauguration of William H. Taft. He further says that the present inauguration will be one of the most brilliant in the history of the ushering in of new presidents. Nothing is being overlooked that will add to the dignity, the splendor and the imposing grandeur of the display that will accompany the making of a president of Mr. Taft. Mr. Driesbock says that Washington is daily receiving visitors from all parts of the country who are coming to see the inauguration. They are coming from all parts of the country and the most distinguished people in the United States will be at the capitol to view the ceremonies. The inauguration will be the crowning social, as well as political future of the official life of the capitol.

Charles J. Chenney at the Lenox, hails from Chicago, that city of optimistic hopes. He is carroling the gladsome tidings of spring, by singing of the hopes of baseball magnate. When anyone talks of baseball, that is an indication that the blithe spirit of spring is in the mind of man, and even the most perverse of weather men could not hold out against the enthusiasm of the real dyed-in-the-wool fan.

Mr. Chenney brings the hope that Chicago will win two pennants the coming season. He says the hope is shared by a million of the most stalwart fans in the world—the fans of Chicago. Though these fans are divided into two great camps, the West side and the South side rooters, they are in perfect accord when it comes to hoping that Chicago may win the great honor of having two pennant winners. Chicago did this three years ago, and though the Cubs have done their part since, in bringing the pennant to the Windy City, the Sox have been unable to repeat. The fans of Chicago actually believe, according to Mr. Chenney, that both Comiskey and Reuben and those valiant players lead by Frank L. Chance, will both finish the coming season with more games won to their credit than any other teams in the American or National leagues. For Western enthusiasm and hopefulness of spirit, it requires the Chicago fan to lead all fans of the other cities.

J. J. Herty, a guest of the Lenox, says St. Paul and Minneapolis are still at loggerheads over the settlement of the dispute over the location of the packing plant, and that despite attempts to come to some settlement of the matter, both cities are just as strenuous in their claims as ever, and bitter feeling is being aroused between them.

THE WEATHER.

Mild weather continues in Duluth and vicinity. It was only 10 degs. above zero here last night. Warmer weather, with snow flurries is predicted for tomorrow.

Winnipeg and Port Arthur were the coldest places last night. In Winnipeg, it was 20 degs. below zero and Port Arthur registered 10 degs. below.

The sun came up this morning at 6:52 and is to set at 5:50. Warm weather prevailed a year ago today.

Richardson says of weather conditions:

"The Wisconsin low pressure area has moved eastward since Friday morning over the Middle Atlantic coast and overspreading all districts east of the Mississipi river. The Northwestern disturbance is still central over that district. During the past twenty-four hours, light rain or snow has fallen at scattered places in the Lake region, North border states and in Canada. The movement of these two depressions was also attended by warmer weather in the extreme Northwest, the Ohio and lower Mississipi valleys and along the Atlantic coast. The California high pressure area is now central over Colorado and Kansas, and overspreads the entire middle and lower Rocky Mountain regions, which is causing slightly colder weather. Colder weather also obtains over Manitoba, Saskatchewan, the Upper Mississippi and Missouri valleys and the Upper lake region."

Raise the Maine!

Washington Star: It has been eleven years today since the battleship Maine was sunk in Havana harbor. Her wreck still lies there, where it settled after the explosion had torn open her hull and killed and drowned 268 men. Part of the upper works still shows above the water, an ugly, gruesome reminder of a tragedy and a menace to navigation. From time to time appeals have been made to the house of congress to appropriate funds for removing the wreck, not merely for the sake of shipping, but to set at rest the constantly recurring reproach that the United States fears to bring the riddled hull to light lest it bear evidence that the ship was sunk by an explosion from within.

The people of this country are thoroughly satisfied that the Maine was destroyed from a blow from the outside, by a mine accidentally set adrift from its anchorage or by a torpedo directed toward the ship from shore or from a boat. Whether by accident or by design, the Maine was sunk because her hull was crushed from the outside, according to the official finding of this government's representatives. Divers reported that they found plates bent inward, as from an external blow. As far as the public is concerned it needs no further proof. But as long as the wreck remains in sight it will stimulate adverse criticism on the part of foreigners. It will give color to the claim, in some minds, that the United States fears to disclose the facts by exposing the hull to view.

This country cannot afford to rest under such an insinuation. Its warrant for intervening in the Cuban situation did not rest upon the destruction of the Maine alone. That tragedy merely hastened the crisis. Had not the Maine been destroyed war would surely have come sooner or later. But it is well to put an end to speculation on the subject by raising the wreck, in the presence of representatives of Cuba and Spain. If there were no practical reasons for doing this thing, for the clearing of the roadstead, the political reason would be sufficient.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: There's hardly anything a man can be so ashamed of as having nothing in his life to be ashamed of.

You can tell by the way a girl slides down the banisters where she thinks the bean poles in the family aren't.

Every man is conceited enough to be ridiculous, especially the one who is conceited enough to think he isn't.

Nearly every time a man is swindled in a bargain it's because he thought he was smart enough to swindle the other fellow.

If a woman can't think of anything else to be proud about her husband she can about how he probably wouldn't appreciate his children if he weren't married to her.

Good Roads, Finer Homes.

Baltimore American: One result that will surely follow the construction of smooth and durable roads in the Maryland counties will be that a spirit of improvement and beautification will be inspired in those owning lands which front along these improved highways. Even in a state settled for so long a period by peoples of European extraction as Maryland, there is unmistakably the appearance in many of the rural sections of the crudeness that belongs to newness. In the farm homes there is too often the lack of reposeful surroundings, which give charm to country life. Good taste, in conjunction with a little ambitious effort, can by a proper training of arborage and shrubbery, transform a simple and unpretentious dwelling to a suggestiveness of culture and refinement.

Good Time to Test It.

Toledo Blade: In view of the high cost of living, this would be a good time to test the efficacy of getting up from the table hungry.

Matrimony.

Paris Figaro: At 40 a man may regret that he married. At 60 a bachelor regrets bitterly that he did not take a wife.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

Human Types—The Conservative.

We are here in the world all sorts and conditions of people, strangers, mostly, to one another, thrown together in the caldron of American life, moving on toward the same goal, and what do we actually know about one another? How fair are our judgments, and especially of those people who are unlike ourselves temperamentally, who seem to us funny or "freaky?" It might help on the era of good will and peace among men if we selected out certain types and studied them at close range with a view to finding out what other kinds of people stand for, and what they really contribute to the common welfare.

Here is the conservative, for example. He has always been with us, and a mighty good brakeman he is. We run up against him in the church, the school, the state, in business and in society. He is always saying, "We never did it this way before," or she—for the conservative is sometimes a woman—doesn't want a revised edition of the Bible, but says that the Bible St. Paul used is good enough for her. He or she ties the hands of the pastor who would modernize the evening service or the Sunday school. He or she has a bucket of cold water within easy reach, whenever ambitious spirits get too eager and forge ahead as if they would turn the world upside down in a day. The conservative considers his work in life to be to hold the ground that has been attained, and not to take any step forward until he discovers equally firm footing.

Just now the tides are running away from conservatism and the drift in politics and industrial activity is toward new experiments and new policies. The radical journal and the radical agitator get a hearing and often nobody seems to care to listen to the man who stands simply for things as they are. Those who say, "Go slow, you are making a mistake; you are taking a tremendous risk," are looked upon as old fogies, and some of them are made thereby bitter and pessimistic. Many a time a minister, a public school official finds himself a kind of breakwater between conservatives and progressives.

But let us who would hold our impetuous brother back be just. He is usually sincere, even if he may not be thoroughly enlightened. He is often far more devoted to the cause and more ready to invest time and money in it and to make sacrifices for it, than our easy-going liberal. He values highly the wisdom and experience accumulated from the past, and fears that the rushing tide of modernism will sweep away what has been gained and dissipate it forever. He is usually a pretty good man, this conservative of ours, who shrinks from projected innovations not because of the lack of desire to see the world make progress, but because he has not the courage to launch out into the deep, because he has not learned the truth of the saying, "The old order changeth," and of Wendell Phillips' splendid dictum "to be as good as our fathers we must be better."

All we forward-looking people ought to ask of the conservatives is that they should not be so ossified and intrenched in their conservatism that they will never yield to the logical facts or to kindly persuasion. "I may be a conservative," said a kind-hearted old deacon a while ago, "but I am not a fool." If that were the characteristic spirit of conservatism, it would never clash with sensible radicalism. For the conservative is needed, and never more so than in those fluid times when creeds are being reshaped, church methods reconstructed, municipal functions extended, industrial programs formulated, political policies and programs revised. We depend upon the conservative to prevent the pace of progress from becoming too rapid, to preserve for future generations the most precious inheritance from the past. A good motto for them is "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good."

Togo on Fleas and Legislators.

Collier's for Feb. 20: Hon. Solomon, famous Mormon king, were a great observer of fleas. He-say for wisdom, "The wicked flea jumps when no man pursueth." Why do this sinful mammal jump? This are important question for Japanese Boy. Answer is, Because Hon. Flea obtain his living by sneegret & stealthy ways. He got a short conscience, but he got long legs to make up for it. It are oftenly easier to jump than to be good.

Many eminent legislators, Mr. Editor, are like that wicked flea—they jump when no man pursueth.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

The attendance of spectators at the special meeting of the common council last night was large, all expecting to hear a heated discussion on the franchise question. The mayor, Aldermen J. R. Carroll, M. Carroll, Ensign, Eaton, Hammond and Zimmerman were preser'. On motion of Alderman Ensign, the bill prepared by Mr. Stuntz in relation to asking congress permission to build a bridge across the canal was approved. The committee appointed by the chamber of commerce in relation to the franchise for a railroad across the bay of Duluth was then given an opportunity to present its case. Speeches were delivered by W. G. Peck, Z. D. Scott, Leonidas Merritt, R. C. Mitchell, D. E. Little, J. H. La Vaque and H. C. Kendall, and there was a heated debate between J. A. Mannheim and R. C. Mitchell in which the word "liar" was frequently used, for which they were called to order. Alderman Ensign offered several motions to postpone action on granting the franchise to the Duluth Railway. Transfer & Dock company, but they were voted down. The ordinance was then read a third time and passed. A motion by Alderman Ensign that the ordinance be submitted to the people to vote upon at the next election was defeated.

While Charles Burns was passing Ward's place on Lake avenue yesterday, some person threw a beer keg out of the door, striking him on the head and knocking him senseless.

George Benz has associated with himself in the Duluth branch of his wholesale liquor store, Victor Berggren, now deputy collector of revenue in St. Paul, who will be the manager here. Temporarily the firm will occupy one of Dr. Austin's new stores on Second avenue west, until the Benz block has been erected on the corner of Lake avenue and Superior street.

H. Kruschke, the wood carver, has just completed a very handsome Indian princess for one of the cigar stores on Minnesota Point.

The silver mine at Rice's Point seems to be booming. George Wheeler of Vermillion, after inspecting it, purchased fifty shares yesterday.

Fred Sawyer, who has been very sick at the sanitartum at Aron, N. Y. is slowly improving. Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Sawyer are now there and will remain until the recovery of their son is assured.

O. H. Simonds and others have applied to Judge Stearns for a temporary injunction against Mayor Graves to restrain him from signing the ordinance in relation to the franchise across the bay. The judge has granted a temporary injunction, which will necessarily continue until the mayor returns from South Carolina, for which point he left today. Charges of corruption on the part of certain aldermen are made in the petition for the injunction.

THOUGHTS ON BOYS

By J. S. KIRTLEY, D. D.

Author of "The Young Man and Himself," etc.

HIS TROUBLES

(Copyright, 1909, by Joseph R. Bowles.)

His troubles are one thing; the sorrows that come from them, another. He has more troubles than sorrows, because he manages to turn some of them into sport and spunk. Part of his troubles are imaginary, but they are active, and efficient, and fruitful, till he finds them out. Some of the real ones he refuses to recognize, and they die a natural death, unknown and unsung. But it is pathetic how much real downright suffering he can go through, and it is inspiring to see him "keep smiling," notwithstanding. This requires him to readjust himself to himself, and he is fortunate if he is not panic-stricken and put to flight. Another element of complexity is the fact that both he and himself are steadily expanding, growing out of each other's knowledge, till he often has to say to some newly arrived phase of himself: "It seems to me I have seen you somewhere before," and even he must, now and then, say: 'I have not the honor of an acquaintance with you.' That may bring on sorrow, especially if the strange company seems to be chilly or domineering toward him. Strange reactions into sorrow and depression come, when he is chased and driven and beaten by some power within his own person.

There is a time when conscience begins its activity, and can give him intense sorrow till all things are working normally and harmoniously. The new master brooks no interference, and sometimes is the occasion of acute pain. His feelings that have been governing him must surrender the reins to Judgment and conscience, and they do not get into harness together quickly.

When the social instincts begin to awake and the bony structure has been rapidly thrown up, like the skeleton of a sky scraper, he has the pain of self-consciousness and the sense of mal-adjustment to the world around him. If the tender flame should get awakened at that time, he is in a state of unstable equilibrium, lacking in a quieting knowledge and a reassuring command of himself. The sense of that pervasive lack of perfection may be so acute as to depress him. The sense of a need that no one may show him how to supply, may throw a very long and dense shadow over him.

He is often tortured with the feeling of being misunderstood. He is rebuffed for his humorous tendencies. That boy, whom a gentleman, just alighting from the cars, asked: "May I ask you how far it is to the Palmer house?" replied: "You may do so this time; but you must never, never do so again." He was probably misunderstood and called impudent, when it was a genial sense of humor.

When some evil sweeps him, for a moment, from his feet, only the eye of God can see the shame that tortures him, and no one knows how gladly he would listen to some one who could set him on his feet with self-respecting, yet self-distrusting purity. His inability to express his deep affection for parents and teachers makes him depreciate himself, whereas a little girl could express herself in words appropriate and accurate enough to be printed in a book.

He longs for appreciation, for companionship, and suffers when he does not get it. He thinks he is not good looking, that his upper lip is too extensive, that his nose turns up too much or his freckles are attracting adverse attention. He can't be contented for people to treat him differently from the way he knows is right. He is called bad when he knows he is not intentionally so. He finds out that some seemingly and professionally good people are vulgar and untruthful, and he often hangs his head in shame for them. In his discovery of the awfulness of death he thinks of it as hanging over him, and no one is apt to teach him how to think calmly and confidently about such realities. A good Sunday school teacher gave me an interesting book one time, and on the blank page was written for me: "Memento Mori." Think of it!

A sane, sensible, wise friend is needed in all those strange experiences of his early years, and that friend must be his Pa.

THE HOUSE OF STUART

BY SAVOYARD

Hear, Land o' Cakes, and brither Scots,
Frae Maidenkirk to Johnnie Groat's.

FOR the first time in more than three centuries a Catholic has just been elevated to the supreme bench of Scotland, and that, too, upon the nomination of a Protestant king of England. And the name of the new justice is Campbell. Shade of McCallum, More! Shade of John Knox!

This incident makes the mind revert to Mary and her bastard brother, Murray, to Montrose and his heroic kinsman Claverhouse, to Prince Charlie and Flora McDonald, to Lord George Gordon's Roas and the agitation they caused in Scotland. How has religious zeal and the malignant fanaticism it spawned receded before the resistless tread of enlightened civilization! Only a while ago Charles Russell, a Catholic Irishman, died lord chief justice of England.

The writer of this is no Catholic, nor does he belong to any Protestant church—he is just a simple Christian, for whom the bloodshed on Calvary made all and ample atonement, and therefore he can discuss without bias the incident with which this paper opens.

In the political and religious strifes between Protestant and Catholic in the British isles, the former reaped substantial victory, while round the other side cling romance, devotion, and glory and the same is true of another cause counted as lost on this side of the world. Mary was the most beautiful of women and the most unfortunate of queens. Had her brother been Catholic, or had he been legitimate, hers might have been a happy fate. In the one case, Murray's sword, directed by his consummate statecraft, would have saved her crown, and in the other, he would have been king of Scotland and she Queen-Dowager of France, a land she loved so passionately.

But fate would not have it so. The niece of Francis of Guise, the first captain of Christendom, the head of the house of Lorrain, the defender of Metz and the conqueror of Calais, Mary was married to a worthless king of France, and through her Guise governed that realm until the king's early death, when Mary was sent to Scotland, a weak woman, to govern the most ungovernable people of whom history gives account. Her entire reign was a series of unbroken mistakes, possibly attended with crimes, according to the canons of our age; but if Mary was criminal, she was dealing with a lot of baser and cruel criminals, and as a general proposition the unbiased man is on her side. Imprisoned in Lochliven castle, her brother became regent, and upon her escape he overthrew her army, and she, fated to destruction, sought asylum in the kingdom of her cousin, Elizabeth, who, after long imprisonment, cut off her head.

Mary's son became king of England and of Scotland. He had been bred a Protestant, was a pedant and, perhaps, the most learned fool in history. It was in his reign that was produced the English translation of the Bible, a fact that would have added distinction to any reign. In theory he believed in the divine absolute right of kings to rule; but he was too timid to practice it. His son attempted it, and Oliver Cromwell cut off his head.

From the landing of Mary in Scotland to the battle of Culloden, a period of some eight-score years, fate loved to deal untold misfortune on the house of Stuart. Charles I was the most virtuous man who had sat on the English throne, and he had the affections of his people of both realms; but he was indoctrinated with the idea of arbitrary power, and to attain it he adopted a course that was full of fatal mistakes. He allowed the parliament to chop off the head of Stafford, who was capable of saving his crown. Instead of appointing Montrose commander of the army in England, he sent him to the Highlands of Scotland, where he made a campaign that neither Hannibal nor Napoleon would have been ashamed of, but that was as fruitless as it was glorious. His father had sent two regiments to the continent to fight in the "Thirty Years' War" on the Protestant side. Monk belonged to one of those regiments, and was the best tactician in England. Charles refused him important command. Cromwell captured him and his book on tactics, adopted the thing, and that was what got him the ultimate victory. His soldiers were known as the "Ironsides," much due from the hint Cromwell got out of Monk's book.

Heroic as was the king's armies, they succumbed to the prowess of the parliament armies, led by Cromwell, the greatest English of that or any other age, and Cromwell cut off Charles' head, just as Elizabeth had cut off his grandmother's.

After the Cromwellian despotism ceased, upon the death of its creator, that same Monk restored the house of Stuart to the purple and put the crown on the head of Charles II, who might have been a very great man had he not preferred to be a very great scamp. His life had been one of hardship and danger. He had seen human nature as fickle as the winds' lists and as false as dicers' oaths. He did not believe there was honor in man or chastity in woman. And so, instead of being a great statesman, he elected to be a great trifler. He was called the "merrie monarch," and his was the merriest court in Europe during his entire reign of more than twenty years. Instead of giving laws to the continent, as Cromwell had done, he was content to be the pensioner of his cousin, Louis XIV, who was the virtual ruler of England as long as he could keep Charles amused, and that was not at all difficult when the purse was full, or the women handsome.

James II, his brother and successor, was a very different order of man. Some wit said of the two, while Charles was yet living: "The king could see things if he would; the duke would see things if he could." James, too, loved pleasure, but he was much fonder of statecraft, and took his job of statesman seriously. He was always projecting with affairs. Once he thought he had discovered a plot to assassinate the king, and went to Charles with a long story about it, to which his brother replied: "Rest easy, James, nobody will kill me to make you king."

No sooner was James on the throne than he began to meddle with things in England the people would not allow to be tampered with. He was a brave man, as all his line, absolutely honest, and a stout soldier, well approved by the test of battle. He might have been a successful ruler had he been a Protestant, but he sought to re-establish the Catholic religion and lost his crown in the attempt. In this he differed from his grandfather, Henry of Navarre. Henry turned Catholic to get a crown; James threw away a crown to retain his Catholicism. We are bound to respect such a man.

William of Orange, James' son-in-law, now became king of England, and for three-score years thereafter, there was constant plot to restore the house of Stuart to its hereditary right. Claverhouse raised the Stuart standard in Scotland:

Dundee, he is mounted; he rides up the street;
The bells are rung backwards, the drums they are beat.
But mind the Provost, douce man, cried,
"E'en let them gae free,
For the toun is well rid o' that de'il o' Dundee."

There are hills beyond Pentland and lands beyond Forth,
Be there lords in the Lowlands, there are chiefs in the North.
And brave dunnie-wassels, three thousand times three,
Will cry, "Up with the bonnets of bonnie Dundee."

Then ho, for the hills, for the caves, and the rocks;
Ere I down an usurper, I'll crouch wi' the fox.
But tremble, false Whigs, in your traitorous glee;
Ye hae nae heard the last of my bonnets and me.

Nor had they, for Claverhouse soon fell on a stricken field, with the shouts of a glorious victory ringing in his ears. But it was in vain. William was secure on the throne, and when he died, Anne, daughter of James, and a Protestant, became queen regnant.

All Anne's children died, and she and her favorite minister, Bolingbroke, decreed that her half-brother, "The Pretender," should be her successor on the throne, but here adverse fate again pursued that Stuart case. Anne died suddenly, and the Whigs were too vigilant, and thus came in the house of Brunsand thus came in the house of Brunswick, which had also a lineal descendant of Mary of Scotland. But George I was very unpopular. He spoke not a word of English. He was German to the marrow, and thought a hundred times more of his crown as Hanover than he did of the English throne. There was a rebellion in Scotland for the Stuart in 1715, but it was mismanaged, and old George himself was half sorry that it failed, for he would like to come back to the continent, feeling wel rid of his subjects in England, who were determined to govern themselves regardless of who wore the crown. There was not a day after he became the head of his family that the pretender would not have been made king if he had onlybecome a communicant of the Church of England.

In 1745 the Stuart made the last attempt to regain the English crown. The young pretender, Prince Charles, landed in Scotland, and the highlands swelled his ranks with first-clas fighting men.

The standard on the braes o' Mar,
Is up and streaming rairly!
The gathering pipe on Lochnagar
Is sounding lang and clearly!
The Highland men, from hill and glen,
In martial hue, with bonnets blue,
W!' belted plaids and burnished blades
Are coming late and early!

And victory came with them, repeated victory, in Scotland. England was invaded, and the king in London was ready to go back to Hanover, but the duke of Cumberland met the invaders at Culloden, and there the cause of Stuart was forever lost.

But it lives immortal in history, in tradition, in poetry, and in romance, "Over the Water to Charlie" is ye' sung in Scotland:

I ance had sons, but now hae none
I bred them toiling sairly.
And I would bear them a' again
And lose them a' for Charlie.

Ever since Culloden, now 164 years, the house of Brunswick has been more secure on the English throne than any other dynasty in English history, and yet more English tears have been shed over the misfortunes of the Stuart line than England ever gave plaudits to the Hanoverian succession:

Low as that tide has ebbed with me,
It still reflects to memory's eye
The hour my brave, my only boy,
Fell by the side of great Dundee!

Enough—he died the death of fame;
Enough—he died with Conquering Graeme!

But the Stuart cause, though lost in a material sense, will live forever in the imaginations and in the sentiments of men the world round.

And a Catholic a Campbell, is on the the supreme bench of Scotland!

SCHAFF HERZOG ENCYCLOPEDIA OF RELIGIOUS KNOWLEDGE. Volume II. Edited by Samuel Macauley Jackson, D.D., L.L. D., Charles C. Sherman, George W. Gilmore, M.A., and others. New York. Funk & Wagnalls Company. $5 per volume.

To the wave of religious books which is passing over the land we owe this second instalment of a new monumental work, catholic in spirit and ecumenical in scope, which is being launched by the Funk & Wagnalls company Scarcely had this firm of publishers completed the Standard Dictionary than they embarked in the Jewish Encyclopedia, which has been followed with surprising rapidity by the present work. It is a new encyclopedia of religious knowledge, the second instalment of which embraces 1,110 titles "Basilica" and "Chambers." This encyclopedia is being produced under the chief editorship of Dr. Samuel Macauley Jackson, professor of church history in New York university, by an interdenominational editorial board consisting of nine members. In addition to these, a staff of 140 scholars, representing twelve of the leading nations of the world, contributed the contents of the volume which may be described as a complete storehouse of Biblical lore. The aim has been to produce a monument of specialized scholarship, of research, and of erudition.

Although the general point of view of the work is Protestant, the purpose is to put into the hands of clerical and lay students of all classes and degrees of learning the fruits of modern interpretation and research. In matters of controversy the aim has been to present the views of the latest and highest scholarship, with due regard to divergent opinions, separate articles being written, where it seemed desirable, by scholars having different views. The encyclopedia is not a special pleader for any particular group or schoo1 of scholars. It aims to be wholly impartial and unbiased, and to give facts, and facts alone—all in a calm, judicial tone. It is the only work of its kind that follows this plan—a plan that must commend itself to all fair-minded readers. The volume before us devotes over 100 pages to information about the Bible and Bible subjects. There are articles on "Bible Reading," "Bible Texts," "Bible Versions," "Bibles, Annotated, Historical, Illustrated, Polyglot and Rabbinic," "Bible Criticism" and "Bible Theology" are explained and comprehensively treated, while other topics considered are "Biblical Introduction" and "Instruction in Biblical History."

THE RED MOUSE. By William Hamilton Osborne. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co. $1.50.

Here is a "mystery romance" that is full of interest and action from beginning to end. The plot is new and full of surprises. The analysis of character and of human motives and mental processes is keen and diverting. The tale is decidedly original, and it is told skillfully and entertainingly. It deals with a murder mystery, with the under side of New York politics, and with a charming and appealing love theme.

MISS MINERVA AND WILLIAM GREEN HILL. By Francis Boyd Calhoun. Chicago: The Reilly & Britton Co. $1.

Do you remember "Helen's Babies" and "Mrs. Wiggs?" Do you recall "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn?" Miss Minerva and William Green Hill are every bit as genuine as any of these. It contains a delightful little love story, but deals principally with William Green Hill, a 6-year-old boy with sunny hair, a cherub's face and a wonderful dialect acquired from the plantation negroes among whom he formerly lived. In the narration of the activities of Billy and his associates, Jimmy, Frances and Lina, the author shows an intimate knowledge of the workings of the juvenile mind and makes the pages sparkle with laughs. From start to finish there is no let-up in the fun.

THE BRIDGE BUILDERS. By Anna Chapin Ray. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

For the first time the building and collapse of the huge cantilever bridge at Quebec, an undertaking of absorbing interest in itself, figures as an important factor in romance. Against the conservative background of English Quebec appears Jessica West, the new-rich child of an Arizona mining camp, and associated with her in an increasing friendship, are Dorrance, a young American author, and Asquith, a Quebec engineer, unofficially connected with the building of the famous, but ill-fated Quebec bridge. Closely interwoven with the plot are the last days and fall of the great structure, but there are other bridges than steel ones in the story, and the author has shown exceeding art in welding the two motives together, the bridge building and the growth of human love. The result is a strong and entertaining novel, by far the best work of the author's career. Miss Ray pays the engineers in charge of the construction of the bridge a pretty compliment in the dedication of her new book, which reads as follows: "To those master builders who, their courage unshaken by disaster to the old bridge, are already looking forward to an active part in fashioning the new."

Here is a simple and touching story of the loves of two young people of the Tennessee mountains, who are parted for a time by an ancient feud between their respective families. The story, which is told with much force and skill, tells how their affection proved too strong to be defeated by the feud barrier, and brings together in the end these innocent members of embattled clans. The author, who has made a reputation as district attorney of Los Angeles, will doubtless do still better in a second book, in which he should by all means cultivate the beauty of simplicity. A tale so simple, adorned with so much "fine writing," tends dangerously to the grotesque at times. Obviously the writer allowed himself to be carried too far by the pleasure of weaving pretty sentences, a fault too often characteristic of new writers. For instance, we should have held him much more highly had he refrained from calling the sun "the orb of day."

THE DEVIL IN LONDON. By George R. Sims. New York: Dodge Publishing company. $1.

Surely nobody, bent upon slumming, could employ a better cicerone than the devil, for he, working through man's inhumanity to man, surely makes the slums. Well, the hero of this diverting tale did his slumming in London under those most favorable auspices. By a kindness to a woman of the street he comes into possession of a magic ring which enables its possessor to call the devil to his aid. He uses the ring, and finds that the devil is a very affable and gentlemanly individual, though devilish enough in a polite way. The ruler of the infernal regions shows him the seamy side of London life, and a very distressingly seamy side it is indeed. The tale describes the results of drink, the working of the white slave traffic, the opium dens and the haunts of vice. It is vivid and startling, though not pleasant reading for those who prefer to beguile themselves with the pleasing delusion that all's right with the world.

BUT STILL A MAN. By Margaret L. Knapp. Boston:: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

Pope's line, "A minister—but still, a man," furnishes the keynote and the title of this strong, original American novel, the story of a young man's first parish in a country village and his defeats and victories therein. The author tells naturally and simply how the young minister met the various problems of life, his horizon gradually widening until he comes to the understanding that the one thing needful to bring the kingdom of heaven is not wisdom, or even righteousness, but love. The characters are strongly drawn and the story is a study of life and of great human interest, rather than of religion alone. This is Miss Knapp's first book, and it exhibits a keen observation and appreciation of human nature. Rarely have so many women of notable individuality appeared in one story and Miss Knapp may be congratulated upon her admirable powers of characterization

In this story, which we are assured is taken from real life and which bears many evidences of such an origin, we are introduced to a fine old New York villager, fully of quaint philosophy, wholesome humanity and genial humor; also to many other interesting village characters, from Cal Hemingway, "the genial proprietor of the General Store," to Elmer Perkins, "the village undertaker, who has an eye to business, but no business." Strung upon a slender thread of pleasant romance are these aptly drawn character sketches, and a multitude of merry tales full of characteristic Yankee humor and wisdom. The little volume is eminently readable. The wrapper in which it comes purports to be a copy of the South Hollow Gazette, which is an ingenious specimen of the country weekly, with advertisements, personals and local hits, just as we should expect to find them in the mouthpiece of such a community.

Among the Magizines.

Modern marriage conditions form the theme of the "Shuttlecock," the complete novel published in the March Smart Set. "The Shuttlecock" is from the pen of Neith Boyce, one of the cleverest of the newer novelists. Neither Boyce, who is Mrs. Hutchins Hapgood, has attracted a great deal of notice recently through her novels, which have treated on marriage from a new viewpoint. "The Shuttlecock" recounts the matrimonial sunshine and shadows of an American couple living abroad. Two women and a man form the triangle about which the story turns, the man emotionless, repressing all outward show of sentiment, the wife a starved soul crying out for affection, the other woman a member of the artistic world surrounded by a halo of unreality that makes her so dangerous a factor. The scenes of this novel are laid in New York city and some of the least-trodden byways of Northern Italy. "The Shuttlecock" throws a new ray of light on the marriage problem—or perhaps a ray from a new direction.

The March Smith's opens with a complete novel by Martha McCulloch-Williams, "The Choice of Honor." It is the story of a young Southern girl and of a thoroughbread horse. The novel has genuine feeling, excitement and plenty of action. The short stories are all worthy of note. Holman F. Day's "Minstrelsy of Meelin" House Mobs" is delightful in its humor, and Annie Hamilton Donnell's tale, "The Right House," is equally attractive in its pathos. The fourth of Mrs. John Van Vorst's tales of "An American Girl Abroad" gives some interesting side-lights on London society and a good story as well. "In Answer to Wire," by Edna Jessica Ferber, is an account of a railway journey with a love-story in it.

Hampton's Broadway Magazine for March is one of the most attractive magazines for the month. Among the special articles are: "On the Trail of the Ghost," by Vance Thompson; "Wall Street and the Banks," by Herbert N. Casson; "Hunting Ahead of Roosevelt in East Africa," by Capt. Fritz Duquesne; "Night Riding in the Black Patch," by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr.; "Handling Big Guns and High Explosives on Our Battleships," by Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans; "LaFallette, Political Evangelist," by O. K. Davis. There are light stories, all of a high degree of merit.

Commerce, untrammeled and continuous, is necessary to the growth of a nation. How many Americans have given thought to the uncrowned, unseen king that makes it possible for their country to maintain its foremost place among the great and powerful nations of the world? Those who read "Coal as a Commercial Factor," an article which has been treated in a masterful way by Carrington Pheips for the readers of the March Metropolitan Magazine, will acknowledge that it is an able and enlightening article. The short stories this month maintain the magazine's well deserved reputation. Among them may be noted: "The Helping Hand," by Robert Barr; "Canis Mirabilis," by Joe H. Ranson; "The Man Who Defied Garceno," by E. J. Uhle; "The Younger Ledbetter," by Mayne Lindsay, and "The Two Deserters," by Capt. Frank E. Evans.

One of the striking features of the March number of the Popular Magazine is the cover by Leyendecker. More than any other of the publications of this class, the Popular holds to the thesis that a cover should be an integral part of a magazine—that it should give pictorial expression to the spirit of the publications. The present design—a boldly conceived picture of a part of the winter carnival—is typical of the energy and adventure which this magazine so successfully portrays.

When the sordid, dull life of every day palls on you, "The Moritania Crown Jewels," in March Young's Magazine, will waft you to a strange, scented country, where a king, a prince, several princesses, a bewitching but naughty actress, and a blase New Yorker are flitting about in an exciting search for a blazing stone of barbaric beauty. The scene shifts from the glories of a king's palace to the gay, glittering restaurants of Paris, where the actress appears "sometimes in a scarlet dress red as her lips, her eyes burning, looking like a young Mephisto, again with her svelte, lithe body encased in a clinging gown of shining scales, the personification of a beautiful, deadly serpent and again with innocent, violet eyes and white serge frock, like a sister of charity." It's a gay whirl of a story, full of incident, with a gorgeous, colorful background of unusual scenes and lovely women.

Ainslee's for March has the opening chapters of a new novel by Harold MacGrath, a complete novel by H. F. Prevost Battersby, some exceptionally fine short stories by Kate Jordan, Charles Neville Buck, Prince Troubetzkoy, Mary B. Mullett, Daniel Steele and Caroline Duer and a continued story by Marie Van Vorst. It also contains a colored frontispiece by Howard Chandler Christy, and is enlarged by sixteen additional pages.

"Why I Went to the Philippines," by William Howard Taft, in the March number of the National reveals Mr. Taft's tender respect for President McKinley. Articles on "The Navy Department," by Truman H. Newberry, secretary; "The Bureau of Entomology," by L. O. Howard, chief of the United States bureau of entomology; "The American Consul and His Work," by Winslow Hall "The Senate Sergeant-at-Arms," by Smith D. Fry, are in the March issue. Washington has been "done" many times over, but never in this thorough and masterly way of the National. The articles are surprisingly interesting and chatty, having back of them, not the personality of one man, but of a corps of department experts, authorities for their respective departments.

Among the leading articles in the Technical World magazine for March are: "Looting the Forests," by Henry M. Hyde; "Shortcutting the Atlantic Shoreline," by William Atherton Du Puy; "New Home of Mr. Taft," by Newton Forrest; "Nothing Wrong a Panama," by Roy Crandall; "What One Week Will Do," by F. G. Moorhead; "Marvels in Modern Surgery," by C. F. Carter; "Catching Butterflies by the Ton," by Dr. Alfred Grandenwitz; "Pictures That Speak," by P. Harvey Middleton; "To Exterminate the Prairie Dog," by M. Beverley Buchanan.

The March Century is notable for the number of its articles on public men and public interest. The new president is given a prominent place in its pages, with a study, published anonymously, of his interesting personality; a picture, sketched by James A. Le Roy, of his character and methods as revealed by his work in the Philippines; and a first publication of two letters of Mr. Taft, one declining to be considered for the presidency of Yale, the other accepting his appointment on the Philippines commission. In addition, the reminiscences of "Rutherford B. Hayes in the White House" and the story of "Our Presidents Out of Doors" make the issue decidedly a "White House number," as it is called. The articles on topics of general public interest cover a wide range. Gen. Horace Porter, late ambassador of the United States to France, gives reasons why the government should own its embassies. Under the title of "Public Morality and Street Railways," Frederick W. Whitridge, receiver of the Third Avenue Railroad company, New York, discusses the reflex effect of bribery and corruption on the public's attitude toward the railroads.

Lippincott's for March is as fresh and vigorous as the month's bracing winds More than half its substantial bulk is given up to the complete novel—"A Knight Errant in Broadway," by Rupert Sargent Holland, whose book, "The Count at Harvard," was well received a couple of years ago. Mr. Holland takes as his theme the career of a rather commonplace and not particularly scrupulous young man who comes to New York from a small country town to seek his fortune. He finds "Tenderloin" life fascinating, and as he is in the employ of a rascally lawyer, he is rapidly succumbing to the evil influences which surround him when a young girl comes into his life—a young girl who is sweet and pure. Somehow his old associates begin to seem tawdry to him, his better nature asserts itself, and in the end he proves his manhood and his entire worthiness to wed the charming Rhoda. The transactions of the crooked lawyer and the still more crooked "promoter" throw an interesting sidelight on one phase of life in the modern Gotham. Despite this vigilance of the postoffice authorities, it is safe to say that there are still numerous enterprises as dubious as the "National Non-Refillable Bottle Company," and there probably always will be so long as there are people gullible enough to put their money into get-rich-quick schemes about which they have no authoritative information. There are some wonderfully fine short stories in this number.

Results of the canvass among 300,000 subscribers concerning woman's suffrage are published in The Housekeeper for March. Letters for and against appear. Stories of an unusually interesting kind fill a large space with names such as J. J. Bell, L. M. Montgomery, Julian Hawthorne, Herbert D. Ward. There are pages devoted to colored fashion plates, fancy work, cookery and the thousand and one things of interest to women and the home.

The People's Magazine for March contains an intensely interesting tale of a bank robbery written by Eugene Boylan and entitled "The Weakest Link." The daring details of the transaction, the absolute poise and cool-headedness of the crooks, and their hairbreadth escapes hold one in suspense down to the astonishing finale. The magazine contains also over a dozen complete short stories, and the first instalment of a novel in two parts by Calvin Johnson, entitled "The Marlowes." A very attractive collection of theatrical pictures, together with a clear, concise outline of each play illustrated goes to complete this generous number of the magazine.

The complete novel in March Gunther's Magazine is "The Avenger," by Rafael Sabatini. In this absorbing story hypnotism and its possibilities as a tangible force for good or evil are masterfully put into action. One of the most dramatic situations is when two of the characters fight a hypnotic duel to the death. H. Rider Haggard's great romance, "The Ghost Kings," is concluded in this number. This serial novel has proved to be one of the most successful published by any magazine in recent years. "An Adirondack Comedy," by Olin L. Lyman, author of "The Trail of the Grand Seigneur," is another serial novel running in Gunter's Magazine. It has just the right combination of modern adventure and humor to furnish entertaining reading, and appeals especially to those who love outdoor life.

There is a suggestive editorial regarding Poe in the March issue of 10 Story Book. It appears to be a forerunner of further comments on the great master of American literature. As a suggestion, it is worth while.

The list of stories in this issue is particularly pleasing. "Mademoiselle Jolie's High C" is the leader, and is a very clever and witty skit, by J. L. Berry. "The Innocence of Mrs. Millwood," by Elliott Walker, is essentially a 10 Story Book story—a bit risque, but clever, artistic and surprising. "The Lady of His Dreams," by Robert Carlton Brown, is an automobile story particularly timely in these days, when every hod-carrier travels in a Red Devil.

Among the most interesting features of the March number of Popular Mechanics is H. H. Windsor's suggestion for humane methods in slaughter yards. How the United States government will take the biggest census in its history with less (in proportion) expenditure of money and labor is well told. How snakes are skinned alive in Sumatra to supply the trade will curdle the blood as well as arouse interest, for the pictures are especially graphite. A motor iceboat, with a speed of 70-miles an hour, is described. How the Wright airship is kept afloat is carefully explained. Gas companies in large cities now maintain a corps of woman experts, who are sent out to explain gas ranges and meters, and teach economy to housewives. Splendid illustrations accompany this article.

The special features of the Delineator for March include: "Mrs. Roosevelt, the Woman in the Background," by Mabel Potter Daggett; "Our Right to the Lives of Babies," by Edith Howe; "The Feminine Element in Lincoln," by George T. Lemmon; "Why One Hundred Sunday Schools Have Succeeded," by Laura A. Smith; Lessons From American Plays, "The Servant in the House," by James L. Ford; "Are the Dead Alive?" by Fremont Rider. The fiction is of a high order, and, of course, the fashion department is up-to-date.

The Strand Magazine for March provides its readers with a budget of good things, and is particularly strong in fiction. Hall Caine's latest novel, "The White Christ," is continued, and increases in interest as the plot thickens. The present instalment is rendered intelligible to new readers by the addition of a short synopsis of previous chapters—an excellent plan, which might be adopted with advantage by other magazines. The illustrations to this latest of Hall Caine's stories are excellently conceived. Short stories by Max Pemberton, Sidney Low, Pett Ridge and Dorothy Deakin are all of the best. Harry Lauder, the Scotch comedian, continues his "Reminiscences," and relates some humorous incidents of his early struggles. F. A. H. Eyles writes on "Crime and the Crystal," and prefaces his remarks with the question, "Has Crystal Gazing a Scientific Basis?"

That most interesting and unique of all magazines—The Wide World—contains this month an astonishing amount of attractive material, gathered from all quarters of the globe. To travelers no less than to those who are unable to penetrate beyond the confines of their own state the Wide World has become a necessity, for it contains information about out-of-the-way places, customs, and peoples which are to be found in no other magazine. Among the contents of the March issue are many articles of a thrilling nature which cannot but stir the blood and brighten the eye. There is an amazingly realistic description of a fight to the death between a whale and a school of thresher sharks and a no less striking account of a nest-robber's terrible battle with an infuriated mother-eagle. But it is perhaps in its descriptions of the peculiar customs of other nations that the Wide World is particularly valuable and—to the average reader—interesting.

Edith Wharton contributes the most striking feature to the March number of Scribner's Magazine. It is the first complete short story in a series to be called "Tales of Men." It is a remarkably powerful description, ingenious and pathetic, of the attempts which man makes to escape from what Henry James has called "this moral predicament." Mrs. Wharton has never done a more original short story than "The Bolted Door." Prof. J. Laurence Laughlin discusses the next great monetary question—whether our currency should be issued by the government, or by the national banks chartered by the government. The attractiveness of Prof. Laughlin's writing is like it makes perfectly clear to the layman what is too often a mere abstraction left for technical discussion. The weight of his argument is in favor of "Bank Issues." Prof. Theodore S. Woolsey of Yale, the eminent authority on international law, contributes a plea for "An American concert of the powers," which shall take up and execute what has heretofore been called "The Monroe Doctrine."

George F. Parker, in his second paper on Cleveland, in the March McClure's, gives the first authentic story of the remarkable campaign which elected him to the presidency a second time. Prof. M. A. Rosanoff describes the experiments made by scientists which show, with the exactness of mathematics, the effects of alcohol on all human activities; A. J. Conant, the artist, tells of his experiences in painting a portrait of Lincoln; T. R. Macmechen describes the country where Roosevelt will hunt in South Africa, and James L. Ford contributes a paper on "Our National Stage." Mrs. Humphry Ward's great novel, "Marriage a la Mode," is continued, and the number contains a number of very interesting short stories.

Trinity church, with her antiquity, her wealth, her investments, has for some time been the target of unjust thingers. To the current issue of Harper's Weekly William Inglis contributes the first authentic account of Trinity and her finances—a notable article which clears up many misstatements and misunderstandings. Under the title "The Discovery of the Soul" Victor Rousseau narrates the various steps in the investigation of psychic phenomena, which, he claims have produced a result not anticipated by investigators—the discovery of the human soul instead of the spirits of the departed. Mark Twain contributes an extremely humorous letter received by him from a would-be author in Holland. This communication bears outward marks of authenticity; but, the address of the alleged communicator being given in "Vrolikstraat," one is tempted to suspect our national humorist of playing an ingenious trick upon his unsuspicious readers.

SOCIETY

THOSE of such religious faith that no extra devotionals are provided for attention during the Lenten season, are faced with the necessity of creating a new interest during the days when all society is conventionally covering its eyes from the allure of the world. In Duiuth this year, there is no need of women with time on their hands to hunt far for something to do. Sewing schools have taken the city by storm, and if the good work continues, the next generation will be a class of needlewomen like unto those of the good old days. There are sewing schools for the young girls and so eagerly and gladly do they attend that there can be no doubt about the need of the work and the good it must be doing. In every such school there are too few teachers, and any one with the time to spare who will undertake to teach hemming, gathering, overcasting, and the other simple stitches, will receive a most cordial welcome at any one of the various classes.

The Lake Avenue Bethel school, the oldest established in the city, meets Saturday mornings at the Bethel. The school is in need of more teachers. The committee of the Y. W. C. A. interested in extending the work throughout the city has organized a school at the Garfield Mission, which meets immediately after school Tuesday afternoons. More teachers are needed. The sewing school, under the auspices of the Twentieth Century club, meets Saturday mornings and Saturday afternoons at St. Luke's church, at the West end, and more teachers are needed. The women interested in each of the schools are hoping that the Lenten season will bring forward volunteers to help in the work.

GEORGE L. TYLER,
Whose Pupils Will Be Heard in Recital Sunday at the Lyceum.

Eames and Gogorza.

"Not since the advent of Caruso has the singing of a man aroused such enthusiasm as does that of Emilio de Gogorza," writes a well-known critic of songs and singers. "Nature has indeed lavished gifts upon Gogorza. He has temperament, sympathy, intelligence and a handsome presence, with a rare vocal power."

If a man with a voice of velvet, a big round voice of remarkable range, can sing in the very mood of the composer, now ringing with the buoyancy of "The Torredor," now softening to the tenderness of the lullaby, and win the hearts of men and women alike—if he can do all this on a bare, unchanted concert stage, what might he do to electrify his hearers, in the glamor of the operatic stage. This famous baritone, notwithstanding the possibilities of a successful career in opera, still maintains an unrivalled position in the concert world, and is to be heard in a concert here at the Lyceum on March 18 in conjunction with Emma Eames, the great American soprano.

Lecture on Art Galleries.

At the regular meeting of the Bishop's club, which will be held Tuesday evening at the clubrooms on West Fourth street, the speaker will be Col. Travel Class.

The regular meeting of the Travel class of the Twentieth Century club will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the club room of the library. "Tapestry, Its History and a Description of Some Noted Pieces" is the subject to be discussed for the afternoon. The leader of the class has made an ineffectual effort to secure a piece of tapestry in the city, but these rare and beautiful bits of weaving are so scarce that none are owned here. A most interesting series of papers will be presented and any one interested is invited to attend.

At the second March meeting of the class the election of officers of the department will take place.

Miss Pearson, Organist.

Miss Isabel Pearson has been appointed organist of the First Presbyterian church of this city, to succeed Mrs. Margaret McLean, who will leave the city. Miss Pearson, although one of the youngest organists among Duluth musicians, has had experience in the Duluth churches. She has studied with Horace W. Reyner and during his absences from the city has played the organ at presentation of "The Messiah" at Christmas time, and during the last several weeks has been playing at the Endion Methodist church. HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

As the school year wears on it comes more and more to the Seniors that in a few short months their high school days will be a thing of the past. It will then be only a memory of the most delightful days of their lives, and will be cherished by them as such. When the Seniors think of this, as they do more and more each day, everything around the school becomes dearer to them. They become closer friends with the teachers, and many are the friendly talks between the teacher and the pupils in these last days. They become greater friends among themselves, and this is when the real class spirit is shown. It has been present all these years, expressing itself in class rivalry and disputes, but now, when the commencement approaches, it assumes another garb, and is expressed in a friendship for the other classes and greater co-operation and friendship among themselves. At least most of the Seniors are determined to make the most of the time left, and both in study and in fun will pitch in with greater vim to end up the course in a flourish and put a fitting climax on the four years.

The Seniors held a class meeting last Wednesday afternoon and judging by the number who were present they are beginning to take an interest in the work of finishing up. After the usual procedure in opening the meeting Mr. Custance appeared before the class and spoke for a few minutes. He wished to draw the attention of the Seniors to the class play which is being put on by him, and wanted them to begin to work up interest in it. He also told about the chorus which will take part in the play and called for volunteers, appointing Friday afternoon as the date for the first meeting. He also asked that two committees be appointed to take care of the properties and to shift the scenes, and also asked the class to hire an orchestra for the occasion. After he finished, Mr. Denfeld spoke for a while on several topics of interest to the class, particularly urging a large and successful graduation, and liberal support for the Zenith. It was unanimously decided to dedicate the book to the memory of Mr. Smith, making it a memorial number. Some of the members of the class objected to the decision of the Zenith board about selecting the class photographer, claiming that they had not the power to do this, and after a warm discussion, the "steam roller" was brought into play and the Zenith board's action sustained. It was also decided to reserve seats for the senior play at 50c, thus raising the price from what it usually has been, and to provide an orchestra.

HARVARD ROCKWELL,
Editor-in-Chief of the 1909 High School Zenith.

Now that winter is nearing its close, the ardent athletes around the school are beinginning to look forward to the time when they can get out of doors at their sports. Track athletics will attract the most attention this spring. Owing to the failure of baseball last year and since most of the high schools have given it up, and it is difficult to secure games, it is very doubtful if an attempt will even be made to organize a team. Some of the old baseball players have announced their intentions of trying out for the track team and this will help make a first-class track team for the first time in the history of the school. Track work is more of a high school and college sport than baseball and is more open to the students, for it is individual work and gives everyone a chance regardless of size. This year very satisfactory arrangements have been made, by which Duluth will send a team to the Minnesota interscholastic meet at the "U." These and other encouragements, and more satisfactory rules regarding eligibility than heretofore, and concentration in this one sport, ought to make suitable conditions for the turning out of a good team. A meeting of the Athletic association will be called some time soon, at which all matters in regard to spring athletics will be decided and an enthusiastic start made. Mr. Hestand will have charge of the team again this year, as coach.

One of the trials and tribulations of the last months of school is here. This is spelling. Every Tuesday and Thursday mornings, this bitter dose is administered, and the students just wince and take it. However, even the students themselves realize their deficiency in spelling. A passing mark in this is required for graduation just as in everything else, and sometimes the Seniors have to take more than one examination in it to pass successfully.

The Zenith slips will be for sale Monday and Tuesday at the school. This year the price of the Zenith will be raised from 50c to 75c on account of the additional expense undertaken in putting out a first-class book. The cover of the book will be leather and other improvements will be made. However, the Zenith slips will not be raised much, and will sell for 45c. They can only be had on these two days and hence all the students who want to get in on the reduced price should be sure to get them on these two days. Each slip entitles the owner to a book when it comes out. They will be on sale in the session rooms and also by Miss Taylor. If the students will all secure their books in this way it will be a great help to the board as a guarantee fund is provided in this way.

The Freshmen have become quite "chesty" this last week and are seen strutting about sedately showing off their new pins, which arrived last Monday. The Freshmen have just cause to be proud, for their pins are very pretty and in fact the best of any of the classes in school now. Their colors, maroon and gold, make a very pretty setting and the design is quite simple and attractive. One new addition, which has not been conspicuous heretofore, is the presence of a "torch of knowledge" in bold relief and is caluculated to catch the eyes and good favor of the teachers.

Of all the games and all the fads that take hold of the school pupil, none seem to have gained such favor as the game of "Hunky Dory." This game is very simple to learn, and it being exceedingly pleasant to play, it has made a great hit and promises to remain in favor as long as the biting is good and the fudge is of the best quality.

The first meting of the Musical society to be held in a long time was held last Tuesday afternoon. Miss Gladys Reynolds was the soloist and made a distinct hit by her singing. Miss Reynolds was accompanied by Miss May Wiley. The first selection she sang was "The Danza," by Chadwick, and as an encore sang "The Robin," by Niedlinger. This meeting was very enjoyable to the members and work will go on steadily from now on. The concert will be given on the same night as the debate in the assembly hall, which will most likely occur on the third Friday in April.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC WILL BUILD A CITY.

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 27.—The Grand Trunk Pacific has decided to build a city at Melville, Sask., for its Western headquarters. The Canadian Pacific railway selected Winnipeg some thirty years ago for its Western headquarters. This new transcontinental railway has acquired a large amount of property there for the purpose of laying out yards, which will be the largest between Winnipeg and the Pacific coast. The Hudson Bay line of the capital company will start from Melville, from which point European traffic will be distributed.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS' PAGE

At the Sugar Camp. By Charles Lincoln Phifer.

WE'RE goin' to the Sugar Camp next week. Want to go along, Charley?" It was Mr. Moulton speaking to his nephew, Charley Moulton, one Saturday afternoon in midwinter as he was preparing to drive home after a call at his brother's house in town.

"Of course I should like to go. Please, mamma, can't I go?" asked Charley.

"I don't like to have you miss school."

"I will give Charley half of the sugar made from the sap he brings in," said Mr. Moulton. "It will do the boy good to rough it a little."

Mrs. Moulton reflected. She remembered how once, as a girl, she had visited a camp and how she enjoyed it, despite the cold. After awhile she said:

"I have a great mind to let him go."

"Hurrah!" shouted Charley, considering the matter fully settled. "Where's my cap and overcoat and mittens?"

Mr. Moulton laughed, and the mother set to work getting ready the things he was to take. In the meantime she was giving him instructions and advice, not half of which he could remember, and telling the uncle to take good care of him.

At last they were off. Charley and his cousins, Jacob and Simon. They had great times that night, sitting before the big fireplace, popping and parching corn and cracking walnuts. For supper they had mush and milk, a great crock of milk setting on the table to supply the several bowls; and they told Indian stories after supper. The next day they fed the horses, and tumbled in the hay in the large mow, and hunted hens' nests. It was so different from the way Charley usually spent Sunday, at Sunday school and the Junior League. During the day they packed kettles and pans and bedding and various other things in the great wagon, ready for the start to the Sugar Camp the next morning, and the entire household retired very soon after dark. It was so early Charley couldn't sleep, and as he lay in the attic where the rafters were hung with strings of pumpkins, sage and pennyroyal and other medicinal herbs the aunt had prepared against a day of need, he imagined all sorts of uncanny shapes moving amid the shadowy outlines and was so frightened he could hardly sleep at all.

But if they went to bed early they got up even earlier. It didn't seem to Charley like it could be much past midnight. He could scarcely open his eyes at all. But when he got down stairs he found the feeding already done and breakfast almost ready. They ate by candlelight and the light of blazing logs in the fireplace, and then they clambered in the wagon and were off. There was a drive of about two miles ahead of them, mostly through heavy timber, between the branches of which the stars shone like eyes. All things were so solemn and still, and it was so early that Charley slept a little. It was just coming daylight when they halted before a cabin in the woods and began to unpack things. Charley assisted in carrying things into the hut, while Mr. Moulton kindled a fire on the hearth and another in a brick oven surmounted by a great kettle. As he worked, helping to unload the things and put them in place, Charley noticed how black the straight trees seemed against the shallow snow on the hillside and the pearl gray of the morning sky. He also noticed that in the fireplace in this house were two stout hooks which would move from side to side, evidently intended for holding a pot or kettle. The unloading being over, horses and wagon were sent back home, by help brought for that purpose.

"It is going to be a fine day, boys," remarked Mr. Moulton, going out and examining the sky. "The sap will run well. You youngsters had better take pails and gather the sap while I get in more fuel."

The boys seized the pails and raced through the woods. Soon they came to trees from which little spouts protruded, and under each was a small bucket or a trough to receive the sap which dripped from the end of the spout. Charley was surprised to find that things were already in readiness, and the bracing morning air, the still forest, the solemnity of nature, filled him at once with awe and an ebullition of spirit which prompted him to shout.

"Oh, isn't it fine!" he cried. "Oh, oh, oh, ohho!" and his voice rang and echoed through the wood.

"Taste it, Charley; isn't it sweet?"

Charley tipped a half-filled bucket to his lips and sipped of the contents. It tasted to him almost like the juice of sugar cane. He was disappointed. He expected it to taste like maple syrup.

"Isn't any of it sweeter than this?"

"Oh, this tree is as sweet as it can be," cried Simon from a tree to the left.

"This is just like honey," exclaimed Jacob, to the right.

Charley sampled both, but neither seemed to fulfill its promise. However, the boys were by this time emptying the buckets into the larger pails and hanging the empty vessels back under the drip, and Charley did likewise. Soon all the pails were filled and they carried them back to the hut, where Mr. Moulton poured them into the great kettles on the hearth and over the brick firebox, and they went again for more sap. It was something like work, for all the trees had to be visited, and some of the sap was to be carried quite a distance. Some places, Simon told him, they hauled the sap in a tub, on great sleds, but the ground was too rolling here to permit of it. But the boys talked of hunting and trapping and didn't mind the work at all. When all the trees had been gathered from they ate some mince pies and crullers, which Charley thought very good, because the extra exertion had made him hungry. Mr. Moulton dipped some sap from one of the kettles and poured it over a slice of bread, and Charley was surprised to find that this was very sweet. He understood now how syrup was made by boiling the sap down.

After luncheon the sap was to be gathered again; and then the boys took axes and between them got ready a great pile of wood.

Once again that day the sap was gathered and poured into tubs for future reference; and then the boys, thoroughly tired, piled down on the pallets laid on the floor of the hut, and drawing the coverlets over their heads, passed into the land of dreams. Once during the night Charley partially awakened, and saw the fires burning brightly, while great shadows flitted among the rafters and over the log walls of the hut. His uncle was stirring one of the pots. It took him sometime to really understand where he was, everything was so strange; and then he slept again.

In the morning Charley saw quite a number of molds of maple sugar on a shelf in the room. It was several days before he understood how they were made; then he saw his uncle pouring the liquid, after it had boiled to a certain consistency, into the molds as they sat in the snow. In a few moments the liquid crystallized and there were the molds of sugar.

Mr. Moulton and the farm helper alternated in keeping the fires up at night, so the sap might be utilized as it flowed.

The first day the snow began to melt, and ere long had entirely disappeared. Then, as the weather became balmy, Charley was thrilled with the forest sounds—the bark of the squirrel, the cry of the jay and the call of the crow as he circled in the blue far above. Occasionally they had to tap the trees in new places to continue the flow of the sap. It was all a wonderful process to Charley. Raking the dead leaves from the ground, he found tiny sprigs of green, the promise of future flowers, and gazing high up into the trees he saw buds on every sprig, and bees swarming about them. The bees also were working at the sap of the trees.

"Why do the bees come?" asked Charley.

"Why, don't you know?" asked Simon with an air of superior wisdom. "They make honey from the sap just as we make sugar from it."

"Why don't we make honey out of it if the bees can?"

This time Simon was puzzled. He pretended to be too absorbed to hear.

"Well, why do the bees swarm in the tops of the trees? The sap isn't flowing there, is it?"

This time Simon heard. "No," he answered, "but the trees are coming into bloom there. They always begin to bloom at the top and the end leaves first. I don't know why, because, of course, the blood can't come till the sap flows, and they say the sap is in the roots all winter, so that it has to pass through the tree trunk to reach the branches.

The boys seized the pails and raced through the woods.

"I don't see any flowers," objected Charley.

"No, maples have no flower leaves. But they are in bloom all right. This means that the sap will soon cease to flow and the sugar season will be over."

Sure enough, it was so. By Saturday noon the small drippings had been gathered and boiled down, and the spikes removed from the trees. Then the utensils were collected, the sugar and syrup loaded into the wagon and the hut was abandoned for another year. Charley would have liked to stay another Sunday with his cousin, but his aunt, knowing a mother's heart, thought he had better return home.

And he did, bearing with him stores of syrup and sugar, and still sweeter memories that will remain with him while life lasts.

Sketch of an American Humorist.

SOME 70 years ago there was born in a little Missouri town a child that grew to manhood and made for himself a name that was not his real name. As a boy he was genuine. He liked to play, and he liked to play practical jokes. In his birthplace they tell to this day of tricks he played. He tells of them himself in some of his books, and if you have ever read "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn" you have read many incidents from the life of this boy. Hannibal, his birthplace, was a river town, in the days when steamboating was at its height, and this youth naturally took to the river. As a child he learned to tell the different boats that plied the stream from the whistle, long before they appeared in sight. He learned the river tales that constitute one of the most romantic periods of American history. He saw and understood the poem of pioneering. Later he went on the river as a pilot, and here he learned more of a quaint and heroic phase of America's history. Then he entered a printing office and partly learned the trade of printing. He was too lazy to follow that occupation, but all this was training him for a place he was destined later to take in American literature. And this was not all the training that came to him. It seemed that the genius of American history had selected him for her recorder and was giving him all opportunity to prepare for the work. His brother got appointment as governor of a Western territory while this youth was still in his teens, and he became the secretary of the governor. He went over the famous Sante Fe trail. When in the state where his brother was to rule he had little to do, and this gave him opportunity to go into the mining country at the period when the romance of its development was being wrought out into curious fact.

Now the boy was ready for his work. He understood America in her unusual aspects, and he knew how to write. From the river which he had followed he borrowed a name, "Mark Twain," and made it famous, though his own, real name is largely forgotten. Can you tell it? From his knowledge of mining conditions he wrote the story of "The Jumping Frog" and "Buck Henshaw's Funeral," and these, touching the hearts of thousands as true pictures of quaint characters, gave him reputation. From his own boyhood in the days of river traffic he prepared the stories of "Tom Sawyer" and "Huckleberry Finn," and these appealed to real boys everywhere.

Today the fame of Mark Twain is world-wide. He has made more money than any other American author. He is reckoned as a humorist. But he is more than a humorist. He is great because he understood a quaint period of American development and pictured it as it was. That which passes for humor in him is merely an appreciation of the quaintness which has no counterpart in any other nation or any other period of history. Others have strained after humor, but it does not live. Mark Twain merely caught the humor of reality and it will live. No other man in America, perhaps no other man in this age, had such opportunities as he had to gather material first hand, together with the training which enabled him to utilize the material. Therefore he is the greatest humorist of this age, and will in all probability remain the greatest of all ages since Cervantes. The reason he is such lies in his boyhood—his opportunities and his use of the chance.

In this day there may not be the romance of pioneering to attract—no "Roughing It" or "Life on the Mississipi," no "Gilded Age" or "River Tales" demanding voice, but nevertheless, there are strange things happening now that some boy or some girl shall see and transcribe for the entertainment and instruction of the future, when "even this has passed away." Which of you is in preparation for this work of recording what nature n[illegible] hath want saved?

MARK TWAIN.

Irish Wit.

A gentleman, seeing Patrick digging in the ground, stopped to inquire: "What are you digging out that hole for, Pat?"

"Sure," replied Pat with a grin, "I'm diggin' out the dirt an' lavin' the hole to look after itself, soir."

The Way He Cleared the Court.

An English gentleman relates this little incident: "In Cork I remember a supernumerary crier, who was substituting for a sick man, trying to clear the court. In a loud voice he cried: 'All ye blackguards that isn't lawyers lave the court at once, or by the powers I'll make ye.'"

Piggy Has a Day Dream.

A pig with a fondness for ease
Said, "I'm dreaming; don't bother me, please.
I can see in my eye
A castle on high
Surrounded by June apple trees."

A raven who chanced to be nigh
Said, "You'd better come down from the sky.
No castle for you—
With June apples, too.
What you see is a sty in your eye."

Little Rosy Red.

LITTLE White and Blue
And Little Rosy Red
Wandered on into
A posy bed.

There they stood and smiled,
Nodding left and right
At Wonder Eyes, the child—
Red and Blue and White.

Now, this was life! Oh, the many places we visited together! Oh, the many transformations I made, from a horse to a sword, and from a sword to a scepter, and from a scepter to a train, and from a train to another boy. Not everything that begins with an acorn and then dies, in part, turns into as many things as I did. Sometimes I could hear the squeak of a hickory whistle another little boy carried and knew it was part of me; but it did not seem like it was, and this was the most wonderful thing of all.

After a long time the little boy lost me in the grass, and I lay there the longest time, nothing but a stick, getting drier all the time. My, but it is lonesome, and tiresome, to be lost and useless! I confess I slept a good deal, merely to pass the time away. Once, there was a white coverlet spread over me, and at first it was cold and I thought I was going to die; but after awhile I lay so snug and warm, and snoozed for ever so long. When I awakened grass was growing partly over me, and a violet nestled at my side, and sometimes spoke to me with fragrant breath.

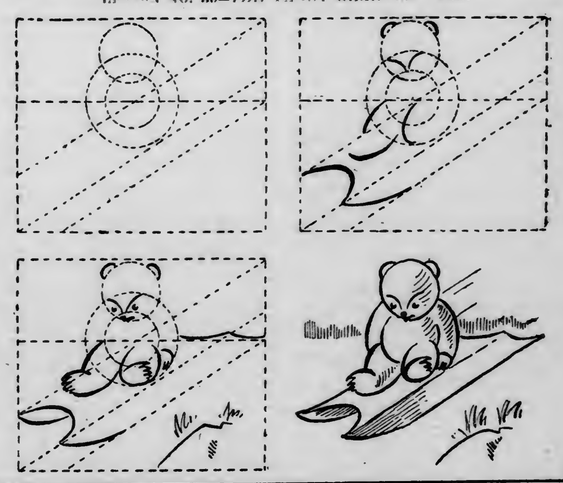

I must tell you what I saw one day. There came first a wagon, being driven very slowly, and inside was a little white box; and behind it followed another wagon, in which there was a woman in black, weeping softly, and a man, and the big boy, who had cut me from my stump; and behind them was a string of wagons moving slowly, all in a row. There was something about it which made me feel very sad.

Just then something passed me which seemed only a shadow, and it appeared to me that I could see the little boy with whom I had had such times. He bent over me and I heard him say softly, like the voice of the violet, "Oh, there is my good stick horse. Come with me, Horsey."

I think I shall go with him. I am lonesome without him and I am getting weak. Who knows what I may be in the place beyond?

The Dying of a Stick Horse.

BY PUSH.

YOU would scarcely believe that once I was one of the finest horses that ever pranced along the roadway. I am only a stick now, and yet I was once a beautiful horse, with flowing mane and tail, and sporting a bridle, which had silver bangles that glittered in the sun. No doubt it seems strange to you that a plain old stick could be thus transformed, but there can be no question of the truth of it.

And before I was a horse I was a hickory bush, growing by the roadside; and before I was a sprout I was a hickory nut that had fallen from a large tree with overhanging branches. Oh, I have had an eventful life, even if I am young and dead now.

I remember as I stood by the roadside, spreading out my leaves and branches and watching wagons that rattled by in the road near me, causing the dust to rise and cover my leaves—how I longed then to travel. But I couldn't, because I was rooted fast in the earth. Yet I got to travel

The boys, going to school, used to pass and break off my leaves, peeling the twigs and selling them as candy for the leaves, which they called money. They were greenbacks, just like sure enough money. One day a boy bent over me with his knife and began cutting me down. The knife was dull and hacked me terribly, and you may be sure I suffered. It is not pleasant to be cut in two, slowly; and to live through it all. But I had no hands and so was powerless to defend myself.

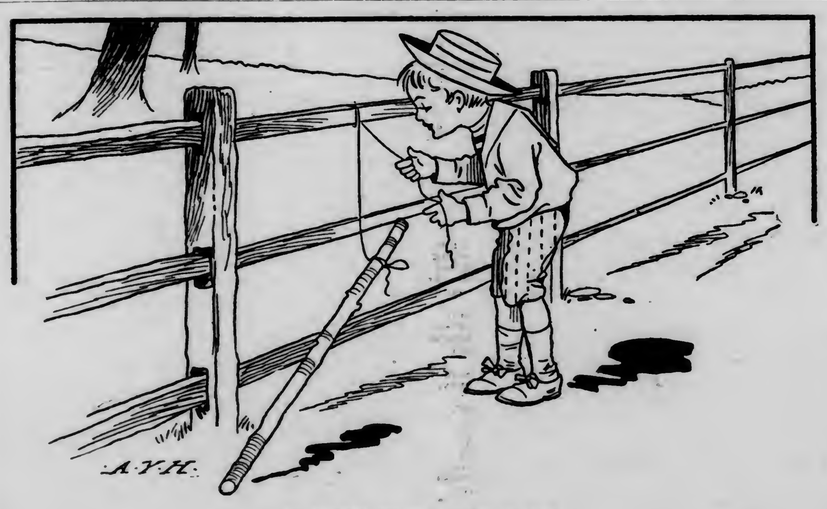

The boy stripped off my limbs, and, cutting off a piece from my body with which to make a whistle, dropped the rest of me in the road to die. Here I was all cut to pieces, yet still living. The leaves soon withered and I felt them no more, and in the course of a few days the piece that had been skinned so as to form a whistle dried up and ceased to be painful; but the body of me, in the road, lived on and on in the dust and nearly famished.

Before I died, however; that is, before the biggest piece of me died, a little boy passed by, and, straddling me, went prancing down the road. He called me Horsey, and as I looked, sure enough I did seem to be a great black pony. "Geddup!" he called, and we galloped down the road, making the dust fly high into the air.

"We are almost to New York," he said, and, in the distance I saw a haze and countless chimneys and spires and sky-scrapers, towering up like goods boxes on the sidewalk.

"Now," said the boy, "we are almost to the sea." And I could behold a stretch of green, with birds careening over the waves and sails and smoke in the distance.

Then we raced to a train, and actually beat it; and at last, wearied with our travels, he hitched me to a fence to feed, and under my parent tree he went to sleep.

He hitched me to a fence to feed.

Ill Humor of Defeated or Victor Has Frequently Been the Cause of Dramatic Incidents—John Barleycorn Brought About the Unique Dramatic Incident of Jackson's First Inauguration—Two Inaugurations That Were Made Up of Dramatic Incidents

By JOHN S. HARWOOD

(Copyright, 1909, by the Associate Literary Press.)

WHAT will be the dramatic incident of the quadrennially occurring event on which the eyes of the entire civilized world will be fixed next Thursday—the inauguration of a president of the United States?

Every presidential inauguration has been marked in the public mind of the time and in history as well, as a general incident. Sometimes the incident of itself has been trivial; again, it has occupied a prominent part in the business of formally conducting a new administration into office. But whether insignificant or looming it has served to break the level of the inauguration routine to the populace—lifted the event, as it were, from the slough of monotony, and given to it the "human interest" coloring for which the great mass of onlookers at this premier national even crave in all its intensity. Therefore, whatever may turn out to be the dramatic incident of the impending inauguration, we may rest sure of this, that it will continue to be talked of many a day after everybody has forgotten in what voice Mr. Taft delivered his inaugural address, or what he had to say in it.

Of course, the presidential inauguration that was one long and historical dramatic incident from beginning to end—or rather, an unbroken series of such incidents—was that which made Gen. George Washington, the first president of the new trans-Atlantic republic. Quiet and orderly though the inauguration was, and void of much of the glamour and ostentation of present day inaugurations, nevertheless the inaugural of Washington has taken its place in history as one of the most dramatic events in mankind's centuries-old fight or national and individual freedom

Bayonets and Cannon Ready For Business.

Lincoln's two inaugurations remain the country's only ones where the soldiery was present not to make an inaugural holiday for the multitude, but to insure the safety of the president-elect. At his first inauguration, whenever the populace glanced upward they beheld the army's best sharpshooters stationed in upper windows and upon roofs all along the line of the parade. They had to peer between solid lines of infantry to get their much-desired glimpse of the tall Westerner as he rode to the capitol in the traditional open carriage—a dramatic incident in itself, due to the fact that Lincoln had refused to heed Buchanan's advice to go to his inaugural in a closed carriage, even though he knew full well of the alleged threats to kill him. And at the cross streets, guarding them sedulously, stood squads of cavalry, and even as Lincoln took the oath of office and spoke the words of his inaugural address a forest of bayonets shot up at his feet and cannon mouths yawned on every approach to the platform from which he delivered his now historic paper.

What could have been more dramatic than the sight of Lincoln as he rode down this lane of national dissension and discord, gloomily prophetic of the war at hand, coolly telling his best jokes to the retiring president, Buchanan, and laughing—outwardly, at least as heartily as ever he did when he was the obscure but popular postmaster of the now vanished little town of New Salem, Ill.? Or what more dramatic than the sight of well known Southerners—men known to be strongly opposed to Lincoln and his political principles—forgetting themselves under the power of this plain president's eloquence and cheering him as lustily as the old friends from Illinois? Then, too, back of that tall, gaunt form, stood the short, squat figure of the man whom Lincoln had defeated in November—the "little giant," Stephen A. Douglas, also of Illinois; and it fell to the lot of the Northern Democracy's candidate to hold Lincoln's hat while he went through the ceremony of inauguration and otherwise to wait on his political conqueror.

Thus, dramatic incident after incident, some trivial, some significant of coming history, followed after the inaugural; and over all hung the sinister cloud of war, which was not dispelled by the businesslike attitude of the soldiery, primed to spring to the president's aid at the first untoward move made in his direction. Since then the soldier and the gun have continued to play an especially spectacular role at inaugurations, but solely as adjuncts to the pageant that quadrennially winds its way along Pennsylvania avenue as evidence of the nation's rejoicing at the making of a new president.

It was a thrilling sight to the great crowd that witnessed Lincoln's second inauguration to behold the great parade, made up in large part of veterans of the war—some of them crippled in the service of their country—and numerous civil organizations, as much elated with the prospect of the close of the war as the cheering spectators themselves. But to the onlooking host the dramatic incident of the day was the failure of President Lincoln to ride to the capitol at the head of all this splendor and rejoicing, and the heading of the procession by Mrs. Lincoln, the only time in history of this country that a woman has led an inaugural parade. But to the smaller group of notable men and women who witnessed the administration of the oath of office to Andrew Johnson, the dramatic—the painfully dramatic incident of the day—was the strange conduct of the new president, a thing that will be remembered against the unfortunate successor of Lincoln as long as his name is recalled by his countrymen.

A Defeated Candidate Who Divided Honors With the President-Elect.

As a matter of course, the "big" man at a national inauguration is the president-elect. But it so happened at one inauguration that the president-elect was not the "big" man, but one of two "big" men, the other being the defeated candidate for president, and, up to this day, the worst beaten candidate for that office in its history.

The president-elect in question was James A. Garfield, the man who shared the honors of the day with him was that acme of soldierly grace, Maj. Gen. Winfield S. Hancock, and the dramatic situation peculiar to the incoming of the twentieth president of the United States was due primarily to that rugged old soldier then in command of the army, Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman.

Gen. Sherman, in casting about for a suitable representative of the army in the inaugural parade, hit upon the defeated candidate then stationed at Governor's Island, New York. The hero of Gettysburg and Spottsylvania had taken the news of his defeat for the presidency with great calmness.

But the order to proceed to Washington and there help to make things merry for the inaugural of his political conqueror plainly irritated him. Nevertheless, he put his soldier's duty above his personal preference and pride, and signified his entire willingness to obey the order of his superior. "Yes," he wrote to a friend several days before he started on this distasteful duty, "I am going to Washington on March 3 for a few days. Gen. Sherman, my commanding officer has asked me to be present. I have no right to any personal feeling in the matter. It is clearly my duty as a soldier to obey. "What I can do in Washington with dignity I will do. I do not expect to be in advance of, or follow, the trimuphal car, either on foot or one horseback. I only expect to do my level best. I wonder how they did these things in Rome? When I return from Washington I can tell you how the American people do it under the new census. Fifty million of people have a way of their own, you know."

It is not on written record that Hancock told this friend of his how the American people "did these things." But it was a story of how Hancock, when he landed in Wash-

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF A BREAKER BOY

The Real Story of a Real Pennsylvania Youngster Whose "Days is Mostly Alike When the Mines is Workin'"—Fifteen Years Old and Been Working Since Ten.

By SCOTT NEARING
Former Secretary of Pennsylvania, Child Labor Committee.

(Exclusive Service Charities and The Commons Press Bureau.)

"What's that? What was I up to yest'day? I ain't sure I can remember it o'll, but I'll try.

"My days is mostly all alike when mines is workin'. Ma and me lives in that there little log shantv with little Bill and Sisey. They goes to school, but none of that for me. Never learnt a thing in school, I didn't. There weren't no chance. The teacher was bum. When I went to school, it was in one door and out the other.

"Yep, I'm fifteen now—been workin' in the breaker since I was ten. Days is mostly the same to me. Yest'day mornin' I was a dreamin' away two-forty about our nine. We was a playin' the Hogtowners and they was one ahead. I goes up to the bat and soaks her fer a homer and jest as I was gettin' around to third, and the fellers was a hollerin' to beat time, I comes to and Ma was a-singin':

"Rise, Johnnie, rise,
Don't you hear the bells a-ringin'?
Johnnie, are you wakin'?
It is time to be alive
Early in the mornin',
Continually keeps callin'
Johnnie, are you wakin'
It is half past five."

She sings that every mornin' to get me up. Pretty good of Ma, to wake a feller that way, ain't it? It's a blamed sight better'n bein' hauled out by the hair like some of the kids is.

"So I gets up and puts on my clothes. That's the part I don't like fer a cent. After you once gets dirty, it don't make no difference, but it's pretty tough to get out of a decent bed and into them black mine-clothes. Anyhow, I gets on my clothes, fills my lamp and goes down to breakfast.

"It was a dandy yes'day. Ma had fried eggs and taters. Ma's a swell cook and she puts the real thing into yer pail. I uses the pail as belonged to Pa. When the cage fell and killed him, the pail he had wasn't broke at all, so somebody brung it home to Ma and when I started in I used that pail. Looks pretty rough, don't it? It's pretty much of a tin can, but it was Pa's and besides, new palls costs fifty cents, and that's half a day's work fer me.

"So yes'day I gets me to the breaker by seven and I gets over on the hill and has a ketch with the little kids before goin' to work. When we onct get to work, there ain't much chance fer base ball—it's jest work all day.

"Why do I have a lamp? Well, you see, I've got the bad corners. It's awful dark and the dust is bad. Us older boys mostly gets them bad places. Sometimes in sunny days I kin see to pick the slate in there, but mostly it is so dark that I uses my lamp all the time.

"No, the work ain't hard, only sometimes yer back gits sore. You don't do nothin' but bend over and pick, and fer a greenhorn it ain't no cinch. I've been there goin' on six years now, and I never minds it. In winter it's bad on account of the cold on your hands, but mostly it ain't so worse.

"Yes'day we quit at four. Didn't have no more cars, they said, so we all skins home, takes a wash of our face and hands, and makes fer the base ball. No, we don't wash all over every day when there's steady work. Onct in a couple of days does us a plenty.

"There was a good game up there, yes'day. The 'Reds' was playin' the 'Yankees,' so us little fellers never had a show till most six, but we had a good one then. Played till near eight and then we lost the ball.

"Then we takes a sneak down by the saloon, but there wasn't nothin' doin' there, so we cuts it out and goes home.

"Ma was a sittin' on the stoop waitin' fer me. She don't like them fellers I goes with. She don't like me to stay out nights She's allus glad when she sees me in bed of a night. Says she knows where I am then.

"There ain't nothin' else to tell you. Oh, yes, there was a Hunkie got killed on the track today—but that ain't nothin', our days is mostly alike here when the mines is workin'. There's Ma a-callin' now, I suppose she wants me to go to the store—so long."

BREEDS AND TYPES OF FARM ANIMALS

HOLSTEIN CATTLE

By F. L. HOUGHTON,
Secretary Holstein-Friesian Association of America.

Holstein-Friesian cattle have become widely known among dairymen because of their extreme profit-making capacity and are widely spread over continental Europe. They are supposed to have originated in Holland, where they have been bred for at least 2,000 years as dairy cattle.

The moist lowlands of Holland produce abundant feed, and the inherited skill of the Hollander coming through many generations of people who have devoted themselves entirely to the care of cows, with a process of selection of the superior cattle, aided by the government regulation as to breeding, have produced the most wonderful and useful breed of the world.

The cattle breeders of other countries have recognized this, and have used the Holland cows in building up such well-known races as the Ayrshire and Shorthorn, while Continental Europe, from the Arctic circle down, possesses offshoots of the Holland breed, all of which, under various names, are uniformaly animals of a strong and vigorous character, yielding largely of milk and fattening into profitable and excellent meat.

At several of the state experiment stations in this country much careful work has been done to ascertain the qualities of the Holstein cow, and the results have demonstrated beyond question the large and profitable yield of the Holstein as a dairy cow.

The size of the breed is large. The cows, properly reared, weigh at maturity well toward 1,400 pounds, and average from 8,000 to 12,500 pounds of milk, and 300 to 550 pounds of butter per year. Bulletin No. 75 of the Bureau of Animal Industry reports under title of Comparative Yields of Butter Fat, an average yield of 1.60 pounds of fat per day for Holstein cows, as against 1.36 pounds for Jerseys, and 1.42 for Guernseys and Ayrshires. These figures are from American and European analysis. From a summary of American analysis, the Holstein shows 1.61 pounds, against 1.28 pounds for the Jersey, 1.41 for the Guernsey and 1.07 pounds for the Ayrshires. The daily milk yield is given as 48.9 pounds for the Holstein, 24.5 pounds for the Jersey, 28.9 pounds for the Guernsey and 27.7 pounds for the Ayrshires.

One cow of the breed, Pieterje 2nd, yielded 30,318 pounds of milk in one year; Princess of Wayne yielded 29,008 pounds; Clothilde, 26,021 pounds; Echo, 23,775 pounds.

The quality of the milk as related to butter fat, shows an average of about 3¼ per cent fat. The other solids are about 9 per cent, and are uniformly present to this extent, making a milk exceedingly desirable for liquid consumption or for butter or cheese production. It is a milk which does not readily separate its fat as does that of breeds whose milk characteristically shows larger fat globules, and it is, therefore, the best possible milk for shipping purposes.

The greatest yields of butter per cow have been made in this country and from Holstein cows. The recently completed semi-official test by representatives of the Wisconsin Experiment station for one year of the Holstein cow, Colantha 4's Johanna, is the world's record for all breeds and shows a yield in twelve consecutive months of 998.26 pounds fat, from 27,432 pounds of milk; average per cent of fat in milk 3.42. This is equivalent to 1,247.82 pounds of butter on 80 per cent basis, or 1-14 less at 85.7 per cent.

The world's largest record previous to this was that of the Holstein cow, Pauline Paul, reaching 1,153 pounds 15 ounces, and this was a perfectly authenticated record.

Of the 1,994 Holstein cows treated by state experiment stations during the year ending May 15, 1908, the average seven-day yield was 13.61 pounds of fat from 393 pounds of milk, showing a fat percentage of 3.46.

Holstein cattle are by no means dainty in their choice of food from calfhood up. They freely consume all sorts of roughage. They possess vigorous constitutions and are hardy under all conditions of climates; free from disease, and breed with great regularity, producing very large and strong calves, which are raised without difficulty.

Holsteins excel for all dairy purposes. No breed equals them in the production of veal. The calves are large at birth and fatten with great rapidity. They are valuable for beef production, and they fatten very rapidly when not in milk. The conditions under which the breed has been developed for thousands of years are conducive to this remarkable combination of utilities.

Large size is a predominant characteristic of the Holstein. The peculiar vitalizing properties existing in Holstein milk have become widely recognized by physicians and scientists, as well as breeders. Public institutions, hospitals for the insane, etc., using large quantities of Holstein milk among their patients, find certain peculiar beneficial results not noticeable from other milks.

The nearness in composition to the human mother's milk has led generally to the use of Holstein milk for infants, and the supplying of pure Holstein milk for this purpose has become a distinct feature of the city milk trade.

SOCIALISM AND LIBERTY

"Sixty men offer to sell themselves into slavery, on Lincoln's birthday."—News item.

"Little children of 6, working in cotton fields of Texas, whilst employer and owner of plantation sojourns in his palatial Brooklyn home."—Extract of report from child labor investigation committee.

Does it not seem rather strange that people who decry Socialism as "the coming slavery" are feign to overlook such conditons as the above?

"Socialism aims to bring everybody to an equality, socially, mentally, physically, and every other way," so say many of our antagonists.

Why men will act so foolishly and lie so deliberately relative to a theory that seeks better material conditions for all men is what gets me. Won't some one try to explain? Please do. Just think it over for a minute, my brother. Here we are living in a land verily overflowing with "milk and honey." Wealth potentialities great. Labor seeking opportunity for employment ample. Land fertile and yet so much misery, so much suffering, so much starvation, so little results to the productive toilers of the land. Why?

Labor, the active, land, the passive factor in the production of socially necessary utilities—if the resources were not monopolized by the few individuals thereby giving to them a power ample and sufficient to compel the non-possessors to beg for work in order to provide food for themselves and their dependents, there would then be no such scarcity of jobs for those who wish to labor Is it not an awful commentary upon a white man's civilization for such dreadful conditions to exist in the twentieth century? In Gautemala, the so-called ignorant yellow men will refuse to sell any of their products to tourists and others until they have first supplied themselves with all their needs. With us whites, how very different; we permit our own people to go hungry while the few possessors are hungering for a world market, wherein to dispose of their surplus products. Think it over, very seriously, my reader, and tell me why it is that if there is too much produced there should be so many living from hand to mouth? Is it not a moral crime—yes, is it not a crime against the laws of God and of nature to even permit the shipment of anything that there is a need for at home?

Fifty years ago the "blacks" were freed from chattel slavery. Today, white men offer to sell themselves into slavery for the sake of bread and a place to rest their heads upon. When the history of the early days of the twentieth century will be written fifty years hence, the future generation will bow their heads in shame at the mere recollection of the lack of wisdom displayed by their fathers in the management and custodianship bestowed upon them by the Creator of all things.

We are living in the "machine era." Everywhere it is the machine that we find taking the place of the man toiler. Man today finds no pleasure in his work. As mere employe, he realizes that he is hired to operate the iron, steel, or wood machine—that he is merely the starter and the stopper—nothing more. Man has created a modern "frankenstein" and, like its creator, not having thought about possible results, he is now reaping the whirlwind. It is not yet too late; there is yet time, but unless we all take heed, yet and at once, society will destroy itself. Surely it ought to be evident to most of us that the various ailments that civilized man has become afflicted with—sickness, famine, idiocy, and criminality—all are symptoms that betoken a diseased body-politic.

Socialism is constructive, not destructive. Socialists realize the hypocricy and sham that permeates every pore of our social organization. We say it is foolish to while away the time wishing for mere reforms, that life is short and angels are few (if any) that manifest on this plane of consciousness. We are not wasting time hunting will-o-the-wisps. We claim that the earth is the heritage of all mankind and therefore should be possessed by all of us in common. We may be wrong, but it ought to be evident to all that, where society permits no one man special privileges, no one man will be enabled to profit at the expense of the rest of us. The term, human, defined means higher animal. Let us act it. As things stand today, we manifest a lower degree of intelligence in relationship towards one another than do many lower forms of physical life. Let us be human.

THE COLORADO DISTRICTS

Large Bodies of Zinc, Lead and Silver Ore Discovered in Old Crater District --- Much Gold Which Can be Treated Profitably.

Colorado Springs, Colo., Feb. 27.—Telluride ores from the Old Crater mining district, located on the northern boundary of Arhuleta county, Colorado, recently received by Denver & Rio Grande railroad officials, indicate mineral of rich quality in that section. Recent prospecting has exposed large bodies of zinc, lead and silver ore, a fine concentrating material. Assays show thousands of dollars in silver a ton. The country rock, which is eruptive, carries $3 to $4 a ton in gold. Efforts to locate veins of greater gold content have been rewarded. The whole section which is near the headwaters of the east and west forks of the San Juan river, twenty-five miles from Pagosa Springs, near Silverton, Ouray, Telluride and Rico, contains gold which can be treated profitably by modern process. The railroad company is asked to build a twenty-five-mile branch to the district from Pagosa Springs.

The Highland Mary Mining, Milling & Power company, which is driving a tunnel into Bryan mountain, will construct a dam at the junction of the south fork of Middle Boulder and Jasper creeks, Boulder, Colo., to secure power. A million cubic feet of water will be impounded by a dam 200 feet high and a 1,200-foot pipe will give 700 feet fall, generating 6,000-horse power.

The Golden Cycle properties, Cripple Creek, produced during 1908 $2,100,000 worth of ore of $20 average value a ton. The daily output was close to 300 tons. The output was limited during the last three months of the year owing to the incapacity of the mill to treat custom ores under contract. John T. Milliken of St. Louis was re-elected president.

The properties of the United Gold Mines company, Cripple Creek, are operated by twenty-eight sets of lessees. The heaviest production is coming from the trim on Bull Hill, B. G. Granville and associates, lessees. The Fogleman lease is sinking the W. P. H. shaft to 650 feet from 450.

The main shaft of the Cresson property, Cripple Creek, is outputting sixty cars, or 1,800 to 2,000 tons, monthly, the average value being $20 a ton. Main workings are 1,000 feet deep.

In surface work on the Harrison vein on Train creek, Idaho Springs, Colo., good ore has been encountered practically at the grass roots. Sample returns from a ton trial lot show 2.55 ounces in gold, 4 ounces in silver and some copper, a total of $50 a ton. The Harrison is an extension of the Centurion vein.

General Manager George D. Kilborn of the Isabella Mines company, Cripple Creek, in his annual report, says pay ore has been opened in what is called the barren zone, below the immense body of phonolite, which cut off values in Cheyenne and Orphan Belle, claims at the seventh level. Already a drift has been driven 100 feet in pay ore and a winze sunk thirty feet, but time is required to prove up. The unexplored area is large. The properties in 1908 produced $391,177.04 gross, of which $208,264.19 was spent for mining and milling, $86,504.47 for transportation and $14,183.02 to lessees, leaving $82,225.36 net. Current and back salaries and litigation reduced the treasury surplus to $20,521.24.

The Paragon tunnel, the portal of which is on Sherman mountain up Bard creek, Georgetown, Colo., is to be driven two miles. New York capitalists will finance the enterprise. Some of the richest silver veins of Upper Clear creek district will be cut at great depth—the Dives-Pelican, Seven-Thirty, Bismarck, Maine, Phoenix and Hercules.

continues to show improvement, and is increasing its output. It has undoubtedly one of the finest high grade ore bodies of any mine in the district.

The Arizona-Michigan has installed a gasoline hoist and is again sinking. The company is putting down one of the best three-compartment shafts in the district.

Superior & Globe has started its shaft, and will push development as rapidly as possible.

Inspiration has done some work of a preliminary character, and expects to start systematic development at an early date.

Miami is working a large force, developing its fine property, and exploratory work is being carried on at the Keystone, and by the Orphan Copper company and Cactus Development company.

NEW RICH PLACER DIGGINGS

overland route from Nome to Valdez is 1,800 miles.

J. C. Garfield of Candle has uncovered a large body of pay dirt which may turn out to be one of the biggest propositions in Alaska. Dirt that will average 20 cents to the pan has been blocked out for over 1,000 feet in length and in places over 80 feet wide, though the average width is hardly more than fifty feet from rim to rim. The find was made under a heavy overburden of muck and lava, at a depth of sixty feet. It has been quietly developed both winter and summer.

The Northern and Horseshoe groups of copper claims, located near the head of Cordova bay, have been sold to a Tacoma syndicate. Joseph Diggs of Cordova made the deal with Henry Hewitt of Tacoma, receiving $10,000 as his share of the purchase price. The claims were located two years ago by local parties and sufficient development work has been done on them to satisfy experts as to their value.

SHIPMENTS SHOW DECLINE

lutely necessary and quite as important as cheap operating costs, but the failure of the hydraulic air compressor, furnishing power for mine and mill, to furnish sufficient power to care for a larger tonnage than is at present mined, is not generally appreciated. This difficulty may be remedied, but it is questionable if the expense necessary to make it all sufficient would be warranted by the undeniably poor prospects held forth by the mine. The management is making a sincere attempt to locate payable ground and is going about it in an intelligent manner. In the matter of economy in operations there is little room for just criticism, and though the costs are by no means low, it is doubtful if they can be made much lower in view of the isolated and inaccessible position occupied by the mine, necessitating long and expensive hauls of supplies and products.

Trimountain.

The Trimountain No. 3 shaft, which has been sinking in rather barren ground below the ninth level, is again getting into payable ground at and below the fourteenth level. A strike made a few days ago on the fifteenth level reveals copper rock of a decidedly encouraging nature and may indicate that the long expected bettering has at last "come in."

Atlantic.

Atlantic's shaft is temporally bottomed just below the twenty-first level, where another crosscut will be run in search of copper values. Conditions underground show very little improvement, the ground at nearly all points of attack being badly disorganized, and generally bare of copper. The company is now pushing its drifts northward in the hope of striking a more settled formation.

READY TO SPEND MILLIONS

senic being found in enargite rock. The supplemental hearing by Judge Hunt was decided on after he had reached a conclusion in the injunction suit against the Washoe, finding that no damage had been done by the smelter smoke, but that slight damage was being done by the arsenic. The hearing has not been concluded and will be resumed in Butte April 19.

The Butte-Montana.

The threatened or promised reorganization of the Butte-Montana Mining company is announced, and will probably be carried through, notwithstanding a minority opposition. The old company is capitalized for $1,000,000 in shares of $1 par. The new company, called the Butte-Alex Scott Mining company, is capitalized for $1,250,000 divided into 125,000 shares at $10 par. The organizers of the new company—Duluth and Pitsburg parties—propose to give the old company 50,000 shares of stock for the property and pay all the debts of the old company, while they will take 50,000 shares at $2 per share, paying $100,000 into the treasury for a working fund. They will also be ready to pay in $400,000 more as the money is needed. It is understood that the old stock may be exchanged for the new at the rate of twenty shares of Butte-Montana for one share of Butte-Alex Scott. The Alex Scott mine is fairly well developed and has been producing on a small scale. The company has always been handicapped by lack of funds and it is believed that the scheme of the Duluth and Pittsburg men will solve the difficulty and give the company a good and sufficient treasury.

The Tuolumne.

The Tuolumne Mining company is still engaged in shaft sinking, the shaft having reached a depth of nearly 1,300 feet. It is expected that crosscutting on the 1,400 will be begun about the first of April. A station has also been cut at the 1,200, but no crosscutting has been done there. On the 1,000-foot level considerable development work has been done and the vein has been quite extensively opened, though it does not contain commercial ore in paying quantities. The management of the company is confident that the 1,400-foot level a big ore body will be opened. The company has ordered a new Nordberg hoisting engine, which will be installed during the coming summer. It has recently added to its machinery equipment.

Comet Mine Closed.

The old Comet mine in Jefferson county, Corbin district, which was taken over by a new company sometime ago, has been closed on orders from the directors in New York. The reason for the action is not known, but it is believed that the Eastern stockholders have been dissatisfied with the mine management and the slow and expensive development work that has been done. The Comet was one of the big producers of that district many years ago.

The Raven.

The extension of time granted stockholders of the Raven Mining company to subscribe for 63,000 shares of treasury stock at $1 per share while the stock is selling on the open market at 40 cents per share, expired Feb. 24, but what the result has been has not yet been announced. The position of the company is explained in the concluding paragraph of a letter sent to stockholders by President Frisbie. "The company ought to go on, but it is up to you," he said. "Failure to respond may mean reorganization, and such a course would probably require an assessment, involving delay and expense." A prior call for subscriptions did not meet with hearty response, and what subscriptions were received will be returned if sufficient has not been subscribed on the second call.

The East Butte.

Prsident Robert H. Gross of the East Butte Mining company is making a periodical examination of the property of the company and the work being done. Development on the 900-foot level has been rather slow, in which respect it has been disappointing, but the slow progress is attributed to unusually hard country through which the crosscut is being run.

ternational Harvester company is installing an outfit of machinery at its Lot Three property at Crystal Falls, Menominee range. The shaft, now full of water, will be put down deeper and much lateral development will be done. Except for some test-pitting last summer, no work has been conducted at the property for the past five years. The tract lies to the east of Ogiebay, Norton & Co's Bristol mine, almost in the heart of the city, and has excellent prospects of developing into an important producer. That the property contains ore is known. The International Harvester people have a second property in the Crystal Falls district, this the Victoria, adjoining the Steel corporation's Hilltop mine, but it is not proposed to do any work there for the time being. The tract was test-pitted last summer and a small vein of ore was shown up close to surface. Corrigan, McKinney & Co., of Cleveland have a diamond drill in commission to the south of their Great Western mine at Crystal Falls. The boring at this point is considered of especial significance for the reason that it supplements lateral drilling conducted at depth in the mine itself. It is understood a new deposit has been found and which is now being sought from the surface.

The Traders.

It will require a month to prepare the Traders property for mining. This is the Iron Mountain open pit at which operations are to be resumed after an idleness of more than a year. The workings contain upwards of a hundred feet of water. When active the Traders employs 150 men. The Republic Iron & Steel company, Shenango Ore company and Ogiebay, Norton & Co., are all interested in the mine. Out from Iron Mountain, the Huron Mining company is conducting active development work at the Groveland mine. Ore is being opened from both the old and the new shaft. The Groveland has been improving in quality and quantity the past year and will be in position to make a large shipment the coming season. The Huron company also is preparing its North Armenia property at Crystal Falls for extensive production. The ore body is proving of large dimensions. The North Armenia is a new mine and will enter the shipping list for the first time this year.

Baker Mine.

An important producer the coming season will be Corrigan, McKinney & Co.'s new Baker mine, at Stambaugh. The shaft has been sunk to the 550-foot level and much drifting and crosscutting are being done. The Spring Valley Mining company's new Kinney property, in the same portion of the Menominee range, likewise is being opened for large production. This is the case also at the Mineral Mining company's James mine. In fact, nowhere else on the old ranges of Lake Superior is development work being conducted as briskly as in the Iron River and Stambaugh fields, and the results are of much importance.

DRAMATIC INCIDENTS OF PRESIDENTIAL INAUGURATIONS

lington the night before the inaugural, was received with wild acclaim by big folks and little vieing with one another to burden him with evidences of their affectionate regard for him—of how the thousandth tiling the route of the parade turned to him even before they glanced at the president-elect and cheered him as heartily and sometimes even more heartily than they did Garfield himself—or how he had to summon the police to keep excited admirers from unhitching the horses of his carriage and drawing it themselves—of how, everywhere he went, at least half of the honors of the day were clearly and unmistakably his.

A truly dramatic and unique inauguration feature, with the "dead" would-be "king" acclaimed as wildly and sincerely as the "live" one—a situation that must have given some little secret personal satisfaction and joy to Gen. Hancock. But outwardly, and with a polished tact that made the crowd cheer for him more vociferously than ever, he quietly endeavored at all times to efface himself as much as circumstances would permit in the interest of Gen. Garfield. His behavior on that day affords a striking contrast to the inauguration illhumor of other well known historical characters, appreciably less skilled in the rare and precious art of self mastery.

Ill Humor Often the Cause of Dramatic Incidents.

This lack of self mastery and the resultant illhumor has been the underlying cause of dramatic incidents marking at least three inaugurals, and in each case party feeling and personal differences were so intense that the outgoing president refused to show his time-honored courtesies to his successor.

After the election of Grant in 1869, Washington gossips fell to speculating as to "what Johnson would do about it" on the coming 4th of March. Since the impeachment days, Johnson and Grant had not spoken to each other. Yet the belief still prevailed that Johnson would overcome his personal feelings in order to observe time-honored custom.

Until almost the last moment neither Grant nor Johnson intimated their intentions. Finally, this message was brought to the president-elect: "Johnson says he won't ride with you."

"I'm glad of it," responded the one-time war chief. And two hours before Grant returned from the capitol to the White House, Johnson departed from its portals forever.

Both the two Adamses, by a coincidental turn of fate, refused to participate in the inauguration of their successors. The elder Adams had been a candidate for re-election in one of the most bitterly fought campaigns in the history of the country. Upon the election of Thomas Jefferson, Adams told his friends that he would quit Washington before his successful rival set foot there. And he did.

The political estrangement between John Quincy Adams and Andrew Jackson, as the result of two campaigns in which they had been pitted against each other, might have been bridged over sufficiently to have brought both to the inauguration of 1829, had not the breach been still further widened by domestic grief. In the presidential canvass of the preceding year, Jackson's wife had been made the victim of many newspaper attacks, some of which Jackson thought had been made with the knowledge of Adams. This belief had been strengthened in Jackson's mind by the fact that even the organ of the administration had joined in the journalistic assault. Mrs. Jackson died the following winter, as the result, her husband felt, of the newspapers' virulence. Therefore, when Jackson reached the capital he ignored the time-honored custom of calling on the president. Accordingly, Adams declined to take part in the inauguration exercises.

Of course, history credits an even still more dramatic—and a unique—incident to the first incoming of the hero of New Orleans, such an incident that is impossible of recurrence, no matter how far into the future presidential inaugurations may carry. This was the utter demoralization of the inaugural reception, not by the weather, as has frequently been the case, but by a far more potent confusing force—John Barleycorn.

As Jackson regarded himself as a man of the people, he believed that a hand-shaking affair would be more democratic than the stately minutes of an inaugural dance. Accordingly, he invited everybody "up" to the White House, and told them to enjoy themselves. They did, as every schoolboy knows.

"I never saw such a mixture," said Judge Story, one of Washington's lights of those days. "The reign of Queen Mob seemed triumphant.

"At least one explanation of the crowd's effervescing spirits was a large consignment of orange punch, wine, and brandied ices, which was doled out liberally to the White House guests. So thirsty were the men that the women, amid the confusion, were pushed into the background. As a decoy several tubs of punch were carried into the garden. This thinned out the crowd in the White House somewhat; and it might have saved the day had not those who remained climbed upon the upholstered chairs and divans, wiping off the mud of their boots on the costly velvets, in order to get a better view of the president. Through it all Jackson looked on with a smile.

"'Let the boys have a good time,' he said. 'It's only once in four years.'"

The Drama of Dwindled Glory.

The overshadowing dramatic incident of the inauguration held to let Grant succeed himself was the manner in which the weather set at naught all the elaborate plans to outdo and outshine every previous inaugural. Many inaugurations have been marked by what an Englishman terms beastly weather, but none by such truly enthusiasm-killing weather as at Grant's second inauguration.

In the face of a blinding wind the big procession dwindled away as half frozen men dropped out of the line of march. Only a thin ribbon of spectators along the sidewalks had the hardihood to withstand the midwinter storm. Grant himself suffered. At that time in his life he was possessed of robust health, and, as if proud of the fact, rode the whole length of Pennsylvania avenue with his hat in his hand. But after he had begun his address, apparently with as much comfort as if the weather was pleasant, his voice became so hoarse and was so nearly drowned in the roar of the storm that it could be heard hardly a dozen feet away.

When night came the cold increased. Elaborate preparations had been made for the ball, which was to be held in a temporary building in Judiciary square, where the Pension Building now stands. Yet no thought had been taken to heat the building, for no one had foreseen such calamitous weather. Despite the beautiful decorations the huge chamber more rsembled a refrigerator than a ball room.

The crowd came, marveled at the lavish embellishments, and then shivered. In the frosty air no one thought of dancing or dining. Men and women stood in huddled groups still wrapped in their furs. The men who took off their hats sneezed so alarmingly that the women bade them cover their heads again. When some one suggested that, anyway, the cadets from West Point and Annapolis ought to be able to dance, one of the prospective warriors replied:

"Most of us haven't any toes to dance on. They were all frozen off on the march this afternoon."

Nothing frosty or formal characterized the first real inaugural ball, which will be an inaugural custum of a hundred years' standing next Thursday, and which was the imposing dramatic incident of the Madison inaugural, a subject for conversation in the then newly founded national capital for many and many a day.

The dancing began at 7 o'clock sharp. President Madison was present at the function for a time, but his personality seemed to be a damper on the spirits of the crowd. He cared little for dancing, and seemed so bored by the spectacle that he almost went to sleep. But after he had left the revelry obtained full swing. The crowd of 400 had been packed into a comparatively small hall, and as a result the atmosphere became insufferably close. Some of the gallants tried to open the windows, and not being able to budge them, smashed holes in the glass. Perfect ventilation was thus afforded, and the gaiety was a continual crescendo until the party broke up at 12.

A Funeral Inauguration.

Contrasting dramatically with the mirth and gaiety which are traditionally associated with an inauguration, was the almost funeral service at which Andrew Johnson took oath of office. It occurred in the parlor of the Kirkwood house. Johnson stood beneath a huge brass chandelier, and was surrounded by an array of small, marble-topped tables. He was dressed in deep black, and throughout the ceremony he appeared sad and taciturn. Having taken the oath, he decided on an early cabinet session and a few other details, and then, still sombre and moody, he went upstairs to the humble room which had hitherto been his Washington home.

Who Will Be President?

As the time for the inauguration of 1877 approached, the entire country was on the qui vive as to the name of the man to be inaugurated—would it be Hayes, or would it be Tilden? Hayes himself was in doubt even as he took the train for Washington, and not until after he had traveled some distance thence did he receive word that he was the man beyond the peradventure of a doubt—a dramatic situation never before or since duplicated in the country's history. Therefore, Gen. Hayes made his entrance into Washington and his high office under peculiarly dramatic circumstances.

A minor dramatic incident of the day was the practical overwhelming of the new president at the White House reception, the crowd bearing down upon him so suddenly that the police had to be called in to restore order and shut the gates leading into the White House grounds—of itself an unusual inaugural proceeding. But no one—least of all the president himself—could blame the people for their anxiety to get a glimpse of and shake hands with the man who, but a few hours before, knew not his presidential fate, and who did not begin work on his inaugural address until two days before he received his presidential oath from the chief justice of the United States supreme court.

A dramatic time was lent to Cleveland's first inauguration by widespread knowledge of the fact that the never had set foot in Washington until he came there to be made president; and all the time he was on public view the populace eagerly watched him to see what effect the strange city was having on him. But when he began delivering his inauguration address there came the real dramatic event of the day—for Cleveland, departing from fixed custom, and with a courage consistent with his comparative youth and adamant firmness of mind, delivered his address from memory. As he started on this task, and the men and women present, who were looked upon as dyed-in-the-wool inaugurationgoers observed no manuscript in the president's hands, they held their breath and waited, with every nerve intense, for what they considered the inevitable blunder—some disastrous slip from the printed context that would be taken up and exploited by the new administration's enemies. But they waited in vain. Cleveland, from the opening sentence to the close, had his memory and himself under perfect control.

Unquestionably the most beautiful and touching inaugural dramatic incident was that attending the first swearing in of William McKinley. At no inauguration has a wife maintained a hold upon the mind of the president as did Mrs. McKinley at that time. The public had learned in part of the deep love of its president-elect for his wife—of his ever vigilant and tender solicitude for her—but it was scarcely prepared to behold Mr. McKinley, as soon as he entered the senate chamber, glance anxiously toward the gallery and cloud his usually pleasant features with unmistakable signs of worry until his eyes had found his wife. Then his face became suffused with smiles and he was radiantly happy.

Counting his experience when he became vice president, the intensely dramatic manner in which he became McKinley's successor and his very own inauguration four years ago, President Roosevelt, after next Thursday, will have played important roles at four inaugurals. At McKinley's second inaugural he was clearly the hero of the day—the figure around which the populace revolved—a dramatic personification of young America, as it were. His cowboy reception was one of the more striking dramatic incidents of his own elective inaugural. What will be his part in the practically inevitable dramatic incident or incidents of the Taft inauguration the country will know fully on the morning of the fifth of March.

TAFT STARTS AN ANANIAS CLUB; 'CALLS' NEW YORK PAPERS

NATIONAL TARIFF CAMPAIGN PLANNED

New York, Feb. 27.—President-elect Taft made a vigorous protest last night against what he said was an absolute misrepresentation in New York afternoon papers as to what he had said during the day in answering to questions regarding tariff revision.

He had stated, he said, that the present business depression was undoubtedly due in a large measure to the fact that the tariff is to be revised at an extra session of congress to meet March 15; that it was of the highest importance that this work of revision should not be delayed but executed with all diligence.

Mr. Taft also said he favored the idea of a permanent tariff commission, the plan for which should be marked out with deliberation, the duties of such a commission to be to make a careful study of the operation of the proposed new tariff law, to the end that suggestions might me made in the future, which would tend to place the whole question of the tariff on a more certain and scientific basis.

His Views Unchanged.

Upon this statement, Mr. Taft was made to say that the present tariff schedules were responsible for the present business depressions and that when they were revised their own parents would not know them, all of which was amplified at length and made positive by appearing to be a vigorous and enthusiastic statement.

Mr. Taft was particularly perturbed over what he called a misrepresentation, particularly in view of the weight which is now given his words, because of his official position. He had, he declared, changed his position in no way, and held the same views he had publicly announced during and since the campaign.

The subject of the tariff came up because of a call on Mr. Taft by J. W. Van Cleave, president of the National Manufacturers' association, in which the subject of a tariff commission was mentioned.

To Embrace Entire Country.

As a result of a conference in the Waldorf Astoria, between James W. Van Cleave, H. F. Miles of Racine, Wis., and Henry R. Towne, representing the committee of 100 for a tariff commission, and representatives of a number of commercial associations of New York, a campaign of education, embracing the entire country, is to be begun at once with a view to impressing congress with the necessity of creating a tariff commission.

The plan adopted contemplates following a program similar to that upon which national campaigns are conducted. Two delegates are to be appointed in every state, and one in every congressional district. The delegates will report to a state committee, which in turn will report to a national committee.

Already headquarters for Massachusetts have been provided in Boston, from which point a local campaign, soon to be followed by others in every state, will be waged. As a guarantee of the effectiveness of the entire movement, a finance committee of fifteen, composing a number of prominent members, was appointed. Mr. Van Cleave said:

"The advocates of a permanent, nonpartisan tariff commission, or board of tariff investigators, have fired the first gun in an aggressive campaign which, within the next few days, will be carried into every congressional district. President-elect Taft's approval of the work already done, and his statement favoring a board of tariff experts, indicate that we will have such a board before many months.

Miles As Chairman.

"The committee of 100 includes representatives from each state, who understand the work needed, to impress upon congress the necessity for action.

"The actual direction of the work will be in the hands of an executive committee, of which H. F. Miles is chairman.

"The campaign will be carried into every section of the country without delay. It has been said that a permanent board of investigation of the tariff will mean a permanent condition of business unrest. The present prosperity and industrial tranquility of Germany, under a similar tariff commission, is ample proof to the contrary. When our commission is created we will see the end of the harmful agitation to which we have periodically been subjected during the last thirty years."

CARDINAL GIBBONS DECLARES AMERICAN CATHOLICS REJOICE IN CHURCH-STATE SEPARATION

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 27.—An article will appear in the March number of the North American Review from Cardinal Gibbons, in which the cardinal replies categorically to ministers of certain other denominations on questions affecting the loyalty of members of the Catholic church communion.

Gibbons begins by saying that "Fifteen million Catholics live their lives in our land with undisturbed belief in the perfect harmony existing between their religion and their duties as American citizens. It never occurs to their minds to question the truth of a belief which all their experience confirms. Love of religion and love of country burn together in their hearts. They love their church as the divine spiritual society set up by Jesus Christ, through which they are brought into a closer communion with God, learn His revealed truth and His holy law, receive the help they need to lead Christian lives and are inspired with the hope of eternal happiness. They love their country with the spontaneous and ardent love of all patriots, because it is their country and the source of them of untold blessings.

"They prefer its form of government before any other. They admire its institutions and the spirit of its laws. They accept the Constitution without reserve, with no desire, as Catholics, to see it changed in any feature. They can, with a clear conscience, swear to uphold it.

"With an appreciation, the greater because their fathers or they themselves have known persecution—in the British Isles, in Germany, in Poland and elsewhere—they prize both the liberal treatment and liberty they enjoy as citizens and the liberty assured by the church. The separation of church and state in this country seems to them the natural, inevitable and best conceivable plan, the one that would work best among us both for the good of religion and of the state. Any change in their relations they contemplate with dread."

The cardinal ends by saying:

"The American Catholics rejoice in our separation of church and state, and I can conceive no combination of circumstances likely to arise which would make a union desirable either to church or state. We know the blessings of our present arrangement; it gives us liberty and binds together priests and people in a union better than that of church and state. Other countries, other manners. We do not believe our system adapted to all conditions; we leave it to church and state in other lands to solve their problems for their own best interests. For ourselves, we thank God we live in America, in this happy country of ours, to quote Mr. Roosevelt, where 'religion and liberty are natural allies.'"

The Profit-Taking Sales Cause Weakness in Chicago.

May Flax Is Unchanged at the Close in Duluth.

Duluth Board of Trade, Feb. 27.—After the opening today, selling pressure developed in wheat and prices eased off before it, the close showing fractional losses from yesterday. Profit-taking sales were largely reponsible for the relapse.

Berlin closed ⅜c higher, Antwerp ⅝c higher and Budapest ½c higher.

The May option closed ½c lower in Duluth, ⅛c lower in Chicago, ¼c lower in Minneapolis, unchanged in New York and St. Louis, ⅜c higher in Kansas City and ⅛c higher in Winnipeg. Broomhall cabled from Liverpool: "Wheat—Strong American cables yesterday, together with the firm situation here, caused extreme nervousness among shorts and values at the opening were ½d to ¾d higher with the principal strength in the distant months. Spot markets were strong and generally 1d higher, cargoes in urgent demand at the advance and country markets continue to show strength. There was a heavy business done in London yesterday at extreme prices and offerings are now limited. Official indications point to a reduction in the Argentine exportable surplus, and this together with indicted smaller exports from Australia than was expected earlier and the continued unfavorable outlook in Hungary serves to keep shorts nervous. World's shipments this week are expected to be lighter. Toward the close, there was some speculative realizing in the nearby month which lost ¼d while the distant months held the advance and an additional slight gain from the opening. At this time the market was strong and from ¼d to about ⅝d higher than Friday.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Prices Touch Another New High Record Mark.

Chicago, Feb. 27.—Wheat prices touched a new high record mark for the season at the opening of the market today, the May delivery selling at $1.19 and the July option at $1.05⅞. A fudther advance of ¼@¼ to ⅞d at Liverpool added fresh fuel to bullish enthusiasm, and the market opened amid intense excitement, with prices ranging from ⅛c below to ¾c above the final quotations of the previous session. First trades in May were at $1.18¼ to $1.18⅞, while July at the same time sold between $1.05¼ and $1.05⅞. Before the early rush of buyers had been satisfied May had been bid up to $1.19. Prices then declined abruptly on profit-taking to about yesterday's closing level. May dropped back to $1.18 and July to $1.05¼@¼.

Although sentiment was very bullish, the greater part of the day prices failed to again reach the opening high level. Late in the session some reaction occurred on realizing sales. May declining to $1.17⅞ and July to $1.04¾. The market closed easy with May off ⅛c at $1.18; July was ½@⅝c lower at $1.04¾@⅞.

The fresh advance in wheat caused a firm opening in corn, prices being unchanged to ¼@¾c higher, compared with yesterday's closing. May opened at 66⅝ to 66¾@⅞c and July at 65⅞ to 66c. Early in the day prices reacted on selling based on increased local receipts. May declined to 66½@⅝c.

Oats were firm on buying by cash interests. The volume of trade, however, was small. May opened a shade higher, at 55¼c and sold at 55c.

For May, the low point was reached at 66½c. The market was dull and steady during the last half of the day and closed steady with May ⅛c lower at 66½c.

Provisions were quiet and steady. The strength of grain had some effect. Prices at the opening were unchanged to 7½c higher

ADVANCES WIPED OUT

Stocks Opened With Brisk Rise in Sympathy With London.

Sharp Drop in Reading Caused Rest of List to Decline.

New York, Feb. 27.—Opening prices of stocks moved briskly upward, helped by the higher range of prices sent from London. A large number of the active trading stocks including the Pacifics, Reading and the metal stocks, showed gains of a large fraction. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie rose 1¾, Kansas City Southern 1½. Amalgamated Copper 1¼ and Louisville & Nashville 1.

Speculation broadened and there was a further pronounced rise before the market began to feel the weight of the realizations in the railroad list, and bear pressure against the specialists. Reading ran off 1½ from its high price, Louisville & Nashville 1, and many others a substantial fraction.

The market closed firm. Northwestern gained 2, Utah Copper 1¾, Mercantile Marine preferred and United States Rubber first preferred 1½ and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 1¼. The decline in Reading to 2⅝ under yesterday was due to the decision of the supreme court against the railroad's commodity clause case. The whole list ran off in sympathy until advances were mostly wiped out. Brooklyn Rapid Transit fell 1 below yesterday. When Reading rallied 2 points, prices hardened again, but the demand was languid. Wisconsin Central rose 2⅝.

Washington, Feb. 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Indian appropriations bill of the house passed today, and contains an item which gives the Indian school property at Morris, Minn., to the state, with the proviso that Minnesota shall educate such Indians as may present themselves for enrollment.

LAND OFFICE HAD VERY FAIR MONTH.

The local United States land office did a very fair month's business in February.

The total receipts were $23,807.58. The sale of public lands brought $21,028.63, fees and commissions amounted to $1,813.32 and the sale of Indian lands brought $965.63.

Receiver Morrison says that February is a dull month, and that the total compares very favorably with the same month in other years.

The business is slightly under that transacted during the month of January.

SATURDAY, FEB. 27, 1909.

Boston—I get from a very important source that there have been considerable sales of electroylytic around 12½c and that the market for that grade will be cleaned up around that figure during the coming week. The disappointing trade condition of the past three months will be thus discontinued. The Lake Copper market will continue firm as it has been. The Lake Coppers still appear to me to be on the card. The low prices on the Ex-Bigelow stocks were made on very small lots and stocks offered were very greedily clutched. Selling Ex-Bigelow—Calumet & Hecla, it seems impossible that Osceola will go much higher than its present prices, as it is generally believed that the new management will make a much better dividend record of the stockholders than has been made in the past. The floating supply of stocks is being steadily decreased and when there is any encouragement it ought to soar. Am also bullish on Centennial, Allouez, Ahmeek, La Salle, etc. Calumet & Hecla thinks it has a prize in Ahmeek and unquestionably has. Am also bullish on Calumet & Arizona. MILLER & CO.

The rumor yesterday that Greene-Cananea had closed down was today denied by their New York office, and on the publication of this news the stock rallied and advanced about ¾ of a point. Greene-Cananea closed $9.75 to $9.87½.

Corbin Hidden Treasure holding firm at $2.00. This one is a buy right now. It is located right next to the Boston & Corbin which is now trading around $20.00. The new machinery is now being installed and the shaft will be sunk to lower levels, and the drifts and crosscuts will be run at each succeeding level.

Treasure has the same veins that the Boston & Corbin have. They have already encountered three veins on the 235-foot level running as high as 14 per cent in copper.

Calumet & Sonora firm at $15.75 bid. There was considerable trading in this one today, and advices are that this one will be listed on the Boston Stock Exchange some time during the coming month.

Butte-Montana closed at 39 cents bid for big blocks. Orders for this one are coming in from all over the country and the re-organization of this company will make this proposition one of the best that has been brought to this city, and will make big money for those who are now hanging on to their stock. Buy Butte-Montana at this price if you can get it.

Lake Superior & Sonora closed $3.02½ bid with no stock in sight.

Butte-Ballaklava closed $15.75 to $16.25.

REALTY MARKET SHOWS SIGNS OF REAL ACTIVITY

Work Will Begin Soon on the Three Superior Street Structures—Demand for Suburban Homes—Building Permits for February Break Record.

There was more of a show of activity in the real estate market and the building world, during the past week, than for a good many weeks, and people interested in the development of the city and those two branches of its business life, are confident that the long looked-for awakening is at hand.

There were no especially big deals made during the week, but the undertone of the market is strong and a good many deals which have been in the air for months, are about to be closed. Architects say that business is coming steadily, and the announcements made during the past few weeks of big building projects planned for the coming summer, bear out the belief that the prospective building boom is not going to fritter out.

The Alworth building and the Bradley-Lymon-Cabot building will surely be erected. Plans will be completed during the coming week for the new hotel on the corner of Fifth avenue west and Superior street, and Bray & Nystrom, the architects, will call for bids immediately. It is also said the additional five stories will be erected on the Wolvin building this year.

The contractors will soon be given opportunity to compete for the contracts on a number of East end homes, announcement of the planning of which was made some time ago. There are over a score of prospective houses, costing anywhere from $5,000 to $50,000, in the hands of the contractors, and the construction of fully that many more of the same standard has been begun since last fall. The East end will see a building boom this summer that will extend the limits of the fine residence districts far beyond its present bounds.

J. J. Wagenstein is taking bids for the $25,000 residence of Dr. J. J. Eklund, which will be erected on the corner of Twenty-fourth avenue east and Third street. Mr. Wangenstein is now preparing plans for two brick terraces, of four houses each, to be erected on East Third street. For the present, the names of the owners and the exact location of the terraces are withheld. They will cost about $35,000. Mr. Wangenstein is also preparing plans for two large brick residences to be erected in the East end. The names of the owners are withheld, but it is understood the homes will be among the finest contemplated during the coming year, which is no insignificant fact, in view of the elaborate building plans made by Duluth people this winter.

The real estate market has been quiet during the week, as far as sales of business property is concerned, but there is a brisk movement in suburban property, which feeds the almost indestructible optimism of the real estate man. The biggest sale of the week was the transfer of J. J. Wangenstein's residence property, on the north side of Third street, between Third and Fourth avenues east, to M. S. Cook, for $11,000. Mr. Wangenstein, last fall, moved into his beautiful new residence at Woodland.

There may be a temporary dullness, but there is no actual sag in business conditions, when good residence propertyty in the outlying portions of the city sells readily and brings good prices. Woodland and Lakeside have been the prominent objective points of homebuilding property buying during the past winter. Property at Hunter's Park and Woodland has sold more readily, and brought better prices during the past few months than at any time since the suburbs were first settled upon as residence places. People planning homes show a disposition to get out of the thickly setled portions of the city—not only on account of the lower price at which property may be purchased, but to secure the alluring combination of country and city life in one.

Lakeside is in for a good boom during the coming year. Dealers of property in that suburb report that the demand for lots is more insistent and more general than ever before. The district north of McCulloch street, into which the sewer and water systems were extended last year, will be put on the market this year and there is already a good demand for the lots. It is estimated that fully 200 homes have been erected in Lakeside during the past two or three years and the suburb on the shore will yet be one of the most populous and prosperous suburbs of the city.

The annual rental problem confronts some business people at this time, but it comes in a greater degree this year than for some years past. There will be no vacant pieces of business property in the down-town district this year, for there are many more available tenants than available locations. The tenants at the corner of Second avenue west and Superior street have been ordered to vacate May 1, as have the tenants at the Lake avenue corner, the tenants of the Alworth building and those on the corner of Fifth avenue west and Superior street, where the new hotel building is to be erected.

There is no trouble in securing tenants for the new buildings already erected or planned. Leases are being signed already for buildings, plans for which are only in the course of preparation. The restricted limits of the business district of Duluth tends to increase rents and create a ready demand for available locations and owners of store buildings on the main business streets need never worry over tenants.

A lease was signed yesterday by which R. R. Forward & Co., take over the entire new Folz building on the corner of Second avenue east and Superior street. The new three-story building will be ready for occupancy in April and the Forward company will immediately move in. The company has two stores, one at the West end and the other uptown. It is possible that the two stores will be combined in the one establishment in the new building.

The overflow of tenants from Superior street and the scarcity of building locations on the main street naturally means a leaning toward First street, and the predictions often made that that street would be as important as Superior street in a retail business way are not far from realization. Owners of First street property have implicit confidence in their holdings and frontage on the street now brings heavy prices and is hard to secure at any price.

The plan of lighting First street by means of ornate standards on both sides of the street, which was broached by John A. Stephenson last week, will be given a trial during the coming week. Some of the standards have been secured by Mr. Stephenson and they will be erected immediately in the block between Second and Third ave-

FIREPROOF HOME IN MISSION STYLE COSTING $9,000 TO ERECT IN DULUTH

The above illustration shows a design for a home in the mission style of architecture, of fireproof construction.

The plans are especially adapted to a site from which the advantages of view and sunlight are gained from the rear.

The materials used for the construction will be concrete for the basement and hollow tile for the outside walls, partitions and floors in the superstructure. The exterior walls would be finished with stucco, tinted a light soft tint. The roof would be of Spanish tile. The wide eaves show the roof rafters exposed, to be stained a weathered color. The beauty of the exterior is evident in the perspective drawing shown above.

The plans are especially interesting because of the roomy and compact arrangement. The feature of the hall is the attractive arrangement of the stairway which ascends to a landing, or balcony, over the vestibule, and then turns to the level of the second-story hall. A large, light, coat closet is a feature that would be appdeciated. The living room and the dining room are both large, pleasant rooms. The kitchen is of good size, convenient, and complete in pantries and cabinets. The passage between the kitchen and vestibule is a convenient means of access to the front entrance, basement stairs, and stairs to the second story. The rooms of the second story are all of good size and well lighted and airy. The bath room is large and convenient, and the closets are all of good size.

The home as above described would cost to build in Duluth or vicinity, $9,000.

ANTHONY PUCK.
Architect, Duluth.

Are you looking for a good safe investment? If so, let me show you some of my lands in the Carlton County Valley, along the Great Northern and Soo lines; none better for general Farming, Dairying and Stock Raising. Twenty years ago these very same kind of lands around the Twin Cities were selling at from $5.00 to $10.00 an acre; today they are selling from $75.00 to $125.00 an acre. The same applies to lands in this vicinity, but instead of waiting 20 years for the raising in value, I expect to see it within the next 5 years, as good lands around the Head of the Lakes are getting scarce, and will command a fancy price in the very near future. I have 10,000 acres for you to select from.

nues west by Mr. Stephenson, by way of illustration.

The ornamental iron standards will be surmounted by five Tungsten lamps. Instead of placing the standards fifty feet apart on each side of the street, they will be placed 100 feet apart on each side of the street, so arranged that there will be a light every fifty feet, alternating between the two sides of the street. Under that plan, the cost of erection and maintenance on the property holders will be reduced in a minimum, and the effect desired will be obtained at the least possible expense.

The property owners on First street believe it is the coming business street, and they are anxious to further its progress toward their desired end. The lights will make the street more attractive and be an added inducement to business people to locate there.

Building Inspector S. M. Kielley is smiling. All records for February have been broken this year, it is believed. The total estimate of buildings for which permits have been issued is well over $400,000, an exceptional record for the short and usually dull month of February. The new Consolidated elevator permit for a $811,000 building sent the total up and made possible the exceptional figures for the month.

The permits issued during the past week for buildings estimated to cost $1,000 or more follow:

M. J. Gochey, frame dwelling on the north side of Sixth street, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth avenues east, $10,000.

Charles Franson, brick dwelling on the west side of Columbus avenue, between Lewis and St. Andrew streets, $11,000.

Louis Pederson, frame dwelling on the west side of Sixty-third avenue west, between Roosevelt and Nicollet streets, $1,000.

Edward J. Hagarty, frame dwelling on the north side of Tenth street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues east, $1,000.

J. Roy, frame dwelling at Woodland, Seventh division, $1,500.

John Sjoholm frame dwelling on the south side of Wadena street, between Fifty-second and Fifty-third avenues west, $1,000

J. D. Molitor, brick apartment building on the south side of Jefferson street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth avenues east, $10,000.

Louis Aune, frame dwelling on the south side of Sixth street, between Twenty-second and Twenty-third avenues west, $1,500.

Ole Christenson, frame dwelling on the south side of Second street, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth avenues west, $2,500.

Emil Johnson, frame dwelling on the west side of Fifty-fourth avenue west, between Main and Nicollet streets, $1,000.

David Adams, frame dwelling on the south side of Second street, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth avenues west, $1,500.

Bergquist Bros., the contractors on the new Commercial club building, have received the delayed shipment of structural steel, and the construction of the building is now well under way. From now on, the work will be rushed as rapidly as possible, and it is expected that club will occupy its new quarters early in the summer.

Dr. Homer Collins has let a contract for $1,500 for the arrangement of the grounds around his new residence at the East end. Dr. Collins will have one of the finest residences in the city when completed, and his grounds will be arranged in keeping with the beauty of the home, which they surround.
